From the time the polls opened until they closed the contest waged. At the announcing of the result, only those who have witnessed such scenes in that township before its glory had departed, and North Plainfield become separated, can have a faint idea of it. A short speech was made by Freeholder Zeglbald, and then Republicans and Democrats adjourned to where refreshments were awaiting them, and the political axe was buried for another year.

The following Democratic ticket was elected by the majorities given after each name:

Assessor, Peter Newmiller, 209; collector, George Terrill, 75; chosen freeholder, Joel Codington, 90; township committee, Wm. H. Rogers, 187; overseer of the poor, George Bowers, 209; surveyors of highways, Peter Bowers, Jr., 147; Henry P. Williams, 147; commissioner of appeal, Wm. H. Stites, 147; pound keepers, Antone Ammon, 147; Jacob Koechline, 147; John Burnett, 147. For support of poor, $600; for repair of roads, $750.

Democratic Victory in Bridgewater.

The Democratic candidates in Bridgewater township, Somerset county, were elected by 500 majority. Heretofore the Republicans have carried the township by about 500.

A NEW CHURCH UNION.

ORGANIZED BY THE CONGREGATIONALIST OF NEW JERSEY

It is Aimed to Promote the Welfare of the Society in New Jersey—Perfected at Annual Conference Held Tuesday.

The Congregational churches of Northern New Jersey held their annual spring conference in the First Congregational church at Bound Brook Tuesday. At the morning session reports of the past year's work were presented by each of the thirty-six church in the Conference.

The most important business was the report given by Rev. Dr. A. H. Bradford, of Montclair, for the committee appointed at the last conference to organize the Congregational Union of New Jersey. The report says: "This society, organized in November, 1896, in connection with the fall meeting, at Montclair, aims to assist in the organization, maintenance and reinforcement of Congregational church in New Jersey, and in the promotion and extension of other Christian work. There are two classes of members: Any Congregational church joining the society is entitled to two annual members, one of them the pastor. For the payment of every $25 in addition to the annual dues of $5, a church is entitled to an additional member and vote, and individuals upon the payment of $50 may be made life members by the vote of the executive committee.

The management of the affairs of the union is entrusted to an executive committee of nine. The committee is endeavoring to do its work thoroughly and comprehensively. Thus far the committee has voted to endeavor to raise this year $1,200 for the mission work of the Jersey City Tabernacle and $582 for the part payment of the mortgage of the Waverly Congregational church of Jersey City, upon condition that the church raise a like sum. The committee is in correspondence with several other important enterprises which make a strong and most worthy appeal for the union to aid, and it is hoped that the liberality of the churches and of individuals will enable the committee to respond to these calls.

The officers of the new organization are: President, Rev. Dr. A. H. Bradford; vice-president, Martin Welles; secretary, Rev. H. S. Bliss; treasurer, E. F. Meyers. Twenty churches have joined the union, among the number being the First, Belleville Avenue and Third, of Newark; Trinity and Grove Street, East Orange; First, Morristown; Highland Avenue, Orange; First, Chatham; First, Montclair, and St. Paul's Congregational church, Franklin.

At the afternoon sessions addresses were made by Rev. Lyman Abbott, of Brooklyn, editor of The Outlook; Rev. Mr. John L. Scudder, of Jersey City, and Rev. James A. Chamberlin, of Newark.

—Shad direct from the nets the rest of this week at Roger's.

—Rogers, 132-134 North avenue, received a Spalding racer of '97 pattern today.

TOLD OF A GREAT LAND.

DR. RIGGS LECTURE IN THE UNIVERSITY EXTENSION SERIES.

Speaker Explained the Greatness of Peter, Who Ruled Russia With an Iron Hand—Talent Not Generally Credited

The University Extension lectures are most certainly appreciated by the people of Plainfield. Despite the inclement weather of last Tuesday the chapel of the Irving School was well filled with a most appreciative audience which enjoyed every word which came from the mouth of the speaker.

Dr. Riggs took for the subject of the lecture, "Peter the Great," the famous Russian sovereign. The lecture was substantially as follows:

"I have taken this subject," said Dr. Riggs, "because it seems to me to be one which we should consider during our short study of history as well as being one of the most interesting of all our subjects. We Americans are very apt to boast of our country and to think very little of the vast extent of some of the other countries which are equally as large as our own.

"Russia is three times as large as America. It is an enormous country, reaching from the Baltic Sea to the Pacific Ocean. One may travel from the Baltic straight eastward for seven thousand miles before reaching that large expanse of ocean water. It also reaches from the North Pole almost to the Equator, and covers a territory which we can hardly realize.

"This Russia is practically a modern thing, only dating in its present condition since the time of Michael, one of its rulers. It is a production of two great geniuses, one of them being the Empress Catherine and the other Peter the Great.

"In the time of Michael the country was comparatively small, and remained so for some time. It was confronted by three states, Sweden, Polsind, and Turkey, all of which were by far much larger than Russia itself.

"When Peter was seventeen years of age his life was sought by his half-sister, who being very desirous of obtaining the power of the country tried to poison him. She failed, however, in her attempt and Peter the next year found himself the despotic ruler of the country. He was a very powerful young man and had a very fine physical body. He was very energetic and a great revolutionist; he had learned of the way in which the people of the west lived and he was very anxious that his people should live in a similar fashion, a thing which he accomplished by some very queer laws.

"Confronted as he was by the three powers before mentioned, his purpose was to strike a blow at each one separately and thus gain power over them all. He tried to transform his own people and to bring the surrounding states into subjection to himself. He not only tried to do all this, but he actually accomplished it to a very great extent. I call it transcendant greatness for a man to do all this.

"He was a man who wanted to make over everything and to transform his people. This is not an easy thing to do by any means; if you happen to think so just try to transform your neighbor, that one who persists in coming home intoxicated and who always sets his bulldog upon your chickens, and after you have given it a fair trial if you do not agree with me in saying that Peter's greatness was transcendent it will be very strange.

"The kingdom of Russia, as it now is, is composed of sixteen different States, all of which had their separate governments and each with its own king. All were swallowed up by Peter, the Great, and added to his kingdom."

A QUIET HOME WEDDING.

Marriage of Jessie H. Watters and Augustus Wilson.

A very pretty home wedding took place last Tuesday at 7 p. m., when Miss Jessie B. Watters, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Watters, of Marlboro place, was united in marriage to Augustus Wilson, of West Fourth street. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Cornelius Schenck in the presence of the near relatives.

The bride was unattended and wore a pretty travelling gown. After the ceremony congratulations were offered and the bride and groom left for Philadelphia where they will spend their honeymoon.

The very many presents received were both useful and costly. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Wilson will take up their residence in this city. Mr. Wilson is an employee at Rockfellow's grocery.

Funeral of Mrs. Miles.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Miles was held Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the home of George Bullman, Washingtonville. Rev. Cornelius Schenck officiated and spoke words of comfort to the bereaved ones. The gathering of relatives and friends was large and this gave evidence of the high esteem held for the departed. Interment was in Evergreen cemetery.

900 DROPS

CASTORIA

A Vegetable Preparation for Assimilating the Food and Regulating the Stomachs and Bowels of

INFANTS / CHILDREN

Promotes Digestion, Cheerfulness and Rest. Contains neither Opium, Morphine nor Mineral. NOT NARCOTIC.

Recipe of Old Dr SAMUEL PITCHER

A perfect Remedy for Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea, Worms, Convulsions, Feverishness and LOSS OF SLEEP.

Fac Simile Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. NEW YORK.

At 6 months old 35 DOSES—35 CENTS

EXACT COPY OF WRAPPER.

SEE THAT THE FAC-SIMILE SIGNATURE —OF— Chas. H. Fletcher IS ON THE WRAPPER OF EVERY BOTTLE OF CASTORIA

Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria

Castoria is put up in one-size bottles only. It is not sold in bulk. Don't allow anyone to sell you anything else on the plea or promise that it is "just as good" and "will answer every purpose." See that you get C-A-S-T-O-R-I-A. The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

CHILDREN AS ENTERTAINERS

A Pleasing Affair Given by the Loyal Temperance Legion.

The rain last Tuesday held off until so late that the entertainment of the Loyal Temperance Legion, which was to be postponed in case of a storm, was held as originally intended. It took place in the rooms of the W. C. T. U. and was a very pleasant little affair, showing careful preparation on the part of the superintendents in drilling such a number of little children to go successfully through their parts.

When the curtains were divided, a tableau was formed by twenty children in red and white sailor costume. Those who took part were Mary Long, Anna Morrison, Ethel VanWinkle, Carrie Meyer, Sarah Head, Dora Wilson, Sadie Brown, May Weigman, Lottie Brown, Rose Hook, Fred Long, John McClellan, John Hensey, Stoney Varden, Harry Morrison, Irvington VanWinkle, Harry Hook, Frank Weigman, Louis Mulford and Walter Wilson.

Next came a recitation, "I Am Only Six," by Olga Weigmann, followed by a sweet little song, "Rockaby Baby," by Edna Conde, a recitation, "The Fiddler," by Anna and Harvey Morrison, and a motion song, "The New Moon," by Gracie Fillmore. A Chinese motion song was sung by Caroline Fuller, Fannie Conde and Enid Fonda. Evelyn Varden gave a recitation, "The Two Kittens," after which nine little girls, Carrie Meyer, Sarah Head, Dora Wilson, Gussie and May Seader, Sadie Brown, Mary Long, Edna Barth and her sister, marched upon the stage and went through a lively motion song, "Happy Children We." A little duet, "The Little Artist," by Gussie and May Seader, followed, then the audience had the pleasure of listening to a violin solo, "Air Varie," by Dancla," played by William McKillop.

The programme closed with a night-gown drill in which eight little girls, in long white gowns and little caps, and carrying dolls and lighted candles, wound in and out across the stage and sang their good-night songs, and vanished two by two. Those who took part in this were were Sarah Head, Carrie Meyer, May Weigmann, Ethel Lorton, Lottie Brown, Josie Meyer, Sadie Brown and Ethel Van Winkle.

It has been decided by those in charge to repeat the entertainment on Monday evening in the same place.

March, April, May

Are the months in which to give especial attention to the condition of your physical health. If you pass safely through these months and find yourself strong and vigorous, on the arrival of warmer weather, you may reasonably expect that you will be well in summer. Now is the time to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, because now is the time when the blood must be purified, enriched and vitalized, and because Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only true blood purifier prominently in the public eye today. Hood's Sarsaparilla has power to make you healthy and guard your system against disease.

—Justice Nash has issued summons in the case of Caspar against Mellman, on contract, returnable on the 15th of March.

MARRIED AT NEW MARKET.

Clara Pierce and Nelson Giles Joined in Wedlock Tuesday.

The marriage of Miss Clara Pierce to Nelson Giles, both of New Market, was performed at the home of the bride last Tuesday by the Rev. Mr. Fletcher, pastor of the New Market Baptist church. The house was prettily arranged for the affair and there was a large attendance of guests Miss Irene Day, of New Market, and Miss Cronk, of Corning, were the bridesmaids, and Joseph Field and Albert Pierce were the best men. The bride was gowned in white and carried pinks.

After the ceremony a reception was held when the eighty guests present extended their congratulations. A wedding supper was also served. A large number of costly presents were received by the happy couple, among them a solid silver set from James Donnelly, superintendent of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, and also a full dinner set from Assistant Superintendent Ackerly.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. J. H. McVey and Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Coriell, of this city. Several were present from New York and Philadelphia.

Mr. and Mrs. Giles left this morning for a wedding trip to Washington and through the South and on their return they will reside in one of the Miller flats at the corner of Park avenue and Fourth street.

EDISON'S WONDERS.

The Kinetoscope and the Phonograph Free at Marshall & Ball's.

Any time around noon, half past 3 and half past 8 on a week day, one may notice crowds pouring out of Marshall & Ball's big stores on Broad street, Newark.

Inquiry will disclose the fact that these masses have been enjoying one of the greatest and most thoroughly intellectual treats of the age—an exhibition of Edison's wonderful life pictures as produced by his "Kinetoscope.

Until this enterprising house of Marshall & Ball took hold of the Edison inventions a week or so ago with the intention of giving the community at large an insight into the wizard's wonders, comparatively few were familiar with and really interested in the actual results achieved by Edison in his kinetoscopic pictures.

It was in truth a silent demonstration of the wonders of man's ingenuity and controlling powers, for it would seem that even electricity were harnessed and driven at will.

New Jersey may well be proud to boast such an enterprising firm as this; one would have to go a great way to find a clearer evidence of genuine up-to-dateness than the Marshall & Ball people are thus exhibiting.

Spring Humors, eruptions, hives, boils, pimples, sores, are perfectly and permanently cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, the best spring medicine and one true blood purifier.

Hood's pills act easily and promptly on the liver and bowels. Cure sick headache.

John C. Whiting, of New York, has been spending a few days at his home on East Sixth street.

AMOS H. VAN HORN, Ltd.

73 Market Street. Running through to Campbell and Bank Sts.

Spring Beauties in Furniture and carpets adorn every floor of our three big buildings. If you want to fit out your home with latest style, really trustworthy fixings, see us. Prices the lowest,—terms CASH or CREDIT.

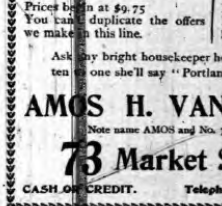
Cane Seat Dining-Room Chairs, 65c
Rockers, cane and upholstered $1.25 and over. A big stock.

Above Baby Carriage $4.75. Our Spring stock in carriages is ahead of any other in town. You may pick from 40 or 50 patterns.

Carpet Dept.

—an immense one—covering an entire floor—over 4500 feet square. Every weave and coloring. Making and laying free at these prices:

Brussels, 60c yard
Moquettes, 75c yard
Mattings, from 10c yard up.
Ingrains, 28c yard.
Velvets, 75c yard



BEDROOM SUITS
Prices begin at $9.75
You can't duplicate the offers we make in this line.

PARLOR SUITS
In Brocatelle, as low as $16.75
Plush Suits, $25.00
Silk Tapestry, $45.00

Ask any bright housekeeper her preference as to ranges—ten to one she'll say "Portland." Over 800 in use.

AMOS H. VAN HORN, Ltd.
Note name AMOS and No. 73 before entering store.
73 Market St. Near Plane Street NEWARK, N. J.
CASH OR CREDIT. Telephone 580—Goods Delivered Free.

Our Special Sale

FOR THIS MONTH ONLY.

NEW CABINET GRAND UPRIGHT PIANOS,

All Improvements, $225,

Payable $7 monthly. Warranted fifty years.

TWAY PIANO CO.,

Tway's Musical Guest mailed free. 88 FIFTH AVENUE.

d 10 6m

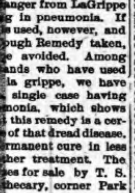
A LOCAL Disease. A Climatic Affection

Nothing but a local remedy or change of climate will cure a cold. Get a well-known pharmaceutical remedy.

Ely's Cream Balm

It is quickly absorbed. Gives Relief at once. Opens and cleanses the Nasal Passages. Allays Inflammation. Heals and Protects the Membranes. Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell. No Cocaine, No Mercury, No Injurious Drug. Sold by druggists or by mail, 50c.: Trial Size 10c. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren Street, New York.

CATARRH



COLD IN HEAD

Dangers of the Grip.

The greatest danger from LaGrippe is of its resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for la grippe, we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that this remedy is a certain preventative of that dread disease. It will effect a permanent cure in less time than any other treatment. The 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale by T. S. Armstrong, Apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

A Desirable Possibility.

There is a possibility that at the next meeting of the Freeholders of Union county something will be done in the matter of placing a bridge across Greenbrook near Tier's dam.

The Misses Runyon, of Stelton, are guests at the home of Isaac R. Giles, of East Sixth street.

NEW JERSEY SUPREME COURT

To Richard Garretson, defendant, or whom it may concern:

Please take notice that the following writ of Scire Facias has issued out of the Supreme Court of the State of New Jersey, to wit:

THE STATE OF NEW JERSEY to the Sheriff of the County of Somerset, GREETING:

WHEREAS, lately in our Supreme Court of Judicature, holden at Trenton, in and for our said State, before the Justices thereof, by the judgment of the same Court, it was considered that JOHN D. BARTINE recover against RICHARD GARRETSON, the defendant, the sum of two hundred and thirty dollars and eighty-two cents damages which were then and there adjudged by the said Court for the reason of certain moneys paid by the said JOHN D. BARTINE to the said RICHARD GARRETSON, at the request of the said RICHARD GARRETSON, for the purchase of certain property then lately made by the said RICHARD GARRETSON, to the said JOHN D. BARTINE, and also for the sum of two hundred dollars and seventy-three cents for the use and occupation of certain premises by the said RICHARD GARRETSON from the said JOHN D. BARTINE, as appears of record more fully and at large in the said JOHN D. BARTINE, we have been informed that said judgment remains in full force and effect unsatisfied, and that upon the occasion of certain moneys paid by the said JOHN D. BARTINE to the said RICHARD GARRETSON, at the request of the said RICHARD GARRETSON, for the purchase of certain property then lately made by the said RICHARD GARRETSON, to the said JOHN D. BARTINE, and also

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL XXX. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, MARCH 18, 1897. NO. 11

"Support the Constitution, Which is the Cement of the Union, as Well in Its Limitations as in Its Authorities."—Madison.

A BIG SCHOOL MEETING.

LARGEST VOTE EVER RECORDED IN THE BOROUGH.

An Exhaustive Report Made by President McCutchen—John H. Van Winkle Pleased for Re-election as Trustee.

Judging from the very large attendance at the annual school meeting held in the North Plainfield Public High School building last Tuesday, one thing was evident, and that is that the people of the borough are deeply interested in school matters. Never before has there been such a large attendance. In all there were 992 ballots cast at the polls and every one who voted has an interest in the school.

The meeting was called to order by President St. St. John McCutchen, of the Board of Education, and Dr. H. K. Carroll was made chairman. The secretary was H. J. Martin. The latter read the call for the meeting, after which nominations for trustees to take the place of Messrs. Ezra Loomis, J. H. Van Winkle and George F. Brown were made. The following persons were nominated: H. A. McGee, G. D. Halleck, George F. Brown, J. H. Van Winkle, Ezra Loomis, and S. B. Joseph.

The polls were opened at 8:20 and remained for one hour. The tellers were Messrs. J. G. McLoughlin and J. W. A. Bauerschs. It required nearly twenty minutes for every one to vote.

Previous to the voting Mr. Slater expressed himself as being in favor of having the reports presented, and thought they should take precedence over everything else. Mr. McCutchen quoted the law on the subject and that was satisfactory.

James McGee thought it wise to vote for the appropriations and then the trustees would know whether they were going to have the desired amount or not.

Mr. Slater offered a motion that the polls open at 8:30 and in the meantime the reports could be presented. Mr. Curtis offered an amendment to the preceding motion to the effect that the polls open at once and then the reports could be read. The amendment prevailed.

The report of the District Clerk, Ezra Loomis, showed that the expenditures for the year had been $18,095.53, and the receipts $23,725.35, leaving a balance on hand of $5,629.84.

Following is an abstract report of President McCutchen. It was a most excellent report and it can safely be said that it was the means of influencing the citizens and giving them a better idea of the school than they ever had before:

The altered conditions in our School which have resulted from a change of principal and policy, made at the commencement of the school year in September last, seem to justify a somewhat fuller and more careful report than we have heretofore presented.

It will not be forgotten that the wholly unexpected and voluntary retirement of Mr. Boss from the principalship of the school, last summer, necessitated the selection and engagement of a new man.

This selection engaged the anxious attention of a committee of the Board during the early months of last summer, who met, conversed and corresponded with applicants and their references.

Among the applicants, the committee met several able and accomplished educators, any one of whom could, probably, have met our needs, but the committee were so impressed with the abundant education and the apparent progressive spirit of Dr. A. D. Warde, that they gave him the preference, and upon their united recommendation, the Board of Education elected him to the principalship of the school.

In discussing with the principal, the reorganization of the school, we saw the desirability, amounting almost to necessity, of completing the course of education in the school at both ends by adding a Kindergarten class for the very young, and by providing for the completion of a full High School course for the advanced grades.

This last involved the adding of two grades, covering the third and fourth years of High School work, inasmuch as our former course was designed to include the first two years only of such work.

Both of the changes above referred to have been made, and now, for the first time, North Plainfield has its own complete public school system, independent of the schools of any other community, standard in the judgment of the State Board of Examiners and of the State Board of Education, which last named body, after an inspection and report by the State Board of Examiners, has placed our school upon the preferred list of

CONTINUED ON PAGE 8.

FIRST LENTEN WEDDING.

MISS ANNA FREDERICKSON BECOMES THE WIFE OF RICHARD KISSAM.

The Ceremony Performed by Rev. S. P. Simpson at the Home of the Bride's Parents — Those Who Were Present.

One of the prettiest weddings of the Lenten season was celebrated last Tuesday when Miss Anna Frederickson, daughter of Roundsman and Mrs. Christian Frederickson, of 871 Leland avenue, was united in marriage to Richard Kissam, of Fanwood, by Rev. S. P. Simpson, rector of St. Stephen's church, Netherwood.

The rooms were decorated with pleasing effect. In the parlor there was a profusion of greens arranged so as to centre around a bower of pink and white roses and carnation pinks, beneath which the bridal party stood during the ceremony. The impressive service of the Episcopal church was used and the responses were very clear. The bride entered the room leaning on the arm of her father, who gave her away in marriage, while the groom and the best man, Leonard Kissam, brother of the groom, entered from another door and met the former beneath the bower.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Kissam were showered with congratulations by their relatives and friends, after which all adjourned to another room where a sumptuous wedding supper was served. The decorations in the dining room were exceedingly novel and consisted of American flags and bunting prettily arranged.

The bride was richly gowned in brown cashmere trimmed with white satin chiffon, and she carried white carnation roses.

The bridesmaid, Miss Dora Frederickson, sister of the bride, wore a gown of dark cloth trimmed with pale green silk, and carried pink carnations. The maid of honor, Miss Bertha Anderson, of Perth Amboy, was also gowned in cloth of dark color, and carried white carnations.

The happy couple were well remembered by their relatives and friends, and among the presents was a parlor and dining room suit of furniture from the parents of the bride, silver and glassware, an artique oak desk from the bride's sister, and an antique oak chair from a friend. There were numerous other presents of equal value and usefulness.

Among those who witnessed the ceremony were Mr. and Mrs. Christian Frederickson, father and mother of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. William Kissam, father and mother of the groom, Miss C. E. Condit, of Westfield; Mr. and Mrs. Scriven Mr. and Mrs. David Bond, Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Mabie, of Netherwood; Dr. and Mrs. H. S. Jones, of Oradell; Mr. and Mrs. Thompson and daughter, of Woodbridge; Miss Anna Anderson, Miss Bertha Anderson, Andrew Anderson, of Perth Amboy; Mrs. John Reid, Miss Maggie Reid, Miss Carrie Reid, of Plainfield; Benjamin Kissam, of Bayonne; Daniel Kissam, of Huntington, L. I.

Mr. and Mrs. Kissam will at once go to housekeeping at No. 521 LaGrande avenue, where they have a home all furnished and ready for occupancy. Mr. Kissam is an employee at Potter's press works and is highly esteemed by all who know him. Both the bride and groom have a host of friends who wish them a happy and prosperous journey in life.

School Meeting in Warren.

The annual school meeting for Warren Township was held Tuesday day afternoon at Warrenville. The attendance was gratifying and much interest was taken in the matters under consideration. John Cooper was elected chairman of the meeting and Andrew Flemer, secretary. The following trustees were elected for three years: J. C. Flemer, A. J. Jennings and W. H. Ruckman. Those present voted unanimously to appropriate $500 for the expenses of the school for the coming year.

Celebrated Her Birthday.

A pleasant social affair occurred at the home of the Misses Carroll, of Westervelt avenue, on Monday evening, when Miss Alice Carroll celebrated the anniversary of her birthday. In honor of this event a salamagundi party was held. The house was prettily decorated with flowers and roses in abundance. There were many features during the evening which the following guests enjoyed: The Misses Petrie, Marion and Grace Nevius, Clara and Mamie Steiner, Bertha Needham, May McLaughlin; Edward Petrie, Guernsey Nevius, John Steiner, J. G. McLaughlin, Charles French, Rev. H. J. Johnston and Dyckman Winckler. During the evening Miss Alice Carroll rendered several piano selections, and the serving of refreshments was an enjoyable feature.

E. C. Mulford, of East Fifth street, is improving from his recent illness.

MISSIONARY EXTENSION.

FIRST OF THE NEW SERIES OF LECTURES BY REV. MR. BANNERMAN.

His Words Were About Life and Work in West Central Africa, and Proved Very Interesting to the Large Audience Present.

Lectures of many kinds have been given in Plainfield, but a Missionary Extension lecture was something new. The first in the course under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Local Union was delivered Tuesday in the Park Avenue Baptist church by Rev. W. S. Bannerman, a missionary from Africa. His subject was "Life and work among the Cannibal Fang of West Central Africa," and his lecture was an absorbing one.

E. E. Anthony, President of the Union, presided. Several hymns were sung, led by the choir of the church, the Scripture lesson was read by Rev. J. W. Richardson and prayer offered by Rev. W. R. Richards, D D., after which the speaker was introduced by Dr. Richards. He began by describing the surroundings in which African missionaries find themselves. The evil climate of the country is one of its greatest drawbacks; fevers are terribly prevalent, and the so called dry season is almost worse than the season of rain, the country being then dried enough to dissolve salt when left in the open air. Mr. Bannerman described the great African forests, with their strange animal and insect life, and then spoke of the tribe on the western coast of the continent, among whom he has so successfully labored, the tribe called "Fang."

This tribe are cannibals, though they are ashamed of the fact, and strive to conceal it from the missionaries. They live in villages, which consists of one street of houses of very simple structure. The men are polygamous; their wealth consists in women. They are kind to all their children, but prefer the boys. The speaker told how he and his wife learned the language, and of the books which have now been prepared for those who have learned to read; one of these he exhibited. He told many very interesting anecdotes of the daily life of the natives, and of his experiences among them, describing many of their characteristics. The work that has been done among them seems almost greater than the miracles of our Lord recorded in the New Testament. It is hardly ever difficult to obtain an audience among them, and while, of course, they do not always believe at once, the gospel is steadily advancing among them. The outlook for the tribe is very encouraging. We need no new gospel for these children of the Dark Continent; the same old story of Jesus Christ and him crucified has lost none of its power to raise men.

While the offering was being received, the congregation rang "The morning light is breaking," after which the service was closed by the doxology, and the benediction pronounced by Rev. J. W. Richardson.

NEW SCHOOL TO BE BUILT.

Washingtonville Taxpayers Decide to Put Up a New Building.

There was a goodly number of people present at the annual school meeting held at Washingtonville Tuesday. A. P. Voorhies was selected as chairman and W. H. Morris was the secretary.

The trustees elected were J. R. Doty, Theodore Leurssen and E. S. Acker. The sum of $75 was voted for needed repairs, and $300 was appropriated for text books.

The question of a new school building was brought up and discussed, and those present decided to erect a new building. Nothing definite was reported and the matter was referred to the trustees and they will report at a later meeting. No location has been decided upon, but it is quite likely that property near the Mary E. Wilson Memorial chapel will be selected.

Justice Newcorn's Court.

There were a number of cases for trial in Justice Newcorn's court, early this week. The contract cases of Coddington vs. Cronin, and Collins vs. Wallace were tried and judgment rendered for the plaintiff for the full amount and costs. A number of the cases were adjourned until some future date. The contract cases of Thatcher vs. Thorn, Linke vs. Chapot, and Anderson vs. Davis were adjourned until March 24th. The landlord and tenant case of McDermott vs. McDonald was adjourned until the 29th. The contract case of Ivine vs. Woltman was laid over until March 31st.

Streets in a Bad Way.

A few days ago the councilmanic street committee made a thorough inspection of the streets in this city. They found them in a deplorable condition and have concluded that it will require a considerable amount of work to put them in good order.

STORE OF MODERN IDEAS.

EDWARD WHITE'S IMPROVEMENTS IN A BUSINESS WAY.

An Elevator Now Carries all Customers to the Upper Floors—Carpets and Rugs a Special Feature of the Stock.

Another surprise has been prepared for the people of Plainfield. Edward White, the enterprising merchant of this city, is the author of it, and Wednesday opened it to the public gaze. The surprise came in the shape of numerous changes made to his already commodious store on West Front street. As his customers grew more numerous and his trade increased in magnitude, it became necessary for him to enlarge his store. The basement was utilized and then a portion of the second floor but the great objection was that his patrons were compelled to walk up or down stairs to reach these other floors. He has now overcome that objection by the introduction of an elevator of the most modern style and extended his floor space by the use of the second and third floors and the basement.

The elevator is something new for a Plainfield store. It is one of the well known Otis electric elevators, finished in oak with brass lattis work and a large mirror in the rear of the car, over the handsomely upholstered seat. The motor which lifts the car is capable of lifting eighteen hundred pounds at the rate of a hundred feet a minute. The elevator shaft is to be found in the centre of the store, convenient to every part, and extends from the top floor to the basement. The car will be in charge of an experienced operator.

Of course with the enlargement of the floor space there have been a number of changes and all the present departments have been enlarged in size and several new ones added.

The third floor will be devoted exclusively to matting, rugs, carpets, shades, and window curtains. Mr. White has taken the agency for an important Axminister rug of the finest quality. The patterns are copied from the oriental designs and include a number of different styles. In this department are to be found over two hundred different styles of matting. Then there are the Japanese jute rugs, the Kelem rugs, and the Syrenna rugs of all sizes from a small door mat to the large art squares. A department where shades are made to order has been added. A pretty assortment of Japanese bead portiers are hung about the room, while rugs of different patterns and styles and lace curtains are used to decorate the room with.

On the second floor there are ladies' and children's made up garments. Shirts and suits for ladies and children, shirt waists of pretty patterns, wrappers of tasteful design, are all to be found there. Of particular interest at this time of the year is the fine display of spring coats and wraps of the latest styles which is to be found on this floor. Good material and a charming arrangement made them attractive to the gentle visitor.

A descent of two floors brings the visitor to the basement which is now entirely devoted to the exhibition of Mr. White's goods. Here are to be found house furnishings, wood and willow ware, and toys.

The front part of the stores on the ground floor is devoted to dry and fancy goods. The millinery department has been enlarged to twice its former space, and the store has been increased accordingly. The dress goods department has also been enlarged by the transfer from the right side of the store to the left. It now has been given double the space as before and a more complete stock will be shown.

In the rear of the ground floor is to be found part of the housefurnishing department. Here is the fancy crockery, bric-a-brac, tea and dinner and toilet sets.

Altogether the store is complete in every particular, and the Plainfield shoppers would do well to visit Mr. White's mammoth store before making a trip to New York in search of what he or she wants.

An Appeal to the Trust.

Edgar Powelson, president of the New Brunswick Board of Trade, Tuesday appointed a committee of citizens to wait upon the directors of the United States Rubber Company and urge them to reconsider their action in closing the Meyer rubber works at Milltown.

Where the Hitch Is.

It is said that the reason that the City Council does not give the local telephone and telegraph companies the right to put their wires under ground is that the companies are not willing to pay enough for the privilege of tearing up the streets.

Mayor Fisk is still in Virginia. He is expected home next week.

SELF-SACRIFICE LIMITS.

REV ANTOINETTE BROWN BLACKWELL'S SOUNDS WORDS OF ADVICE.

It Must Be Governed by the Laws of Justice and Good Sense—Self-Sacrifice Goes Too Far Sometimes, Though, She Says.

An unusually large attendance filled the parlors of All Souls' Church, Tuesday afternoon, at the hour for the monthly meeting of the Plainfield Branch Alliance of Unitarian and Other Liberal Christian Women, which was to be addressed by Rev. Antoinette Brown Blackwell, whose talk on "The Training of Children," given here several years ago, was so greatly appreciated by those who heard her. Her subject yesterday afternoon was "The Limits of Self-Sacrifice," and her talk which showed much thought on the question under consideration, was much enjoyed.

Perhaps there are few of us, said Mrs. Blackwell, who are in danger of sacrificing ourselves too much; in most cases the danger is apt to be on the other side. Yet there is one class who are in this danger. We are told to love others as we love ourselves, and even better, and there are many who carry out the command. The very essence of motherhood is the self sacrificing love which takes no thought for its own life if it can help another's. And it is not confined to maternity; thousands of men and women have given all that makes life sweet to them, and even life itself, for the sake of humanity.

But even self sacrifice must be governed by the laws of justice and good sense. In many cases it has been carried to the point of self-immolation, and it is only as one makes the very best of himself, that he can do his best for others. Yielding to the requirements of a mistaken kindness to others is a virtue only to the unthinking, and tends only to lower one's own self-respect, and often to do actual harm to its object. Men often work far beyond their strength in order to surround a careless, selfish family with luxuries which may unfit them for a life of independence and usefulness. Children are unconsciously taught selfishness by parents who do everything for them. The lower classes in powerful countries have been taught that it was natural and right that they should be subject to the will of their social superiors; self sacrifice was expected of them as a matter of course. The world is growing better in these ways, and it is surely time that men should learn that it is the duty of those who have the most in this world to sacrifice most; not of those who have little to give but their own heart's blood. Helpfulness to others must always remain the truest way of obtaining happiness in this world, but we must use ourselves wisely for our follows, living up to the best light we have, and guided by that Golden Rule given us by Him who gave his life a ransom for many.

Still Growing.

At the meeting of Martha Washington Council, No. 23, D. of A., auxiliary to the Jr. O. U. A. M., Tuesday, three new members were elected and one proposition was received. After the regular routine business was transacted the members were then entertained in the "china" sociable which had been arranged for them. Some took part in washing the dishes, while others dried and counted them, showing that they had received four dozen plates and cups and several other useful articles given by the individual members. After which refreshments were served.

Assets and Liabilities Almost Equal.

Andrew Love, Sr., George D. Morrison and Robert Cook, appraisers for John A. Thickstun, coal dealer, who made an assignment a few days ago, have determined that the liabilities and assets are about equal. The amount is between $10,000 and $11,000. The papers have been filed with the Somerset county clerk. Lawyer Irving Brady represents Mr. Thickstun, as the latter made an assignment to the former.

Muslin Underwear.

Thursday, Friday, Saturday, March 18th, 19th, 20th, VanEmburgh will sale a special line of fine muslin underwear at special prices. This line of underwear is well known to the ladies of Plainfield for quality and finish and the prices at which they will be marked will be astonishing. 2t

Something Good.

What is it? The concert to be rendered at the Y. M. C. A. Hall on Thursday evening, March 25th, by the musical clubs of New York University. If you want to enjoy yourself for an evening don't fail to attend the concert.

Alfred Hunt, of Sandford avenue, has been confined to his home for a few days with illness, but is able to be out again.

BEFORE THE CITY CADI.

UNFORTUNATES WHO FELL INTO THE HANDS OF THE POLICE.

A Trio of Growler Rushers Celebrated too Publicly—Coal Commuters Caught—Marley Pleaded For Abusing His Wife.

Mrs. Martha Parkerson, Elizabeth Clark, alias Annie Clark, alias Lucy Clark, and Maggie Benford were out celebrating Tuesday in the neighborhood of North avenue and Richmond street. They had been down to Maggie's place in Paradise alley and enjoyed a friendly glass. Maggie ran away but Patrolman Mattox and Special Officer Cash found the other two preparing to retire at the corner. They were arrested and locked up. Mrs. Parkerson was fined $3 and Elizabeth Clark $5, in city court this morning.

Two more "coal commuters" were arrested Tuesday and arraigned before the Judge in the morning. Both were young colored men, Dory Smith from Pennsylvania, and William Macintosh from Somerville. The Somerville man explained that lots of people rode on coal trains in his town. The Judge remarked that such was not the custom in Plainfield and that they would have to suffer the consequences which was a fine of $3 or ten days in jail.

The other offender was Thomas Marley, who had been arrested on the evening of September 23d by former Patrolman Cooney. For some reason, Marley did not appear for trial and was only arrested Tuesday for not doing so. He pleaded not guilty to the charge of quarreling and fighting and resisting an officer. Cooney was present and said that he had arrested the man at the request of his wife who said that he had been beating her. Marley claimed that Cooney had been laying for him three months and had merely used this opportunity to get even. The testimony of Mrs. Marley and a neighbor was not strong. Marley was found guilty and fined $5.

SUING FOR $10,000 DAMAGES.

A Fanwood Woman Wants a Big Sum for Personal Injuries.

Carmine Collucci, of Westfield, is defendant in a suit for $10,000 for personal injuries. The suit has been brought in the Superior Court by Mrs. James Hunter, of Fanwood. The action alleges that Collucci, last September, while driving along the Springfield road, ran into Mrs. Hunter's vehicle, throwing her out and causing serious injuries, from which she was confined to her home for several weeks. Collucci denies the offence.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Miss Bertha Thorn, of Craig place, is entertaining a friend from Brooklyn.

Miss Louise Snediker, of Grove street, is able to be out after a short illness.

Mr. Fraser, of East Third street, has recovered from his recent severe illness.

Lawrence and Donald Bromfield, of East Sixth street, are confined at home with illness.

Mr. and Mrs. O. T. Waring, of Park avenue, have returned from a sojourn at Old Point Comfort.

Ex-Councilman John Valiant, of the borough, has returned from an extended absence from town.

Miss Gunn, one of the teachers of the North Plainfield public school, is detained at home with illness.

Mrs. George W. Marlor, of Roselle, is visiting at the home of William E. MacClymont, of Washington avenue.

It is Dr. Lowrie who is attending Miss Laura Mulford, of East Fifth street, and not Dr. Zeglio, as stated yesterday.

Morris Van Arsdale and family moved to their new residence in Watchung Park from Greenwich, Conn., last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Fredickson, of Berekman street, are in Boston where Mr. Fredickson is engaged putting up presses for the Walter Scott Printing and Machine Works.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Bingaman, of East Ninth street, invited a few friends to their home last Tuesday to witness the christening of their two daughters. Rev. Dr. C. R. Barnes officiated. The given names were Mary Hannah and Katherine Grant.

—Van Emburg & Son are making a special drive on muslin underwear.

—Lederer, the dry goods merchant, expects to open his store one week from today. The clerks are busily engaged in preparing the goods and arranging for the opening.

—John Newman, who was fined for fighting, was not arrested in Sullivan's saloon on West Third street, but in front of it. Joe Sullivan says he was not there at the time.

THE BOROUGH SCHOOL.

RECENT IMPROVEMENTS MAKES IT ONE OF THE BEST IN THE STATE.

The Experimental Stage Passed and Superintendent Warde's System is Now Recognized as Practical and Efficient.

For many years the public schools of Plainfield have been famous for their excellence, and graduates from the High School have been sent to the leading colleges of the country. The public school of the borough of North Plainfield has heretofore been merely a Grammar School at which a common school education might be obtained, but to secure a good education so necessary in business life at the present day, the citizens of the borough were compelled to send their children to the High School on the other side of the brook or else to some of the private schools in the neighborhood. Such was the case also with those who wished to enter college.

During the last year wonderful changes have been made in the North Plainfield school and it now appears as a High School, which promises to rank with the best in the State. The change has passed from the experimental stage and the benefits of the improvement throughout the school are apparent to those who have been there to see.

A Daily Press reporter called at the school one morning this week and was shown all over the building under the guidance of the superintendent, Dr. Warde, who, with the advice and consent of the School Board, has been enabled to make all these changes.

The session of the High School begins at eight twenty o'clock, continuing until one o'clock. The other grades of the school assemble at nine o'clock. Unlike the school of half a century ago, all is quiet and orderly from the moment the pupils enter their class-rooms, even if the session has not begun. The signal for the opening of school is given by a system of electric bells, which are operated and controlled by a series of push-buttons in the upper hall. It is the duty of one of the boys of the upper grades to ring the bells at the appointed time. All of the grades meet for morning exercises at nine o'clock. The building is so arranged that all but three or four of the class rooms can be thrown together by pushing back the sliding-doors which separate them. In the room thus formed on the first floor, the primary and intermediate grades assemble. Devotional exercises are conducted by the teachers and all the children unite in singing. In the large room on the second floor, the pupils in the grammar department and High School gather.

It was to this room that the Press reporter was directed. At a signal the pupils in the rear class rooms rose and filed quietly forward to the seats in front. Each boy and girl had his or her appointed seat, and there was no confusion or crowding. The teachers of the High School seated themselves on the platform, and the devotional exercises, conducted by them, followed. The song books had already been passed by monitors appointed for the purpose, and the pupils passed to their rooms in good order. The sliding doors were quickly closed by pupils assigned to the work, and all was ready for the daily routine.

A glance through the class rooms, showed the pupils hard at work One noticeable feature of the school under the new administration is the increase in the number of pupils who have taken advantage of the benefits of free education. For the month of February, the registration was 831, a gain of over a hundred over last year's figures. In the High School there were 81, in the grammar department 367, in the intermediate department 196, in the primary department 336, and in the kindergarten department 51

Every bit of available space has been used. Two rooms were fitted out last fall and both of them are completely filled while in the other rooms every desk is taken and in several it has been necessary to place extra seats to accommodate those who have no desks.

A short visit was paid to each of the rooms in order, and The Press reporter had a glimpse of the regular work in each grade. In the kindergarten, the children were gathered around in a circle and listened interestedly to the stories which their teacher told them. The latest methods of kindergarten work are in vogue there, and the children appeared to enjoy their first experience of school life. In all the grades, from the lowest to the highest, a spirit of industry seemed to prevail. The children were attentive and seemed to take an interest in their work. Modern methods, by which the different studies are made as interesting as possible while still retaining all the instructive features, were in use throughout the school, and the teachers taught their pupils as well as hearing them recite.

With the changes in the school have some changes in the course. Modern methods were again in prominence instead of confining the instruction of the children to the three "R's," they are given a glimpse of other important studies. While none of the most important branches have been neglected, science and languages were remembered. Latin, Greek, French and German now form a regular part of the High School course. Mathematics are followed to a farther point than ever before in this school. Algebra, geometry, and trigonometry are also part of the necessary studies. It would be impossible to give the complete course of study in the different grades, as the space is too limited, but a glance over it by one who has enjoyed a public school education will show its excellence.

In the High School, three courses are open to the student, the Classical, the Scientific and the English. The first two require four years and the latter, which is a modification of the other two, three years. As this is only the first year of the High School the graduating class is, of course, small. It is composed of five, Miss Bessie Thompson Day, Edouard Loizeaux and Ernest S. Suffren, who are taking the Classical course, and Miss Edna Louise French and Miss Adah Woolston, who are taking the English course. The High School prepares its graduates for college and all the graduates this year expect to take advantage of that fact. Miss Day will go to Smith College, Mr. Loizeaux to Columbia and Mr. Suffren to Williams. The others have not decided what college they will enter.

The preparations for the close of the term are elaborate ones. On Tuesday, June 21st, a prize contest in declamation will be held in Music Hall. On the following Thursday, the Commencement exercises will be held in the same hall.

In closing; a word should be said for the building itself. Everything was clean and neat throughout the building. The improvements made during the summer made almost a new building of it and the good care it has received that time has kept it in the same condition.

SLEPT ON INTO DEATH.

A GERMAN FOUND IN BED WITH LIFE EXTINCT.

August Spitzel Was Suffering From a Heart Ailment From Which He Was Unable to Recover—Newark His Home.

August Spitzel, known as "Gus," was a bologna maker living in Newark. For the last two months he has been ill with heart disease, but when A. G. Vogeler proprietor of the Union Market in this city, wanted another man in that line, Spitzel took the job and came to Plainfield Monday and began work. His wife and three children remained at their home in Newark.

Spitzel could speak but very little English, and so had little to say to the other men in the shop. It was plain to see, however, that he was very ill. He tried to accomplish his task but he had to remain every night until late to do it. Friday he did not leave the store until after 11 o'clock, he was so weak.

Mr. Vogeler secured board for Spitzel with Charles Ficke, the upholsterer at 128 West Second street. Friday he went to his room at a late hour. He did not come down Saturday, and Mr. Vogeler came over at eight o'clock to see what was the matter. Ficke went upstairs to Spitzels' room and found the man lying on the bed with his head hanging over the side. A glance at him showed that he was dead. The boarding house keeper notified Chief Grant and the latter notified the police in Newark who told the sad news to the family in that city. County Physician Westcott was also notified of the death by the Chief.

Spitzel was a man of about forty-five years. A German by nationality, once robust and broad shouldered. The traces of the fatal illness were evident in his face. There seems to be no doubt regarding the cause of his death. It was heart disease.

Entertained at Euchre.

The members of the Thursday Evening Euchre Club were delightfully entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Marshall, of East Fifth street, this week. The first prizes were won by Mrs. C. B. Clifton and David Krymer. Mrs. Clifton was tied for the prize by Mrs. Will F. Williams and won on the draw. The second prizes were awarded to Miss Mabelle Force and Harry W. Marshall. After the game was completed, the rest of the evening was spent in dancing and vocal and instrumental selections.

WORTHY BEQUESTS.

La e Mrs. Stout Left $500 to All Souls' Church and Children's Home.

In the will left by the late Mrs. Stout, $500 is bequeathed to the Children's Home and $500 to All Souls' church of this city. Mrs. Stout was a relative of the late Job Male, and when living she was interested considerably in the above two institutions.

—The Women's Association of the Congregational church will hold a sewing meeting on Thursday afternoon in the church parlors.

POLITE HIGHWAYMEN.

OBTAINED MONEY FROM A MRS HARRIS BY NICETY OF WORDS.

The Victim of the Gallant Holdup was Stopped Near Westfield—Acquiesced to their Demands and Gave Out a Dollar.

Mrs. James Harris, a plucky young matron of Dunellen, had an experience last week that she will not soon forget. She started out to drive from Westfield to Fanwood, and taking the old mud road, North avenue, she was compelled to go through a hummock, just at the town limits, where there is a heavy wood and underbrush on each side of the road. She saw two men coming toward her, but paid no attention to them until they separated. One catching the horse by the bit, said, "Whoa!" The other fellow tipped his hat, advanced to the buggy and said:

"Lady, we don't want to harm or scare you. We want money. We are out of work and must have some coin."

"By this time," said Mrs. Harris, "I had overcome my fright, owing to their politeness, and told them I would not give them any and would whip up the horse and run over them."

"I guess we can hold the horse," said one of them. "Come, now, lady, we don't want to be rough or cause you any trouble. If you will not give us some money we will unhitch your horse and turn it loose in the woods."

Mrs. Harris considered a moment, and then contented them a dollar.

"Is that the best you can do?" asked the spokesman, who still stood by the buggy with his head uncovered. Being assured that it was, they accepted the dollar, let go of the horse, and tipping their hats bid her good evening.

SOMERSET COUNTY RETURNS

Van Fleet Again Elected Collector of Bridgewater Township.

Returns from the ten townships of Somerset county show small gains for the Democrats in the local elections.

The interest at the county seat centred in the election of Collector of Bridgewater Township. Voorhees I. VanFleet was the Republican candidate, and Ferd VanDerveer was nominatkd to succeed himself as Collector by the Democrats. VanDerveer during his term of office had enforced an almost obsolete State law which empowers the Collector to hold the body of a delinquent taxpayer until he pays up. The list of delinquent taxpayers filled about six columns in the local newspapers when VanDerveer first began to issue warrants for their arrest.

There was much hustling on the part of the delinquents to escape imprisonment, and there were also many threats of vengeance at the polls. Vanderveer's scheme was a success. The delinquent list melted rom six columns to less than one. The army of would be tax jumpers that was arrayed against him at the polls Tuesday was simply swamped by the taxpayers. He was re-elected by 500 majority.

PLAINFIELD HONORED.

State G. U. A. W. Present an Ivory Gavel to Central Lodge.

The following grand officers were elected at Friday's session of the American Order of United Workmen, Grand Lodge of New Jersey, at Trenton: Master workman, Henry S. Rutherford, of Cape May; foreman, Col. Ernest C. Stahl, of Trenton; overseer, Wm. H. McCullough, of Swedesboro; recorder, J. H. Lippincott, of Camden; receiver, Goldson Test, of Camden; guide, W. S. Lambert, of Newark; inside watch, J. W. Hewitt, of Bridgeton; outside watch, Vincent W. Nash, of Plainfield; trustee for three years, Wm. J. Bradley, of Camden; medical examiner, Elmer Berevis, of Trenton, supreme representatives, E. H. Colyer, John Enright and John W. Diefendorph.

An ivory gavel was presented to Central Lodge, of this city, for having an initiation at every meeting of the lodge during the last year.

Past Workman V. W. Nash secured second place also on the publication committee.

Suit Against Street Railway Company.

On January 20th, of this year, Thomas Cashman, of Scotch Plains, an employee of Michael Powers, of this city, was run into by a trolley car near Clinton avenue, and sustained severe injuries. A little later he secured Craig A. Marsh, as counsel, and the latter brought suit Friday against the Plainfield Street Railway Company for $2,500 as damages.

New Industry for Rahway.

The New York Carbon Company has purchased the Johnson Signal Works property at Rahway, which has been closed about two years. The company will at once proceed to erect kilns and remove its machinery from Newark, and will begin operations at the new factory by May 1st.

New Bridge Opened.

The new iron bridge over Bound Brook just out of the borough of that name on the river road to New Brunswick has been completed and the road opened again to traffic. The new bridge is a much needed improvement.

MONROE AVENUE SOCIAL

SONGS, RECITATIONS AND DIALOGUE MADE UP THE PROGRAMME.

The Entertainment Given Under the Auspices of the Epworth League and a Pleasant Time to all Who Attended the Affair.

The monthly social held at Monroe Avenue church last Thursday, under the auspices of the Epworth League, was of more than ordinary interest, and the large attendance of both old and young people was gratifying to those who have charge of these affairs. The fact that the electric lights went out for awhile did not mar the pleasures of the evening. Friendly neighbors were called upon and several lamps were secured, which assisted in giving light until the current returned.

John Praed was master of ceremonies, and he announced the various numbers on the programme in his accustomed happy manner.

After the singing of a hymn and a prayer by Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, the programme opened with a tenor solo by John Thompson, whose singing is always enjoyed. This was followed with a piano solo by Miss Charlotte Aldrich. She rendered the favorite selection, "The Palms," with variations, and her playing was a feature.

The next number was a recitation by Miss Rita Pond. This young woman is one of Plainfield's best elocutionists and her recitations received hearty applause.

A vocal solo by Bert Tallamy, accompanied by Miss Tallamy, was one of the most enjoyable features. Mr. Tallamy has a pleasing voice and his work is always well received. The able manner in which he was accompanied by his sister was marked. This number was followed with a finely executed piano duet by the Misses Graves.

There was another recitation by Miss Rita Pond and a vocal solo by John Thompson, after which an amusing dialogue, entitled "Dr. Cureall," was presented. The sketch affords many opportunities for a good hearty laugh and those that took part pl yed well Miss Aldrich assumed the part of the doctor in a most excellent manner, and she was ably assisted by the following: Miss Bertha Wemd, Miss Smith, Miss Adams, Miss Lizzie Foster, Miss Anna Foster, Miss Daisy Brouard, Miss Whitley, Stephen Aldrich.

This concluded the programme, and those present were served with refreshments, after which a very happy occasion came to an end.

SANITARY COMPANY LICENSED.

Board of Health Authorizes to Proceed in Collecting Garbage.

The Plainfield Sanitary Company was last Friday licensed by the Board of Health to collect the city garbage for the ensuing year. The proposal of the company contains very careful stipulations as to the manner of collection, which cannot fail to commend their methods to the public. Pending the construction of their plant, the work of collection will be done as of present, under the supervision of the company.

Sewer connections were ordered by the Board as fast as the house to house inspections are made, beginning in the heart of the city, and leaving the thinly settled portions until the last.

Various details of plumbing practice were considered, and it was ordered that no pan closets be allowed in buildings to be connected with sewers.

A Talk About Indians.

The meeting of the Young Women's Mission Band of Trinity Reformed church held Friday afternoon in the parlors of the church was of unusual interest. A paper entitled "The Vocation of the Indians, Tribes and Their Differences, and Their Legal Rights," was read by Miss Grace Emmons. Another paper entitled "The Manners, Customs and Religion of the Indians," was read by Miss Grace Nevius. The papers were exceedingly interesting, and awakened many new ideas about the Indians. The next meeting of the Band will be held in three weeks.

Somerset Street Improvement.

Michael Powers, of South avenue, is about to make a big improvement in his Somerset street property. He is going to move the house which now stands on the latter street to the further end of the lot on Park place. The vacant property on Somerset street will then be sold for building purposes.

A Florida Emigrant Succumbed.

The famous alligator, which F. L. C. Martin brought home with him from his trip to Florida this winter, has departed to alligator heaven, if one exists. The chilliness of the Jersey weather was too much for the constitution of the native of Florida, and the alligator finally gave up the struggle to the sorrow of its owner. Mr Martine is now having the creature stuffed by Hedden & Welch, the taxidermists, of this city, and will place it in his room to remind him of his pleasant trip to the sunny south.

Miss Bertha LaRue, of Liberty street, is seriously ill at her home.

BOWLS AS WELL AS PEDAL

CLEVELAND CYCLERS DEFEAT THE PONDS ON THE ULRICH ALLEYS.

The Machine Seemed to be Clearly Outclassed from the Start—Game by Game Pond Players Lost Out Most Again.

The Cleveland Cyclers bowling team added another laurel to their already excellent record, on the Ulrich alleys in East Second street, last evening, when they played another game with the crack bowlers from Pond's. The two teams rolled their first game in the series on the same alleys la t Friday night, and the Cyclers won by 45 pins. Last night the defeat was overwhelming, for at the close of the game the score stood 1529 to 1226 in favor of the Cyclers—a difference of 303 pins. From the start the Cyclers took the lead and kept it all through the game. Below is the individual scores:

Cleveland Cyclers.	Ponds.
Overbaugh, H.	192	Millington	96
Hand	158	Owens	80
Sneden	169	Sneden	142
Free	109	Reagan	196
Bittle	138	Shepherd	138
Overbaugh, W.	151	Gleason	116
Sutphen	178	Brown	139
Kiely	127	Shirley	115
Young	125	Coss	160
Tunison	173	Gulnee	100
	1529		1226

The Pond players seemed to be outclassed from the start, and although the bowlers have good eyes and steady nerves, they could not seem to get there.

Whether or not the two teams will compete again this season is not yet known. Some of the bowlers are in favor of putting baseball nines in the field as soon as the weather becomes settled; others are advocating bicycle racing, and a few are talking up a series of aquatic pastimes on the New Market lake. But as yet nothing definite has been decided upon.

A Republican Wail.

A Democratic mayor for North Plainfield! What are we coming to, Brethren let us have peace. Warfare to the point of extermination is not very profitable.—Somerville Unionist Gazettr.

UNRULY SCHOOL BOYS.

POLICE HAD A TO BE CALLED ON TO MAKE THEM BEHAVE.

Were Bound to Get Into the Cycle Academy Where Cadets Were Drilling—Broke Down Barriers to Keep 'Em Out

For sometime past the Plainfield High School Cadets have been troubled considerably with the disturbance caused by a company of unruly boys who find great delight in watching the Cadets drill. The Cadets are not so proud of their drilling that they implore people to come and watch them, but still they do not object to having persons come to the drill when ever they feel so inclined, provided they do not make so much noise that the Cadets cannot hear the commands of their captain.

For several weeks past the company have tried to keep the onlookers quiet but they have sadly failed in their attempts.

At a recent meeting of the company they decided to place sentinels at the doors and prohibit any one passing into the hall without first showing the proper credentials.

Yesterday afternoon the onlookers came as usual but with a very much greater force. They were very much surprised when they found out that they were not to be allowed to enter the hall and some of them were not satisfied with being turned away peacefully so they endeavored to gain entrance by force. Seeing that they could not force their way past the sentinels they bore against the gate and broke it down, then they rushed on and finding that the door was fastened on the inside they bore themselves heavily upon it and soon the door gave way before the great strain, not upon its hinges but off its hinges.

No amount of persuasion could quiet the boys and it was not until the arrival of Captain Grant and Roundsman Frederickson, of the Plainfield police force whom the Cadets had sent for, that the boys ceased their mutinousness.

There is no doubt now but that the Plainfield Cadets will be much less troubled in the future than they have been in the past few weeks.

A NEW CITY TO BE BUILT.

Factories are to be Put Up Within a Few Weeks.

The New Orange Industrial Association, which a year or two ago purchased an immense tract of land between Cranford and Union, expects to boom things this year. Mr. Dennis Long, who has a big interest in the project, says that the company has already built a number of houses, and that as soon as the weather permits several factories will be put up north of Cranford. Mr. Long says that an effort will be made to construct a trolley railroad from Elizabeth up Westfield avenue to Lorraine, and so on over Gallopin hill to the new town which the company will at once commence to build.

—The Methodist Conference will be held at Newark for one week commencing Wednesday, April 7th.

BADGE OF APPRECIATION

PATRICK CASEY HONURED BY THE ANCIENT ORDER OF HIBERNIANS.

Presented With a Past Officer's Medal for Having Been at the Head of the Society for the Past Twenty-five Years.

There has been no one more thoroughly identified with Division No. 4, A. O. H., than Patrick Casey. He has worked hard in the service of that organization and from its start in this city in 1874 until last January he has been the efficient president of the division. Then he refused re-election and took a back seat so as to give the younger members a chance. At that meeting a banquet was given in his honor and it had been planned by his friends in the order to present him with a past officer's badge.

Through some unavoidable delay, the medal did not arrive until the day after the meeting. It was not exactly to satisfactory and was sent back for some alterations. It again arrived in Plainfield two weeks ago and was presented to Mr. Casey at the regular monthly meeting of the division, Thursday.

The presentation was kept a secret and Mr. Casey had no idea, when he came to the meeting, of the surprise that awaited him.

Eight candidates were initiated and four propositions received. Then Edward Ryan, vice-president of the division, stepped to the front of the platform and made the presentation. He spoke feelingly of the time and labor that Mr. Casey had given to the order in its early days in his efforts to advance its interests. He told something of the history of the Division and how closely Mr. Casey had been identified with it from the first. Then in a few well selected phrases he handed the handsome gold medal to the astonished Mr. Casey.

The surprise was a complete one and Mr. Casey was well nigh taken aback by it. He spoke a few words to his friends, however, and thanked them with all his heart for their kindness, and said that he did not need anything to make him remember them. He referred to his love for the order and all his fellow-members, and said that it was his intention to remain a Hibernian as long as he lived. His remarks were received with loud cheers.

Everybody was then invited to partake of a collation which had been arranged by some of the members, and an enjoyable hour was passed.

WHITECAPS AFTER JOHNSON

Handsome Grocer's Clerk Threatened with Death if He Doesn't Leave Town.

Alexander Johnson, a clerk in the grocery of Lehman & Co., Elizabeth, has lost several pounds of flesh and has been unable to sleep nights during the past ten days. He is a prepossessing young man and went to Elizabeth from Plainfield recently.

He became at once a great favorite with the young ladies of Elizabeth, and ten days ago he received a letter signed "White Cap," demanding that he leave town. The letter was smeared with real blood, and was decorated with a skull, coffin and crossbones. It threatened Johnson with death if he did not obey. He thought it a joke, but two other letters followed, and he became thoroughly frightened. He has placed the matter in the hands of the police. It is believed that a suitor of one of the young women Johnson has visited is the author of the letters.

Johnson formerly worked for Sheuer Brothers in this city.

FRANCHISE GRANTED.

Midland Water Company to Lay Water Mains in Metuchen.

The application of the Midland Water Company for permission to lay a water main from South Plainfield and in the streets of Metuchen has been granted.

The company is to lay 4 miles of iron or steel pipes 30 inches below the surface, on the north and west side of streets not paved with Telford or macadam, within 8 months and the rates are to be the same as those charged by the Union Water Company in Fanwood, Roselle, Westfield and Cranford.

The rates given are as follows: Dwelling house, 1 faucet, $6; each additional faucet, $3; water closet, pan or tank, $5; additional, $2; bath tub, $4; additional, $2; set wash tubs not exceeding three, $3; additional, $2; 2 faucets, for hot and cold water, only one charged for; 2 families, in one dwelling, each charged separately; extra charges for additional families using closets, tubs, etc.

An Afternoon Tea.

The ladies of the Relief Association are planning for an afternoon to be given in the early part of April, when their new home, 544 West Front street, which is now the property of the Relief Association, will be shown to on interested public.

—In order to close up their business Charles H. Hand and John MacIntyre will sell fifteen building lots and three six-room houses and lots in this city. The sale is to take place March 25th.

ATHLETICS NOW TALKED.

HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS PREPARING FOR ADVENT OF SUMMER.

The Winter Pastimes of School Life Are Beginning to Lose Interest and Out-of-Door Pastimes Will Take Their Place.

With the sign of the approaching spring on every side there comes the added interest among the students of the Plainfield High School in the natural sciences, for there are prospects of trips of investigation afield. Interest in athletic sports has also grown space. The cadets are looking forward to the time when they will be able to leave the Cycle Academy and drill out of doors again.

The studies at the High School are progressing steadily. All the classes are advancing in their work with no holiday to interrupt. With the departure of winter seems to go the interest in the glee club and rehearsals are low. There will probably be an attempt to start work in that line for the spring in a few weeks.

The cadets are hard at work and are rapidly learning the bugle calls so that they will be able to manoeuvre directed by the bugle alone. More intricate movements are being taken up and the company will be able to make an excellent appearance when they take part in any parades or exercises this spring.

Even while the thoughts of many of the boys of the school are turned to the athletic and baseball field, interest in the Kappa Delta Phi has by no means lessened. If anything, it has increased. The regular weekly meeting of that society was held Friday afternoon in the High School building. Vice President Charles Noble presided in the absence of President Henry W. Brower. William Fisher acted as secretary pro tem in the absence of Secretary Sydney R. Titsworth.

The programme consisted of a debate on the subject, "Does the small college offer greater advantages to the student than the large university?" The speakers for the affirmative were Charles Noble and N. Stanley Peck. Arthur W. Lederer and George P. Smith were the debaters on the negative side. A committee composed of William A. Fisher, William DeLong, and William B. VanAlstyne decided the debate in favor of the negative. The fraternity committee made its report and its recommendations were adopted. It was decided to elect a committee, composed of two members of the alumni and one member of the High School, to revise the constitution according to the recommendations. The alumni members chosen were Henry Eggerding and Charles B. Morse, and the High School member W. A. Fisher.

The programme was arranged for the meeting two weeks from yesterday. The debate will consider the question "Should the arbitration treaty between the United States and England be ratified?"

There are two important projects with which the Athletic Club is struggling at present. One is the concert which the association, or rather which the friends of the association, are to give for the benefit of the treasury, which is sadly in need of help from somewhere. The concert will be held on Saturday evening of next week and will really be worth attending. Some of the best musical talent, vocal and instrumental, in the city, are to take part, and Jere M. Cobb, the well-known reader, is to assist. It is to be held in the Y. M.C. A. hall and tickets may be obtained from any member of the association for twenty-five cents. It is hoped the friends of the association and the High School will liberally patronize the entertainment.

The other thing which is worrying the members of the association is the baseball team which is to represent the High School on the diamond this season. It has been several years since the High School has had a baseball team worthy of the name, but all the clubs in the New Jersey Interscholastic Association are expected to have a team on the field and the Plainfield High School will be up with the rest. There is an unusual amount of good material from which to draw and a good nine is predicted.

Arthur W. Lederer is the manager of the team, and, at a recent meeting of the association, was elected captain of the nine. Besides him there are ten other candidates who are anxious to make a place on the team. Lederer is the only capable catcher in the school, but there are two candidates for the position of pitcher. Charles Noble and Carman P. Sutphen are both trying for the place. The other candidates for the nine are Walter Long, Roy T. Phillips, S. R. Craig, Irving Stewart, William A. Fisher, A. Egan, George Proctor Smith and Harry Cuming.

The prospects for a strong track team are good. The high school will probably be better represented there than for several years. George Proctor Smith has been chosen captain of the track team and he intends to bring the candidates up to the mark in good shape. The cycling squad promises to be heard from in future. Lindley M. Hillman and Carroll L. Bunyon are both good men. They have the experience of several years on the track and will make a powerful pair when in condition. Harry Cuming is not unknown and is looked upon as one of the pluckiest young riders in the city. A Osmond, a New Market lad, is a now comer with a reputation to make.

G. P. Smith will train for the shot, pole-vault and the dashes, while the other candidates will represent the association in the short runs, hurdles and throwing the hammer. As yet no long distance runner has been found among the boys.

Both the teams will be out for preliminary work in a few days when the changes of the different candidates will be noticed. The other candidates for the track team, besides those already are Elwood Davis, V. W. Nash, Jr., Walter Serrell, Walter Long, William A. Fisher and S. R. Craig.

A Plainfield Director.

The Associated Colonies of New York City was incorporated at Albany on Saturday with the Secretary of State. The company is formed to colonize arid, irrigable, desert or uninhabited vacant or wooded tracts located west of the Mississippi and in other countries. The capital is $100,000. The directors are William E. Smythe, Willard Brown, Charles H. Botsford, Thaddeus B. Wakeman, B. H. Pounds, W. W. Hazen, of New York city; Charles B. Holmes, of Plainfield; Smith M. Weed, of Plattsburg, and Ervine D. York, of Flushing.

—The Sunday-school class at Trinity Reformed church which is taught by Miss Lizzie Dunn, will hold a fair the afternoon and evening of Thursday, March 25th.

KINDERGARTEN SCHOOLS

ONE TO BE ESTABLISHED AND OTHERS TALKED OF.

The Need of Suitable Instruction, With Ample Facilities, Recognized by the Board of Education, and Quarters Rented.

According to a recent decision of the Board of Education the building on West Fifth street, formerly occupied by Rogers, the cycle dealer, is now being fitted up for the purpose of establishing a kindergarten which is needed very much. It is the intention to have the place ready for opening in April when the spring term of school begins. Miss Agnes Blair has been secured as teacher of this department.

In connection with this march of improvement for the accommodation of the children of this city, the Board is also considering the advisability of leasing the old Seventh-Day Baptist church on the Olympia building on Sycamore street. The large increase in the number of children makes it imperative that something should be done to provide for them proper school facilities.

THEATRICAL.

The success of "My Friend From India," which will be at Music Hall Friday evening, is truly an instance where an author has made a ten strike by hitting the popular chord. The gentleman of the yellow robe is certainly the most entertaining individual seen on the stage. Theosophy has advanced so far in popular notice that a play founded on it is most possible. In this instance, who through three acts masquerades as a Mohatma is merely an honest tonsorial artist, who, as he often explains, is a victim of circumstances. He becomes acquainted during a night's spree with a lively boy, Charles Underholt, who takes him home minus his clothes. A yellow bedspread is extemporized into a robe, and in the morning when young Underholt is called upon for an explanation, he introduces the innocent barber as an accomplished pundit from India Messrs. Donnelly and Girard, who head the cast, have a capable supporting company, including Miss Maude Granger.

REALTY CHANGES.

Plainfield Matters Recorded in the County Clerk's Office.

The following property transfers have been recorded in the Union County Clerk's office, March 4th to 10th inclusive:

David Clark, Plainfield, to John Stein, lot 2, block B, Evans, $1,900; Sheriff Kirk to Mutual Life Insurance Company, of New York, of Broadway and Stiger avenue, Plainfield, $2,568, 0; Julia A. Shue to Samuel T. Shaw, of New York city, of West Fourth street and Monroe avenue, Plainfield, Welch estate, $1; Corra Byne Jr., et al., of North Plainfield, to Adolph Kahrman Plainfield, lot Jackson avenue and Twenty-first street, Plainfield, $1; Rosalia Gaines, Plainfield, et al., to C. W. McCutchen, North Plainfield, lot Third street, Plainfield, $1,200; J. A. Chase, Plainfield, to Charles H. Leonard, city, lot North avenue, near Berckman street, $1.

Broke His Collar Bone.

Samuel Vail, at one time a messenger for the Postal Telegraph Company, met with an accident Saturday afternoon which resulted in the fracture of his collar bone. He with some other boys were playing about the trestle work at Rheaume's coal and wood yard, when he broke through a thin piece of board which covered an open space. He fell a considerable distance, with the above result. With the aid of his chums he was taken to the home of Dr. Tomlinson, who set the bone. Young Vail is now doing well.

SPRINGTIDE OFFENDERS.

SEVERAL PRISONERS ARRAIGNED IN CITY COURT TODAY.

A Fat Man Who Was Lifted Off of a Train by Three Men and Carried to Jail by Two Policemen—Sentence Suspended.

There were a number of offenders in the lockup this morning, and the City Judge had more to do than he has had for some time. The first man was a French glove-cutter, who is in the employ of Canpot & Co. He was charged with being drunk and disorderly. He came home from New York Sunday, and being a heavy man, it took the conductor of the train and two brakemen to remove him from the train.

The Frenchman explained through Mr. Chapot, who came to the hearing, that he was merely asleep but Patrolman Higgins, who arrested him, and Sergeant Kiely, who assisted in the removal of the man to the lockup, thought that the man was drunk. Adria Revouix, as the man called himself, explained that he had been drinking a little bit, but that this was the first time he had ever been arrested. He had started to walk home on the railroad tracks when the officer had arrested him. Captain Grant said that the officer had rendered his prisoner a great service by removing him from the track, as he probably would have been struck by a train had he remained on the track long in his condition. The Frenchman had nothing to say, and Judge DeMeza suspended sentence as it was the first offence.

Two "coal commuters" were next brought before the Judge. They said that they were railroad men and were working their way threugh to Jersey City in search of a job. Their appearance seemed to confirm their words. Their names were Thomas Smith and William Jones. The Judge gave them their choice between ten days in the county jail and paying a fine of $3. One paid the fine and the other went to Elizabeth.

James J. Day was arraigned on the charge of using profane and indecent language on West Third street. He pleaded and was held in $100 bond for trial on Saturday morning. He was arrested by Patrolman Lunger.

A DELICATE OPERATION.

A Cranford Boy Greatly Relieved of Pain at the Hospital.

Dr. Ard, of this city, has just performed a very delicate and successful operation on Walter Crane, eight years old, son of J. M. Crane, of Cranford. During the past eighteen months the boy has suffered intensely with an ear trouble, the result of scarlet fever. A few days ago he was taken to New York to be examined by a specialist. The latter advised an immediate operation to save the boy's life. This suggestion was followed out and the operation was performed by Dr. Ard at Muhlenberg Hospital, in the presence of the staff. The boy is now doing nicely and hopes of his speedy recovery are entertained. The boy is a nephew of Postmaster J. M. Hetfield, of this city.

New Jersey Victorious at Whist.

Another whist match between the experts of New Jersey and Brooklyn was played in the rooms of the Brooklyn Whist Club, Saturday afternoon. Each side was represented by fifty players. Among the New Jersey delegation were Messrs. McCutchen and Townsend of the Park Club. The New Jersey players won the match by eleven points after a very exciting game. This is the second time this winter that the two delegations have met and the New Jerseyites were victorious in both. Last year the New Jersey experts won both matches with the Brooklyn players.

Not a Burglar.

An attempted burglary was reported to the police by Samuel Ayres, one of the conductors of the Plainfield Street Railway, Saturday evening. Mrs. Ayres had thought that she had heard a man trying to get into the house, and when she moved around she had seen some one run away. The police investigated and found that there had been no attempt but that the man seen running was one of the neighbor's boys running down the street on some simple errand.

E. E. Anthony Officiated.

The funeral service of the late Augustus Spitzel, who died suddenly on Saturday, was held Sunday afternoon from the office of Terrill & Cole, undertakers. E. E. Anthony, superintendent of the Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school, officiated. He read the Scripture lesson and offered prayer, after which interment was made in the Plainfield avenue cemetery.

Red Men to Dance.

At the meeting of Miantonomoh tribe of the Improved Order of Red Men, Friday evening, a committee was appointed to arrange for an entertainment and dance in the near future. The committee has now met and organized with A. J. Silglitz as chairman. They have decided to give the dance in Red Men's hall on the evening of March 31st. The other members of the committee are C. L. Holdstein, J. A. Karet and D. C. Allen.

BUT ONE G. A. R. POST.

MAJOR ANDERSON TO CONSOLIDATE WITH WINFIELD SCOTT POST.

The Decision Make at the Meeting of the Former Post Saturday Night—Very Gratifying to All the Old Veterans in this City.

At last the fondest hopes of the majority of the members of Major Anderson Post, No. 109, G. A. R., have been realized, for they decided on Saturday last, at their meeting to surrender their charter and accept transfer cards to unite with Post No. 73. This action is one of the most important that has ever taken place in Grand Army circles in Plainfield, and with this step there is attached a great deal of significance.

There were twenty-four members at the meeting and of that number only six voted to hold the charter. There was no opposition worth speaking of, for no one took the opportunity of arguing against the change. The previous meetings the detail work was arranged so that all that remained to be done was to take a final vote.

Post No. 109 was organized several years ago by the required number of veterans, who, for some reason, were dissatisfied with Post 93, of which they were members. For some time they were very strong and seemed to prosper, but as the members grew older they felt the need of union. This fact has been growing on them for some time. There always seemed to be something in the way of a union, but finally the members of Post No. 109 took the matter up in a thorough business-like manner. The division of support accorded the two Posts was a strong factor in bringing them together. They realized they were not growing younger, and felt that to be a strong and influential body they must unite.

On the other hand Post No. 73 was willing to accept the members of the other Post if they were desirous of coming with them. But they, being the oldest Post, did not feel like giving up their name and whatever else they might have gained during their existence as a Post. They made several propositions to the other members, but the last seemed to be the one that pleased them the most. It was that they would accept the members of the other Post on transfer cards if they would give up their charter. This proposition was submitted to the members of Post No. 109 and they discussed it at length at a number of their meetings, and finally agreed to bring the matter up for final action last Saturday evening. This was done with the above result.

All books, records, etc., were ordered returned to the Department officers of New Jersey. The flag, Bible and swords which were gifts of the members of Garfield League, an auxiliary to the Post, were returned to the donors by a unanimous vote. The members will have one year of this month to close up their affairs and they will then be prepared to unite with Post No. 73 at their first meeting in April.

In consequence of the above action there is great rejoicing among the Grand Army men of the city. They now feel as though they can work with united effort in their patriotic labors. The union will make one of the strongest Posts in New Jersey and as Post No. 73 ranks high in the Department will be a strength and influence will bring to her many desirable things worth having.

THREATENED LABOR TROUBLE.

Elizabeth Masons to Demand Better Pay for Their Labor.

The boss masons of Elizabeth are greatly worried over a notification they received to the effect that a big strike of masons, bricklayers, and masons' helpers would begin March 22. Nearly all the bosses have made dozens of contracts and Elizabeth is experiencing a building boom. The strike will be felt severely and be disastrous in the extreme. For some months the labor unions have been moving quietly, and Saturday the result of their conferences became known. The masons and bricklayers have decided to demand that eight hours shall constitute a day's work, and the masons' helpers ask a standard scale of $2 a day instead of the $1.75 and $1.85 they now receive. As all of the contracts are based on the old scale of wages, a general demade of the men would bankrupt many bosses, and if they do not grant the request building interests will be paralyzed. Several leading contractors said today that they would pay the extra money nor allow the time scale. Many employees said that they were determined to get what they asked for.

Lehigh's "Suburban Homes."

"Suburban Homes" is the title of a little book issued by Shreve Ackley, the industrial agent of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, that commends itself for prettiness, pointedness and attractiveness. It is filled with matter-of-fact information concerning the suburban territory that the Lehigh Valley traverses. Each town has a page devoted to its advantages and illustrated with handsome local views.

NEW PLACE OF WORSHIP TO HIS ETERNAL REWARD

FILLMORE AVENUE BAPTISTS IN THEIR NEW QUARTERS.

Rev. P. S. Gibson Deprecated the Fact That Some Colored People Had Their Names on Two Church Rolls in This City

The members of the Fillmore Avenue Baptist church dedicated their new place of worship on Madison avenue, Sunday, by holding special services. In the morning and evening the pastor, Rev. Mr. Johnson, preached, and the afternoon service was in charge of Rev. P. S. Gibson, pastor of the Mt. Olive Baptist church. The latter gave a most excellent talk on "Unity."

In regard to a recent statement made by Mr. Gibson about his people making the rounds of the churches, he said that what he does object to is that the people have their names attached to the membership roll of two churches and then they hope to get all the benefits from both churches. He urged that the members of the Baptist churches be united in their efforts to build up the cause of Christ and their denomination. Mr. Gibson also said that there were some people in town trying to "do him," but he intended to stay until he got ready to go.

Following the above remarks of Mr. Gibson a collection was taken to advance the cause, and nearly $5 was realized. The attendance at all of the services was large and a gratifying amount was received therefrom.

The meeting room has been nicely arranged for the members of this church and they will have a pleasant place to worship. A series of special services will be held for sometime to come under the direction of Rev. Mr. Johnson.

STOLE MEAT AND MONEY

J. M. SMALLEY'S MEAT MARKET BROKEN INTO AND ROBBED.

Gained an Entrance by a Back Window and Departed With Hams, Capons and $8 in Pennies and Nickels.

After a visit to the borough, the burglars have returned to this side of the brook as a field for operations. Sunday one of them paid a visit to the butcher shop of Jedediah M. Smalley on Park avenue, near Fourth street. Now Mr. Smalley misses about $8 in small change, six hams and six capons.

When he visited the shop Sunday morning Mr. Smalley found the window in the rear of the store open and footprints in the snow outside. No noise had been heard by those occupying the flats overhead during the night and the only clue to the thief was the footprint, which was of a small wide shoe with a square toe. An investigation of the store proved that someone had been there during the night.

On closing, Saturday night, Mr Smalley had left a cigar box, nearly full of pennies and nickels in the store. He had picked the larger coins out of his change and taken them them home and left the rest, intending to take it home Sunday. The hams and capons were also missed, and there is no doubt but that the thief took them with him.

The police were notified of the robbery next morning but no trace of the thief has been found.

WINNERS AT EUCHRE.

The Saturday Evening Club Entertained by Mrs. Kampman.

The members of the Saturday Evening Euchre Club were entertained last Saturday evening by Mrs. Kampman, of Sandford avenue, who was assisted in entertaining by her brother, Mr. Salkeld. The usual delightful time was enjoyed by all.

The prizes were all gold and consisted of a belt buckle as first ladies' prize, which was received by Mrs. Longman. Nicholas Terhune won the first honors for the men which was a necktie clasp. The second ladies prize, a hat pin, was received by Mrs. Nightingale, and the second prize for the men, a stick pin, was presented to Robert Dryden.

Miss DeCamp, of Chester, was a guest of the club. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dryden will entertain the club at their next meeting.

Men Will Tell How to Earn Money.

On Thursday evening, April 1st, the men of Grace M. E. church will hold a social for the benefit of the women as well as the church. The men will earn a dollar and then tell how they secured it. All men will be admitted free, but the women will have to pay. The men will present a pleasing programme and will have full charge of the affair.

A Grand Concert.

The New York University Glee and other musical clubs are to give an excellent concert at the Y. M. C. A. Hall on the evening of Thursday, March 25th. All lovers of music should not fail to attend this concert.

$500 For the Hospital.

The late Mrs. Stout, who bequeathed $500 to All Souls' church and $500 to the Children's Home, also left $500 to Muhlenberg Hospital.

TO HIS ETERNAL REWARD

LAST OBSEQUIES OVER THE REMAINS OF REV. S. F. CUSTARD.

The Funeral Services Attended by a Large Number of Friends and Clergymen—Sermon by Rev. G. W. Smith.

The funeral services of the late Rev. S. F. Custard were held Friday afternoon from the Methodist church at Dunellen, of which he was the pastor, and the attendance of relatives and friends was so large that all were not able to gain admittance to the edifice. The services were most impressive and there was a deep feeling of sadness evidenced on the part of everyone present. Among those present was about 100 members of William G. Holton Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., of which the departed had been a member.

Rev. G. W. Smith, of this city, presiding elder of this district of the Methodist church, had charge of the services, which were opened with a selection, "Blessed Assurance," by the choir. Rev. Mr. Peterson, pastor of the Seventh Day Baptist church of North Market, read the 90th Psalm, and the lesson from 1st Corinthians.

This was followed with prayer by Rev. C. R. Barnes, of the First M. E. church of this city, after which Rev. Mr. Smith made a few appropriate remarks. He spoke of the uncertainty of life and compared the Christian life with the life of a scholar in school, he was often given problems by his teacher and was not always able to solve them until the key was furnished. The pupil has the advantage of the disciplines and so it is with many things in life which we cannot understand.

Mr. Smith spoke of the sturdy honesty and straight-forward manliness of the departed and of his forgetfulness of self and devotion to his church up to the time of his death.

Rev. A. H. Martine, pastor of the Presbyterian church of Dunellen, then followed with a few words. He said in part: "The gathering impressed upon his mind three groups. First, the congregation, made up of men, women, friends, citizens and neighbors, and it reminds me of the necessity of prep aring for death. In the second place, I am impressed with the group of ministers before me. One of our number has fallen and naturally there comes to us a sense of increased responsibility. of added burdens and the fact that we must close up our ranks. The last group is the bereaved ones, the father, mother, sisters and brothers. I sympathize with you in deep sorrow from out of my own experience, and I know that God's grace is sufficient for everyone."

Both addresses were full of feeling and eminently fitting. Following the above prayer was offered by Rev. J. W. Baily, of the Methodist church, of Bound Brook. The choir then rendered "In the Homeland," after which the benediction was pronounced by Rev. Frank Fletcher, pastor of the New Market Baptist church.

The remains were removed to the late home and were taken to Easton Saturday for interment. The pall-bearers were classmates of the departed. The floral tributes were numerous and very beautiful. They consisted of several pillows and bunches of choice flowers.

The following served as pall bearers: Charles Waldron, Newark; E. E. Roberson, Metuchen; W. J. Hampton, Dover; A. C. Covey, Asbury Park; John McMurray, Finnesville; W. C. O'Donell, Plainfield. The very handsome pillow presented by the Jr. O. U. A. M. was made by Miss Lincoln the florist of this city.

ILLUSTRATED LECTURE.

Rev. Father Kelly Lectures to a Large Audience in St. Mary's.

As was expected, a large congregation assembled in St. Mary's church last Monday at 8 o'clock to hear Rev. Father Charles J. Kelly, of Hoboken, give an illustrated lecture on "Christ, the Beloved."

The lecturer is a gifted speaker, and from the start to the close of his remarks he held the attention of his hearers. He described in an interesting manner the incidents in the life of our Lord, from His birth in the stable at Bethlehem to His crucifixion on Mount Calvary, views of which, were thrown on the canvas. In all about one hundred views were shown, including the cities of Nazareth, Samaria, and Jerusalem, places that were closely identified with the life of Christ. The speaker told of the trials and hardships endured by our Saviour during His thirty-three years on earth. His mission being to save all, of His rejection by the Jews, and of His death on the cross.

The scenes were very fine ones, and the lecture was successful in every particular. A number of Protestants were present.

A Liberal Contribution.

Rev. W. J. Richards, pastor of the Crescent avenue church, made an appeal Monday for funds for foreign missions and $1,300 was subscribed for that purpose by the congregation.

The Constitutionalist.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

FREEHOLDERS MAY REMAIN.

It looks very much as though the Boards of Freeholders throughout the State would remain in existence for a considerable time. They are not, at all events, to be abolished this year. Senator Parry has discovered that he cannot pass his bill providing for county commissioners unless it contains a clause submitting the freeholder question to the popular vote. In Union county the Board of Freeholders is the cheapest and best way of managing county affairs, because the members of the Board have acted honestly, honorably and with the best interests of the county in view. If the people were appealed to they would continue the Board, rather than establish a costlier commission, which would be an experiment at best. There are counties, however, in which the people only wait for an opportunity to drive the Freeholders out of power. This is because of official corruption and dishonor. If Senator Parry's bill is amended and passed there would be a rattling of dry bones in some sections, but not in the county of Union. —Elizabeth Journal.

BOROUGH SCHOOLS.

It must have been very gratifying to those of North Plainfield who take a live interest in public affairs to have seen the large attendance of representative and substantial citizens of the borough present at the annual school meeting Tuesday night, even though there was some differences as to what course the candidates who were to be elected should pursue. A healthy interest with opposition is better than the spirit of lethargy that too often characterizes the majority of citizens in the management of the schools. The report made by President McCutchen was an elaborate one, carefully prepared and prolific with information and comparisons reflecting credit on the present management of the public school.

SCHOOL IMPROVEMENT.

It is a matter of congratulation for every person in North Plainfield—because it is something every person is vitally interested in—that the public school system of the borough has reached the high standard of excellence that it has No community can afford to neglect the work of educating the young in a manner practical and efficient, and this is the prominent thing of more than passing interest to know that under the present administration this duty is being carried out with a true conception of its intent. Superintendent Warde has made many improvements in the curriculum of studies and the general plan of study since he assumed control, a fact made evident in the article published in another column.

A GOOD VIEW OF DUTY.

Mayor Wilson displayed good sense in his first address to the members of the Borough Council in not treating all the different departments of municipal government in an elaborate manner. His preference to speak of them from time to time as his attention is called, after a closer acquaintance of the exact condition and needs of the "local Canada," is quite proper, for then he can act with more effect, having every detail at hand, than a wordy glossing could possibly result in. However, his admonition concerning the incuring of heavy expenses just at the present period is well-timed and will meet with a sympathetic approval by taxpayers in general.

PRIDEVILLE FIRING WELL.

A prominent North Plainfielder aptly says that while the taxpayers of Prideville, a portion of the borough, were complaining a short time ago about not receiving ample benefits for the taxes they paid, they are now faring pretty well. Among the fixtures of local government that they possess are macadamized streets, water works, fire department, regular marshal, and last, but not least, the Mayor.

ONSUL DEMAREST TO CARE WELL.

President McKinley's sentiments as regards the members of the U. S. Civil Service indicate that no changes will be made in the ranks. This very proper disposition of affairs will indefinitely preserve to Brockville our good friend United States Consul J. A. Demarest, and smooth out all wrinkles of anxiety and foreboding upon the alabaster brows of himself and his numerous friends.—Brockville (Can.) Times.

—Justice Mosher has issued summons in the contract case of Charles Stimpson vs. Edward S. Peck, returnable on March 24th.

NEEDS OF A BUSY CITY.

SEVERAL ORDINANCES INTRODUCED INTO THE COMMON COUNCIL.

The Most Important Was the Extension of the Sidewalk Boundaries—Little Big Six Acted on the Last License.

All was peace and quietness at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council, last Monday. In fact, there was not anything to cause any excitement. The last liquor license was called up and the "little Big Six" hung together with the expected result. There were several ordinances introduced, the most important of which extended the boundaries of the sidewalk district.

All the Councilmen were present except Messrs. Westphal and Runyon, when President Dumont called the meeting to order, and those two Councilmen arrived before the Council had settled down to business. After the roll call and the reading of the minutes of the last meeting. Clerk MacMurray gathered together the petitions and read them. First was one from the committees of the Organized Aid Association and the Relief Association. They asked for permission to use a portion of the city farm to furnish occupation for the unemployed of the city. The wages for the men were to be paid by the associations and the products of the harvest thus raised were to be divided between the city and the associations This was referred to the streets committee.

Quite a lengthy petition came from the residents of Netherwood asking for some nineteen crosswalks on Belvidere, South and Woodland avenues. W. F. Hobbie and others wanted several crosswalks on Putnam avenue and also asked that the street be put in better condition than at present.

A petition from Jeremiah Manning and others asked for an apportionment of the sewer assessment on property on Central avenue as it no longer belonged to them.

The city was asked to receive, at no expense to itself, a portion of Sycamore avenue, which has just been cut through from West Front street to Green Brook. The petition was signed by A. J. Randolph and others. A. D. Thompson and other residents of Netherwood wanted another electric light at the corner of Putnam avenue and Woodland avenue. The directors of the Public Library notified the Council that they needed $3,500 to support the Library for the year 1897.

A request for a crosswalk at the corner of West Second street and New street was given to the streets committee for consideration.

The bills against the city for sewer assessments were turned over to the finance committee. President Dumont thought that they should be paid by transferring the necessary amount from one account to another, as the Board of Education had been compelled to do.

Another petition asking for more electric lights in the vicinity of Grant avenue and West Front street was received.

A petition was received from the directors of the Public Library which is published in full in another column.

The streets and sewer committee had a lengthy report to make. In regard to the petition for the crosswalks in Netherwood, Mr. Frost, chairman of the committee, said that Netherwood did not have a single crosswalk at present and that the roads in that part of the city were in very bad condition so that the crosswalks were almost a necessity. The taxes paid by the people of that district amounted to over $500, and the total cost of the asked for improvement would not exceed $300. He recommended that the matter be left with the committee with power. Mr. Barrows, of the same committee, agreed that Netherwood was sadly in need of crosswalks, but thought that the rest of the city should not be forgotten. He amended Mr. Frost's motion, giving the committee power to lay six of the crosswalks in Netherwood at present. Mr. Frost said that num ber was too few and at least twelve were needed.

The petition for a crosswalk at the corner of West Front and Albert streets was granted.

A petition from the Board of Education for sidewalks on East Second and Berckman streets, in the vicinity of the new Lincoln School, and another asking for the extension of the sidewalk ordinance to Carleton avenue, would come under the ordinance that was to be introduced, Mr. Frost said.

The petition of the Organized Aid and the Relief Associations was reported favorably and referred to the committee, with power. The city merely grants the use of the land and is under no expense. This plan was tried on a small scale last year and it proved very successful.

Mr. Frost next reported that he had insured the buildings on the city farm for three years for $2,100 at a cost of $11.

Two ordinances were submitted by Mr. Runyon, repealing ordinances, one of which fixed the salary of the city collector and the other the salary of the street commissioner. They were adopted on second reading.

Mr. Barrows introduced the new sidewalk ordinance which extends the limit in which the city can compel sidewalks to be laid. Mr. Barrows said that it was not the intention to order a great many to be laid, but only those in the vicinity of churches and schools or on such streets as the property owners desire. This ordinance was also adopted on second reading.

Mr. Serrell has been keeping the street sprinkling question well in mind and he had a resolution ready for introduction regarding it. It provided that the corporation counsel be ordered to draw up the licenses for the street sprinklers and that those applying for licenses should give a practical demonstration of their apparatus to show tha' it answers all requirements. It was pigeon-holed with the street committee.

Mr. Frost introduced a resolution that all boss plumbers who make connections with the sewers deposit a bond of $55 with the city.

On Mr. Leivers' motion, the peddlers' licenses were taken up and granted. On the motion of the same Councilman, the application for a liquor license of William Willis was granted. Those voting nay to the granting of the licence were Messrs. Barrows, Baker, Frost, Stebbins and Serrell. The meeting then adjourned.

One Package of H-O Oatmeal Equals in Digestible Nourishment Three Packages of Ordinary Oatmeal

Subscriptions Free to

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly
Illustrated American (Weekly)
Truth (Weekly)
New England Magazine
Chatterbox (Monthly)
The American Kitchen Magazine
Home Magazine (Monthly)
of Binghamton, N. Y.

WITH COUPONS FROM THE

H.O.Co.'s Goods

Bilious Colic.

Persons who are subject to attacks of bilious colic will be pleased to know that prompt relief may be had by taking Chamberlain's Colic, Colera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and it taken as soon as the first indication of the disease appears, it will prevent the attack. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, Apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

A Musical Opportunity.

The Y. M. C. A. Hall should be filled to overflowing on the evening of March 25th by all lovers of first class music. The New York University Glee and Musical Clubs will render a grand concert on Thursday evening of next week and as this is a grand opportunity offered to the people of Plainfield the students should be well received

Elizabeth, N. J., Feb. 27, 1897.—I was troubled with a rash which spread all over my face. A friend recommended Hood's Sarsaparilla. Before I had finished the first bottle the rash entirely disappeared. Mary Kirk, 301 Conrt street.

Hood's Pills cure all liver ills.

LIBRARY WANTS $14,000

TO PUT UP A SEPARATE BUILDING FOR BABCOCK COLLECTION.

The Board of Directors Make a Long and Detailed Argument for the Appropriation to be Made by Common Council

The following is the petition presented to the Common Council Monday evening by the Board of Directors of the Public Library:

To the Common Council of the City of Plainfield:—The Board of Directors of the Plainfield Public Library and Reading Room, in co-operation of action by our Librarian is Body upon the accompanying application in respect of an addition to the library building, respectfully invites your consideration in the consequences of the following facts:

The institution was established in 1891, but its early operations were so limited that as late as June 1, 1893, the number of books and periodicals which it possessed was only 798. The following year, however, a marked advance resulted from the gift of Mr. Job Male of the Library building and large gifts by other citizens of money and other property. The latter growth has been continuous and substantial, and now the Library contains more than 14,000 volumes, carefully selected with a view to the needs of the community quality rather than quantity being specially regarded, and the reading room is amply supplied with newspapers and the best magazine literature, and with costly and extensive books. The yearly additions average 850 volumes. These accumulations, embracing selections from the world's best literature, have been made easily accessible and are of inestimable value to people of all ages and classes. The Library is now seeking, through its delivery stations, to carry its books to the very homes of the people.

The Library is much used and is highly appreciated, and 4,427 borrowers of books are now registered. The circulation, beginning with 462 volumes in the month of October, 1895, in December, 1896, it reach 2,937. The proportion of books circulated to each inhabitant of the city has increased in ten years more than seventy per cent, and the percentage of light reading which in October, 1896, was about seventy-five, fell in December, 1896, to about sixty-five, a difference of about twelve per cent in favor of the heavier reading, the record thus showing that in ten years the Library has induced people not only to read more, but to read more substantial books. In the ten years the total number of books circulated has been 178,129. The influence of books cannot be measured, nor can inspiration be shown in statistics, but enough good books cannot be circulated in any community without a direct benefit, none the less real because it cannot be defined by figures.

For the year ending May 31, 1897, 19,057 persons visited the Library, and during the year ending May 31, 1896, 36,131. During the last year fifty-three of the institutions of Plainfield, representing public, private and parochial schools, have, upon application, been granted special privileges, and the city at large alone 1,800 volumes in aid of school work have been circulated in the manner.

An important part of the Library's influence is through its reference work. Students, teachers, authors and others make constant demands upon the Library for a variety of information on bewildering to contemplate. For these are open shelves to which all have free access, with a constant attendant to assist them when necessary. Statistics of such work cannot be given, but as a slight indication of its extent it may be said that from October to and including December, 1896, the quarter on which the last report to which attention was rendered by the Library, numbered 216. This is by no means a complete record, for it does it take into account the many who are able unaided to find what they want. The only can afford books of reference, and the many who cannot do so, and who, in the city at large, benefit greatly by the excellent selection now at their command.

The usefulness of the library, however, is greatly hampered by lack of suitable accommodations. The one room dedicated to the library and reading room is necessarily made to serve not only for the storage of books but as a delivery, reading and study room, and for these purposes is utterly inadequate. The consequent confusion and the delivery work is destructive of all serious study. Students, even in the Public Library, for the consultation of books of reference, are driven away by the noise and confusion. There should be, in fact, the stack room and rooms for delivery, for periodicals and reference, for children, for students, should be separate. The work demands this specialization, and new libraries recognize and make provision for it.

The moneys hitherto raised for the support of the Library and Reading Room are small in comparison with the sums expended for other municipal needs, but a few facts bearing on this point will be suggestive.

Out of the 1,000 libraries in the United States containing over 5000 volumes each, but 17 have smaller annual incomes than that of Plainfield. The following table of collections, among which may be specified:

Public Libraries.	No. of Vols.	Annual Income.
Aurora, Ill.	12,597	$3,700
Decatur, Ill.	12,000	$4,000
Joliet, Ill.	12,000	$6,856
Pawtucket, R. I.	13,000	$6,700
Woonsocket, R. I.	13,000	$4,000
Plainfield, N. J.	14,500	$3,500

Many of the principal of annual library income to population, in a few instances, may be specified:

Places.	Population census of 1890.	Annual library Income.
Bangor, Me.	20,000	$ 16,500
Brookline, Mass	12,188	11,800
Concord, "	6,427	4,000
Malden, "	12,931	7,470
Newton, "	24,379	13,200
Wellesley, "	2,298	2,000
Plainfield, N. J	11,267	3,500

The good work of the Library in all departments is astonishing, and its natural growth requires more room and better facilities; but this is not the only reason for the present. Honorable Body is prompted not by these considerations alone, but by the special necessity for accomodation for the Babcock Scientific Library.

The late George H. Babcock, by his will bequeathed to the Library and Reading Room the thousand dollars "for the purchase of industrial, mechanical and scientific books, the same to be kept by themselves and to be known and designated fore or by the name of the Babcock Scientific Library, and to be public use, and subject to the same rules and regulations as the Library and Reading Room." and he also devised t the Library and it adjoining Room the house and lots of No. 7 known as Number 5, 6 and 7 Dunham place, numbers 621, 623 and 625 Madison avenue, the net income thereof to be used for the purpose of keeping up and enlarging said "Babcock Scientific Library."

Thus is provided a fund for the immediate purpose of a library, and an annual income of some of about $1,000 to main ain and en arge it. The te ms of Mr. Babcock's bequest fairly c ntrust all authorities in the purchase of general scientific treatises and books relating to mechanics, engineering, architecture, mining electricity, ch mistry and chemical technology, sanitary and sewerage, geology, botany, natural history, lives of scientists, archæology, anthropology, photography, engineering, agriculture, domestic economy, commerce, manufactures and mechanic trades of all kinds, and also to provide periodicals upon such subjects; and if all these objects are fully to supp ied the wishes of Mr. Babcock's gifts, the generic library will be required to expend large sums in purchase of literature, and thus be materially benefited. At present the Library has 1,000 scientific books, the last annual report of the Board of the Board of Directors showing that these come several in the thirty out of thirteen classes into which the library is divided; and this notwithstanding the fact that the newer scientific books, which would be most in demand, are the dearest and are subject to a delay with a view to the pu chase of such books with the Babcock fund as it may be properly utilized. The three large factories of Plainfield alone employ about 2,000 machinists, to class which may be added the intelligent of mechanics. For these should be the best books, the best of machinery Books for the special use of archit cts, building and mason chanics, all trades in fact should be provided, as will as books for the use of the engineer, which make no pretense so important in the curriculum; nor should students in special lines and the large number of persons interested in the progress of science be forgotten or neglected.

The enlargement of the present Library will supply all of these needs, and will relieve a situation become and that the Babcock Library such as usual exists only in large cities, notably Cleveland, Ohio, Worcester, Mass.

The Directors of the Library and Reading Room, after careful investigation and consideration, have reached the conclusion that suitable accommod tion for the "Babcock Scientific Library" cannot be provided in the present building without extensive alterations, which would cost probably $6,000, and that with such expenditure the crowded condition would continue and the books be e n-tantly subject to the serious risk of fire. The relief would be put partial and temporary. It is found however, that for about $14,000 can be constructed a fire proof addition with ample and handsome accommodations to accomodate about two 000 volumes, thus furnishing in excess of existing the requirements that the "Babcock Scientific Library" shall be kept separate, and affording room for growth for many years, and permitting the utilization of the present building for periodical and reading and delivery rooms and other purposes.

The Directors are satisfied that the best interests of the Library and the City will be promoted by the construction of the additional fire-proof building proposed, and that the cost should be provided as authorized by Chapter 44 of the Laws of 1896. If the cost be distributed over a period of two years as is suggested, it can hardly be felt as a burden by anyone

The gifts of Mr. Babcock are of great importance and of supernatural value to Plainfield, and in view of them the city should not assume an ungenerous attitude, but rather indicate its high appreciation by providing a suitable depository for the valuable special library for the use and benefit of the people.

By order of the Board of Directors of the Plainfield Public Library and Reading Room,

MARCUS W. HYLER,
President.

Dangers of the Grip.

The greatest danger from LaGrippe is of its resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for la grippe, we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that this remedy is a certain preventative of that dread disease. It will effect a permanent cure in less time than any other treatment. The 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale by T. S. Armstrong, Apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

—If you have never succeeded in getting glasses that improved your vision, don't you think it advisable to drop in and see us? It will cost you nothing, unless you choose to give us an order. Loech, Stiles & Co., at 107 East Front street, every Thursday.

Rheumatism Quickly Cured.

After having been confined to the house for eleven days and paying out $25 in doctor's bills without benefit, Mr. Frank Dodson, of Salt Ste. Marie, Mich., was cured by one bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm costing 25 cents and has not since been troubled with that complaint. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, Apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

To Kill Thistles

It is not necessary to kill all the seeds of the thistles in order to exterminate these undesirable weeds. You can so cultivate the ground that they will not thrive; and at last will disappear altogether. It might be better to kill the seeds, but we cannot do it. It would be the wisest course to destroy all the germs, or seeds, of consumption, could we do so. But this cannot be done. So we must keep the tissues of the lungs, the soil, in such a condition that the germs will not thrive the of Cod-liver Oil with the Hypophosphites has remarkable power to maintain a healthy condition of the throat and lungs. It is also the best remedy to restore these parts to health when diseased. Treat your coughs and colds early; heal the inflamed membranes; and thus prevent the germs of consumption from gaining a strong foothold.

Scott's Emulsion

"Just as Good" is not SCOTT'S EMULSION.

50c. and $1.00; all druggists.

SCOTT & BOWNE, New York.

Central Railroad of New Jersey.

Anthracite Coal Used Exclusively. Insuring Cleanliness, Comfort and Safety.

Station in New York foot of Liberty Street. Time Table in Effect JANUARY 3rd, 1897.

PLAINFIELD AND PAY YORK.

Leave Plainfield at 6 00, 7 30, 8 30, 9 30, 10 30 a. m., 12 00, 1 30, 3 30, 4 30, 5 30, 6 30, 7 30, 8 30, 9 30, 10 30, 11 30 p. m. Sunday at 7 15, 8 30, 9 30, 10 30 a. m., 12 00, 1 30, 3 30, 4 30, 5 30, 6 30, 7 30, 8 30, 9 30, 10 30, 11 30 p. m.

Leave New York, Foot Liberty St., at 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 a. m., 12 00, 1 00, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p. m. Sunday at 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 a. m., 12 00, 1 00, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p. m.

PLAINFIELD AND SOMERVILLE.

Leave Plainfield at 6 30, 7 30, 8 30, 9 30, 10 30 a. m., 12 00, 1 30, 3 30, 4 30, 5 30, 6 30, 7 30, 8 30, 9 30, 10 30, 11 30 p. m. Sunday at 7 15, 8 30, 9 30, 10 30 a. m., 12 00, 1 30, 3 30, 4 30, 5 30, 6 30, 7 30, 8 30, 9 30, 10 30, 11 30 p. m.

PLAINFIELD AND DUNELLEN.

Leave Plainfield at 6 30, 7 30, 8 30, 9 30, 10 30 a. m., 12 00, 1 30, 3 30, 4 30, 5 30, 6 30, 7 30, 8 30, 9 30, 10 30, 11 30 p. m. Sunday at 7 15, 8 30, 9 30, 10 30 a. m., 12 00, 1 30, 3 30, 4 30, 5 30, 6 30, 7 30, 8 30, 9 30, 10 30, 11 30 p. m.

PLAINFIELD AND ISLAND HOMEWOOD.

Leave Plainfield at 6 30, 7 30, 8 30, 9 30, 10 30 a. m., 12 00, 1 30, 3 30, 4 30, 5 30, 6 30, 7 30, 8 30, 9 30, 10 30, 11 30 p. m. Sunday at 7 15, 8 30, 9 30, 10 30 a. m., 12 00, 1 30, 3 30, 4 30, 5 30, 6 30, 7 30, 8 30, 9 30, 10 30, 11 30 p. m.

WESTWARD.

7 40 a. m. Daily for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Manch Chunk, Reading, and Harrisburg.

9 00 a. m. Daily for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Manch Chunk, Reading, and Harrisburg.

12 00 m. Sunday—For Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Manch Chunk, Reading, and Harrisburg.

1 30 p. m.—For Easton, Bethlehem and Allentown.

3 30 p. m. Sundays—For Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Manch Chunk, Reading, and Harrisburg.

4 30 p. m. Daily—For Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Manch Chunk, Reading, and Harrisburg.

5 30 p. m. Sundays—For Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Manch Chunk, Reading, and Harrisburg.

6 30 p. m. Daily—For Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Manch Chunk, Reading, and Harrisburg.

7 30 p. m. Sundays—For Flemington.

8 30 p. m. Daily—For Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Manch Chunk, Reading, and Harrisburg.

9 30 p. m. Daily—For Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Manch Chunk, Reading, and Harrisburg.

10 30 p. m. Daily—For Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Manch Chunk, Reading, and Harrisburg.

11 30 p. m. Daily except Sunday. Local for Manch Chunk.

12 01 a. m. Daily except Sunday. "BLACK DIAMOND EXPRESS" for Rochester and Buffalo.

1 45 a. m. daily except Sunday. Local for Manch Chunk.

3 30 a. m. Daily except Sunday, express for Wilkes-Barre, Scranton, Pittston, Bethlehem, Shamokin, and principal intermediate stations.

4 30 a. m. Daily. Local for Easton.

7 25 and 9 50 p. m. daily, solid vestibule express for Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Chicago, and principal intermediate stations.

8 30 a. m. daily except Sunday. Fast line for Buffalo.

EASTWARD.

For New York and Brooklyn—Local—6 40, 7 25, 7 45, 9 01, a. m., 2 23, 4 03 and 6 07 p. m. Express 9 00 a. m., 2 21, 4 05 p. m. Express 7 25, 9 01, 10 00 a. m., 12 14, 2 21, 4 05, 7 07 and 9 07 p. m. Sundays—6 40, 7 25, a. m. and 7 07 p. m.

For Perth Amboy and intermediate stations 6 40, 7 25, 10 05 a. m., 12 14, 2 21, 4 05, 7 07 and 9 07 p. m. Sundays—6 40, 7 25, a. m. and 7 07 p. m.

For further information consult Ticket Agents.

ELLIN H. WILBUR,
General Superintendent.

S. Bethlehem, Pa.

CHAS. S. LEE,
General Passenger Agent.

Philadelphia, Pa.

A. W. SONNEMACHER,
Asst General Passenger Agent.

South Bethlehem, Pa.

NEW YORK TERMINALS—Foot of Cortlandt & Desbrosses street.

Arrival and Departure of Mails

New York Mails.

Arrive—7.30, 9.30, 11.30 a. m., 2.05, 4.30 p. m. Close—7.15 and 9.30 a. m., 1.30, 4 and 7 p. m.

Somerville and Easton Mails

Arrive—8.40 a. m., 2.05, 6.30 p. m. Close—8.15 a. m., 12 m., 4.30 p. m. Watchung mail arr. 12 m; closes 9.30 a. m.

Sunday Mails.

Office open from 9.00 to 10.30 a. m.

Mail closes at 9.15 p. m.

J. M. HETFIELD, P. M.

LEHIGH VALLEY RAILROAD.

In effect December 2d, 1896.

LEAVE SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

WESTWARD.

7 40 a. m. Daily (Sundays 8 01) Local for Manch Chunk.

9 00 a. m. Daily express for Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Chicago, and principal intermediate stations.

10 04 a. m. 2 34, 5 22, 7 22 p. m. daily except Sunday. Local for Manch Chunk.

11 04 a. m. Daily except Sunday. Local for Manch Chunk.

12 01 p. m. daily except Sunday. "BLACK DIAMOND EXPRESS" for Rochester and Buffalo.

1 45 a. m. daily except Sunday. Local for Manch Chunk.

3 30 a. m. 2 34, 5 22 p. m. daily except Sunday, express for Wilkes-Barre, Scranton, Pittston, Bethlehem, Shamokin, and principal intermediate stations.

4 30 a. m. Daily. Local for Easton.

7 25 and 9 50 p. m. daily, solid vestibule express for Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Chicago, and principal intermediate stations.

8 30 a. m. daily except Sunday. Fast line for Buffalo.

EASTWARD.

For New York and Brooklyn—Local—6 40, 7 25, 9 01, a. m., 2 23, 4 03 and 6 07 p. m. Express 9 00 a. m., 2 21, 4 05 p. m. Express 7 25, 9 01, 10 00 a. m., 12 14, 2 21, 4 05, 7 07 and 9 07 p. m. Sundays—6 40, 7 25, a. m. and 7 07 p. m.

For Perth Amboy and intermediate stations 6 40, 7 25, 10 05 a. m., 12 14, 2 21, 4 05, 7 07 and 9 07 p. m. Sundays—6 40, 7 25, a. m. and 7 07 p. m.

For further information consult Ticket Agents.

ELLIN H. WILBUR,
General Superintendent.

S. Bethlehem, Pa.

CHAS. S. LEE,
General Passenger Agent.

Philadelphia, Pa.

A. W. SONNEMACHER,
Asst General Passenger Agent.

South Bethlehem, Pa.

NEW YORK TERMINALS—Foot of Cortlandt & Desbrosses street.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The fac simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

—It is expected that work will be started on the new East Third Street chapel in a short time.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

Celebrated for its great leavening strength and healthfulness. Assures the food against alum and all forms of adulteration common to the cheap brands. Royal Baking Powder Co., New York.

THREE VIEWS OF JONAH

REV. C. E. HERRING'S INTERESTING SERMONETTE LAST NIGHT.

Rev. Mr. Herring Explained the Views as Held by Various Eminent People, He Adding a Few Comments to Them.

"Three Interpretations of the Book of Jonah" was the subject of the sermonette delivered by Rev. C. E. Herring at the First Presbyterian church last Sunday. In view of the fact that there many opinions widely differing on this subject the discourse of last evening may be considered a highly important one, in part Mr. Herring spoke as follows:

"The book of Jonah—This contribution is added to his fertile theme because of certain enquiries on the subject. In regard to the book there are several theories of interpretation, three of which I desire to set before you tonight. The historic view. Those holding this view regard everything in the book as simple narration of fact. Jonah was a native of Gathepher a town in lower Galilee and of the Tribe of Zebulon and lived about 800 years before Christ. He was a contemporary of Lyourmus, one hundred years older than Romulus was in his prime when Homer was a lad. His appearance on this stage of history is abrupt like Amos and Elijah.

"His mission was to denounce the wrath of God against Nineveh, a city noted for its greatness and stupendous wickedness and that in pt obeying the voice of God a great fish swallowed him, possibly a species of shark, which sort of fish is not unknown in the Mediterranean. Fish have been known to attain the length of 25 feet. The difficulty is not in the possibility of being swallowed alive but in the remaining alive for three days which might be accounted for by suspended animation if such natural theory were needed.

"The allegorical view.—Jonah symbolizes Israel as a nation, and the story of Jonah is a narrative of Israel's history. Israel was entrusted with a commission to be the upholder of divine truth and Israel shrank from this imposed duty, and was swallowed by the great world power, Jermiah 54-34 is in line with this theory. In regard to Jonah's disappointment because the judgments of God were not executed: The Jews on the return from the exile were disappointed because the judgments of God were averted. Those that hold this view are reverent in the attitude to the Bible. The parable of the prodigal son may not be historic yet it is no less inspired truth.

"Dr. Abbott responds to the news report that the sermon was not on Jonah and the Whale but a survey of the Books of Esther, Jonah and Daniel.

"There was no unrestrained laughter during the sermon and Jonah was not compared to the Pickwick papers. Dr. Abbott said it was a satire in quality like Lowell's Biglow papers.

"The first point of the satire is that a man should imagine it possible to escape from God. The second satire that not being willing to preach to pagans he should be compelled to mingle his prayer with pagans. The third satire that they should help him for what he brought on himself. The fourth that he should be sorry for the gracious dealings of God with the Ninevites. The fifth that he should care more for the gourd than Nineveh.

"All of these theories agree that the book has a didactic purpose and that the main teaching is that God's purpose of redemption reaches beyond the Jews.

"In regard to the verse in Matthew which compares the resurrection of Christ with the deliverance of Jonah there are many scholars who believe this verse is a gloss of some early copyist. We may have our own opinion but let us not deny the right of others to theirs if they hold the Word of God in reverence."

Juniors' Competitive Drill.

On Friday evening of this week Monroe Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., of Newark, will come to Plainfield and engage in a competitive drill with Somerset Council, of this city.

JUST FOUR SURPRISES.

MAYOR WILSON DID NOT REAPPOINT ALL BOROUGH OFFICIALS.

His Action, However, Met With the Approval of the Councilmen—Mayor's Address Concerned Finances Principally.

There were a few surprises at the meeting of the new Mayor and the Borough Council held last Monday, but everything passed off harmoniously. The Council chamber was filled with interested spectators who were anxious to learn what was going to happen and as soon as this was known many of them left, some satisfied and others not.

Mayor Hegeman called the meeting to order and all the members of the Council were present except Mr. Lounsbury. His Honor in calling the members to order said:

"My first duty is a pleasant one, that of administering the oath of office to Mayor-elect Wilson. It is with great pleasure that I resign this chair to one who is so well fitted to fill it, and to one who has been so unanimously elected by his fellow-citizens. I feel sure, Mr. Mayor, that you will give the office the same careful attention during the coming two years that you have to your own personal business, and at the close of your term the people of this borough will say, 'Well done, good and faithful servant, do it again.'"

Mr. Hegeman then administered the oath of office and, at the close, when Mayor Wilson took his seat, those in the lobby gave hearty applause.

Mayor Wilson then administered the oath of office to Messrs. Burtis and Conrey, the new members of the Council.

In accordance with resolutions offered by Mr. Schutt, H. B. Lounsbury was made president of the Council and the by-laws and rules of 1885 were adopted to govern the present Council. This was followed by the reading of the Mayor's message which is as follows:

Gentlemen and Fellow Citizens:—To be honored with the office of Chief Magistrate of this Borough is a responsibility of which I am deeply conscious. I am also not unmindful of the fact that the burden which rests on my shoulders rests also on yours, and that my best efforts would be but vain did I not have your earnest aid, co-operation and sympathy. We are public servants placed in office by the ballots of the people. We can not be honest in what we do unless we place common interests above party; therefore, let us pull together with that singleness of purpose which always brings success and proper esteem.

We live in a beautiful Borough. We have good streets and sidewalks, good schools, efficient Fire and Police Departments, and an active Board of Health. We have been moving forward steadily year by year, keeping pace with the march of improvements, and in, perhaps, all things except sewers we stand in the front rank among Boroughs of the first-class.

But while this thought impresses us, let us not forget that in the words of ex Mayor Gilbert, "Wise legislation requires the exercise of liberality as well as economy, the former to expend where it is necessary, the latter to save when it is possible without injury to the public service."

Individuals and corporations endowed with the borrowing power are easily led into extravagance. It is easier to incur liabilities than to pay bills when they are due. The taxpayers have a right to urge that the public purse strings be not loosened to such an extent as to cause taxes to grow faster than improvements.

They will also call us to account if we plunge thoughtlessly and unwisely into too many new things at once. There is a natural tendency in governing bodies to over-do improvements.

We have incurred large liabilities in that much needed and useful work, the opening of Watchung avenue. Our Fire Department expenditures have recently been so large as to necessitate the issue of bonds. Let these burdens be at least partly lifted before we take on additional ones, and in the meantime let us by prudent and economica in all expenditures.

It is my purpose to bring to the notice of your honored body such questions requiring action as may from time to time arise.

For the present permit me to extend to you a cordial greeting, with assurances of my sincere esteem.

The following appointments were then made by the Mayor:

Corporation Counsel, Charles A. Reed; Borough Magistrate, Henry S Thomas; Chief Marshal, W. A. Wilson; Night Marshals, J. J. Kleiner W. G. Smalley; Special Marshals, Francis Whitely, Israel Jones, W. B. Emmons, Richard McDonald, Peter Doeringer, John Coley; Street Commissioner, George Conover; electrician, J. J. Stahl; engineer, W. T. Newman; Janitor, W. V. Krewson.

By mutual consent the appointment of Chief of the Fire Department and the assistants was laid over until the next meeting. Mr. Schutt offered a resolution that J. H. Cartman be made borough physician, and the same was adopted by the council.

Resolutions were offered by the different Councilmen that the salaries be made as follows: Borough Physician, $150; Corporation Counsel, $600; Overseer of the Poor, $150; Electrician, $150; Chief of the Fire Department, $100; Engineer, $50; Janitor, $70; Street Commissioner, $50; Borough Magistrate, $200; Chief Marshal, $60 per month; Night Marshals, $50 per month; Special Marshals, 25 cents per hour when on duty. With the exception of the last four named officers the salaries are for the year.

Below are the standing committees as announced by the Mayor:

Streets and Public Health—Messrs. Woolston, Carey, Schutt; Fire, Water and Lamps—Messrs. Lounsbury, Burtis, McLoughlin; License and Marshal—Messrs. Carey, Lounsbury, Burtis; Auditing and Finance—Messrs. Schutt, Carey, McLoughlin; Stationery and Printing—Messrs. McLoughlin, Lounsbury, Woolston; Laws, Ordinances and Election—Messrs. Burtis, Woolston, Schutt.

This concluded the business of the evening and the council adjourned to meet the first Friday in April.

Previous to the meeting a little pleasantry was enjoyed by Mayor Wilson. Collector Spencer had placed a very large pen on the desk occupied by His Honor and the Mayor felt the expression of kindness exceedingly. During the evening he had occasion to make use of the pen frequently, and in every instance it occasioned a smile on the part of those present.

It might be well to state that four men were turned down by the Mayor in making the appointments. They were Marshals Line and Hansen; Street Commissioner Enmons and Borough Magistrate Crosley. The Mayor had his own ideas about the appointments and it must be said that his action in the above cases was a surprise to many.

MURDERERS MUST HANG

SENTENCE AGAINST JOHNSON AND CLAWSON SUSTAINED.

Death Watch Put on Genz and Mackin in the Hudson County Jail.—Somerset Slayers Will Soon be Resentenced.

The Court of Errors and Appeals Monday affirmed the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Jacob S. Johnson, the colored evangelist who was tried in the Somerset County Court two years ago and found guilty of the murder of Annie Rogers. Johnson, who has been in the Somerset County Jail, will shortly be resentenced.

The Court of Errors and Appeals has also affirmed the action of the Somerset court in sentencing Elmer Clawson to be hanged for the murder of Harry Hodgetts on September 18, 1896. It is expected that Clawson will be re-sentenced on the same day with Johnson.

The death watch has been placed over Paul Genz and John Mackin, who were sentenced Saturday to be hanged April 1. They occupy separate cells in the Hudson County Jail. Mrs. Maria Caen, of Hoboken, a widow, who says she visits Genz at the request of his friends in Switzerland, called on him yesterday. Standing at his cell door she conversed with him in German a half hour. Mackin secs only his spiritual advisers.

THE PROJECTOSCOPE AT HAHNE'S.

Edison's Invention Attracts Thousands of Interested Ones.

Every day, forenoon and afternoon, free exhibitions of Edison's projectoscope are given at Hahne's & Co.'s, Broad street, Newark, on the main floor. Nothing more wonderful has been produced in this century of wonderful inventions. It involves the double wonder of first catching images of moving objects, however rapid their motion, and fixing them as pictures, exhibiting every motion, however slight or minute; then projecting these pictures upon a wall or canvas and reproducing every movement in such a manner that the pictures become an exact reproduction to the eye of the object photographed, to the slightest detail of movement.

Men, women, children, all sorts of animals and machines all become living, active, operating shadows. People walk and work, and wink, smile and smirk and sneer; animals run about, birds fly, wheels revolve, trains rush, smoke rolls, flames leap and curl and water flows, and each shadow is as perfect and complete in movement as the original was. The exhibition has been retained for another week in response to the desires of the thousands who have seen it during the last two weeks. Nothing of greater interest has ever been exhibited.

When you are suffering from Catarrh or Cold in the head you want relief right away. Only 10 cents is required to test it. Ask your drug gist for the trial size of Ely's Cream Balm, or buy the 50. cent size. We mail it. ELY BROS., 56 Warren St., N. Y. City. I was afflicted with catarrh last autumn. During the month of October I could neither taste nor smell and could hear but little. Ely's Cream Balm cured it.—Marcus Geo. Shauts, Rahway N J.

—Meeting of Christian Alliance to morrow evening at 7:45 at the parlors of W. C. T. U., Watchung avenue.

Now

Is the time when you should take a Spring Medicine to purify your blood, give you good appetite, sound sleep, steady nerves and perfect digestion. That scrofulous taint, that skin trouble, that liver difficulty, that bilious tendency, that tired feeling, are all cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Give this medicine a fair trial and you will realize its positive merit. It is not what we say, but what the people who are cured say, which proves that

Take Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is the Best Spring Medicine. C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Hood's Pills cure Liver Ills; easy to take, prompt and efficient. 25c.

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS

For all Bilious and Nervous Diseases. They purify the Blood and give Healthful action to the entire system.

Cure DYSPEPSIA, HEADACHE, CONSTIPATION and PIMPLES.

DIME

Savings Institution,

Of Plainfield, N. J.,

Is now receiving deposits payable on demand, with interest, allowed on all sums from $5 to $3,000.

JOHN W. MURRAY, President.
J. FRANK HUBBARD, Vice-President
J. G. POPE, Treasurer.

Money deposited on or before January tenth will draw interest from the first.

W. B. CODINGTON,

Counsellor-at-Law,

Commissioner of Deeds, Master-in-Chancery, Notary Public. Offices Corner of Park avenue and Second street.

SEEDS ... FOR THE ... Garden and Farm

Vegetable and Flower Seeds. All the newest and best varieties—quality unsurpassed. Illustrated Catalogue FREE.

WEEBER & DON, Seed Merchants
114 Chambers St., New York City.

What a Lot of Eggs the hens lay when fed on Green Cut Bone. With a cutter like

Mann's Green Bone Cutter

will pay for itself in a short time in the increase of eggs. $5 BUYS ONE. Sent on trial. 180 highest awards received. Catalogue free if you name this paper. F. W. MANN CO., Milford, Mass.

3 5 4 10 11 12—7 mos.

SAVED

After years of suffering. It has at last been proved beyond a doubt that

NASALENE

Is a positive remedy for local diseases which are the result of cold and climatic changes. Cold in the Head, Hay Fever.

CATARRH,

Deafness, (caused by catarrh) are instantly relieved.

It is pleasant to use, convenient to carry. Price, 50 and 25 cents, at druggists.

O. V. PAGE, Warden of Sing Sing, says: "I find Nasalene a positive cure."

HUNTER MEDICAL CO.
84 E. 31st street, N. Y.

WANTS AND OFFERS.

BY women, each with an infant or young child, situations in the country (general housework, plain cooking, etc.). Small wages expected. Railroad fare paid by the association. Apply State Charities Aid Association, 105 East Twenty-Second street, New York City. 3 18 1mo

DIED.

MARAH—In this city, March 9, 1897, Mrs. Eli on Marah, aged 60 years.

MATTISON—In North Plainfield, Monday, March 15, 1897, Alma Mattison, aged 3 years.

BUTLER—In this city, March 9, 1897, Elizabeth Butler, aged 67 yea rs.

MARTIN—In this city, March 9, Josephine B., wife of David Mart n, aged 39 years, 6 months and 7 days.

DURRANT—At his late residence 131 Crescent avenue, in this city, Thursday, March 11, Chester Hamilton Durrant, aged 36 years.

WARD—In this city, March 12, 1897, Mrs Winafred Ward, aged 80 years.

BERRY—In North Plainfield, Saturday, March 13, 1897, John Conger Berry, in his 9 th year.

PETTEWAY—In North Plainfield, March 14, 1897, Laura, wife of Jordan Petteway.

DABNEY—In this city, March 18, 1897, John Dabney, aged 17 years, 10 months and 12 days.

POULTRY We keep everything in the POULTRY LINE, Fencing, Fowl, Incubators, Live Stock, Brooders—anything—it's our business. Call or let us send you our illustrated catalogue—it's free for the asking. Excelsior's warm Brooder.

Excelsior Wire & Poultry Supply Co.
26 Vesey Street, New York City.

WANTED by large concern a gentleman of influence and social standing, who has a large circle of friends and ability to sell BICYCLES in this town and vicinity. Previous experience not requisite. Genteel occupation, not necessarily interfering with other business, and lucrative remuneration to right party. Replies strictly confidential.

Address, P. O. Box 1961, New York City

2 25 4

JAS. M. DUNN

Dealer in

GROCERIES, PROVISIONS, VEGETABLES, FRUITS &c

GARDEN SEEDS

fresh and carefully selected.

224 PARK AVENUE,

OPPOSITE NORTH AVENUE.

Everything usually found in a first-class grocery.

Goods delivered free of charge.

PATENTS CAVEATS, TRADE MARKS COPYRIGHTS.

CAN I OBTAIN A PATENT? For a prompt answer and an honest opinion, write to MUNN & CO., who have had nearly fifty years' experience in the patent business. Communications strictly confidential. A Handbook of Information concerning Patents and how to obtain them sent free. Also a catalogue of mechanical and scientific books sent free.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice in the Scientific American, and thus are brought widely before the public without cost to the inventor. This splendid weekly paper, elegantly illustrated, has by far the largest circulation of any scientific work in the world. $3 a year. Sample copies sent free.

Building Edition, monthly, $2.50 a year. Single copies, 25 cents. Every number contains beautiful plates, in colors, and photographs of new houses, with plans, enabling builders to show the latest designs and secure contracts. Address MUNN & CO., NEW YORK, 361 BROADWAY

WANTED SALESMEN.

We want 0 30 or two men in each County to take orders for Nursery Stock, and are willing to pay cash for good men. We agree to HELP FREE anything that die from natural causes. We have a choice line of SEED POTATOES. GIVE US A TRIAL.

THE HAWKS NURSERY COMPANY,
ROCHESTER, N. Y. 9 27 4m

Salesmen Wanted

Pushing, trustworthy men to represent us in the sale of our choice nursery stock. Specialties controlled by us. Highest salary or commission paid weekly; steady employment the year round; outfit free; exclusive territory; experience not necessary; big pay assured workers; special inducements to beginners. Write at once for particulars to

Allen Nursery Co.,
Rochester, N. Y.

GEORGE W. DAY,

General Auctioneer.

Sales of Personal Property solicited. P. O. Box 132, Dunellen, N. J., or address in care of Constitutionalist. Terms reasonable

Townsend's

Marble and Granite Works,

30

Somerset st., North Plainfield.

If you have not engaged your work I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell inferior grades. That will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I economize in agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customers, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I save a heavy small expense in running my shops, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material at Fair Prices, is starting a advertise for my business, which will tend to build up trade and I feel safe in warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock and cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

J. E. TOWNSEND, Manager.

Branch yard, Westfield, N. J.

Sweet Peas.

Do not delay planting them, our own mixture contains only the choicest and latest varieties

LAWN & GARDEN SEEDS and FERTILIZERS, HARDWARE and HOUSEFURNISHINGS.

A. M. GRIFFEN,

119 East Front st.

Telephone Call; 6.

Lewis B. Coddington,

[Successor to T. J. Carey.]

Furniture & Freight Express

Office—24 W. FRONT ST.

Large Covered Vans or Trucks. Goods delivered to any part of the U. S. Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges reasonable. P. O. Box 1. Piano moving a specialty

DYNAMITE!!!!

Rocks, Trees, Stumps, &c., removed. Wells Shot. W. C. WILLIAMS, Babcock Building.

CARNEY BROS.,

MADISON AVENUE,

Between Front and Second streets.

Tinners,

Plumbers

Gas Fitters,

Grates and bricks for all kinds of stoves can be found here at Jobbers' prices. Bring your tinware mending to us. The best tinners, the best plumbers, and the best gas-fitters in this section. We use none but the very best of materials, and our work always gives satisfaction. Keys of all kinds are made here. Tinware made to order. Ranges, brick and portable furnaces. Sanitary plumbing.

Wm. A. Woodruff,

Fire and Life

INSURANCE AGENT,

OFFICE,

Corner Front St. and Park Avenue,

Plainfield, N. J.

Real Estate for Sale and Exchange. Money to Loan on Approve Security.

Sanitary Plumbing,

Brick and Portable Furnace

Gas Fitting, Tin Roofing,

Etc., Etc., Etc.

I am prepared to do any of the above branches in strictly first-class sanitary and workmanship manner.

Having associated myself with the Master Members Association of New York City, I employ none but first class mechanics and nonunion men. I believe in every man running a own business, at all times and in every instance.

D. W. LITTELL,

No. 112 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J.

ALBERT HEDDEN

Livery & Boarding Stables

FOURTH ST.,

Between Watchung and Park avenues.

First-class Livery. Horses boarded by week or month. Telephone call, No. 114.

A. WOLFF,

Manufacturer of

CIGARS.

And dealer in all kinds of Smoking and Chewing Tobacco, and smokers' articles, has removed from 234 W. Front street, to 261 West Front street, one door east of Madison avenue and solicits the patronage of his friends and the public generally.

P. P. VanArsdale,

PIANO TUNER.

Instruments put in thorough order. Terms reasonable. Pianos and organs for sale and to let. Orders by postal, P.O. box 160, or left at Willett's shoe store, No. 107 Park avenue, will receive prompt attention. Residence 301 E. Front street, corner Elm street. 9 25 y

WANTED—AN IDEA Who can think of some simple thing to patent? Protect your ideas; they may bring you wealth. Write JOHN WEDDERBURN & CO., Patent Attorneys, Washington, D.C., for their $1,800 prize offer.

FRAZER AXLE GREASE

FOR SALE BY ALL.

E. B. MAYNARD,

PRACTICAL

BARBER AND

HAIR DRESSER,

204 PARK AVE.

Ladies' and Children's Hair Cutting done at their residence. Shaving, Shampooing, etc., satisfactorily performed. 7 17 y1

Woolston & Buckle,

PAINTERS.

Wall Papers. Painters' Supplies

141-145 North avenue.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE.

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS, DESIGN PATENTS COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. Oldest agency for securing patents in America. We have received Patents through MUNN & CO. receive special notice in the beautifully illustrated, largest circulation of any scientific journal. Weekly, $3.00 a year; $1.50 six months. Specimen copies and HAND BOOK ON PATENTS sent free. Address MUNN & CO., 361 Broadway, New York.

SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN,

DISCONTENT.

Down in a field one day in June,
The flowers all bloomed together,
Save one who tried to hide herself
And drooped, that pleasant weather

A robin, who had soared too high
And felt a little weak,
Was resting near a buttercup
Who wished she was a daisy.

For daisies grow so big and tall,
She always had a passion
To wear their frills about her neck,
Just in the daisy's fashion.

And buttercups must always be
The same old tiresome color,
While daisies dress in gold and white,
Although the gold is duller.

"Dear Robin," said this sad young flower
"Perhaps you'll think me mad trying
To find a nice white frill for me,
Some day when you are flying."

"You silly thing," the Robin said
"I think you must be crazy;
I'd rather be my honest self
Than any made up daisy.

"You're all right in your own bright gown;
The little children love you,
Be the best buttercup you can,
And think no flower above you.

"Though swallows keep me out of sight,
We'd better keep our places,
Perhaps the world would all go wrong
With one too many daisies.

"Look bravely up into the sky
And be content with knowing
That God wished for a buttercup
Just here where you's a growing."
—Sarah Orne Jewett

LOVE'S SACRIFICE.

"My dear," said Hero Field, "don't give up. If you yield this way, it's all up with you during your married life. And the idea of a bride in her honeymoon being weighed down with an old grandfather and grandmother-in-law!"

Nannie Eastlake was a bright-eyed girl of nineteen—a girl who had been brought up in a fashionable boarding school. And this first real heart interference that ever happened to her was Donald Aubrey's love.

"It is such an elegant house," said Nannie, "Turkey carpets, furniture of ebony and gold, and the tiniest little gem of a conservatory filled with roses, camelias and the sweetest carnations, and my boudoir all in pink and silver."

"Of course it's all very fine," said Miss Field, "but you'll never enjoy it with those horrid, mischief-making antediluvians sniffing and prowling around."

"But they are Donald's grandparents," pleaded Nan.

"Well, what then? Let him provide for them as other people do. His wife has the first right in the house, and so I'd tell him if I were you. A mother-in-law would be bad enough, but this is ten times worse."

So when Mr. Aubrey came to make his usual evening call that night and Aunt Possonby had discreetly made some excuse for leaving the drawing-room, Nannie broached the subject at once.

"Donald," she said, "I have lately been thinking—"

"Yes, dear?"

"And I've come to the conclusion that you ought not to ask me to make a home for old Mr. and Mrs. Vivian."

"Is it not right and natural, Nannie, that their home should be with me?" he asked, his face clouding over.

"I dare say it will be very nice for them," said Nannie, with a toss of her head. "But how about me?"

"Do you object to them?"

"Very decidedly indeed," answered the pretty young girl, fondly imagining that she had but to lift her slender finger to win any boon that she asked of Donald Aubrey.

"I am very sorry," said the young man, calmly. "As I have decided to ask them to remain permanently with me, I cannot permit my wife—"

Nannie reddened.

"I am not your wife yet, Mr. Aubrey, and I will not be your wife if—"

"Think of what you are saying!"

"I mean it. I do not choose to marry into a nest of relations-in-law, and you must choose between your grandparents and me."

"Nannie!"

"I am quite in earnest," said she. "If you really care for me you will give up this unreasonable caprice."

His dark eyes were bent on hers as if to read the very secrets of her heart.

"Is it unreasonable," he asked, "to honor our aged parents? Is it a caprice to retain some natural affection for those who loved and cared for me when I was a helpless child? If you think it is, Nannie, I have been sorely mistaken in your character."

The girl's lips quivered.

"I am then to understand that your selection is made?"

"I prefer my duty to anything in the world, Nannie."

"I have the honor to wish you a very good evening."

Before he could add another word the girl had left the room.

"Good!" cried Miss Field the next day when Nannie hastened to her the occurrence of the evening. "He'll be on his knees to you before three days are passed, and you'll have your own way for good and all after this."

But the three days had passed, and three more on top of them, and never a penitent lover appeared to sue for Nannie's pardon.

"Oh, Hero, what shall I do?" she pleaded with tears in her eyes.

"Let him go," said Miss Field.

To tell the truth, Hero had been a little envious that Nannie Eastlake had been engaged before herself.

Donald Aubrey was sitting alone in the pretty blue and gold drawing-room that he had furnished expressly with regard to Nannie's taste. Mr. and Mrs. Vivian, early risers and early retirers, had gone to bed, although it was hardly yet dark, when the little parlor maid came to the door and said:

"A lady to see you, sir."

Then Donald found himself looking into the deep blue eyes of Miss Eastlake.

"Nannie!" he cried.

"Yes, it is I, Oh, Donald, I have been so foolish, so wrong-headed. And I have come to ask your pardon."

"My dear, dear little Nannie! Not a word more."

"But I must speak, Donald. I must tell you how earnestly I have repented my temper and folly. If you will take me back to your heart, I will try to be a good wife to you and a dutiful daughter to your grandparents."

The wedding day came, and the wedding tour passed away, and Nannie Aubrey came home to the house prepared for her.

The old people were waiting on the threshold to greet her. The young bride kissed and embraced them heartily.

"It is so nice to have you here to welcome us," she said. "You are sure you have been quite comfortable? And grandpapa, has he had his dinners just as he likes them? But I mean to see to that myself now, for you know I am quite a housekeeper already."

But when dinner was over the two old people got up.

"Where are you going?" asked the bride, in surprise.

"Home," said Mrs. Vivian

"Home is here," said Nannie.

"No, my dear, no," said the old lady, kindly. "Some people are better by themselves. Donald has bought us a nice cottage a mile or two out in the country, where I can keep a cow and grandfather can look after the poultry. You must come and see us every day."

So the old people trudged away, and Nannie looked up into her husband's face.

"Donald, what does this mean?" she asked tremulously.

"It means, my darling," he answered, "that grandpapa and his wife could not be happy in the unwonted confinement of a city. They love the country. So you will have a home without any relations-in-law, after all."

"Oh, Donald, do not repeat my silly words!" she whispered.

Saved by Little Coyotes.

Out West, last spring, two young men were ploughing, when they found a litter of young coyotes, a species of prairie dog. They tried to take the coyotes home. After a good deal of trouble with the father and mother, who struggled to recover the puppies, the men succeeded in driving the father and mother away, and then tied the puppies securely in a bag. They watched the bag for a while, but, as the father and mother did not attempt to come nearer than the edge of the wood, they thought they were thoroughly frightened and would not try to get their puppies for fear they followed the plough from end to end of the field, passing the little creatures in the bag several times. Suddenly there was a strange sight when they turned down the field. It was the mother coyote dragging the bag across the field to the woods. She reached the woods with the bag, escaping the men, and there ripped open and let her puppies out.—New York Journal.

The Duchess's Dog.

The young Duchess of Marlborough is rarely seen without her pet dog by her side, such a sweet, curly-headed, roguish little spaniel. Really, he is worthy of all the adjectives one may lavish upon him. The "Blenheim Favorite" had for ancestor a spaniel who followed the great Duke all through the battle of Blenheim, which won for that hero the dukedom.

"Handsome John Churchill"—the name by which the first Duke was known—was much loved and followed his dog's devotion that he kept him by his side from the day of the "famous victory" until the time of his death. The American Duchess, who has the history of the Marlboroughs at her fingers' tips, when she found that little spaniel of whom I write was a lineal descendant of "Handsome John's" pet, adopted him immediately and is rarely seen even in London without the doggie, frisking after her skirts or sitting composedly upon her knee.—From The Woman at Home.

SNAP SHOTS.

The difference between poetry and rhyme is that people will read rhyme.

One good way of getting on in the game of life is to remember what is trumps.

A huckster with a push-cart full of apples makes more noise than a four-horse team loaded with gold for Uncle Sam's treasury.

There is no use in wearing oneself out. The sun keeps our system of planets in good order without working overtime.

Work brings us bread, but singing may bring us a thousand dollars a night. Happy is the man who sings at his work!

Humor is the sunshine that keeps off the storms of life, but some jokes get so old that they look like borrowed umbrellas.

When a man informs you that the whole world is a pack of fools, you may be sure he knows just where to put his hand on an exception to prove the rule.

Christine Nilsson.

Though she retired from the world so long ago and though it is that few people knew that she had really left it, Christine Nilsson, the great singer, is still a beautiful and most charming woman. For her favorite hobby, the Countess De Casa Miranda, as she now is, has taken up a collection of lilies, both black and white. For jewelry she has no great liking, though her collection of precious stones is one of the most famous in Europe.—From Answers.

FRANCE'S JUDICIARY.

PRISONER'S TORTURED IN ORDER TO FORCE A CONFESSION.

All Sorts of Devices Resorted to With the Accused—One Man's Nose Broken, and Others Fed on Salt Fish, With Little Water Given Them to Drink.

The widespread scandal in France created by the dismissal from office of the Juge d'Instruction, M. Due, at Bayeux, for having pummelled prisoners into confessing the crimes of which they were accused—in one instance actually breaking the nose of a man—has served to fix the attention of the public on an almost incredible fund of power by the magistrates who conduct the preliminary investigations into criminal cases.

Recruited from among the lawyers who have failed to secure remunerative practice, miserably underpaid and with their prospects of promotion dependent entirely upon the number of convictions they secure, the French Juge d'Instruction literally stop at nothing to obtain admissions of guilt from the accused.

The methods which magistrates of this class adopt savor of the old system of torture. Some of the Juges d' Instruction adopt methods of persuasion to compel confessions that are suggestive of the Inquisition. They will have a prisoner fed almost exclusively upon salt fish and given only a minimum ration of water. Then the poor wretch is introduced into the presence of the magistrate; a bottle of clear spring water is placed temptingly just beyond his reach. He begs for a drink. Not before he will have answered my questions," replies his tormentor.

Another method is to hint that the prisoner's wife, whom he may not have seen for months, is waiting in a private room in the court, and that if he is amenable to "reason" he may be permitted to see her.

There is literally no limit to the powers which the Juge d'Instruction possesses over unconvicted persons. The unfortunate Marquis de Nayve was kept for two years in solitary confinement, and subjected once or twice each month to examination by the magistrate before the latter finally consented to send him up for trial, which resulted in his acquittal.

Perhaps the best known case is that of the celebrated Radical leader, Raspail, who was falsely accused of being implicated in a conspiracy to upset the Government. The examining judge, unable to obtain a particle of evidence at length summoned M. Raspail to his private office and addressed him as follows:

"My dear Mr. Raspail, try to forget for a moment that I am a Judge, and let us talk freely like two men of the world. Supposing I were to attempt to upset the existing Government and you were in my place, what would you do with me?"

"It would be such a bare-brained attempt," remarked Raspail, "that I should at once have you locked up in the lunatic asylum at Charenton."

The Judge broke off the conversation there and then, and on the following day Raspail, without being allowed an opportunity of explaining matters, was cashiered to two years' imprisonment for having insulted a magistrate while in the exercise of his judicial functions.—New York World.

Smoke for Wounds.

The smoke of woolen rags is a cure for the most dangerous wounds. A lady ran a machine needle through her finger. She could not be released till the machine had been taken to pieces, and it was found the needle had broken into three pieces in the flesh. The process of extraction was most difficult, the pain reaching the shoulder, and danger of lockjaw was feared. Woolen rags were put on burning coals, and, by holding the finger in the smoke, all pain was driven away and never returned, though the finger took long to heal.

The smoke and smell of the burning rags may be unpleasant, but that is a slight drawback compared with the danger of lockjaw, or great pain and consequent fever. Another instance was the cure of a wound inflicted by an enraged cat, which tore the flesh from the wrist to the elbow and bit through the fleshy part of the hand. The administration of the smoke exacted all the pain, which had been frightful.—Answers.

No Doubt About It.

A man owned a parrot for a long time, and all that it could say was "there is no doubt about it." At length the owner, being tired of this dog, resolved to sell it. He took it to the market at Huddersfield, singing out: "Twenty pounds for my Poll."

A gentleman who was passing the market heard the price, and went to the parrot and said:

"Art thou worth £20?"

Polly replied, as, of course: "There is no doubt about it."

The gentleman was much pleased at this, and readily bought the parrot.

After some time the gentleman found out, to his surprise, that Poll was all the while worth only a couple of pence, his twenty pounds' worth of disappointment, exclaimed to the Poll:

"What a fool I was to give £20 for thing like you!

Poll then most decidedly replied: "There is no doubt about it."—From Answers.

He Got It in the Back.

Flannigan—How'd yez git th' black eye, Casey?

Casey—Oi shlipped on' landed on me back.

Flannigan—But, me good man, y'r face ain't located on y'r back.

Casey (gloomily)—No, nather was Annegan.—Truth.

NOT SO CRAZY AS HE SEEMED.

A Lunatic's Reason for Pushing a Wheelbarrow With the Wrong Side Up.

At Bloomingdale Asylum they have among the assembled lunatics many who are not too violent or too mischievous to be allowed to roam about the grounds. Recently the superintendent has given permission to some of these "trusteés," by utilizing them in carrying on the improvements about the asylum grounds. Some of them have been set to trudging bricks in wheelbarrows.

A few days ago one of the attendants saw a gray-bearded wheelbarrow man promenading solemnly through a side path, pushing before him a wheelbarrow turned upside down.

"Here, you," cried the attendant, "hold on."

The lunatic stopped with a weary sigh.

"Well," he said, "what is it?"

"What are you doing with that wheelbarrow?"

"Friend," replied the crazy man, with patient courtesy, "if you had watched me carefully you would have seen what I was doing with the wheelbarrow. I was pushing it, friend. I will now push it some more."

He started on.

"Hold up a minute," protested the attendant. "Don't you know that it is foolish to push a wheelbarrow that is wrong side up?"

"Foolish?" said the lunatic. "Not on your life is it foolish! I am not so crazy as I am a friend. Yesday I kept my wheelbarrow right side up and a pie-faced Irishman came along and filled it full of bricks. I know better, now."

A SENATOR'S STRIPED UNDERWEAR.

Taken for a Convict While Traveling in a Sleeping Car.

A western senator, who has always been addicted to the habit of wearing striped underwear, had a narrow escape recently on that very account. The striped underwear worn by the distinguished senator looked for all the world like a prisoner's garb, but of course, that aspect of the case did not suggest itself to the senator. While en route to Washington last month, after he had been re-elected for another six years, the fact came to him in a startling way. It was on a sleeping car at night. The car pitched and threw him out of the lower berth onto the floor, clad in his striped underwear.

The lurch of the car startled other folks, too, and two ladies on the opposite side from the senator stuck their heads out to see what the commotion was all about. When they saw the senator crawling under cover in his striped garb, thinking he was an escaped convict, they screamed, and pandemonium reigned. The porter was summoned, whereupon the ladies commanded him to remove the "convict."

It took all the "senatorial courtesy" the senator could rake up to prove an alibi, and he was finally able to demonstrate who he was; but he has since abandoned the idea of wearing striped underwear, having reached the conclusion that plain flannels without stripes are much better and far safer.—Washington Post.

Stuck in a Bog.

An Irishman one day went running into a farmyard and cried for a spade. The farmer, coming out, demanded what he wanted with it, when Pat replied that his friend had stuck in a bog, and he wanted to dig him out.

"How far in is he?" inquired the farmer.

"Up to the ankles," said Pat.

"Is that all?" said the farmer. "Then he can pull himself out again. You'll get no spade here"

Pat, scratching his head, whilst his face bore evident signs of grief, blurted out:

"Och! but, be Jabers, he's in head first!"—From Answers.

A Mixed Citizenship.

An old man named Whittaker, in Geneva County, Ala., has lived in the same place for fifty years, and yet he has been a citizen of two states and four different countries. At first he voted and paid taxes in Jackson County, Fla.; then a readjustment of county lines showed that he was in Holmes County; by which his duties as a citizen were transferred. Later a survey of the boundary line between Alabama and Florida showed Mr. Whittaker that he was an Alabamian, and a resident of Dale County, in which he continued until Geneva County was created, when he found himself a citizen of that county.—New York Tribune.

Unable to Climb Mushrooms.

A short time ago a young Londoner, who had never been out of London in his life, received an invitation from an acquaintance in the country, asking him to have a run out over to his place for a few days and give him a hit at gathering mushrooms. This is the reply he sent:

"Dear Jack: I'm very glad to hear as how you and the missus is all right, but I can't come over and see you, becos I'm afraid it would be no use at gatherin' mushrooms, for you know very well I can't climb."—Up-to-Date.

Remarkable Bulls of a Professor.

A very absent-minded German professor named Johannes Amer lately died at Vienna, and the following are specimens of his remarkable bulls: "Julius Caesar, disguised as a slave, swam naked across the Tiber." "Covered with innumerable wounds, Caesar fell dead near Pompey's statue. With one hand he covered his face with his toga, and with the other he called for help."—Cincinnati Inquirer.

DRESS REFORM CLUB.

THE PRESIDENT BALKS AT SHORT SKIRTS IN FAIR WEATHER.

Several Smart Raps are Dealt the Men During a Discussion in Which Quotations from the Bible and Shakespeare Get Very Much Mixed.

Biblical quotations, bicycles, saddles, short skirts, experiences of married life, Dessarte movements, and-horrible to relate, the subjects discussed simultaneously and in a potpourri of argument at the last meeting of the Health Culture Club, at 53 Orange Street, Brooklyn, the residence of Dr. O. E. Mettnis.

About forty women were present when Mrs. Lumsten, President of the club, opened the meeting with an address on dress reform. By way of prelude she quoted the verse, St. John iii. 2: "Beloved, I wish above all things that thou mayst prosper and be in health."

"A serious mistake," said Mrs. Lumsten, "is made by those who adopt the reform in length of dress even in the fullest extent, but make no reform in other respects. Do you advocate the short dress, bloomer, or American costume?

"We advocate no particular style of dress. We simply state the principles which should be regarded in clothing the body from a medical standpoint, leaving each to decide for herself. Of all women of the earth, we of this nation suffer most from the cruel tyranies of fashion. None needs a serviceable costume so much as we, and none has one so bad.

"The young lady who may tower perhaps head and shoulders above her senior does not shock the supersensitive world by the shortness of her gown or the exposure of her feet and ankles. But let her grow in years, though not in stature, and she becomes a monster in the eyes of the public if she insists upon retaining the freedom of movement her short dress formerly permitted. There really seems to be no prescribed limit to the height to which skirts may be lifted in walking, if only the wearer is hung around with clogged folds, from which she can never free her hands. Holding on to the draperies as if for dear life, she may raise them to her knees and her style of clothing is tolerated with complacency. Dig let it be known or seen that the dress is hung so as never to come below the tops of the boots, and the limbs properly clad with leggins, and fearsome are the aspersions cast upon the character of the woman. Instead of such an attire being ugly, it can be made tasteful and becoming."

The speech was received with genuine applause, but a young lady sitting in a corner asked her mother, who was the last to stop clapping her hands:

"Well, mother, why don't all these women wear short skirts? The rule of the club is that they are to wear them three inches from the ground in fair weather, and six inches in wet, and look, there's only one woman here who is wearing short skirts. The mother would not reply, but merely looked at the one short-skirted woman with a pitiful smile.

A pale-looking little woman in a remote corner here ventured the remark that public opinion was against any radical change in women's dress, and the men did not like it, either. Mrs. Lumsten heartily indorsed this statement. "Yes," said she. "Just think, ladies: I went out one fine day with my rainy-day skirt on, and a lot of horrible men laughed at me and ridiculed me so that I had to fly back in a hurry. No more short skirts for me on fine days."

The woman with the short skirt rose to her feet in an instant.

"Ladies," said she, "this is all bosh. There are two commandments in the Bible, one is 'Honor thy father and thy mother,' and the other is "Parents, provoke not your children to wrath." The latter may be from Shakespeare, but that doesn't make any difference. Now, I want to tell you that one of the disrespect shown us by men is due to the fact that we haven't sufficient self-respect. If we assert ourselves and insist upon our rights we will get them. We can wear any kind of clothes we want to wear, and if a man has no good what do we care for the men?"

"Yes, indeed," chimed in Dr. McCune, an old lady of over sixty, "men have it their own way too much, anyhow. They don't know any more than we do, and still they think they can rule us with a rod of iron. It is about time this thing should stop."

Mrs. Cocoran, the expert on parliamentary law, saw an opportunity here for a talk on married life and she took advantage of it. "I have a husband," she remarked, "who is the best man in the world—the prince of his fellows, and a model wife I might be and my own sweet will when it did not interfere with his. The ridicule of the press is what hurt us!"

General laughter followed, indulged in by all except one old lady who got up and announced that while she was a woman suffragist and an admirer of Susan B. Anthony she could also tell something of married life. Some of the women present showed signs of weariness, the younger ones especially making signs of distress, but the matron of experience questions was fairly launched and no one dared stop it.

The toast of the accomplished Judge Story, at a dinner in honor of Mr. Everett's appointment as ambassador to the Court of St. James, was very graceful. "Genius—sure to be welcomed where Everett goes!" The neat response to this was—"Law, equity and jurisprudence—no efforts can raise them above one Story!"

RED IN MILLINERY.

Foliage an Important Adjunct—Shapes in Hats are Numerous.

(By Special Arrangement with the N. Y. Sun.)

Red color can sound the note of the new millinery, red bids fair to reign supreme in this branch of fashion. The first display of spring hats and bonnets is always a jumble of startling colors and shapes altogether discouraging to the women who prefer staid and not conspicuous head gear, but as the season advances the popular choice of hat disappears and good taste and moderation have an inning. Just at present red straw, red tulle and red flowers, in more shades than nature can produce, are combined in one hat. Poppies and geraniums have the lead in red blossoms, but there are green silk poppies in pretty soft shades, with black centres, which are very effective on a black hat with green ribbon and black tulle or lisse chiffon, which is one of the special features of millinery.

Tulle, with narrow satin straw sewed on in many rows, is used for bows, and sequined net will be much employed. Aigrettes of all sorts are in order, and are black and white paradise plumes, and ostrich feathers curled round the top in a sort of fringe. Every kind of ornament in gold, pearl, steel, jet, and rhine stones will be used, and a great deal of horse hair lace which is well spangled. Moire, glace, and gauze ribbons are the special kinds in favor, and white, in ribbon, flowers, lace and tulle, will be very much worn when the warm days come.

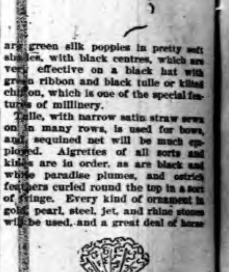
While most kinds of flowers foliage will be a very important place, and lilies of the valley, sweet peas, Scotch thistles, and both white and colored violets are choice selections. Yellow flowers are to be much worn, and cowslips arranged to stand up in a sort of fringe or comb at the back of the hat are a novel fancy.



The fashion of wearing the hair well lifted over the eye promises to continue throughout the summer, and certainly the shade given to the eyes is very acceptable, even though it is not always becoming. The shapes in hats are legion, since so many are made to order out of the pretty soft braids by the milliners to suit the wearer, but the sallor shape with the pretty straight brim and medium low crown, will not be ousted.

A Timely Warning.

A Georgia judge warned his people with regard to coming into court intoxicated, and used these words: "I wish to put everybody on notice that if they come into this court-room while I am sitting on this bench drunk, they had better look out!"

Why is there always a moral influence associated with a piano?—Because if it isn't upright, it's square.

NEW YORK LETTER.

The horseless carriage—the kind operated by electric power—is no longer considered a freak in this city. It is now in practical use. A few years from now it is possible that a horse will attract as much attention in this city as did the first electric carriage. Even livery stable keepers admit that the horse must go.

A concern which has begun the manufacture of these vehicles on a large scale has established headquarters in this city. It is as yet only in its infancy, and has only about a dozen vehicles on exhibition at its salesrooms. These arrived from Philadelphia where the factory is situated, about two weeks ago. Since then they have been operated about the streets and have been inspected by members of the Board of Aldermen.

It is the desire of the Board to be thoroughly convinced as to their safety before voting on a resolution which has been introduced and the Board urging the Mayor power to license electric vehicles the same as those drawn by horses, and allowing cabmen who may in future abandon the old style of vehicles for the more modern to charge fares for rides in the latter. This will necessitate the passing of a special ordinance.

AN ELECTRIC SURREY.

There is a motor vehicle which, on September 11, 1896, made a five mile run at the Narragansett Park races, in Providence, R. I., in eleven minutes and twenty-seven seconds. The average time per mile was two minutes seventeen seconds, and it covered the distance at the rate of a little more than twenty-six miles an hour, establishing a record for motor vehicles.

The harnesses and surreys in use are fitted with two one and one half horse power motors, both attached to the front axle, one to each wheel, and driven independently. The coupe is furnished with two two-horse power motors. After fifteen minutes' practice, say the manufacturers, a man who has never seen one before can operate one. They are fitted with pneumatic tires. The cost of the vehicles will not be much more than the price of a horse and an old style carriage of the charging of the batteries will be inexpensive.

The Greater New York Commission, having completed the business for which it was created and got the charter to Albany, met in the private office of Mayor Strong and formally declared itself out of existence by adjourning without date.

The members of the commission present at the final meeting were Gen. Tracy, chairman; Gen. Stewart L. Woodford, Mayor Strong, Wurster and Gleason, ex-Mayor Thomas F. Gilroy, William C. DeWitt, Silas B. Dutcher and George M. Pinney, Jr.

Some time was spent in making the final audit of the bills for printing, stenography, and typewriting and clerk hire, which aggregated $21,685.84. This is well within the appropriation of $25,000 allowed by the Legislature last year. The Commissioners served without pay.

New methods in the instruction of theological students seem to be in force at the Yale divinity school. The professor of sociology brought a lot of the students to New York last week to observe social conditions in that city so that they might have an object lesson in life. The young men were taken, not to the fashionable or rich and the powerful, but into the tenement house regions, where men and women live huddled together so closely that they cannot raise their eyes on the earth, for fear of stumbling and being trampled under foot by the crowd. It is there that many of the social problems must be solved because it is in those regions that the skein of life is tangled. The men who are to be the religious teachers of the next generation cannot know too much of life, they cannot see too deeply into its sorrows or into its hardships, for it is only when they realize the nature of the task before them that they can go about it with intelligence. There is too much theoretical preaching and too much elaborate theology in the world, much apology for preaching at all and too little attempt to apply the fundamental teachings of Christianity to everyday life. There is talk about Jonah and the whale, why the widow and the prophet were oppressed. There is debate on the possibility of the immaculate conception, while children are homeless and hungry. There is assertion of the credibility and authenticity of the Scriptures, while dishonesty in private and public life goes unrebuked. If the Yale instructors can convince their students that Christianity is a living force by bringing them to New York they will succeed in an undertaking which is worth while.

CYRUS THORP.

Pat and the Pills.

Scene—An Irish cabin. Pat is ill. Doctor has just called. "Well, Pat, have you taken the box of pills I gave you?"

"Yes, sir—be jabers, I have. But I don't feel any better. Maybe the bhoy hasn't come off yet!"—Tid-Bits.

CONSOLATION

O heart of mine, we shouldn't
Worry so
What we've missed of calm we couldn't have
You know!
What we're met of stormy pain,
And of sorrow's driving rain,
We can better meet again,
I'll blow,
We have erred in that dark bog
We have known,
When our tears fell with the shower
All day long
Were not shine and shadow blent
As the gracious Master meant?
Let us temper our content
With His own.

For, we know, not every morrow
Can be sad;
So, forgetting all the sorrow
We have had,
Let us fold away our fears
And put by our useless tears,
And through all the coming years
Just be glad.

James Whitcomb Riley.

AILEEN.

In the year 188— I was traveling salesman for the firm of Smith, Briggs & Company, New York, and late one Saturday evening, toward the latter part of October, found myself stranded in the rather more dead than alive little town of Corningsburgh, with no prospect of leaving that place until the following Monday.

My enforced stay there promised to be anything but a pleasant one, for Corningsburgh was a typical inland village, more than a quarter of a century behind the progress of civilization.

Apparently, the only ripple of excitement that had broken the dead calm of this existence since the last burial was the announcement of a church wedding that was to take place there the following day. Weary of hearing this discussed and re-discussed at the grocery whither I had disconsolately sauntered, I returned to my hotel, and the first words my landlady said to me, as I sat down to supper, were—

"Heard about the wedding?"

I assented gruffly.

"It'll be a grand affair," she continued. "It's the first wedding in the family, and it'll be the last, for the bride is an only child, and a pretty penny she'll bring her husband! Not that Dr. Berndt cares for that, for he has enough for both and to spare, but he has never been the same since his first trouble. You heard of that, sir?" mysteriously.

No, I had not.

"I thought as much!" triumphantly. "I doubt if any one about here knows the ins and outs of that story as well as I do, for I'm no hand to blab, and it all happened away from here—over in Bel Air, and I was right there at the time. Let's see, it's been eight year ago, easy, since the Berndts were then the biggest land owners in that county, and Phil was as likely a young fellow as you'd find in a year's travel. He was an only child, and had been petted and humored all his life, but he had only one fault—he was given to fits of jealousy. They burst upon one suddenly, without any warning whatever, but were always soon over, when he would be his old merry self again.

"Well, it was a great day at the Berndts' when Phil brought his young bride home. I was there helping with the decorations, and she was as pretty a young creature as ever you saw, but for all her winning ways, sweet smile and velvet eyes, I could see that she was proud as Lucifer. It was in the very pose of her head, flash of eye and tread of her footstep. She was a dainty little thoroughbred, proud and high-spirited.

"Aileen Cairncroor was her name. She came of a proud old blue-blooded family of Kentucky. The Berndts worshipped her—father, mother and son—and she worshipped them in return. There never was a happier family, and all went well till one day when Phil's old spirit asserted itself, and his mad jealousy burst upon Aileen with ungovernable fury.

"She listened to his rash accusations with a pallor on her quivering lips, then, without a word, went directly to her room and locked the door.

"Phil's mother and I were by and heard it all. We were both frightened and begged him to go at once and apologize, but he wouldn't; his anger wasn't over; so he dashed from the room, ordered his horse and rode away.

"Mrs. Berndt worried considerable after he was gone, but knowing Phil as well as she did, never gave a thought to any further trouble coming of the affair. She knew he would be all right when he came back, and it never occurred to her that Aileen might not make the same allowances for her son's mother, who had known him all his life.

"I never passed such a night. Mr. Phil did not come home, and Aileen did not come down to supper. I carried a tray of tea and toast to her room, but the door was locked, and I could get no response. Mrs. Berndt herself went to the door, but concluding that the girl was asleep, came away without disturbing her.

"And the next morning she was gone! No trace of her could be found. The door stood wide open, and the contents of the room had not been disturbed. All her costly dresses, dainty trinkets and jewels, gifts from her husband, lay scattered about, just as she had left them.

"Mr. Phil came home early, pleased as a May morning and ashamed of his previous bad temper; but he was in a towering rage when he found Aileen gone, and wouldn't look for her—expecting her back every minute. But she did not come, and when he did look for her no clue to her whereabouts could be found.

"Well, they never rallied from that blow—none of them. Phil's mother and father died a few years later, and Phil himself wandered about like a lost soul for a while, and finally settled down to his practice. He would never give up the old home. In Bel Air he appeared like he thought maybe she'd come back. And now he's going to be married again!

"Some of the gay set here to Corningsburgh Barnes because of a fleeting resemblance between her and his first wife. Don't know how that is. Never could see any likeness myself, though Lucilla isn't a bad looking girl—but then—it's her doings that they're to be married in the church."

At my landlady's suggestion I went early to the church, in order to secure a front seat and watch the incoming crowd.

Some were looking preternaturally sad over the affair as if it were a burial, while others seemed to consider it the best joke of the season. But the two who must stand by it for aye had not yet appeared, and soon I forgot their existence altogether in the contemplation of the beautiful vision it had ever been my good fortune to behold. This was a woman who might have been thirty or seventeen, for any trace of time or memory upon her smooth, clear-cut features.

Such a contradictory face as it was—fair, calm and sweet, with never a touch of gladness or sorrow in its pure features, but a whole heart history in the intense velvety depths of the liquid dark eyes.

By her side sat a child—a lad of seven or eight years—her child, without a doubt, for the same shadow in the mother's eyes lay darkening and brightening in his, and the sweet young face bore a striking resemblance to hers. But it was a grave face, too—unchildlike in a quiet gravity that spoke of strength and self-reliance.

So engrossed had I become in watching them that I almost missed the entrance of the bridal party, and had only time for a hasty inventory of the bride and groom as they took their positions in front of the altar; the former, a fair young girl, in billows of lace and tulle adorned with sprays of orange blossom—the latter, a man of splendid physique, with a strong, dark, handsome face, tempered by a wistful patience in its stern lines, and having "a touch of time in his raven hair."

As the first words of the marriage service reached us, the man chanced to glance across the church, when his gaze fell on the lady in whom I had so lately been interested. In an instant his face had blanched; he staggered forward, and with an inarticulate cry fell in a deathlike swoon near the altar.

In the confusion that ensued the fair unknown quietly arose and left the building. Her way led past that prostrate figure, and her fur-edged cloak brushed against the white face as she glided by him.

The child half paused, with a longing backward glance at the still form. But the lady's sleeder gloved fingers closed firmly over the little hand as she hurried on.

My eyes followed them to the door, where I saw the boy pause gravely, and clinging to the lady's soft draperies, make some pleading request which she reluctantly granted. Then he sprang to her side, where the whole crowd was swaying back and forth about the altar.

I arose and followed him as he threaded his way to Doctor Berndt's side and knelt by him, his fingers caressingly smoothing the white brow, seemingly under the magnetism of that touch, the man opened his eyes and arms and drew the child close to his breast.

The little fellow stood, disengaged himself from its embrace, and in reply to what must have been a whispered entreaty from Doctor Berndt for him to remain with him, said,—

"I cannot! I must go to mamma. She has no one to take care of her but me."

Then, cap in hand, he passed down the aisle, a ray of sunshine from one of the windows touching his silken curls and bringing out golden threads of embroidery in his velvet blouse. Arrived at the church door he found the lady waiting for him, and then began to disconcert him. Setting his cap firmly on his glossy head, he marched toward the hotel—my hotel, for there was no other in Corningsburgh—and as the carriages were leaving, and an usher informed me that the ceremony was postponed, I followed him.

As for Doctor Berndt, the first words he uttered after the child left him in the church were,—

"She is my wife and that is my child, though God knows I never thought of such a thing!"

The sight of his first love's face was like a breath of hope on the smouldering fires of his old love, which flamed into being once more. He hurried to the hotel and demanded an interview with his wife, which, though none of us could ascertain how, was readily obtained.

An excited crowd was gathered on the ground floor of the hotel, all impatiently awaiting the result of the interview, though there could be small doubt of what it would be; for the strong will and pride which had separated the pair when love was in its prime could not be expected to bring them together now that the snows of time and silence were piled high upon the dead love in Aileen's heart.

Was it dead? I had not seen a change in the calm, sweet face, even as she passed him in the church. Not only was the ghost of the dead past between them but the other fair living woman—a new love! The pride of the Cairnmoors could not forgive that.

Eagerly we waited for the crumbs of news doled out to us by our landlady after surreptitious trips upstairs.

"It would break your heart to see them," declared that worthy woman, wiping her eyes vigorously upon her apron, and giving me the place of honor by her side. "She sits there as indifferent-like as a marble image, with her big soft eyes looking far away out of the window, and every little while she says something soft, pleasant and natural-like in answer to his passionate pleading as he kneels there at her feet. And that child stands by his mother's side, one hand on the arm of her chair and the other thrust into his coat bosom, while his face—so like them both—is grave as a preacher's as he watches Doctor Berndt."

We were all seized with such a thirst for information, and became so clamorous for more after this that she again left us—though not the bravest of our number dared hint that all her light on the subject came through the keyhole of the door.

This time she stayed so long that our excitement reached fever heat ere she again joined us, still weeping, yet speaking fast and excitedly.

"I never want to live long enough to see such a pitiful sight again," she vowed vehemently. "Aileen just said something to him in that sweet, decided way of hers, with a faint little smile, and he made no answer except to lean his head against the arm of her chair, where he remained still as death. His hair was blown against her arm; but she never noticed it nor him but just sat there with that careless smile on her lips and far away look in her pretty eyes. But the child standing opposite Doctor Berndt and looking so grave, wise and sad—it would have broken your heart to see him! I can't tell how long they remained that way, but presently the boy slipped like a shadow from his mother's side, and going around to Dr. Berndt, put his arms about him and kissed him, and whispered something, but still Mrs. Berndt never moved nor seemed to notice either of them till the child put up his arms and drew her face down against his father's, and that touch seemed to warm her into life. At once, as though she couldn't help it, she kissed Phil again and again, and he just put his arms around both mother and child, as though he never meant to let them go!"

Still the woman talked on and on, in answer to the numberless inquiries from the crowd, and I learned that Aileen Cairnmoor had gone directly West on leaving her husband, eight years before, and in not attempting in any way to conceal her flight, had utterly escaped notice. There she had made friends, and "taught by years and calmed by time," in the solemn grandeur of the majestic scenery, by the wash of the Western seas, she had learned that love was stronger than pride, and so was willing to take up the broken threads of her life and weave them into shapelessness again.

The crowd broke into a rousing cheer a while later, when Dr. Berndt drove away with his wife and child. The latter waved his tasselled cap in reply, and a burst of joyful chime of bells and a shower of flowers pursued the long-parted husband and wife into the new future opening before them.

As for the bride to be—well, she was young and would outlive this fleeting pain. In this busy, workaday world of ours, somebody's heart is aching every day. It may be mine tomorrow—or yours. Who can tell?

One True Ghost Story.

This is a true ghost story of an unconventional kind. A young lady arrived late at night on a visit to a friend. She awoke in the darkness to find a white figure at the foot of the bed. While she watched it the bedclothes were suddenly whisked off and the apparition vanished. After an anxious, not to say chilly, night, the visitor went down with little appetite for breakfast. At the table she was introduced to a gentleman, a boy old friend of the family, who had, she learned, also been sleeping in the house. He complained of the cold.

"I hope you will excuse me," he said to his hostess, "but I found it so cold during the night that, knowing the resources of the mine was unexplored, I took the liberty of going in and carrying off the bedclothes to supplement my own."

The room, as it happened, was not unoccupied, but he never learned his mistake.

Fattening Hogs on Horseflesh.

Every imaginable kind of a horse save a good and serviceable one, is brought to Georgetown on court day to be traded off. Frequently trades are made for 25 cents to boot, and many amusing sights are witnessed on "Jockey row," as it is called.

In connection with this trading in worn-out horses a new industry has sprung up. A man from Woodford county bought all the horses he could get for $1 per head. He kills them, feeds the flesh to his hogs, sells the hides and bones, and finds it profitable. Whenever he buys a horse for a dollar, and he can sell it for two, he lets it go, otherwise it is fed to the hogs.—Courier Journal.

His Real Motive.

Storekeeper—Did yew ride way in here jes' ter buy that gallon uv whiskey, Abner?

Abner—Why, consarn yer hide, Silas! yew orter know I wouldn't leave my farm right in the middle uv plantin' and' ride way in here jest ter buy a gallon uv whiskey. I kem ter town ter day purpuss ter buy my wife a spool uv No. 40 cotton thread, an' I darn my buttons of I hadn't clean forgot all about that thread until you spoke.—Judge.

BLONDIN'S FEAT.

The Man Whom He Carried Over Niagara Falls Tells of His Sensations.

Blondin, who died in England recently at the age of seventy-seven, remained until the end the king of tightrope walkers. Many imitted him, many performed great and wonderful feats; but there was only one Blondin. He stepped to the front rank in June, 1859, when he walked across the Niagara Falls chasm on a tight-rope, and did it handicapped with the weight of a man clinging to his shoulders.

But what of the man who clung to his shoulders on that awful headwhirling journey high over the boiling waters? He, too, it would seem, had some title to be esteemed a man of nerve. Harry Colcord is his name. He is still living and has a little studio up in the Auditorium Building, in Chicago, where he makes a little money painting portraits.

He recently gave this account of the adventure:

"The rope was 250 feet above the water at its lowest point, which was 50 feet below the highest—in other words, there was a grade of 50 feet in each 1,000 feet. Blondin had coached me as to what I should do. I was to put my weight on his shoulders only with my arms and clasp his body about with my legs. But I could not put my weight on his legs, as that would encumber his movements. I had to keep all my weight on his shoulders.

BLONDIN'S PERILOUS FE.

"Everything being ready, I took my place on Blondin's back and we started across the rope. We began the descent from the Canadian side of the rope, by reason of the fact that I had to bear my weight on Blondin's shoulders and could only use my arms to support myself. Frequent rests were necessary. Until Blondin I wanted to rest and then dropped down on the rope on one foot and waited until my arms were relieved, when I would spring up again, using my arms to hold and lift myself in place. There was a great crowd present, but I did not see it at first. From my place on Blondin's back I could look out to the American side and see below the stunted pines thrusting their sharp points up from the edge of the foaming, roaring waters, ready to split us in two if we fell. I remember that I was anxious to get over and recall, too, that the great rope before us swung alarmingly from side to side. We afterwards ascertained that the rope had been swinging forty feet in advance. Below us, 250 feet, roared the river, and over it we swung from side to side. Blondin never trembled. When we had gone about ten feet as the middle span some one pulled the outer guy rope. Blondin stopped and swayed his pole from side to side, in a vain effort to balance himself. Falling in this he started to run across the horrible span and safely reached the point where the guy rope on the American side joined. To steady himself he put his foot on the junction and tried to stop, but the guy rope snapped, and with a dash of speed he ran twenty or thirty feet further and said: 'Descendez-vous.'" The perspiration stood on his neck and shoulders in great beads. Presently he said "Allons," and we went on safely to the other side. The pulling of the guy rope that nearly threw us was done purposely by somebody who had bet Blondin would not get across."

Bringing the Men to Terms.

"After all," said the woman, "it is proper that men should have the seats in a car."

The conductor looked surprised.

"Do you really think so?" she asked.

"Oh, yes. Not all men, of course, but those who usually get them and hold them. It is really quite fitting and proper. Why, you must have noticed that the men have no object to having to stand around for women in a street car are the ones who have to stand around for women when they are at home."

"Madam," said eight men at once, "won't you take this seat?"—Chicago Post.

Particular as to What He Eats.

"Sire," announced the head cook, the sailor who was washed ashore at night proves to be a sad sea dog."

The cannibal king shifted uneasily upon his throne.

"That means," he muttered, "that I on't dare eat sausage again, for a outh at least."—Answers.

They Might See Things.

First Doctor—Well, that's just like ese actresses!

Second Doctor—What is?

First Doctor—Why, that Miss May upp won't let us look into her head ith the X-ray until she makes up er mind.—Puck.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN DOES NOT PAY ITS OWNERS.

A Chat With DeKoven While the Composer Was in a Reminiscent Mood—Success of the Girl from Paris Makes Clara Lipman a Star of a Certain Magnitude.

The handsome Madison Square Garden does not pay. It belongs to a stock company, with a capital stock of $2,000,000, divided into 100 shares, which have recently sold in the market as low as $9.00. The trouble seems to be that there is too much of the ground unprofitably occupied with restaurant, offices and minor exhibition rooms. The proposition has already been made to tear down the whole Madison Square front and erect apartment houses on the ground. It would be a great pity for the city to lose this spacious and popular resort, but it is altogether likely that the stockholders at their next regular meeting will either sell or remodel the property. One is forced to the conclusion that the local interest is in some measure the cause of its failure. Had the Garden been on upper Broadway, doubtless the restaurant itself, in competent hands, would have been a gold mine.

CLARA LIPMAN.

Clara Lipman, who stars in The Girl from Paris, is one of the most pleasing actresses engaged in extravaganza upon the New York stage today. The Girl from Paris has now been for three months at the Herald Square Theatre, and there is no announcement of its withdrawal. The one hundredth performance was recently given. More or less appreciated souvenirs were given out upon the occasion. This souvenir business is a cheap practice, good enough for flowery play houses, but annoying when indulged in by down-town theatres of ordinary repute. Would that managers might so view it.

An interesting bit of history of Reginald DeKoven developed in my conversation with him recently. Mr. DeKoven was but 22 years old when he composed his first opera, and he was at that time assistant paying teller in a bank in this city. He was already the composer of a few songs, but had nothing published. "Cupid, Hymen & Co." was the title of his first effort in the operatic line, and Mr. DeKoven was the author of the libretto as well as the composer of the score. It was first offered to McCaull, but was declined, and then the piece was sold to the Chicago Ideals Opera Company. Although the opera was in rehearsal for some time, it was never produced, owing to the fact that the Ideals disbanded.

It was shortly after this that Mr. De Koven made the acquaintance of Mr. Smith, and they have been collaborating ever since. About the first opera which Smith ever said to De Koven were:

"You must feel awfully good to have an idea of yours in rehearsal."

An opera under the title of "Fort Carnanel" was the first joint effort of these gentlemen, who have since become so prominent in their respective lines, but it shared the fate of "Cupid, Hymen & Co.," and was never seen from the front.

After Mr. De Koven's marriage he became very much interested in the choice collection of books of Miss Idia, which Senator Farwell possessed, and the result of a careful study of them was an opera called "The Begum." Mr. De Koven says that much of the music of "The Begum" was taken from the leaves of his many efforts, because he felt that it was too good to be wasted.

A funny thing happened in connection with his offering it to the managers for their approval. The story, in his own words, follows:

"I was told one day that I could play the score to two managers at Lyon & Healy's, and I went there to do so. I remember that I had just pared my nails, and that I had cut them too close, with the consequence was that when I played the piano my fingers began to bleed, so that in a few moments the keys were covered with blood. My audience discovered it and stopped me, and I afterwards learned that I had been playing the score to the advertising agent and the bill poster of a local theater."

Mr. De Koven regards "The Mandarin," now in the Great Northern Theater, as the best of all his operas.

ROSE FANCHON.

A Scotch clergyman in Melbourne, Australia, they say, has arrayed his male choristers in Highland dress, while the women are clothed in the costumes of the Lowlands of Scotland. The hymns are sung to the strains of the bagpipe, and the church is crowded.

A BIG SCHOOL MEETING.

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1.

public schools of the State and has, thereby, certified to its high standing.

But for us and for you, a better assurance of the advantages and the need of the changes made, is found in the reception they have met from the school public.

The kindergarten class numbers fifty-three, interested, earnest and growing children.

In session, it is an extraordinary sight, and to me, it is most surprising that children so young, hardly out of the period of infancy, should be genuinely interested in exercises distinctly educational.

The kindergarten is no longer an experiment in school work; it has its just place in the system of education as important as any other class of educational exercise, and no public school system can, today, be regarded as well equipped, which lacks this essential department.

This department in our school is conducted by an educated kinder gartner.

The High School numbers 90 enrolled with an average attendance of 73. It is a bee hive of industry, and there is taught the full High School course, approved by educational authority.

When you learn that the borough of North Plainfield, with a population of 4,245, has a High School six months old, which numbers 90, and the city of Plainfield, with a population of 13,629, has in its High School, which has existed for years, but 180, you will, I think, agree with your Board in their conviction, that the result has amply justified the establishment of our High School course, and will share their gratification at its extraordinary development.

The discipline of the school, as a whole, has been exacting; much has been demanded of the student; never before has there been done in the school such systematic work; never bafore has there been so little opportunity for shirking and evasion.

We do not, for a moment, ignore the fact that, at times, too often, we think, collisions have occurred between parents and principal; and, from time to time, complaints of various kinds have come to the attention of the Board.

Wishing to do impartial justice in all such cases, all complaints coming to the knowledge of the Board, however informally presented, they have been referred to a standing committee on grievances, which committee has tactfully and carefully investigated the facts and has reported the results of such investigations to the Board.

Many complaints, upon examination, have proved to rest on no substantial foundation, or to be the result of unfortunate misunderstanding, or of an unhappy enforcement of a wise rule of discipline; in other cases, the Board has considered the criticisms to be well-founded and has taken prompt measures to correct the mistakes.

The school is far from perfect, and in this reformative year, it is not strange that misunderstandings should arise from the enacting and enforcing of rules of discipline fitted to the new order of things.

The enrollment of pupils numbers 840. This is 101 more than we reported to you one year ago, and is the extraordinary growth of a year.

This enrollment is distributed as follows:

High School Department, 90; Grammar, 175; Intermediate, 191; Primary, 321; Kindergarten, 53. Total, 840.

This enrollment, 820, is 85 per cent. of all the children in the borough, as shown by the last school census, including all those in private schools, and those attending no school.

The average attendance has been 692 for the six months, while the average attendance for the entire preceding year was 556.

This average attendance of 692 is over 81 per cent. of the total enrollment, and these percentages compare favorably with other communities in the State.

There has been formed among the young men a uniformed cadet corps, to study military tactics and drill. This aids physical development in an interesting and useful way.

There has been established a school periodical called the "Autocrat," wholly conducted by a Board of Editors, selected from the scholars, and written by the pupils of the school. A very creditable first number of this magaine has been issued.

This is a useful and educative field, and both of these organizations are wise adjuncts to the school course and are means of education, and neither of them involves any expense to the Board or the Borough.

You have then, a fully established and equipped school, embracing all the grades appropriate to the children of the community; in form and character approved by the educational authorities of the State; worthy of your own confidence and support and creditable to the borough, and which, for the future, can be maintained in any wise hands. What does all this cost?

That, I imagine, is the vital question in your minds.

The fairest, and possibly the only practicable test of this question, is a comparison of the average cost of education here with that in other similar communities.

The State Department of Public Instruction publishes statistical tables showing the average cost of education per pupil in the various school districts of the State, based upon the enrolled attendance.

The tables about to be published by that Department, of statistcts for the year ending with the summer of 1896, show the following cost in the following named places:

I do not give the published cost for North Plainfield because we have increased the cost here, but I have made up our figures from the annual repo t just submitted to you by the District Clerk, and I give Plainfield's from capita cost for this year, taken from their late report:

Bloomfield	$19.99	Ridgewood	$17.69
Cranford	$19.25	Rutherford	$36.39
East Orange	$22.80	Somerville	$12.44
Englewood	$ 1.39	Summit	$25.79
Montclair	$24.40	Westfield	$15.36
Morristown	$21.39	Plainfield, this year	$21.24
Orange	$20.90	North Plainfield (this year)	$17.62

Take another table.

The principal item of expense of school administration is the amount paid for female teachers.

The State publishes statistcts of the average amount paid in each District for this important item.

I will give from the Department's tables the average amounts paid in each of the places named in the preceding list and for the same year, except that as to North Plainfield, I will give the amount paid this last year:

Bloomfield	$507.26	Ridgewood	$471.90
Cranford	$521.40	Rutherford	$600.00
East Orange	$634.98	Somerville	$450.00
Englewood	$505.90	Summit	$629.10
Montclair	$666.00	Westfield	$575.00
Morristown	$596.20	Plainfield	$600.00
Orange	$509.00	North Plainfield, (this year)	$457.00

Measured by the standar ds set by these tables, the cost of education here is low.

Somerville alone, of the places named, is below us in the expense of its system, and Somerville has not adjoining it a complete and developed system of schools to compel it into a rivalry for excellence.

You cannot ignore the fact that in this, as in other things, we are in competition with the city of Plainfield. I say it without jealously, but with envy, that Plainfield, in this respect, has here-ofore distinctly led us; I know the excellence of its school system; I know the high estimate put upon it by the school authorities of the State, and it is because Plainfield is so good, that we must grow better, or suffer in the general comparison between the places.

If you are not weary of tables the following may be interesting to you as showing the total amounts paid for educational purposes in the places named above, for the year referred to, and in this as with the others, I give this past year's figures for North Plainfield:

	Amount spent.	To educate.
Bloomfield	$34,427.51	1,392
Cranford	5,761.00	303
East Orange	109,953.79	2,319
Englewood	18,393.17	469
Montclair	108,983.71	2,226
Morristown	26,779.54	1,159
Orange	98,010.92	2,548
Ridgewood	25,938.16	467
Rutherford	24,553.56	417
Somerville	14,621.50	843
Summit	15,096.65	449
Westfield	14,154.53	555
Plainfield	62,047.18	2,206
North Plainfield	18,096.53	840

Last year you voted to the school $7,500, of which $750 was for free text books and supplies, (a duty imposed by law), and $6,750 towards teachers' salaries and current expenses. This appropriation did not contemplate a radical change in the school course, nor an increase of more than one hundred pupils.

This year we ask you to vote us $9,750 to cover $850 for free text books and supplies; $900 to paint the building and point up the walls, and $8,000 toward teachers' salaries and current expenses; the voting of $900 for painting and repairs is but a business precaution for the preservation of your property, and should require no more than that you should know that the repairs are needed. Of this necessity we assure you.

The increase in the appropriation for salaries and current expenses from $6,750 to $8 000 is but $1,250, about equal to the salaries of teachers for the increase of over 100 in the mem bership of the school, so that this is not an extraordinary increase, but a necessary normal advance to meet the growth of the school.

At the average cost per pupil for education in North Plainfield given in the table above, to wit: $17.62, the increase asked for to care for these 100 new pupils should be, at least $1,762, while we ask but $1,250.

If you consider the changes made in the school as a wise progress, and if you believe from the statistics quoted that your Board has been not only not extravagant, but, on the contrary, economical in the conduct of your school, you will, I am confident, be glad to vote the unavoidable appropriations we have recommended.

North Plainfield, March 16th, '97.

For the Board of Education,

S. St. J. McCutchen,
President.

The following is the budget as reported by the clerk: For current ex penses, $8,000; for repairing and painting, $9,000; for free text books and supplies, $850.

Paul Lolzeaux and J. C. Peck were the tellers chosen and they announced the following vote: For current expenses, 150 ballots cast, of which number 139 were for the amount named, ten was $7,000 and one for $15,000; for repairing and painting, 145 ballots cast, 138 for the stated amount, six for $800, and one for $500; for free text books and supplies, 150 ballots cast, 144 for the amount named, one for $1,000, one for $800, two for $750, and two for $700.

Secretary Martin then announced the following vote for the trustees:

Total ballots cast, 202, of which number H. A. McGee received 148, G. D. Hallock 134, G. F. Brown 151, J. H. Van Winkle 51, Ezra Lewis 57, S. B. Joseph 47, J. H. Valiant 8, A. Overton, A. V. D. Honeyman and R. M. Fountain each received one vote.

The chairman announced that Messrs. McGee, Halleck and Brown were elected trustees for three years, and the victors were given hearty applause.

H. A. McGee stated that inasmuch as the president's report was an excellent one he would suggest that two hundred and fifty copies be printed in pamphlet form. The number was changed and on a motion five hundred copies were ordered printed.

After a vote of thanks was extended to the retiring members of the board the meeting adjourned.

The new board will meet next Monday evening for the purpose of organizing and transacting such business as may come before them.

NEW JERSEY PATRONAGE.

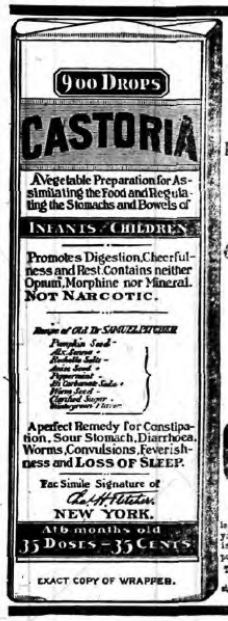
Senator Daly Predicts Trouble Over the Giving Out of Offices.

Senator William D. Daly, of Hoboken, who is in Washington, says that there will be a great political fight in New Jersey over the distribution of the spoils. In an interview published he adds by way of explanation:

"You see, Senator Sewell runs all South Jersey, and his proprietorship is not questioned till he reaches Trenton. From that city to Deckertown the political patronage has for years belonged to Vice-President Hobart. The applications for positions from New Jersey Republicans will be unlimited, and unless Mr. Hobart and Senator Sewell reaches some harmonious understanding, there is bound to be trouble in the ranks of their followers."

Senator Daly's prophecy of trouble between the two distinguished Republicans of New Jersey is not indorsed by the State's National Representatives here. Congressman Loudenslager, supposedly voicing the views of the rest, said:

"I see no signs of trouble. There may be differences of opinion about the merits of various candidates for office and possibly some differences over the method of distributing the patronage, but they will all be smoothed away. In fact, the New Jersey delegation expects to hold a meeting shortly, maybe tonight or tomorrow, for the purpose of reaching an agreement or arranging a programme for the distribution of the Federal patronage belonging to the State in the manner best calculated to further the interests of the party and all concerned."



SEE THAT THE FAC-SIMILE SIGNATURE —OF— Chas. H. Fletcher IS ON THE WRAPPER OF EVERY BOTTLE OF CASTORIA

Genuine Castoria is now sold in one-size bottles only. It is never sold by the dozen. Don't allow anyone to sell you anything else on the plea or promise that it is "just as good" and "will answer every purpose." For less than you get C-A-S-T-O-R-I-A.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

NEW JERSEY SUPREME COURT

To Richard Garretson, defendant, or whom it may concern:

Please take notice that the following writ of Scire Facias has issued out of the Supreme Court of the State of New Jersey, to wit:

NEW JERSEY, ss.

The State of NEW JERSEY to our Sheriff of our County of Somerset, GREETING—

WHEREAS, lately in our Supreme Court of Judicature, holden at Trenton, before the Justices thereof, by the judgment of the same Court JOHN D. BARTINE recovered against RICHARD GARRETS N the sum of five hundred and thirty dollars and eighty-three cents whereof the said has satisfied by occasion of certain promises and assumptions to him, the said JOHN D. BARTIN be then lately made by the said RICHARD GARRETSON, defendant, and also thirty-one dollars and seventy-three cents for his costs and charges about which he had suit and his suit in that behalf expended, whereof the said RICHARD GARRETSON is convicted, as appeareth of record. Now in behalf of the said JOHN D. BARTINE we have been informed that ath ugh judgment be thereupon given, yet execution for the said damages and costs still remains to be made to him. Whereupon the said JOHN D. BARTINE hath humbly sought us to provide him a proper remedy in this behalf. We being desirous that what is right and just should be done in the premises, command you that by good and lawful men of your County you cause the said defendant known to the said RICHARD GARRETSON that he be before our said Justices at Trenton aforesaid, on the thirtieth day of March next, to show if he has or knows anything to say for himself why the said JOHN D BARTINE should not have his execution against him for the damages and costs aforesaid, according to the form, force and effect of the said recovery, if it shall seem expedient for him so to do. And further to do and receive what our said Court, before the Justices aforesaid, shall then and there consider of him in this behalf, and have you then and there the names of those by whom you shall so cause it to be made known to him, and this writ.

WITNESS, MERCER BEASLEY, Esquire, Chief Justice, at Trenton, aforesaid, the seventeenth day of February, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-seven.

ANDREW S. MEEMAN, Atty.

BENJ. F. LEE, Clerk. 2 25 5w

ELY'S CREAM BALM is a positive cure. Apply into the nostrils. It is quickly absorbed. 50 cents at Druggists or by mail; samples 10c. by mail. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren St., New York City.

HORSES AND COWS BURNED.

Barn Destroyed at Branch Mills—Tramps Supposed to Have Started the Fire.

The barn of Antoine Gauski, at Branch Mills, Union county, between Springfield and Westfield, was totally destroyed by fire between 3 and 4 o'clock Tuesday morning. All the contents, including four horses, three cows and a calf, two wagons and farming implements, were burned, making a loss of over $1,000. The fire was not discovered until the barn had been burned almost to the ground and then it was to late to save anything.

The fire is thought to have been started by tramps. Three of them were driven from the barn a week ago and they left vowing revenge on Gauski. Yesterday morning about the time of the fire a tramp was seen going toward Springfield. The loss is covered by insurance.

From Cripple Creek

After the big fire in Cripple Creek, I took a very severe cold and tried many remedies without help, the cold only becoming more settled. After using three small bottles of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, both the cough and cold left me, and in this high altitude it takes a meritorious cough remedy to do any good.—G. B. Henderson, editor Daily Advertiser. For sale by T. S. Armstrong Apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

AMOS H. VAN HORN, Ltd.

73 Market Street. Running through to Campbell and Bank Sts.

Worth Seeing these Spring Styles

in Furniture and Carpets we're showing. Everything is in. Lines are as complete as wise buying can make them. Prices uniformly small—no matter whether cash is paid or credit given.

It don't cost you a cent extra to have us hold goods until wanted. We can take care of your moving, too. Covered vans—small rates.

Exceptionally fine line Extension Tables, lowest prices known. They begin at $5.75. Cane Seat Chairs, 50c up. Leather Seat Chairs, elegant variety.

Largest line of Bedroom Suits in city. Above Suit in oak, $10.50. You CAN'T match our low figures.

A Parlor Suit stock that covers one entire floor. Over 50 kinds. All new. Prices lower than ever been known to the trade. $15.00 up to the finest grades.

Entirely new Spring patterns in Carriages. A pretty line. From $5.75 up.

Carpets

Spring patterns are all that could be wanted. Bright colorings. All weaves. No lower prices in city.

Axminsters, $1.25 yard
Moquettes, 75c yard
Velvets, 75c yard
Body Brussels, 90c yard
Best Tapestry, 85c yard
Brussels, 50c yard
Good All Wool Ingrains, 35c yard
Good Ingrain Carpets, 28c yard

MAKING and LAYING FREE

AMOS H. VAN HORN, Ltd.

73 Market St. Near Plane Street NEWARK, N. J.

CASH OR CREDIT. Telephone 580—Goods Delivered Free

Our Special Sale

FOR THIS MONTH ONLY.

NEW CABINET GRAND UPRIGHT PIANOS, All Improvements, $225,

Payable $7 monthly. Warranted five years.

TWAY PIANO CO.,

Tway's Musical Guest mailed free 88 FIFTH AVENUE.

d 10 6m

STILLMAN MUSIC HALL

GEORGE E. ROGERS..... Lessee, | GEORGE H. WILLEY..... Manager

Friday Evening, March 19.

The Big Hit of '96,

Donnelly and Girard

—IN—

My Friend from India.

This is the farce that ran over one hundred nights at Wallack's Madison Square Theatre, New York. It will be presented here by a great cast, including

MISS MAUDE GRANGER

Prices $1.50, 75, 50, 35, 25. Seats on Sale Thursday, March 18.

How's This?

We offer One Hundred Dollars Reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Props., Toledo, O.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions, and financially able to carry out any obligation made by their firm. West & Truax, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O. Walding Kinnan & Marvin, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Price 75c per bottle. Sold by all druggists. Testimonials free. Hall's family pills are the best.

University Musical Club.

At the concert to be given in Y. M. C. A. Hall on Thursday evening, March 25th, Harry M. Pfeiffer, the leader of the Mandolin Club, will play a solo. Many will remember his exquisite solos when he played at the entertainment of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Crescent Avenue church a few months ago.

Drawing for Seats.

In drawing for seats in the House Congressman McEwan was the first New Jersey man to be called. He took the second seat from the front in the second aisle on the Republican side. Mr. Fowler, a little later, took the second seat from McEwan in the same row. Congressman Loudenslager, by having a page pre-empt a seat, succeeded in the fourth aisle.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXX. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, MARCH 25, 1897. NO. 12

"Support the Constitution, Which is the Cement of the Union, as Well in Its Limitations as in Its Authorities."—Madison.

THE MARRIAGE LICENSE

METHODISTS ARE NOT OPPOSED TO THE SYSTEM, SAYS DR. BARNES.

The Reverend an Active Worker for the Enactment of the Measure Because He Thinks It Will Stop Ill-Mated Marriages.

There has been much interest manifested in the Marriage License bill, which is now before the New Jersey Legislature. Monday the News published a statement that while the Presbyterians and Baptists favored the bill, it was opposed by the Roman Catholics and the Methodists. A reporter interviewed Rev. C. R. Barnes, D. D., pastor of the First M. E. church of this city, regarding the matter, Tuesday afternoon.

The News, said Dr. Barnes, had no authority for saying that the Methodists are opposed to the Marriage License bill. Such is not the case. In fact, there is an almost unanimous sentiment among the Methodist clergy in favor of the bill. Dr. Barnes has already had special communication with a number of the members of the Senate and Assembly, urging them to vote in favor of the bill. He has also received a personal letter from Assemblyman Lloyd, the author of the bill, expressing appreciation for the interest taken in the bill.

The only reason, explained Dr. Barnes, that there has not been formal action taken by the Methodists of the State, is because the annual conferences have not as yet met. At previous sessions, continued Dr. Barnes, of the Newark Conference, at least, the conference has urged the Legislature to pass a bill of a like nature.

Dr. Earnes then gave a number of reasons why the clergy was in favor of the bill. According to the present arrangement, said Dr. Barnes, many marriages are hastily consummated with unhappy results, such as divorce, which might be avoided if a little more time were taken for consideration. People do not realize that when they certify falsely as to their age, etc., before a minister, that is perjury. They do not hesitate to swear falsely at this case, where they would hesitate to take a false oath or affirmation before a civil magistrate. For example, a person giving their correct age to a minister and learning from him that they were below the legal age, will ask what the legal age is, and then proceeding to another magistrate will announce that they are above that age.

The preachers, continued the Doctor, as a rule, would prefer to marry people with a license and be freed from legal obligations.

In conclusion, Dr. Barnes said that he thought that the provision of the Roman Catholic church requiring banns to be published for three Sundays before the ceremony was a most excellent one, as it gave the contracting parties time for consideration and also called public attention to the marriage. If, said the Doctor, the bill, as has been said by its opponents, after the discouragement of marriage, then certainly the ordinance of the Roman Catholic church would be expected to have the same effect.

The only reason that Dr. Barnes did not attend the hearing of the bill Tuesday before the senate committee at Trenton was that he was engaged all day in examining candidates for the ministry. There were six who were taking their examinations, which were held in Vincent chapel. Rev. H. J. Johnston, pastor of Grace M. E. church, was taking his fourth year examinations, and Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, pastor of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, was taking his third year examinations. It is customary for Methodist ministers to take examinations for the first four years following their admission. These examinations have heretofore been held at the conference, but this year they were held in the different districts. Those of this district were examined in this city under the direction of Rev. Dr. Barnes.

A Delegate to be Sent.

Previous to the lecture given Tuesday afternoon by Mrs. Scrimgeour before the Town Improvement Association, the members of the association held a short business meeting, at which time an invitation was received from the Health Association of Philadelphia, asking the association of this city to send a delegate to a convention to be held in Philadelphia, May 6th and 7th. Mrs. Pierre Mali, the president, was elected as the delegate, and she was given the power to select another member of the association to accompany her.

Exhibit of China Painting.

Mrs. Collins T. Pond and pupils will give a studio exhibit of china painting in Mrs. Pond's studio, room 303, Babcock building, on March 25th, 26th, and 27th, from 10 o'clock a. m. to 6 o'clock p. m.

THE WORLD THEIR FIELD

HOME AND FOREIGN MISSION WORKERS REPORT, PLAN AND ELECT.

The Annual Meeting Held Tuesday Afternoon in Vincent Chapel—Encouraging Reports—The Officers Elected.

The annual meetings of the two Women's Missionary Societies of the First M. E. Church were held in Vincent chapel, Tuesday afternoon.

The annual meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society held its meeting first. Routine business was transacted and the reports of the different committees were received showing the society to be in a prosperous condition. The election of officers was postponed until a later date on account of the small attendance. It will probably be held at the meeting on April 7th when Miss White will address the society.

The annual meeting of the Women's Home Missionary Society was held later in the afternoon and was well attended. The report of the secretary was very gratifying to the members and showed the society to be in a flourishing condition and proved the last year to have been a very successful one. Reports were made by the chairmen of the several committees. Owing to the absence of the treasurer, her report will not be made until the anniversary meeting of the society which is to be held the latter part of April or the first part of May. At that meeting it is expected that there will be an address by Mrs. Clinton B. Fisk, National President of the Women's Home Missionary Societies of the M. E. churches of the country.

The principal business of the meeting was the election of officers for the ensuing year. The officers were all re-elected as follows:—President, Mrs. D. E. Davis; first vice-president, Mrs. J. C. Peck; second vice president, Mrs. P. M. French; third vice-president, Mrs. O. L. Jenkins; recording secretary, Mrs. N. W. Pike; corresponding secretary, Mrs. C. E. Horne; treasurer, Mrs. J. W. Jackson; librarian, Mrs. A. T. McNaughton; mite box secretary, Mrs. I. L. McVoy.

WORK AMONG CHILDREN.

TOWN IMPROVEMENT WOMEN RECEIVE SOME GOOD POINTS.

A Brooklyn Woman Tells Them How Much More Effective Their Work Will be if They Interest Young People.

At the meeting of the Town Improvement Association held Tuesday afternoon the members and their friends were given the pleasure of listening to Mrs. James Scrimgeour, president of the Health Protective Association, of Brooklyn. The speaker is a noted one, and has accomplished a great deal of good since she has been identified with the work. There were a number of children present and they were very much interested in the remarks of the speaker.

Mrs Scrimgeour began her talk by telling those present how the Association in Brooklyn did good work with the barrel system. She said the women asked for better barrels, and then had them maintained according to the laws of the city. If there were any known violations complaints would be made to the Board of Aldermen, and the matter would be attended to at once.

Another excellent point advanced by the speaker was that the Association found it a good plan to begin work with the children, and accordingly a children's al l was established, and from experience it was learned that they took more interest in the work than the older members. She thought that the children in school should be taught more about home affairs. The American boy she thought had a great desire to expectorate, and to see how far he could do so. In this connection she related several experiences which she had yesterday while coming to Plainfield on the cars.

She also said that with the child culture reform it made the older people think that they had been brought up wrong and that there was plenty room for improvement. The fact that we don't always set the best example was a deplorable one, she thought. The idea was advanced that there are always a few women who are willing to do the work while the majority are perfectly willing that they should do it. She did not think that it was right that ignorant foreigners should be allowed to come to this country and vote, and that the women of this country should be denied the right.

During the lecture the speaker brought out many interesting details which added greatly to the value of the talk. At the close a vote of thanks was given to Mrs. Scrimgeour for her able address. A short informal discussion of the subject followed, and Mrs. Scrimgeour answered all of the questions which were propounded to her.

T. F. SWAYZE APPOINTED.

THE PLAINFIELDER TO BE CHIEF CLERK OF THE U. S. TREASURY.

Mr. Swayze's Candidacy, First Told of in the Press, was Successful with the Backing of Senator Platt and Others.

New Jersey has been well represented at the National Capital by the advent of the new Republican administration and now another important office has been given to one of her citizens. This time it is a resident of Plainfield who has been called to Washington as an employe of Uncle Sam. Theodore F. Swayze, of 243 East Ninth street, whose candidacy for the position of chief clerk of the U. S. treasury department was exclusively told in the Daily Press, has been appointed to that position and will go to Washington in a few days to assume his duties.

Mr. Swayze was born at Chester, N. J. He entered the Northern army in 1862 as a drummer boy at the age or seventeen years. In 1869, he went into the treasury department as a first class clerk and filled all the different clerkships until he was finally made superintendent of the treasury in 1889. A year later he was appointed chief clerk of the treasury department under Arthur's administration with Judge Folger, of New York, secretary of the treasury. He resigned the position on the incoming of the Cleveland administration in 1885, taking a position in the public moneys division of the treasury, which he held until 1893, when he resigned to accept the position of assistant to the Hon. Thos. D. Platt, president of the United States Express Co.

Although Mr. Swayze was endorsed by Senator Platt, he was appointed from New Jersey and was supported by Vice President G. A. Hobart, Senator Sewall and all the members of Congress from New Jersey for the position. Mr. Swayze is an intimate friend of Major O. D. Pruden, assistant private secretary to the President, who is in service in the White House since Cleveland's first administration.

The office of chief clerk of the treasury department has now come under the civil service and is not one of the offices which are divided among the followers of the administration. According to the rules of the civil service, the position is held during good behavior. By the civil service laws, an old soldier may be reinstated to the position he once held and so Mr. Swayze's appointment comes as a reinstatement.

The chief clerk of the treasury department is the executive officer of the department under the Secretary the Treasury. He has general supervision of all the work of the department. All mail signed by the secretary is passed upon by the clerk as to its form and construction. He has the expending of the appropriation for furnishing and supplying all the government buildings, court houses, custom offices, some two hundred and sixty buildings in all, and for all supplies authorized by the department. The appropriation now amounts to about $2,000,000. The custodian and janitor force of all these buildings comes under his charge as does the expenditure of the contingent appropriation of the treasury department from which the supplies for the department proper at Washington are purchased. There are sundry other duties attached to the office.

Although Mr. Swayze and family spent most of their life in Washington, they have taken a great liking to Plainfield, and here Mr. Swayze will continue to make his home, returning every week to spend Sunday with his family. He is a member of the Park Club.

Justice Nash's Court.

There were several cases to come before Justice Nash Tuesday afternoon. The case of Miller against Trust, on contract, was dismissed on account of the nonappearance of the plaintiff. The contract case of Loomis against Thickstun was adjourned until a later date. Summons were issued in the landlord and tenant case of Cadmus against Randolph, returnable on Saturday.

Report of an Earthquake.

There was a heavy thunder shower passed over this section Tuesday morning. At Somerville it is said that there was a slight earthquake shock, lasting for an interval of a few seconds. It was not severe, however, but in some instances it rattled dishes and overturned and broke light, frail articles.

When You Cannot Read

your evening paper, when you cannot thread your needle without difficulty or annoyance, call on our specialist, and we will tell you without charge whether glasses will correct the trouble. Leech, Stiles & Co., 107 East Front street. Hours 10 a. m. to 4.30 p. m., every Thursday.

CARRIED AWAY BOXES.

THOMAS MAIR FINDS HIMSELF IN A PREDICAMENT THEREBY.

It is Said That When Pursued by Special Officer Scriven He Simply Walked Across the Brook and Escaped Immediate Arrest.

They eloped into Somerset county as the sun's last rays disappeared in the direction of Somerville and the special officer from the Union county side of the brook watched them pass out of his power as they waded through the placid waters of Green brook. It happened this way. Janitor T. J. Scriven, of the Babcock building, who is also a special officer, was on duty at the elevator while the elevator boy was making way with his dinner. It was on Monday evening, about seven o'clock. Mr. Scriven was suddenly startled by hearing his wife call to him from one of the upper floors telling him that there was a young man eloping with some of the packing boxes belonging to Woodhull & Martin, owners of the big department store in the Babcock building.

Mr. Scriven ran the elevator to the first floor and forthwith, to investigate. The elopement was in progress then. An enterprising young man, whose enterprise was unfortunately turned in the wrong direction, was calmly carrying the large packing boxes, which stood in the rear of the store, across the brook and placing them in a two wheeled cart that he had ready on the other side behind the edifice of the First Church of Christ. When the young man saw Janitor Scriven he walked across the water and smiled.

This is not the first time that articles have been missed from the rear of the Babcock building and Janitor Scriven was determined to find out who the nervy customer was. He who had eloped with the boxes knew that Mr. Scriven had no authority in North Plainfield and so he did not fear. He didn't know his man, however. Mr. Scriven followed and where the other went he went also. Then he explained to the youthful offender that he was going to follow him until he went home, if it took all night, so he might as well give in at once. Then the young man gave up and went home. He lived, Mr. Scriven found, on Duer street, and he gave his name as John Mair. He finally explained that the driver had told him he might have the boxes. The driver, when questioned, declared that he had said nothing of the kind.

The boxes stayed near the brook all night but at an early hour in the morning they were carted off by two unknown lads. Mair was notified by Woodhull & Martin that he must return the boxes or their equivalent in twenty-four hours.

The twenty-four hours were up next morning and some action will probably be taken in the matter at once. Mair is employed in the sash and blind factory in North Plainfield. He protests that he had permission to take the box s.

ENDEAVOR REVIVAL MEETINGS.

A Determined Effort to be Made to Increase the Church Forces.

On Monday evening, April 5th, the Christian Endeavor Local Union will begin a series of special evangelistic services for everybody in the Trinity Reformed church. Features of the services will be short, and crisp addresses, plenty of good music by a large chorus choir led by Horace J. Martin, and solos by Charles L. Lewis, William N. Runyon, Elmer E. Runyon and L. H. Bigelow, Jr. The new book, "Sacred Songs, No. 1," now used by Mr. Moody in all his meetings, will be used. It is hoped that Mr. Galey, of Princeton College, the famous centre rush of the football team, also a Christian worker and a bright speaker, will conduct one or two of the services. The other leaders will be chosen from those active in young people's work in Plainfield. Each meeting will be preceded by a half hour service of prayer only, led by local Endeavors.

All the pastors have been requested to preach evangelistic sermons in the morning of Sunday, April 4th, and it is also desired that the Endeavor societies of the city hold a half-hour prayer service before the regular preaching service in the evening at their respective churches on Sundays, April 4th and 11th, to pray for the evangelistic services.

Invitations to these services will be distributed by members of the various societies.

Private Residences Sold.

John H. French, the clothier, has sold the residence, 8 Willow avenue, to J. D. Lippincott. Mrs. Anna D. Smith has sold the house and property at 20 Grandview avenue to John H. French. Both sales were consummated through the agency of J. T. Vail, the real estate broker.

SOUBRETTE'S CHIC SONGS

THE STAR FEATURE OF THE WESTWIELD CLUB'S ANNUAL SMOKER.

The Entertainment, However, Was Rather Conventional, But Was Pleasantly Enjoyed Just the Same by the Visitors.

Despite the inclemency of the weather a large crowd filled the hall of the Westfield Athletic Club last Tuesday to be present at the club's annual smoker. The committee of arrangements, of which Mr. Nelson L. Coryell was chairman, used its discretion in selecting the vaudeville talent for the event and got together a number of well known artists, who filled the bill with satisfaction. The report has been circulated that the affair would be like one the club gave on a previous occasion, and those who came with that expectation were dis appointed. It was fast enough. There was nothing very "slow" about any part of it. Kennedy and Rey, the king and emperor of Irish and German comedy, gave several clever sketches. Grey Patti, a comedian, sang several songs, gave an imitation of Albert Chevalier, the English costerslinger and also a turn in black face. Murry brothers, musical artists, kept the house in an uproar from start to finish by their performance on numerous musical instruments and apparatus. The program could not be complete, however, without a soubrette. "by the kind permission of Oscar Hammerstein," it was said, "Zeba Wilson would next entertain the audience." Well, whether it was true as to Oscar, she certainly did entertain them. She did all that. Zeba had the beauty and grace of youth and audacity enough to accompany these accomplishments. She was not a bit backward. Her songs were catchy enough to satisfy them all or make Captain Chapman think he was at home. The admission was only fifty cents and the club came out ahead on the affair. The same committee has charge of the preparations for the amateur minstrel show, for which rehearsals are being held weekly. The show will begin shortly after Easter.

WHIST CUP BACK AGAIN.

PARK CLUB FOUR WIN FROM ORANGE BY SIX POINTS.

The Trophy Wrested From the Plainfield Players Some Time Ago, But Was Contested for and Recovered Tuesday.

The Park Club challenge whist trophy is back in Plainfield again, and the experts of Orange are sorrowful in consequence. It will be remembered that the team from the Orange Club came to Plainfield several weeks ago and defeated the Park's in a match for the cup. The Roberts victorious career of the Park's came to a sudden end and it was their turn to mourn. Tomorrow the State whist congress opens at Jersey City, and so there was no challenge from the other clubs for a game for this week for the trophy. The Park's, learning of that fact, challenged, and last evening had another chance at the Orange players. The Park's were on their mettle and won the match by six points.

The trophy returned last evening with Mr. Roberts' team, and remain in Plainfield until Thursday, when it will be contested for at the congress. Tuesday's victory makes the seventh for the Park's, and as a victory in the congress counts for two, the time appears to be not far distant when the Park Club will have won the ten games necessary to give them another trophy to add to their collection.

MOUNTAINEERS JAGGED UP.

Burnett Brothers Got Too Hilarious and Went to Jail.

Marshal Kilner, of the borough, made his first arrest Tuesday. Chas. Burnett and his brother, Henry Burnett, who live near Stirling, came to town and imbibed freely. In consequence they were in a troublesome mood and when the marshal met them they were not inclined to care whether school kept or not. The marshal found it necessary to arrest them both, which he did. Charles was the first one taken and Henry interfered with the marshal in the performance of his duty. As soon as Charles was landed the officer went back and took charge of the brother. Next morning they were given a hearing before Justice Thomas which made the first case for the borough magistrate. Charles Burnett was fined $15 and his brother $20. They both paid their fines and were released.

They Are Coming.

The musical clubs of the New York University will be here this evening and will give the finest concert at the Y. M. C. A. hall which the people of Plainfield have had the pleasure of hearing this season. Tickets on sale at the city drug stores.

WAGON STRUCK BY A CAR

THE TWO OCCUPANTS THROWN OUT AND INJURED.

Dan Green Prevented the Motorman, From Saving the Vehicle and His Attention Was Attracted by a Yelling Man.

Another collision between a trolley car and a wagon occurred last night at 7.20 o'clock on West Front street and as a result the vehicle was wrecked and its two occupants sent to the hospital, though their injuries are not serious.

John Bennett and wife were engaged in moving from Plainfield to Dunellen Tuesday and at night were just coming down West Front street to their new domicile with a load of furniture, accompanied by Mrs. Carson, of this city. Near DeKalb avenue a bolt dropped out of one of the shafts and Bennett got out of the wagon to repair the damage, leaving the vehicle standing in the middle of the street railway tracks.

A short distance behind him a trolley car was going towards Dunellen at a lively rate of speed, in charge of Motorman J. B. Martin. Bennett heard the approach of the car and ran to notify the motorman to stop. He had only gone about twenty-five feet when the car came along and he yelled at Motorman Martin. The latter did not see the vehicle ahead owing to the darkness.

Believing Bennett to be a passenger he turned off the current and applied the brakes, but before he could stop the car it crashed into the wagon and shoved it along for a few feet. Mrs. Bennett and Mrs. Carson, who were in front, were thrown off the load of furniture into the roadway. They were considerably bruised and it was thought that they had been badly injured. They were taken to the hospital in the ambulance, and it was found that they would recover in a day or two.

The car nor any of its passengers were injured. The wagon was demolished about the rear end.

Motorman Martin was not blamed for the accident, as it was dark and his attention was attracted by Bennett yelling at the side of the track a few feet away from the wagon.

DISAGREED ABOUT A BILL.

Justice Newcorn Called Upon to Decide a Question of Debt.

The trouble was over the light although Thorn claimed that Thatcher had not done his work properly. Thorn wanted, Thatcher to pay $8 toward the bill, while the latter agreed to pay only half the bill, or $5. Thatcher brought suit to get his money for the job, some $78, and so it came about that the contract case of Thatcher against Thorn was started in Justice Newcorn's court.

Alfred B. Thorn is a plumber and dealer in hardware on Somerset street. He secured the contract for various repairs to be made to the Sellmon building on West Front street and granted the contract for the carpenter-work to H. S. Thatcher. The question was whether Thatcher really completed the work according to the specifications, and to prove or disprove that allegation number of witnesses were sworn and gave their testimony. The hearing in the case was held yesterday and Justice Newcorn reserved the judgment until to-day.

Store Improvements.

In a few days work will be started making the proposed improvements at MacDonald's grocery store. An addition will be built in front, which will bring the store proper out to the sidewalk. Mr. MacDonald has been contemplating this change for a long time, and has at last concluded to have it done. It will enhance the value of the property very much and make a more attractive front.

Wedded for Five Years.

There was a very enjoyable time last Tuesday at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Venable, 614 West Third street, it being the celebration of their fifth wedding anniversary. There were about seventy-five present. Mr. and Mrs. A. Venable were the recipients of some very handsome and useful presents. Supper was served at 11 o'clock.

Decided After Two Years.

The appeal case of Cole against Johnson was tried in the Middlesex county court Tuesday, and a verdict rendered in favor of the plaintiff. The case has been on the calendar for nearly two years. It was originally tried before Justice Huff, of Dunellen.

—Great bargains will be offered at the sale of property, at the corner of Berckman street and South avenue, today.

—A missionary meeting will be held on Friday evening at Warren chapel. An interesting speaker will address the meeting.

SPORT FOR THE ANGLER.

STOCKING OF LOCAL STREAMS WITH PIKE-PERCH A SUCCESS.

Thousands of the Gamey Fish Are Growing to a Size That Will Make the Izaak Waltons of Today Grow Enthusiastic.

A correspondent in a recent issue of Forest and Stream has the following to say about pike-perch in this section of New Jersey:

The stocking of streams and ponds with pike-perch fry by the New Jersey Fish and Game Commission has proved a success in at least two instances.

The fry were received from the Pennsylvania hatchery at Cory on May 12, 1896, and about noon of the same day 50,000 were placed in Cedar Brook, opposite the Lehigh Valley depot at South Plainfield, about three miles east of New Market Pond, into which the stream empties. Another lot of 50,000 was placed in a small brook three-quarters of a mile from the pond at Lakeside, a settlement one mile south of Metuchen. As soon as liberated, the squirming little transparent bodies, with their prominent, fish-like eyes, much resembling tadpoles in size, darted here and there, finally seeking shelter under the edges of stones and pebbles on the sandy bottom.

The brook being inaccessible for the greater part of its length on account of the thick underbrush and briers, the growth of the fry was not noticed until Sept. 12th, four months later, when, upon my stepping upon a piece of overhanging bank near the junction of the brook and pond, a number of fish five or six inches in length darted from beneath to the opposite side, their dark, irregular markings, and olive-colored sides being plainly visible in the clear, transparent water, which also undoubtedly slightly magnified their size. By stamping along the edge of the brook many other pike-perch were driven from their hiding places.

The only other fish in this lake at that time were 73 Oswego bass, measuring from nine to eighteen inches, placed in the lake a few months previous to the pike perch, and innumerable dace and other bait fish, all other fish having been lost two years previous by the breaking of the dam, a permanent dam having since been built and the lake refilled by its many springs and streams.

A few weeks later a trip was made to Cedar brook in company with Thos. Lindabury, yard-master of the Lehigh road at South Plainfield, and many pike-perch were driven from beneath the banks of that stream, all showing the same growth as their kin at Lakeside.

One million fry of the pike-perch were planted by the commission in different lakes and streams of the State on that date, May 13th.

HELD FOR THE GRAND JURY.

Mischievous Boys Will Have to Give an Account of Their Actions.

The three lads who were charged with generally demoralizing the interior of one of the empty residences on West Seventh street, were brought before Justice Nash, Thursday afternoon. To the charge of malicious mischief was added that of larceny, for it was alleged that the boys had removed a quantity of lead pipe from the house.

When brought before the Justice, Archie Laramour, one of the lads, admitted that he and the rest had been in the house and had carried away the pipe. His testimony implicated William Maque. No other testimony was necessary and the Justice held the two lads under $100 bail for the grand jury.

The lads felt the disgrace keenly and explained that it was done with no evil intent but just in fun. The bail was furnished by the parents of the boys who were also in court.

THEATRICAL.

Even during the Lenten season Chauncey Olcott is doing an immense business in Sweet Inniscarra at the Fourteenth street theatre, his magnetic personality and sweet songs striking the popular chord. In his new piece Mr. Olcott has a vehicle for displaying his talent to the best of advantage, and with an excellent supporting company he makes the most of it in giving a performance that a big business shows to be among the metropolitan successes of the season. Mr. Olcott will remain at this theatre indefinitely.

New Pastor Chosen.

At a meeting of the members of St. Peter's German Lutheran church last week they decided to extend a unanimous call to Rev. Eyme, of Philadelphia. Mr. Eyme preached at the church recently and he impressed the members very much by his earnestness. It is confidently expected that he will accept the call and enter upon his duties April 1st.

Decision for Plaintiff.

Justice Nash rendered a decision in favor of the plaintiff Thursday in the contract case of the Union Tire Company against Chapot. The judgment was for the full amount and costs.

BABES IN THE WOODS.

A SAD AND SORRY STORY OF SURPRISING SHAMEFULNESS.

Funny Entertainment Given in Crescent Avenue Church Last Week as Arranged by Councilman Runyon.

The audience wept at the exceedingly tragic ending to the pantomime which was given at the sociable of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Crescent Avenue church, in the chapel last Thursday, but the tears came because everybody laughed so hard. It was really funny. Of course, it was absolutely foolish but that didn't make any difference as far as the humor of the affair went and old and young united in a hearty laugh at the droll actions of the silent actors.

The pantomime was not all the programme, however, and the rest was of equal excellence. After every seat in the chapel had been filled and all the available chairs in the building had been brought in and occupied, Dr. B. VanD. Hedges stepped forward as master of ceremonies and made a clever little speech introducing the different parts of the programme. There was a whistling solo by Evans, accompanied by Miss Effeds Whiting. A piano duet by Miss Ada Marsh and Miss Edith Arens followed. A double recitation by Dr. VanD. Hedges and Frank O. Bristol was something novel. Dr. Hedges did the reciting and Bristol, who stood behind him, did the gesturing. The recitation was a humorous selection and the encore "Old Ironsides." The applause was tremendous. Frank O. Bristol gave several character sketches. His first was a scene from "David Copperfield." His encores were original, "The Elocution School" and a "Dog Song."

The event of the programme was the pantomime, "The Babes in the Woods," "A Sad and Sorry Story of the Surprising Shamefulness of a Sinner." The libretto expressly for the occasion was written by Councilman William N. Runyon and was read before each act by Dr. Hedges.

The prologue and first act was as follows:

PROLOGUE.

"Long, long ago, when the world was very young; when Dr. Richards was known as the naughtiest boy in the State of Maine, and Captain Ostrom was the leading soprano in a large boy choir, a handsome gentleman and a beautiful lady lay a dying in Muhlenburg Hospital. Bravely had they fought for life until Dr. Murray, after a careful diagnosis, had pronounced them cases of excessive cigarette smoking, whereat they coughed two big cigarette coughs and prepared for the worst.

"And as their lives flickered and waned, a great longing for the safety of their two pretty babes possessed their souls, and they wondered with anguish what would become of the little dears when they should be no more.

"For they knew that when they should be gone, their beloved kidlets would be left desolate and alone in the world with the exception of one Uncle, in whom they had none too much confidence.

"Now this uncle was as tough as a last year's chicken and had no more conscience than a dog has feathers. Indeed Judge De Meza said that he gave him more trouble than any other ten men in Plainfield. But being a foxy old party, he had contrived to ingratiate himself with his kind and noble brother as the end drew near, and seldom did a day pass but that he stopped at the Woman's Exchange and purchased some delicacy for the sufferers at the Hospital.

"For he knew, sly dog that he was, that his brother had a great sum of gold hidden away somewhere, having hoarded it for fear of Mr. Bryan's election, and he reasoned that by skillful manoeuvering, he might get possession of the little ones and thus recoup his shattered finances.

"And so it happened. Calling his brother to his bedside, the sick man tearfully besought him to take the little orphans home with him and to give them the same watchful care to which they had always been accustomed.

"'Sure Mike,' replied the tough brother. 'Gin me de kids an' I'll do de right ting by 'em of it takes a leg, so help me Bob.'

"At which vulgar speech the sick lady and gentleman were so shocked that they fell backwards and expired immediately with sobs.

"Thus endeth the prologue."

Act 1.

"Discloses the neat but not gaudy apartments of the tough uncle in the Rink Building on Watchung avenue. If this were not a pantomime, the clang and buzz of the trolley cars could be distinctly heard outside every twelve minutes. The good wife of the house is discovered in the act of darning the well worn socks of her worser half and peering anxiously out of the window from time to time as if expecting visitors.

"This lady is an active member of the Relief Association, the Town Improvement Association, the Daughters of the Revolution, Iona Council of Independent Red Ladies, the Woman's Relief Corps, the Ladies Bicycle Club, the Ladies' Auxiliary Board, the W. C. T. U., the Monday Afternoon Club, the Current Events Club, and in addition thereto, she is now an aspirant for a position on the Board of Health.

So the audience is especially fortunate in seeing how she looks at home, as very few, including even her husband, have ever had that opportunity, and there do be some scandalous people who say that his lonesomeness is in what has made her depraved spouse so awfully tough. But all this has nothing to do with the story and we must hasten on.

"As she continues working a loud knock is not heard at the door, and her husband bursts into view leading the little orphans by the hand. With a glad cry of joy their dear aunt drops her work, rushes to her darlings and embraces them rapturously. She is very glad of a chance to drop her work, as work is not in her line. But as was said before, all this is nothing to do with the present drama.

"Special attention is called to these infants. Never before in the city of Plainfield do we remember having seen two more perfect specimens of vigorous babyhood, and the terrible sorrow of the parents at having to leave them can be readily understood by young and old.

The little boy, who is three years old, is Charlyox, which means in French "awful long and skinny," while the little girl, a year younger, rejoices in the pretty name of Elmeroso, which being translated means "bald-headed."

"Too young to realize their terrible bereavement, the precious dears play happily about the floor with the little toys their uncle has stolen from the neighbors, and eat every blessed thing they can get their teeth on, stopping only now and then to belt each other over the head.

"At last, wearied with their play and their long walk from the Boulevard, where their papa and mamma had lived, they became nervous and fretful, and the scene closes as their dear aunt drugs them into profound slumber."

The part of the better half of the tough uncle was taken by Fred Walz, who was almost unrecognizable in calico dress and cap and spectacles. The tough uncle was William N. Runyon plus a long villainous nose and a false moustache. The innocent little tots were Charles A. Lewis, with his six feet of bone and muscle clad in a Little Lord Fauntleroy suit with a big red bow in front, and Elmer E. Runyon, with flaxen curls, blue calico dress and pantalette. The gambols of the children were remarkable to behold and their attacks on the crullers and bread given them were not to be equalled.

"Act two shows the wicked uncle at his dainty escritoire endeavoring to decide as to whether to poison the children outright by making them read the World and Journal, or send them to the Children's Home.

"Both schemes, however, have their disadvantages, and be about determines to trust to luck on measles and mumps, when his base train of thought is interrupted by the arrival of two of his friends who have come in to pay their respects. The way becomes clear to him now and he can see the kids' finish. For be it known that these two friends are men of his own stripe—bloodthirsty villains,—reckless and desperate to the extreme. One, a fat fierce fellow named Baynon is the greatest chicken thief in Union county, while his pal, a sly son of a gun with many aliases, but best known as Murray, is a card sharp and confidence man.

"A blood curdling scheme takes possession of the brutal uncle's soul. He will make those base born varlets his betrimes, and they shall take the children away and do them dirty. With panting breath and dilating eye he broaches the subject, and it meets with instant favor, as the villains have had recently to buy their new commutation tickets and are very hard up. The great difficulty is as to terms, and the insatiable greed of all parties concerned presents a stern and terrible lesson which can never be effaced from the minds of the audience. After much base-wrangling and lots of hard swearing, they finally

CAPTURED A FIREBUG.

LARRY WALLACE TRAPPED IN HIS INCENDIARY ATTEMPT.

Became Familiar With a Detective and Told How He Was Going to Burn Benner's Road House Last Night.

An empty beer bottle strongly smelling of kerosene oil, a small box of shavings saturated with the volitile fluid, two burned matches and three with the brimstone still unused, together with the acts witnessed by a trio of minions of the law, are the things that stamp Larry Wallace as firebug and Friday landed him in the Union county jail with twenty or more years of imprisonment staring him in the face.

Within the last year attempt after attempt has been discovered to burn buildings — principally barns, outbuildings or houses isolated and unoccupied — in Fanwood and Scotch Plains. Fortunately, however, in nearly every case the flames were extinguished before they did destructive work. The attempts followed one another with much frequency and apparent cunning that the Underwriters' Association of New York took up the matter and employed a detective to ferret out the incendiary.

Larry Wallace is known as one of the most worthless characters in this section, implicated in overt acts time and again, a slave to drink and when in his cups there is no crime—unless it is murder—that he would hesitate to commit. A half dozen times he has been suspected of arson, and once was arrested, but for lack of sufficient evidence, and the suspicion of being the firebug, or, at least, one of the prime movers if there was more than one involved, immediately rested on his head.

The detective engaged by the Underwriters Association went at his work of catching the incendiary in a systematic and skilled manner. He journeyed to the Plains, mingled among the people and learned of the character and reputation of Wallace. Then he laid his plans to weave a net around Wallace from which escape would be impossible if he was the guilty man.

The detective made up as a rough laborer and assumed an uncouth manner. He hung around the haunts of Wallace for a few days and finally worked himself into the good graces of the latter by buying whiskey, tobacco and other things. He gained the confidence of Wallace degree by degree, and the latter, like all of his ilk, soon related some of the acts which he had perpetrated, and was wont to brag of in the moments of his drunken delirium. Finally the detective broached the subject of setting fire to buildings. It struck a responsive chord in the mind of the depraved Wallace, and he told of some of his experiences in that line of devitry, and of those who have been implicated with him in the criminal acts.

The detective was a willing listner and after a time Wallace made the boast that he was going to burn the new road house recently built by John Benner, situated on the knoll just east of his present house on the county road. He claimed to have a grudge against Benner for some ill treatment that he had received about the latter's place and was going to take this method of getting even. In a quiet, persuasive way the detective learned all the details that Wallace had planned. Then he set about to capture him in the act.

Friday morning at 5 o'clock the detective came to this city and called on Sheriff Kirk and told him of the attempt that Wallace was to make and asked for assistance. The Sheriff readily gave it and during the day the trap was set for Wallace's capture. Wallace told the detective that he intended to burn the road house about 9 o'clock Friday night.

During the day the Sheriff notified Constable John Seeland, of Elizabeth, to come to Plainfield and assist in the capture of Wallace if he should attempt to carry out his threats. About 7 o'clock the Sheriff, detective and constable started for Fanwood and on the way stopped at Netherwood where Boundsman Frederickson, of the city police force, joined the party. A short distance beyond the Netherwood station the officers, who were in a wagon, discerned the figure of a man walking along the county road. It was found to be that of Wallace. The officers drove ahead at a rapid pace and arriving at the house that Wallace said he was going to set fire to, all the officers but the Sheriff got out of the wagon and hid behind the trees nearby. The Sheriff then drove on towards Westfield as a blind to mislead Wallace and not cause him to suspect that he was watched.

Wallace soon after came ambling up to the house. He looked up and down the road and then slyly stole around the corner of the house to the back piazza. The officers watched his every movement and saw him take a bottle out of his packet and sprinkle some fluid—afterwards found to be kerosene—along the edge of the stoop. Then he struck a match, but the wind blew it out.

Pulling another one from his pocket he had just struck it when a voice from within the house yelled, "There he is." The voice was that of Benjamin Lee, a colored man, who, with Dennis Murray and Archibald Davie, were watching the house and were let into the plans of the officers.

At the sound of the voice Wallace snuffed the light of the match and turned on his heel. But he was too late to escape. The stalwart figures of three men emerged from behind the trees and before Wallace could hardly realize that he had been trapped he was pounced upon and pinioned by the men.

"We've got you now," exclaimed the detective.

"I know it," answered Wallace, in a sullen tone, adding an oath; "I'll get twenty years for this."

Wallace was searched, and the articles enumerated in the opening paragraph were found on his person.

Suddenly he recognized Constable Seeland and made a desperate attempt to get at him, but he was held down by the other officers. He had been arrested by Seeland before.

By this time the sheriff had driven back and Wallace was loaded into the wagon and taken to Elizabeth, where he was arraigned before Justice Heath and held without bail to await the action of the May grand jury. He was committed to the county jail.

The detective has also secured evidence implicating several other men in the incendiary fires, some of which have been within the city limits Startling disclosures are expected in a few days.

THE LYCEUM TEAM WON.

DEFEATED THE CLEVELAND CYCLERS AT BOWLING LAST FRIDAY.

A Hot Competion and a Large Crowd of Rooters Made the Game an Exciting One—Higgins Played the Best Game

The bowling match on the Ulrich alleys last Friday between the Cleveland Cyclers and the Lyceum Cyclers attracted a very large crowd of enthusiastic supporters of the sport, and each side was cheered continually during the game by their admirers. There was nothing especially noteworthy about the contest, and in fact there were no high scores on either side. The Lyceum bowlers won the match by 140 pins, which left their opponents completely in the rear. The highest score for the evening was made by Higgins. He tallied 168, and Sowden came the nearest to it with a score of 156. The other scores run as low as 80. The lowest was made by Sutphen. It is not to be wondered that the Lyceum team won, for they are old bowlers and have been in the game for a long time. On the other hand the Cleveland team has only been bowling this season, and they have hardly got their hand into the game. They are enthusiastic bowlers, however, and if they continue to practice they will be heard from later on with good results.

The scores were kept by W. Schaefer and J. Moran, while P. Blimm and W. Winn acted as umpires. Below will be found the scores:

CLEVELANDS.		LYCEUMS.
Overbaugh, H.	113	Reviller	102
Muir	129	Keefe	102
Babcock	110	Gallagher	156
Hiles	93	Monahan	132
Frey	124	Powell	167
Overbaugh, W.	109	Wagner	139
Sowden	156	Moran	118
Sutphen	80	Shannon	133
Young	129	Kenney	116
Tunnison	160	Carty	128
	1285		1379

Trouble About a School.

There is a difference again between the Boards of Education of Westfield and Springfield over the Branch Mills School. There was an understanding that the expenses of the school, which is attended by children of both townships, should be borne by both places, but the Westfield people now claim that the Springfield board has gone back on the agreement. The school has been closed for some time on account of sickness among the scholars.

A Complete Surprise.

A very complete surprise was tendered to Miss Nettie Chandler, of East Third street, last Thursday, in honor of the celebration of her birthday. The event was arranged by Miss Lillian Chandler and Ralph Tolles, and the surprised was taken by storm. The chief feature of the evening was dancing, and it was early when the guests departed for their homes. At midnight a sumptuous repast was served.

Entertained Her Sunday-school Class.

Miss Mabel Wilson, of West Fourth street, entertained her Sunday-school class at her home last Thursday. The time was passed in playing games and being social. Those present were William Vandeventer, Hiram Humes, Willard Swick, George Creveling, George Reynolds.

—The ironwork in the burned Allen building, New Brunswick, has been sold for $50. It is said to have cost $100,000 when put into the structure.

—Mr. Soudder, of India, will give an illustrated lecture in the Trinity Reformed church on Friday evening. He will tell about the manners and customs of the people of India and exhibit a fine collection of views. The lecture will be free and all are cordially invited to attend.

IT IS A FACT, NOT THEORY.

SO SAID REV. J. W. RICHARDSON IN HIS SERMON ON JONAH.

The Attack on the Credibility of Jonah Proves No New Facts and Weaves No New Arguments—Jonah was Not a Myth.

Rev. J. W. Richardson, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, preached Sunday on the interesting story of Jonah and the whale. The text was Jonah 1:17—"Now the Lord had prepared a great fish to swallow up Jonah. And Jonah was in the belly of the fish three days and three nights."

The speaker first showed that the attack on the credibility of Jonah began with Julian and Porpophyry, two pagans, about 260 and 362 A. D. The so-called higher criticism, he averred, "Parades in borrowed robes and utters stolen thunder; but it proves no new facts; and weaves no new arguments." Then by liberal quotations from the Scriptures and the ancient Hebrew historian, Josephus, the speaker proved that Jonah "was a man, not a myth," and that the prophecy of Jonah's age were historic, not fictitious. Critical fiction, undeniably, was a subsequent development. Homer and Hesiod came after Jonah, and signs are the main features of his narrative, wove the fables of Andromeda and Hercules. If Jonah, who antedates both these poets, had not spent three days in the belly of a great fish, the world would never have heard of Andromeda and Hercules." The speaker then said, "Josephus, who wrote 1,900 years ago, and who was better qualified to judge what the Hebrews in his times believed, declares 'that they all believed Jonah's book to be absolute history.' His evidence is vastly more competent than the inflated sermons of modern critics. The veracity of Jonah was not questioned in the Christian church until about the middle of the eighteenth century; the modern critics have on pagan heads." Passing to the fact of the narrative, the speaker quoted from Pliny, who described a fish taken off Joppa as 1. D. which was forty feet in length, and and whose ribs were higher than those of an Indian elephant. There were fishes large enough to have swallowed Jonah without winking. Jonah's miraculous preservation was no more miraculous than Christ's resurrection; both are true or both are false; accept one and you must accept the other.

"Josus stands a witness for the veracity of Jonah, Jesus positively asserts that the inhabitants of Ninevah repented at Jonah's preaching. But it is said that this verse in Matthew, which compares the resurrection of Christ with the deliverance of Jonah, is considered by many scholars as a gloss of some early copyist. Nonsense. Luke in 11:30 quotes Christ's words almost as Matthew quotes them; did some good-natured copyist give Luke a "gloss" to? Ninety nine and one-half per cent. of the Greek scholars and students affirm that there is not the slightest doubt that the better attested, than the reference to Jonah found in Matthew 12:38. Among all the alleged interpolations, or additions, these words are never classed by scholars of eminent standing. We assign Jonah to the allegorical, then we must believe that Christ's reference to the Queen of Sheba's visit to Solomon, is an allegory. Christ used both in the same connection and breath, to teach that a greater than Jonah or Solomon stood before them. It is impossible to find a single instance, in which Christ quoted from the Old Testament to confirm or illustrate His teaching, that He did not use circumstances historically true. When He quoted from the Old Testament He did so because the passages contained accounts of universally admitted facts; and He used them as facts, to give backing and strength to His reasons and teaching. Christ himself gives the story of Jonah the authority and stamp of genuineness."

REALTY CHANGES.

Plainfield Matters Recorded in the County Clerk's Office.

The following property transfers have been recorced at the County Clerk's office, March 11th to 17th, inclusive:

Thomas Burke et ux., to Gustave Koehler, Plainfield, lot on south side of Front street, Plainfield, $1; Margie H. Richardson et ux., Plainfield, to Sarah G. Bonnell, lot on the south side of Front street, lot west of Franklin place, $3,500; Lizzie Lee et ux., Scotch Plains, to Samuel Britton Plainfield, lot on West Third street, Plainfield $2,a0; Bennet Britton to Lizzie Lee, lot northeast side Seventh road Scotch Plains to Plainfield, adjoining Cole property, $3,700; Charles E. Dayton et ux., New York, to George W. Montfort, Plainfield, lot southside of Sixth street, Plainfield, $1; Charles E. Dayton et ux., to Pieratawav, to Frederick J. Harris, lot West Seventh street, Plainfield, $1; Frederick J. Harris et ux., to Charles E. Dayton, lot West Seventh street, Plainfield, $1; Carl Easrth, Plainfield, to E. B. Wood, lot East Second street, $1,600; Eugene M. Laing et ux., Plainfield, to George G. Grant, of Dalzell avenue, Plainfield, $1; Central N. J. Land Improvement Company to Charles Frost, Plainfield, lot along Central Railroad, Plainfield, $1,600; Sarah G. Jones, Margie R. Vail and Marilla Jones to Mary Kline, Plainfield, lot Sixth street, Plainfield, $1; Alanzo L. Rose of this city, to William Clark, Plainfield, lot Front street and Raymond avenue, Plainfield, $300; Felix Hammerstein et ux., to Wilson Wigand, Plainfield, lot at Castle avenue, Plainfield, $1.

A Big Church Collection.

At the congregational church, Bound Brook, Sunday, the pastor, Rev. Mr. Jones, asked the members for $1,200 to make the necessary repairs about the church. When the collection was counted it was learned that $1,225 had been contributed.

ENDED HIS OWN LIFE.

LOST HIS POSITION BECAUSE OF DRINK AND THEN BECAME DESPONDENT.

William Brennan Drank a Bottle of Liquid That Put Him in the Sleep of Death—Boarded at William Claassen's.

Out of work and with no prospects of getting a job is what led William Brennan, aged 45 years, living on Liberty street, to take his own life on Saturday evening last.

Last January Mr. Brennan come to this city from Brooklyn and secured a position at the Potter Press Works with the night gang. He got along all right until a short time ago when he began to drink. This habit interfered with his work and it was not long before he took a week off. During that time he was on a spree and as a man was needed in his place, one was secured and Brennan was laid off. This seemed to affect his mind when he came to his senses and learned what had taken place, and since then he has been despondent. He boarded with William Claassen, the Liberty street barber, and his latter could see that Brennan was not acting like himself, although he was of a jolly disposition.

Saturday evening about 10 o'clock he went to his boarding place and asked Mrs. Claassen to give him a small bottle. She did so, and Brennan filled it half full of water. She then noticed that he emptied a powder into the bottle. At the time she was a little suspicious, but she soon forgot about the incident. Brennan then went out of the house and that was the last time that she saw him. He stayed around Liberty and West Third streets for awhile and during that time he met several persons whom he knew. He told one friend that he was going to commit suicide. The friend laughed at him and thought it was a joke.

Between 11 and 12 o'clock Brennan walked into the electric light station on Madison avenue, and asked the man in charge if he would allow him to sleep there for the night. The latter consented and Brennan found a suitable place and went to sleep.

Nothing strange was thought of the man until Sunday morning about 6 o'clock when the engineer at the station attempted to awaken the sleeping man who made no signs of getting up. He made several attempts, but all were unsuccessful. Patrolman Robinson happened along and he tried to arouse Brennan, but he failed. Sergeant Kiely was then telephoned for, and when he arrived he also tried to awaken the man. He was also unable to accomplish the task. Finally Dr. Hedges was sent for, and after repeated trials, he found that it would be impossible to arouse Brennan from his slumbers, and he was ordered sent to the hospital. When he arrived there proper treatment was given in an attempt to awaken the man from his lethargy. All efforts were fruitless, however, and about 1 o'clock Sunday afternoon life left the body, and the man's spirit passed into the unknown future. At first there seemed to be a sort of mystery surrounding Brennan's death, but as the case was investigated it appeared that he came to his death by his own hand.

George Brennan, a brother of the deceased, lives at No. 320 Twenty-second street, Brooklyn, and William Claassen telephoned to him Sunday and told him of the death of his brother.

It now appears that the two brothers have been on the outs for sometime and this also was a cause of worry for the one who took his own life. Mr. Claassen, in speaking to a Daily Press reported Sunday, said that he could not account for the deed except that the man had given up all hope of getting work and that he had become so thoroughly despondent.

The last person to whom Brennan talked was Daniel Galbraith, bartender at Day's saloon. It was here that the former secured his last drink. When he was found at the electric light station he had two bottles, both of which were empty. One was a whiskey bottle and the other was the one which was supposed to have contained the poison.

He was very well dressed and had a fine physique. Late Sunday night his body was removed to Terrill & Cole's undertakers establishment where it was prepared for burial.

In response to a telephone message Miss Brennan, sister of the deceased, came to this city last Sunday and arranged to have the body taken care of.

As a result of the investigation by the doctors in the case of Brennan, it was decided that he came to his death through morphine poison. Before his body was removed the coroner was sent for and he gave the necessary permission for burial. He did not think that an autopsy was necessary.

Miss Katheryn Glen, of Craig place, is ill at her home with the grip.

Miss Moffett, a returned missionary from Oklahoma, one of the most interesting speakers of the Congregational Home Missionary Board, will be present at the Congregational church next Sunday morning and make an address on the work of the Board.

ATE STOLEN CHICKENS.

THEN THE FOUR TRAMPS PARTED AND MET TOGETHER AT THE ROOKERY.

But it Was a Forced Meeting on Their Parts—Detective Dougherty Hunting For Two Men, Found Them in a Cell.

Patrolman Myers was on duty Saturday evening when he noticed two men loitering around East Ninth street just before midnight. Their conduct seemed suspicious and he questioned them. One explained that he was waiting to see his wife. The hour was not exactly that at which a man would call on his wife and the officer decided to let the men spend the rest of the night in the lock up. On being searched at the jail, a revolver was found on one of them. They gave their names as James Reedy and George Callahan. It was Reedy that had said that he was waiting for his wife. The revolver was found on Callahan.

Sunday morning, Detective Dougherty, of the Jersey Central force, appeared at the lockup with two prisoners and notified the police that he wanted two more. The two men he had arrested were George Wood and William Schuman. The men he was in search of were James Reedy and George Callahan, who were then locked up in the station house.

There is a shanty belonging to the Lehigh Valley railroad located near the "banks" at Greenbrook. It is used for the storage of various articles belonging to the railroad company. Saturday evening four men appeared at the shanty, entered into the shanty. They brought with them a supply of chickens confiscated from the chicken coops of the farmers living in the vicinity. A fire was started in the shanty and the fowls roasted and devoured by the four uninvited guests.

There were several men in the neighborhood of the tanks who claim to have recognized the four men. Somebody notified Detective Dougherty and he appeared on the scene as the evening grew dark and went to the shanty, accompanied by a special officer in the employ of the Lehigh Valley Railroad. The railroad detectives advanced carefully and captured two of the visitors. The other two were not to be seen. The prisoners were taken to Plainfield for safekeeping, only to find that the other two men who were wanted on the charge of breaking and entering the shanty, were locked up in the city jail.

Sunday morning, Captain Grant turned the four of the offenders over to the Middlesex county officials, and they were arraigned before Justice Storms of New Market. Justice Storms held them all for the Grand Jury on the charge of breaking and entering, which is a state prison offence, and they were taken to New Brunswick to await the action of the above jury.

It is alleged that Reedy has a wife in this city living in the vicinity of East Ninth street, but that they have never lived together. Whether he had still designs toward his wife, it is impossible to say, but they are understood not to be on very good terms.

Mansh Building Improvements.

The alterations in the Marsh building at the corner of Park avenue and East Second street have been completed and the building is now receiving three complete coats of paint, which will make it one of the handsomest business blocks in the city. The upper floors of the building have been divided into twenty-four suites of rooms for offices. Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh, the owner of the building, will occupy a handsome suite of offices on the second floor.

Fractured Her Ankle.

Mrs. Nathan Scribner, of No. 54 Manning avenue, met with a very painful accident Sunday morning. She walked out of the house on the front porch, which was slippery from moisture, and suddenly her feet slipped and she fell off the porch, with the result of fracturing her ankle. Dr. Probasco sent Mrs. Scribner to the hospital, where she will be confined for several weeks. The fracture is a bad one and it will take a long time for it to mend.

Arranging for Entertainments.

A meeting of Mantinnomoh Tribe, Red Men, was held on Friday evening. The entertainment committee reported that a dance had been arranged for March 31st, and tickets for the same were distributed. The good and welfare committee was appointed to consist of D. C. Allen, C. R. Holdstein and F. L. MacCarty. The committee was instructed to arrange for a series of entertainments to be held during the next few months.

Spring Changes.

Through the agency of E. C. Mulford & Son, of North avenue, Joseph W. Winant, of Westfield, has purchased the house at No. 331 Carleton avenue. E. C. Martin, of the dry goods firm of Woodhull & Martin, has leased the house No. 1007 Putnam avenue, and will take possession April 1st. C. M. Slocum, of New York, has leased the Martin house on Sandford avenue, and Fred S. Moore has rented the house No. 433 Orchard place.

READY FOR BAT AND BALL

PLAINFIELD ATHLETIC CLUB ARRANGE FOR A SEASON'S SPORT.

Contests Scheduled With the Crack Clubs of the Metropolitan District—How the Team Will be Assigned.

Such weather as this makes the baseball crank feel as though it was about time to enjoy the National game once more. The Plainfield Athletic Club team is now well organized and if nothing happens to prevent they will open the season Saturday afternoon, May 1st, with the Hart baseball club of Whitestone, L. I., the latter place. The management have succeeded in arranging games with the best teams in this locality and they will have good games no doubt. Thus far they have scheduled games with teams at the following places: Cranford, Somerville, Ironside, Newark; Montclair, Orange A. C., Staten Island Cricket Club, Dover, Arlington A. C., Harrison. All of the above games will be played out of town. Other games will be arranged to be played in this city on grounds to be selected later. The Y. M. C. A. team is looking for suitable grounds and as soon as they are found they will arrange it so that both their team and the Plainfield A. C. will use the grounds half the time. In this way there will always be a game on a Saturday afternoon in this city.

Below will be found a list of the members of the team of the P. A. C.: Erickson, catcher; Winn, Welsh, pitcher; Symons, first base; Freeman, second base; Jordan, short stop; G. E. Fitzbrinck, third base; Cox, right field; Fleming, left field; Muir, centre field; Diedrick, extra. The officers of the club are President, J. D. Brown; vice president, J. H. Cose; secretary, David Gray; treasurer, Alex Muir; manager, G. E. Firstbrook.

STOLEN SILVERWARE FOUND

Many of the Valuables Taken From the Mountain Lodge of F. O. Herring.

Only a short time ago it will be remembered that T. H. Keller, of East Front street, found a leather mounted clock under the plazza which were afterwards identified by Mrs. F. O. Herring as being the articles stolen from her little cottage on the mountain. There was not a quantity of silverware stolen that was still missing. That has now been discovered.

Sunday afternoon, two young lads from this city were playing in the woods near Vail's spring on the mountain, east of the Mountain Park Inn. They were moving the rocks about when one of the lads noticed something shinning under one of the rocks which he had moved. He looked more carefully and found a quantity of silver tablewave, thirty-four pieces in all.

The lads told their parents and the latter notified Chief Grant, who investigated the matter and found that the lads had found the rest of the valuables taken from Mrs. Herring's cottage and which the robbers had buried under the rocks near the spring until they could market them.

The articles found were nine solid silver tea spoons, a silver dessert spoon, seven plated silver table spoons, eleven plated silver forks, and six plated silver knives.

Union Evangelical Services.

The union evangelical services will start in this city on Monday evening, April 5th, in the Trinity Reformed church. That has been decided by the evangelistic committee of the Local Christian Endeavor Union under whose charge the meetings will be given. A meeting of the committee will be held on Tuesday evening in the Seventh Day Baptist church after Rev. Mr. Main's lecture when further arrangements for the meetings will be completed.

Funeral of Miss Randolph.

The funeral of the late Miss Luthera Randolph was held, Saturday afternoon, from her late home at 321 West Second street, Rev. D. J. Yerks officiated at the services. The pall-bearers were Howard Randolph, L. L. Manning, William Manning, Samuel Manning and Daniel Manning, all relatives of the deceased. The interment was at Hillside cemetery.

Robert Scully Not a Spanish Prisoner.

Advices from Consul-General Lee at Havana say that the young American who was captured while attempting to pass the Spanish lines is not Robert Scully, the son of M. W. Scully, of Somerville, who mysteriously disappeared from his boarding house in Camden on March 3d.

Perfect Contest.

Mr. Pfeiffer, of the Mandolin Club of the New York University, has perfect control of his mandolin, and his selections are hugely enjoyed. The concert to be given by the New York University musical clubs at the Y. M. C. A. building this evening, promises to be one of the best musical concerts of the season.

Received Service Stripes.

Patrolman Saunders, of the Plainfield police force, has received his first service stripes for the five years of service on the force. There is not a prouder man on the force.

The Constitutionalist.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

ANENT THE AMERICAN FLAG.

One of the historic-patriotic societies has been discussing the use of the American flag. Some of the members argued that it was used too promiscuously and that this was a stain upon the nation. One speaker went so far as to recommend legislation making it "a crime punishable by a fine of ten dollars for any person to use the American flag except on government or school buildings." But it stands to reason that the glorious emblem of our National sovereignty cannot be used to promiscuously. The stars and stripes have been used somewhat promiscuously in the past, as the tattered bunting shows, and a little more promiscuity won't hurt them to any appreciable extent.—Trenton Times.

MONEY MAKING.

Officers of a Hoboken church informed their pastor on a recent Sunday morning that they had voted him an increase in his salary of $100. The pastor declined, on the ground that it took his half his time to collect his present salary, to say nothing of an increase.—Plainfield Press.

That is nearly as good as the story of a newspaper owner in New Jersey who was noted for his willingness to shut down on all holidays. Being questioned about this generosity to the employes, he whispered confidentially that every day the paper wasn't published he made money. To this the answer was made that on the same principle he could be rich soon by omitting every issue of the paper.—New York Tribune.

KEAN'S WATCHFUL EYE.

John Kean, the man who helped so materially to bring the Republicans into power, is watching events at Trenton, with an eye to the future, says the Philadelphia Record. He has made several trips to the Capitol during the Legislative session and he has kept close tab upon the work there. Some profess to know that Kean is to have the nomination for Governor and that Griggs is to go to the Senate. Others scout this idea and say that Kean will not be satisfied to accept such a situation; that he wants the Senatorship and will not again go into the tribulations of a Gubernatorial campaign.

QUITE DEAD.

The Armbruster racetrack bill is dead; dead as Julius Cæsar; dead as a mackeral; dead as the Wilson tariff; dead as the lay judge system; dead as Bill Bryan; and, if there's anything more dead than any or all of these put together, the racetrack bill is as dead as that. The racetrack bill and racetrack gambling in New Jersey are dead. The people await the opportunity to bury them beyond all resurrection; and this they will do when they vote on the constitutional amendments.—Elizabeth Journal.

A BOUNTY ON BEET SUGAR.

Senator Parry has introduced a bill to encourage the manufacture of beet sugar in New Jersey. The measure contemplates the re-enactment of two laws that have lapsed, by reason of time limit. It provides for a bounty of one cent a pound on merchantable sugar made from beets in this state, and 50 cents a ton for beets grown in the state for a period of five years. It exempts all plants established for the manufacture of beet sugar from taxation for a period of ten years.

POSTMASTERS TO SERVE OUT TERMS.

Postmaster-General Gary has made an announcement of interest to Democratic Postmasters whose terms expire on various dates under the new Administration. He says he has decided to adhere to the four-year tenure of office policy for Postmasters except in cases where such officials should be removed for cause.

TO TURN EDITOR.

Rev. J. A. Wells, who gained considerable notoriety as the Democratic Congressional candidate in the Third District last fall, is about to commence the publication of the Bernardsville News. Though it is not stated, the paper will probably espouse bi-metalism.

AN HONOR.

A distinguished honor was accorded to Dr. W. R. Richards, pastor of the Crescent avenue church, Sunday, when at Princeton he conducted the morning services at the college chapel, which was attended by ex-President and Mrs. Cleveland.

A LIBERAL OFFER

If any of our delinquent subscribers dies with his bill unpaid leaving a widow, we will cheerfully publish the announcement of the widow's second marriage.—Westfield Leader.

VICTIM OF CONSPIRACY?

THAT IS WHAT LARRY WALLACE CLAIMS HE IS.

County Detective Keron Supports His Statements and Questions the Honest Motives and Character of the Detective.

Larry Wallace, one of the most notorious characters in Union County, and arrested by several officers while attempting to set fire to John Benner's road house last Friday night, is said by County Detective John Keron, of Elizabeth, to be a victim of conspiracy on the part of two former convicts to collect a $500 reward offered by the Underwriters Association. The New York Sun correspondent in Elizabeth says:

"A well-dressed man, who gave his name as Bloodgood, called on Sheriff Kirk on Friday morning and stated that he was a detective for the Underwriters, and said that he had, while disguised as a workman, secured the confidence of the suspected Scotch Plains incendiary and a confession from him while he was drunk. He also said that the incendiary would that night fire the Benner House. Bloodgood asked that officers be sent with him to arrest the man when he appeared at the house. The Sheriff sent two constables from Elizabeth and Chief of Police Grant and an officer from Plainfield. Soon after their arrival Wallace arrived at the door and turned to Bloodgood. As he did this Bloodgood sprang forward and seized Wallace, exclaiming here he is I have caught him in the act."

On Saturday morning, when questioned by Detective Keron of the Prosecutor's office, Wallace asked for a hearing, saying he was a victim of two ex-convicts. A hearing was set for this afternoon.

Keron started an investigation, and says that the following are the facts:

"While I know Wallace to be a bad character, I am satisfied," he said today, "that in this instance he is innocent of the charge against him. I find that this man Bloodgood is Alfonso Voullner, of 47 Sweetser avenue, Trenton, an ex-convict who has served time in the Trenton State prison. Voullner called on the Underwriters and asked whether, if he succeeded in securing the conviction of the person responsible for the incendiarism in Scotch Plains, he would obtain the usual reward of $500. Satified that he would do so, he returned to Scotch Plains last Thursday night. William Adams, another convict, who was sent to State prison from Union county for assaulting a woman, enticed Wallace, who was an old pal of his, to a house kept by Mrs. Peel on Brooktown road, where they were joined by Bloodgood. Two bottles of rum were procured, and Wallace was made drunk. He was kept in this condition until Friday evening, when he was allowed to go.

"Since the completion of the Benner house Wallace had slept there nights, in company with a colored man. On Friday night, after leaving Adams, Wallace started for the Benner house, and as he attempted to open the door was seized by Bloodgood and charged by him with an attempt to burn the house. He was held while Bloodgood pretended to make an investigation and reported that he had found the lower clapboards of the house saturated with kerosene and an empty oil bottle on the ground.

"Bloodgood had left Adams to take care of Wallace on Friday while he went to the Sheriff's office with his story and asked for officers to arrest Wallace that night. I also found that Adams and Voullner occupied adjoining cells in State Prison and have been pals since their discharge. I am satisfied that Wallace is a victim of a clever scheme on the part of two conspirators to obtain $500 from the Underwriters."

$200 FOR DEAD CHICKENS.

Justice Mosher Decides That Mr. Wright Must Pay for His Dog's Sport.

Justice Mosher gave his decision Tuesday in the chicken case of Williams against Wright, and he allowed the plaintiff $200 damages. Lawyer Swackhamer represented the plaintiff.

It was a case of where the plaintiff claimed that dogs belonging to Mr. Wright, of Netherwood avenue, had killed a large number of his chickens, and he brought action for damages. The defendant at once gave notice of appeal when the decision was rendered.

Summer Home Destroyed by Fire.

The summer home of W. Higgins, in Middlesex county, about half a mile from the Pennsylvania Railroad station in Stelton, was destroyed by fire which broke out about 9:30 o'clock Sunday night. The house was unoccupied, and the fire was doubtless of incendiary origin. Mr. Higgins and his family are now in Chicago. The loss is estimated at $10,000.

Disposed of Their Morristown Store

Woodhull & Martin, Plainfield's new dry goods firm, have disposed of their store at Morristown to Crosby & Hill, of Wilmington, Del., and the above firm will devote all their energies to their store in this city, which has already become so popular, especially with the women.

Common Oatmeal

Sold from barrels or oftentimes in fancy packages (but still common oatmeal) is hard to cook, bitter in taste and overheating to the system. It overtaxes the digestive organs and the body derives no benefit from it—it injures rather than helps.

H-O

gets rid of all that is objectionable in oatmeal and preserves all that is valuable. It makes oatmeal a human food, palatable and easy of digestion, without taking away any of the elements needed for the building up of body, bone and brain. All other oatmeals—"steam-dried," "kiln-dried" and "partly cooked"—leave off just where H-O begins.

Subscriptions Free to

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly
Illustrated American (Weekly)
Truth (Weekly)
New England Magazine
Chatterbox (Monthly)
The American Kitchen Magazine
Home Magazine (Monthly)
all Binghamton, N. Y.

WITH COUPONS FROM THE

H.O.Co.'s Goods

IN THE TOILS OF LAW.

TWO YOUNG TRAMPS AND A BEER PEDDLER IN CITY COURT.

The Boys Told a Sympathetic Story and Were Released—John Scott Paid $6 for Being Obtrusive at the Railway Station.

Two "coal car commuters" and a beer peddler made up the trio of offenders that appeared before Judge DeMeza, this Monday, in the city court.

Walter Sosdoren and William Leahy were two lads from Philadelphia, aged fifteen and sixteen years respectively, who were picked up on one of the coal trains of the Jersey Central railroad, last evening, by the railroad detectives. Detective Blackford chased one of them off the train and captured him in the neighborhood of the station. Detective Dougherty pursued Sosdoren up Madison avenue and arrested him. The lads told the Judge when they were arraigned before him this morning that they had been out of work and in hard luck so they worked their way to New York to try to better their fortunes. They had not the look of the regular tramp and the Judge was lenient with them, suspending sentence.

Sergeant Kiely made the other arrest. John Scott, who is well known in this city as a beer peddler, was up at the North avenue station, last evening, in company with a friend. He lingered about the station until Kiely ordered him away, and then answered back in language of not the most choice kind. The officer thinks that he was drunk. As Scott declined to move and became still more abusive with his tongue, the officer placed him under arrest and he spent the night in the lockup.

When arraigned before the Judge this morning he was found guilty of being disorderly and was given his choice between a fine of $6 or twenty days in Elizabeth. He paid the fine.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Dec. 19, 1896.
Messrs. Ely Bros.:—I have used Ely's Cream Balm a number of years and find it works like a charm. It has cured me of the most obstinate case of cold in the head in less than 48 hours from the time I felt the cold coming on. I would not be without it. Respectfully yours, Fred'k Fries, 283 Hart street. Cream Balm is kept by all druggists. Full size 50 cents. Trial size 10 cents. We mail it. ELY BROS, 56 Warren street, New York City.

CAUSE OF DEEP REGRET.

RESOLUTIONS CONCERNING DEATH OF MISS ELIZABETH GINN.

Passed by the North Plainfield Board of Education Last Night—The Board Organized for the Ensuing Year.

The borough Board of Education met last Monday and organized by electing Samuel St. John McCutchen president and George F. Brown district clerk. Resolutions regarding the death of Miss Ginn, a recent teacher in the school, were drafted and adopted. No other business was transacted. The following are the resolutions:

The Board of Education of the borough of North Plainfield have learned with deep regret of the recent illness of Miss Elizabeth R. Ginn, a valued teacher in the schools, and of her sudden death on the morning of Thursday, March 11th, 1897.

Miss Ginn had been connected with the school for nearly fourteen years, and during all this period, until December last, she had had charge of the first primary grade, that important introduction to school work.

The creation in the school of a kindergarten grade in September last, made it possible to use Miss Ginn's abilities in more advanced work, and she was assigned to the fourth grade, which continued under her admirable care until her untimely death.

Miss Ginn was of well above capacity, wise judgment and tact.

In her handling and training of the very young, her unfailing patience, her cheerfulness and her power to stimulate her pupils to work, made her most effective.

When we consider these years that Miss Ginn has occupied so responsible a relation to the children of the borough, and that a majority of those children have been able feel by her character and association, the value and importance of her work here will appear.

Miss Ginn's marked characteristics were faithfulness, honesty and an untiring devotion; here has been ever a willing service well done.

Resolved, That the Board of Education of the borough of North Plainfield desire to record their estimate of Miss Ginn, and of the loss to the schools and community in her death, offer this poor tribute to her memory.

STATE WHIST CONGRESS.

All the New Jersey Crack Players to Enter the Contest.

The event of the year for the whist players of the state, the third annual Congress of the New Jersey Whist Association, will be held at the rooms of the Jersey City Club on Thursday evening, Friday evening and Saturday afternoon and evening. There will be three contests at the Congress, the principal one of which will be the contest for the Park Club trophy, offered by the Park Club of North Plainfield. The others are contests in progressive whist for four and pairs. On Thursday evening, the Park trophy contest will begin. On Friday evening, the semi finals in this contest will be played and also the progressive match for fours. Saturday afternoon and evening, the finals in the Park trophy contest will be played and also the progressive match for pairs.

The Park Club will be well represented there by its regular four and will take a prominent part in the contest for its own trophy. There are now fourteen clubs in the association and all will probably enter in that contest as well as in the others.

How's This?

We offer One Hundred Dollars Reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Props., Toledo, O.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions, and financially able to carry out any obligation made by their firm. West & Truax, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O. Walding Kinnan & Marvin, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Price 75c per bottle. Sold by all druggists. Testimonials free. Hall's family pills are the best.

Receiving New Support.

The Executive Committee of the Organized Aid Association are feeling much encouraged in their effort to promote co-operation in the charity work of the city. Individuals and organizations are making more and more use of its agency to find out as to the worthiness of people who appeal for aid. At the last executive meeting ten churches, circles of the King's Daughters, and other organizations were reported as having agreed to make an annual contribution to the support of the Association.

Purchased the Holly Farm.

David M. Kellogg, one of New York city's lawyers, has purchased the Holly farm, at Oak Tree, formerly occupied by Gen. Swenck, and is thoroughly remodeling it preparatory to making it his summer home. Gen. Swenk has rented one of the houses adjoining Campbell's Club House and is living there with his family.

Bilious Colic.

Persons who are subject to attacks of bilious colic will be pleased to know that prompt relief may be had by taking Chamberlain's Colic, Colera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and if taken as soon as the first indication of the disease appears, it will prevent the attack. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, Apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The fac simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

One Minute Late

It makes no difference whether you were one minute or one hour late, if you missed the train. Better get there on time, even if you have to wait. One hour early is better than one minute late. Delay costs thousands of lives each year. "Neglected colds" is the beginning of the story; and consumption is the end. Few remedies, and but little of them, cure in the beginning. Later, many remedies long continued, and tedious journeys, too frequently end in disappointment.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod liver Oil with the Hypophosphites soothes the cough, heals the inflamed membranes, and restores the parts to a healthy condition. This it doe promptly and permanently, if taken in time. One bottle does more now than five would accomplish later on. If weak, pale, and thin, Scott's Emulsion will give you strength, color, and flesh.

"Just as Good" is not SCOTT'S EMULSION.

50c. and $1.00 at all druggists.

SCOTT & BOWNE, New York.

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS

For all Bilious and Nervous Disorders. They purify the Blood and give HEALTHY action to the entire system.

Cure DYSPEPSIA, HEADACHE, CONSTIPATION and PIMPLES.

J. R. GRAEDEN,
General Superintendent.
H. P. BALDWIN,
General Passenger Agent.

JAS. M. DUNN,

Dealer in

GROCERIES, PROVISIONS, VEGETABLES,
FRUITS &c

GARDEN SEEDS

fresh and carefully selected.

224 PARK AVENUE,

OPPOSITE NORTH AVENUE.

Everything usually found in a first-class grocery.
Goods delivered free of charge.

Lewis B. Coddington,

[Successor to T. J. Carey.]

Furniture & Freight Express

Office—18 W. FRONT ST.
Large Covered Vans or Trucks. Goods delivered to any part of the U. S. Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges reasonable. P. O. Box 1. Piano moving a specialty

DYNAMITE!!!!

Rocks, Trees, Stumps, &c., removed. Wells Shot. W. O. WILLIAMS, 19 24 3m Babcock Building.

Sweet Peas.

Do not delay planting them, our own mixture contains only the choicest and latest varieties.

LAWN & GARDEN SEEDS and FERTILIZERS.
HARDWARE and HOUSEFURNISHINGS.

A. M. GRIFFEN,

119 East Front st.

Telephone Call, 6.

Central Railroad of New Jersey

Anthracite Coal from Shamokin and Mahanoy Coal Fields.

New York Bay Line. Foot of Liberty street. Commencing Monday, November 16th, 1896.

Leave Plainfield for New York, Foot of Liberty st., via Elizabeth, 6.34, 7.34, 8.34, 9.34, 10.34 a. m., 12.34, 1.34, 2.34, 3.34, 4.34, 5.34, 6.34, 7.34, 8.34, 9.34, 10.34 p. m., 12.34 night.

Leave Plainfield for New York, Foot of Liberty st., via Bound Brook, 6.34, 7.34, 8.34, 9.34, 10.34 a. m., 12.34, 1.34, 2.34, 3.34, 4.34, 5.34, 6.34, 7.34, 8.34, 9.34, 10.34 p. m., 12.34 night.

Leave Somerville at 6.34, 7.34, 8.34, 9.34, 10.34 a. m., 12.34, 1.34, 2.34, 3.34, 4.34, 5.34, 6.34, 7.34, 8.34, 9.34, 10.34 p. m., 12.34 night.

Leave Plainfield for Somerville at 6.34, 7.34, 8.34, 9.34, 10.34 a. m., 12.34, 1.34, 2.34, 3.34, 4.34, 5.34, 6.34, 7.34, 8.34, 9.34, 10.34 p. m., 12.34 night.

Leave Plainfield for Bound Brook at 6.34, 7.34, 8.34, 9.34, 10.34 a. m., 12.34, 1.34, 2.34, 3.34, 4.34, 5.34, 6.34, 7.34, 8.34, 9.34, 10.34 p. m., 12.34 night.

Leave Somerville for Plainfield at 6.34, 7.34, 8.34, 9.34, 10.34 a. m., 12.34, 1.34, 2.34, 3.34, 4.34, 5.34, 6.34, 7.34, 8.34, 9.34, 10.34 p. m., 12.34 night.

Leave Bound Brook for Plainfield at 6.34, 7.34, 8.34, 9.34, 10.34 a. m., 12.34, 1.34, 2.34, 3.34, 4.34, 5.34, 6.34, 7.34, 8.34, 9.34, 10.34 p. m., 12.34 night.

Leave Plainfield and Somerville for Bound Brook at 6.34, 7.34, 8.34, 9.34, 10.34 a. m., 12.34, 1.34, 2.34, 3.34, 4.34, 5.34, 6.34, 7.34, 8.34, 9.34, 10.34 p. m., 12.34 night.

Leave Plainfield and Somerville for Plainfield at 6.34, 7.34, 8.34, 9.34, 10.34 a. m., 12.34, 1.34, 2.34, 3.34, 4.34, 5.34, 6.34, 7.34, 8.34, 9.34, 10.34 p. m., 12.34 night.

For Plainfield and Somerville, Bonnie Brae, Dunellen, Middlesex, Bound Brook, Bridgewater, Raritan, Somerville, Manville, Millstone, Kingston, Princeton Junction, Trenton, Bordentown, Burlington, Mount Holly, Lumberton, Mount Holly, Hainesport, Mount Holly, Lumberton, Mount Holly, Hainesport, Mount Holly, Lumberton, Mount Holly, Hainesport

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

Celebrated for its great leavening strength and healthfulness. Assures the food against alumn and all forms of adulteration common to the cheap brands. Royal Baking Powder Co., New York.

ATTEMPT AT BURGLARY

FOUR MEN TRIED TO ENTER A HOUSE WITH A HISTORY.

The Harberger Residence on West Front Street the Scene of the Operations—Heard by Coachman and Frightened Off.

A supposed attempt to burglarize another Plainfield residence was frustrated last Sunday by the coachman who heard burglars and finally drove them away.

It was nearly 3 o'clock last evening and the coachman, named Sullivan, is employed about the residence of Mrs. J. S. Harberger, of West Front street. The house is that which is commonly known as Washington's Headquarters, as it said that the famous General and President of that name occupied a room in the house when he visited this section during the Revolutionary War. Sullivan was just about to start for church when he heard a noise in the rear of the house which sounded as if someone was rattling the shutters. The family was all out at the time. Remembering the stories of burglars that have been visiting the different Plainfield residences, he decided to investigate. As he walked about the house, four men ran from the shadow in the premises and down across the brook on Grant avenue. Two chose a path right through the water of the brook and the other two cut across the street and into an adjoining field. There was no sign where the strangers had forced their way through any of the window or blind fastenings.

The police were notified, but there is no clue as to the identity of the evening visitors.

SIXTY YEARS WEDDED.

LONG AND HAPPY COMPANIONSHIP OF A SCOTCH PLAINS COUPLE.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob V. Coles, of Scotch Plains, Celebrated Their Golden Wedding Ten Years Ago—It was a Pleasant Reunion

Ten years ago, or to be exact, on the twenty-second day of March, the writer, with the relatives and friends of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob V. Coles, celebrated their golden wedding at their home at Scotch Plains. Golden weddings are of rare occurrence, and happy and fortunate are those who survive to read that epoch in their married career, but when to this are added ten more years of life in comparative good health, the anniversary deserves to be especially marked.

Monday numerous congratulations were extended to the happy couple, and sincere wishes expressed for a long continuance of their health and happiness, in which the writer most heartily joins.

Jacob V. Coles and Christina B. Oriell were married at Rahway on March 23d, 1837, by Rev. Thomas L. Janeway. Mr. Coles is a son of the late Frazee Coles, of Scotch Plains, who died but a few years ago, at the ripe age of ninety-four, thus affording his son an example of long life which he is evidently striving to imitate, having attained the age of eighty-four. Mrs. Coles has reached eighty-one.

A short time after our friends married they took up their residence at Scotch Plains, in the same house they now occupy, which has been their home for fifty three years.

The family in a direct line have lived at the Plains for at least 150 to 175 years.

Among the relatives present outside of the immediate family were Hezekiah Hand and his wife and son, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Coles, and Louis B. Coles, their son, and family; and among the neighbors who paid their respects were Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Shepard, Miss Janie B. Field, George R. Nicholl and others.

—Packer, and Powlison & Jones, the two leading furniture dealers in the city, close their stores every evening at 6 o'clock.

—Cranford, N. J., March 1, 1897.—I have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla and Hood's Pills for rheumatism and headache with satisfactory results. My mother has been relieved of rheumatism by Hood's Sarsaparilla, and we find it an excellent spring medicine. Miss Minnie A. Neipp.

Hood's Pills are purely vegetable.

MYSTERY OF A TICKET.

FOUND IN THE DRIFTING LIFE BOAT WITH SIX PERISHED SOULS.

Evidently a Central Railroad Ticket Good From Plainfield to Netherwood or Fanwood—Was a Plainfielder Among Them?

It is just barely possible that one of the six persons who were found dead in the long life boat of the ill-fated French line steamship Ville de St. Nazaire, which foundered at sea and lost a large number of her passengers, was a Plainfielder. Those who have read the tragic details of this catastrophe of the sea will remember that on Sunday, March 14th, the schooner Hilda picked up the four survivors in the life boat and brought them to New York where they are now convalescing in a hospital. The boat with its dead occupants was allowed to drift in the sea by the officers of the Hilda. Last Sunday the life boat was sighted by the officers of the Cromwell line steamer Creole, plying between New York and New Orleans.

It was picked up on Sunday morning at 10:20 o'clock, about seventy-five miles north of Hatteras, full to the gunwales with water and containing the six bodies which were left in it when the Hilda sailed away with the survivors. The bodies were thrown overboard by the officers of the Creole, but the long boat was hauled aboard and brought to this city on the forward deck of the Creole.

A number of water-soaked articles were found in the boat and they were searched in the hope of finding a clue that might lead to the identy of the persons who perished, but there was only one thing found and that was a ticket. About half the lettering on it has been effaced by the water, but the other half can be made out quite easily. It is apparently a ticket issued by the Central Railroad of New Jersey, and as much of the lettering can be made out is as follows:

of N. J.
one passage id, N. J. to ed, N. J.
Baldwin
321

The ticket is evidently one from either Plainfield to Netherwood or Fanwood, but which it is impossible to say. A Press reporter saw Ticket Agent Nelson at the North avenue station this morning and enquired as to the possibility of determining who had bought the ticket. Mr. Nelson said that it would be impossible to tell as a portion of the number was obliterated and the last two letters of the terminal point to which the ticket was good are both indicative of Netherwood and Fanwood, and as it might be an excursion ticket it cannot be told at which station it was bought. Even if the printing had not been partially blotted out, it would probably be a fruitless effort to trace out its owner. In this, however, some information may be gained as to how the ticket came to be in the drifting boat.

REVIEWED PAST WORK.

Primary Teachers' Union Hold an Instructive Session.

The devotional exercises at the meeting of the Primary Teachers' Union Monday afternoon were conducted by Mrs. Pierce, and the lesson was taught by Mrs. Baker. The lesson was a review of the past quarter and Mrs. Baker had prepared a very pretty exercise illustrating the principal points of interest. Through the use of the exercise she showed that the lessons all pointed to Christ. Interspersing the various parts of the lesson, the members sang primary songs.

The topic "How to interest mothers?" was a very interesting part of the programme. Mrs. Powlison related the story of a mother who had visited a Sunday-school with her child and was in this way led to attend the school herself as a scholar.

FIFTY YEARS A PLAINFIELDER.

Death of Mrs. Sarah A. Oliver at the Age of Eighty-eight Years.

A life, full of kindliness and good works, came to a quiet end Monday, when Mrs. Sarah A. Oliver, one of the oldest residents of this city, passed away at her home at 145 East Sixth street. She was in her eighty-eighth year.

Mrs. Oliver was born near Brookiyn on August 14th, 1809. She was married to James Oliver in Brooklyn and moved to New Jersey about fifty years ago, when they purchased a house in North Plainfield. They afterwards purchased the property on East Sixth street and built a house on it. There Mrs. Oliver has lived since the death of her husband, thirty-seven years ago.

Mr. Oliver was one of the founders of Grace P. E. church and he worked with the congregation of that church in its earliest days and did much to place it on a firm foundation. Mrs. Oliver was a member of the First Presbyterian church and has been a regular attendant at the services there as long as her health permitted. She leaves a niece, Mrs. Sarah A. Hunt, who was with her at the last.

Mrs. James Bell, of Hasbrouck Heights, is the guest of Miss Maggie Vail, of 441 Orchard place.

A PITCHFORK WELCOME.

RAHWAY FARMERS BUNCOED BY A WELL DRESSED YOUNG MAN.

He Agreed to Send $20 Worth of Fertilizer For $4, and Received Pay in Advance—The Fertilizer Did Not Come.

Should any tall, well dressed young make his way into Rahway, he would be pitchforked unmercifully. The farmers there have formed a club called "The Buncoed Thirteen." The number will be fatal to the well-dressed young man, for one answering that description succeeded lately in buncoing thirteen unfortunate and unsuspecting farmers.

During the last two weeks, when the spring showers first enlivened the town and crops gave evidence of growth, the majority of these land tillers were in receipt of a handsomely engraved circular, printed on costly stationery. Such of them as could not read kept the circular as a souvenir, not knowing its import. A few days later the tall, well-dressed young man called, collected $4 each from thirteen land tillers and made his departure, after promising to carry out the agreement in the circular, which was to send in return for the money a lot of chemicals and the "best fertiliser in the world." The young man said he was the representative of the Eureka Fertilizing Company, and the farmers were delighted when he undertook for $4 to send each $20 worth of such valuable agricultural material.

The farmers have not yet received the goods paid for in advance, but still hope that the suave and stylish stranger will live up to his agreement; but lest he should not, they have joined in an offensive and defensive alliance and declare that should the well dressed stranger not materialize they will be revenged on the first well-dressed young man who enters the town.

The Town Hall gong, the fire bell, and every other bell in the town will be rung directly such a young man appears, and he will at once be surrounded by "The Buncoed Thirteen" and pitchforked.

REV. C. B. MITCHELL'S NEW FIELD.

The Talented Minister Now Located in Minneapolis.

The Minneapolis (Minn.) Times has the following to say about Rev. Chas. B. Mitchell, formerly pastor of the First Methodist church in this city:

"The Hennepin Avenue Methodist church has a permanent pastor at last. Rev. Charles B. Mitchell, of Kansas City, called to the pastorate of this Methodist church, took up his labors in this city yesterday, occupying the pulpit both morning and evening.

"Dr. Mitchell was at his best yesterday, and the first impression upon his new flock was a most favorable one. He is a very eloquent preacher, and his manner is exceedingly attractive. He is quite dramatic, almost theatrical, and moves rapidly about the platform while speaking. He is of very pleasing and prepossessing appearance, genial and affable, and his personality is winning and magnetic. He is one of the preachers who believes that a good joke at the right point is not out of place in the pulpit, and his sermons abound in witticisms and anecdotes."

DR. STEARNS' LAST MEETING.

Largely Attended Before His Departure to Japan For His Health.

The popularity of Rev. Dr. Stearns, who has been expounding the Sunday school lesson before his class at the Y. M. C. A. hall every other Monday evening, was very forcibly evidenced last night, when nearly four hundred persons gathered to hear this man of God's simple but convincing Bible-talks. He held the very closest attention of every person present from the moment he commenced, and at the close he asked Rev. Geo. C. Needham, who was present on the platform, to make the closing prayer, which he did, to the glory of God and to the spiritual help of all present. As Dr Stearns' health demands a rest from his labors, he will sail for Japan the latter part of the month and visit the missionaries at work in that country, through the efforts of the Bible classes now being taught by him. His successor, Rev. Geo. C. Needham, will continue to teach the class every Monday evening, until Dr. Stearns' return in the fall.

From Cripple Creek,

After the big fire in Cripple Creek, I took a very severe cold and tried many remedies without help, the cold only becoming more settled. After using three small bottles of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, both the cough and cold left me, and in this high altitude it takes a meritorious cough remedy to do any good.—G. B. Henderson, editor Daily Advertiser. For sale by T. S. Armstrong Apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

Congressman Dolliver, of Iowa, cousin of G. Q. Dolliver, of Fairview avenue, North Plainfield, received high praise in the New York papers this morning for the strong argument he made in favor of the Dingley tariff bill in the House of Representatives, yesterday.

Spring Medicine

Experience teaches the importance of special care of the health.

And fixed among the important principles of hygiene and health is the acknowledged necessity of a good Spring Medicine.

Just as firmly established by the experiences of millions of people, is the positive fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla is "far and away" the best blood purifier and spring medicine ever produced.

The necessity is found in the impure condition of the blood at this season, owing to the close confinement and breathing vitiated air in office, store, shop, house, schoolroom or factory, and the rich eating and drinking too rich and hearty food; late hours and social indulgences. With the blood thus thick and impure, the machinery of life grinds hard.

Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies, vitalizes and enriches the blood, builds up and strengthens the nerves and tones the stomach. It oils up the machinery of the whole body; the liver takes up its work anew, the kidneys resume activity, the ache goes out of the back, the bowels are regulated, the appetite restored, the food is relished and assimilated.

Don't wait till you are thoroughly sick before you begin to take a Spring Medicine.

Lock the door before the horse is stolen.

Take Hood's Sarsaparilla now as a preventive and it will pay you a thousand fold in health and strength through the coming summer.

"We always take several bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla in our family every spring as a tonic and blood purifier and we find that it overcomes that tired feeling gives new life, and keeps us well all summer." WM. BISHOP, 813 5th Ave., Peoria, Illinois.

Excellent Spring Medicine.

"For a number of years I have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla in the spring, not for any particular ailment, but on general principles that the system needs a tonic at this time, and I have always found Hood's Sarsaparilla a most excellent spring medicine." HAKON HAMMER, Engineer, Pottstown, Pennsylvania.

That Tired Feeling.

"I was troubled with that tired feeling all the spring. I purchased three bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and when I had taken about half of it I was feeling well again. I believe Hood's Sarsaparilla to be an excellent blood purifier and tonic." MISS ORA E. MORGAN, Bussy, Illinois.

Builds up the Health.

"We take Hood's Sarsaparilla as a tonic in the spring. Two of our children had tonsilitis and their blood was in a bad condition. Hood's Sarsaparilla built them up, and we have taken it again this spring with much benefit." MRS. P. H. CANON, Pleasant Lake, Mass.

N. B. If you decide to take Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to buy anything else instead. There is no substitute for Hood's.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1, six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass. The One True Blood Purifier.

W. B. CODINGTON,
Counsellor-at-Law,
Commissioner of Deeds, Master-in-chancery, Notary Public. Offices Corner of Park avenue and Second street.

SEEDS ... FOR THE ... Garden and Farm
Vegetable and Flower Seeds. All the newest and best varieties—quality unsurpassed. Send for Catalogue free.
WEEBER & DON, Seed Importers
114 Chambers St., New York City.

What a Lot of Eggs the hens lay when fed on Green Cut Bone. With a dozen hens

Mann's Green Bone Cutter

will pay for itself in a short time in the increase of eggs. $5 BUYS ONE. Sent on trial. 180 highest awards received. Catalogue free if you name this paper. F. W. MANN CO., Milford, Mass.

3 5 4 9 10 11 12—7 mos.

SAVED

After years of suffering. It has at last been proven beyond a doubt that is a positive remedy for local diseases which are the result of cold and climatic changes. Cold in the Head, Hay Fever,

NASALENE

CATARRH,

Deafness, (caused by catarrh), are instantly relieved.

It is pleasant to use, convenient to carry. Price, 50c. and $1, at all druggists.

U. V. BAGE, Warden of Sing Sing, says: "Nasalene is very beneficial."

HUNTER MEDICAL CO.,
56 E. 21st Street, N. Y.

WANTS AND OFFERS.

BY women, each with an infant or young child, situations in the country (general housework, plain cooking, etc.). Small wages expected. Railroad fare paid by Association. Apply State Charities Aid Association, 105 East Twenty-Second street, New York City. 2 18 1mo

DIED.

GINN—In this city, March 18, 1897, Elizabeth R. Ginn.

RANDOLPH—In this city, March 17, 1897, Matthew B. Randolph, aged 82 years.

VAIL—At Locust Grove N. J., March 16, 1897, Mary Vail, aged 84 years.

TRAYNOR—In this city, March 2nd, 1897, Thomas Traynor, aged 9 years, 10 months and 5 days.

OLIVER—In this city, March 2nd, 1897, Sarah Oliver, aged 87 years, 7 months and 8 days.

POULTRY We keep everything in the POULTRY LINE, Feeding Yards, Incubators, Live Stock, Brooders—anything—it's our business. Let us send you our free illustrated catalogue—it's free for the asking. Reliable Poultry Supplies.
Excelsior Wire & Poultry Supply Co.
32 Vesey Street, New York City.

WANTED by large concern a gentleman of influence and social standing, who has large circle of friends and ability to sell BICYCLES in this town and vicinity. Experience not required. Genteel occupation, not to conflict with other business. Steady and lucrative remuneration to right party. Replies strictly confidential. Address, P. O. Box 1981, New York City

PATENTS
CAVEATS, TRADE MARKS & COPYRIGHTS.
CAN I OBTAIN A PATENT? For a prompt answer and an honest opinion, write to MUNN & CO., who have had nearly fifty years' experience in the patent business. Communications strictly confidential. A Handbook of Information concerning Patents and how to obtain them sent free. Also a catalogue of mechanical and scientific books sent free. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice in the Scientific American, and thus are brought widely before the public without cost to the inventor. This splendid paper, issued weekly, elegantly illustrated, has by far the largest circulation of any scientific work in the world. $3 a year. Sample copy sent free. Building Edition, monthly, $2.50 a year. Single copies, 25 cents. Every number contains beautiful plates, in colors, and photographs of new houses, with plans, enabling builders to show the latest designs and secure contracts. Address MUNN & CO., NEW YORK, 361 BROADWAY.

WANTED—SALESMEN
We want one or two men in each County to take orders for Nursery Stock, and are willing to pay a salary or commission. We agree to EMPLOY AND PAY for all our time, and GIVE EXCLUSIVE TERRITORY. Nothing discouraging. Pay weekly. Outfit and particulars FREE. We have a fine lot of SEED POTATOES. GIVE US A TRIAL.
THE HAWKS NURSERY COMPANY,
ROCHESTER, N. Y. 3 27 4m

DIME
Savings Institution,
Of Plainfield, N. J.,
Is now receiving deposits payable on demand with interest, allowed on all sums from $5 to $3,000.
JOHN W. MURRAY, President,
J. FRANK HUBBARD, Vice-President
J. G. HUBBARD, Treasurer.
Money deposited on or before January tenth will draw interest from the first.

GEORGE W. DAY,
General Auctioneer.
Sales of Personal Property solicited. P. O. Box 123, Dunellen, N. J., or address in care of Constitutionalist. Terms reasonable

Townsend's
Marble and Granite Works,
30
Somerset st., North Plainfield.
If you have not engraved your work I should be pleased to call on it for you.
I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not employ scrapers that will enable me to come up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.
In regard to prices I am pleased to be enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the purchaser, of the combination generally paid to agents.
I am under very small expense in rooming my stock and do my own doing the largest portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work in the cemeteries in this neighborhood, that Good Work and Good Material, at Reasonable Prices, is a standing advertisement for me, which will tend to build up my trade, and feels to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.
Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,
J. E. TOWNSEND, Manager.
Branch yard, Westfield, N. J.

CARNEY BROS.,
MADISON AVENUE,
Between Front and Second streets.
Tinners,
Plumbers
Gas Fitters,
Grates and bricks for all kinds of stoves can be found here at Jobbers' prices. Bring your tinware mending to us. The best tinners, the best plumbers, and the best gas-fitters in this section. We use none but the very best of materials, and our work always gives satisfaction. Keys of all kinds are made here. Tinware made to order. Ranges, brick and portable furnaces. Sanitary plumbing.

Wm. A. Woodruff,
Fire and Life
INSURANCE AGENT,
OFFICE,
Corner Front St. and Park Avenue,
Plainfield, N. J.
Real Estate for Sale and Exchange. Money to Loan on Approve Security.

Sanitary Plumbing,
Brick and Portable Furnace
Gas Fitting, Tin Roofing,
Etc., Etc., Etc.
I am prepared to do any of the above branches in strictly first-class sanitary and workmanship manner.
Having associated myself with the Master Members Association of New York City, I employ none but first-class mechanics and non-union men. I believe in every man running his own business, at all times and in all cases.
D. W. LITTELL,
No. 112 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J.

ALBERT HEDDEN
Livery & Boarding Stables
FOURTH ST.,
between Watchung and Park avenues. First-class Livery. Horses boarded by week or month. Telephone call, No. 114.

A. WOLFF,
Manufacturer of
CIGARS,
And dealer in all kinds of Smoking and Chewing Tobacco, and smokers' articles, has removed from 233 W. Front street to 241 West Front street, one floor east of Madison avenue and solicits the patronage of his friends and the public generally.

P. P. VanArsdale,
PIANO TUNER.
Instruments put in thorough order. Terms reasonable. Pianos and organs for sale and to let. Orders by postal, P. O. box 180, or left at Willetts' shoe store, No. 107 Park avenue, will receive prompt attention. Residence 301 E. Front street, corner Elm street. 9jly1

WANTED—AN IDEA Who can think of some simple thing to patent? Protect your ideas; they may bring you wealth. Write JOHN WEDDERBURN & CO., Patent Attorneys, Washington, D. C., for their $1,800 prize offer.

FRAZER
AXLE GREASE Best in the World
If Dealers in your town do not keep it, send 25 cents and we will send a box by express, prepaid. Sold by dealers everywhere. Ask for it. Take no imitation. 1 lb. trial box, 25 cts. FOR SALE BY ALL DEALERS.

E. B. MAYNARD,
PRACTICAL
BARBER AND
HAIR DRESSER,
204 PARK AVE.
Ladies' and Children's Hair Cutting done at their residence. Shaving, Shampooing, etc., satisfactorily performed. 12fy1

Woolston & Buckle,
PAINTERS.
Wall Papers, Painters' Supplies
141-145 North avenue.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE.
PATENTS
TRADE MARKS, DESIGNS, COPYRIGHTS &c.
Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. Oldest agency for securing patents. We have a Washington office. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice in the
SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN,
beautifully illustrated, largest circulation of any scientific journal. Weekly, $3.00 a year; $1.50 six months. Specimen copies and HAND BOOK ON PATENTS sent free. Address
MUNN & CO.,
361 Broadway, New York.

THE ELEVENTH HOUR

When Katherine threw open the shutters that morning a flood of yellow sunlight greeted her, and the subtle fragrance of many flowers laden with dew.

It was certainly a fine morning, for Katherine, Nature's disciple, though she was, at that, had to admit its beauty it still lacked something which cannot be defined in mere words and is only obvious to the senses through the heart.

She had felt it before her eyes unclosed on her pillow; before she was fairly awake, and before memory and reality had come back to her. Now, as she looked gravely out across the garden and the river and the clustering roofs beyond, she wondered vaguely if Jack's going away had occasioned this gnawing restlessness and dissatisfaction with which she seemed to view all things past, present and future.

She would miss Jack—miss his rare, sweet smile, his restful voice, his pleasant companionship.

Never since their earliest childhood had they been separated longer than a few months at a time. He had always been her friend, her comrade. Having no brothers of her own, he had stood to her rather in the light of this relation. It had never occurred to her that Jack might regard her with other than brotherly affection. Therefore, when he one day asked her suddenly to marry him, and had told her how necessary she was to his happiness, she had been startled, at first, then quite inclined to treat the matter as a joke.

It was a long time before she could understand that he was terribly in earnest. Grieved beyond expression, she had told him frankly that she could not marry him because she did not think she cared for him as she ought to care for the man she married. And Jack, putting all thought of self out of the question, forebore to press his suit further, and begged that in the future she would regard him exactly as she had done in the past.

But this was impossible. Each felt a restraint in the presence of the other that it was useless to try to conceal. Jack felt that he could not go on seeing her daily, knowing that she was not for him, so the evening before the morning on which my story opens he had come to tell her that he was going away—had been sent as staff correspondent to Japan, and that it was quite possible they might not meet again for years. He himself was known to for some time, and somehow he could not bear to tell her until the last. He should leave the city on the morrow. His steamer sailed the day after. And Katherine could say nothing except to wish him God speed and to return, trying with all her might to keep the tears out of her eyes and voice.

As she turned from the window her glance fell upon his photograph, framed and standing on her dressing-table. She took it up and looked at it long and earnestly. The frank, smiling eyes, the firm chin, the tender mouth—there was no trace of weakness or irresolution in them all.

She put the photograph suddenly down as a great wave of dull, aching loneliness swept over her.

An hour later she surprised her family by appearing at the breakfast table gowned and bonneted for a journey.

"I am going to spend the day with Aunt Patience," she explained, smiling. "I have neglected her quite too long."

Aunt Patience was really not aunt to Katherine at all, but one of those delightful old ladies to whom people are always anxious to claim relationship. She lived in the country, hardly twenty miles distant, with her brother, who, like herself, had never married.

When Katherine alighted at the country station of Brightwood the summer day was already well advanced, and she had no desire in setting out for her destination. As she walked along the shady lane and felt the crisp grass beneath her feet and smelled the fresh, sweet odor blown from wood and field, her heart lightened exceedingly.

Aunt Patience had seen her coming up the little path that led from the gate, and met her at the door with a kiss and a hearty welcome.

"Dear child, how bonny you are! How the sight of you gladdens my old eyes! I've been lonely for this long while lest my dearv should forget me among all of her fine friends."

"As if I could ever do that!" Katherine replied, with moistened eyes.

"Well, well," said she, "This is a right joyful day for me to have both my precious children again—"

"Both!" echoed Katherine, in surprise.

They had crossed the little entry and were entering the best room. A tall figure came forward from the window with hands outstretched.

"Well, Katherine!" Jack said, looking down at her with happy eyes.

It was quite a moment before she found her voice sufficiently to speak.

"Why, how is this? I thought you were going away to-day?"

"And so I am; but of course not without bidding Aunt Patience good-by. If you had been able to take an earlier train, Katherine, we might have come down together. You aren't sorry that I'm here?" he asked presently, as Aunt Patience left the room for an instant.

"Sorry! How could I be that?" And Katherine's eyes met his frankly.

He turned away with a quick drawn breath.

"Ah, Katherine, Katherine!" he said reproachfully. "Your words mean so much and your eyes so little."

Fortunately for both Aunt Patience returned just then. The dear old lady was in her gayest and most reminiscent mood. She recalled so many of Jack's youthful pranks that he felt, as he said, quite like a boy again. It was wonderful how she remembered things long since escaped from the minds of the participants themselves—little trivial happenings which revealed to Katherine how large a place she and Jack had filled in that gentle, colorless life.

Aunt Patience would have none of Katherine's proffered assistance in the preparation of the noonday meal.

"No, no, child! 'Tis little enough you know about such things. You would only soil your pretty hands, and besides, you must talk to Jack. It may be a weary long day ere you see each other again."

At the stroke of noon she came out upon the porch, where the two were seated.

"The dinner horn!" cried Katherine, clapping her hands gleefully.

"Toot—toot—too—t!" Katherine blew with a will.

"Ah, I knew the minute I heerd the horn it warn't Patience a blowing of it!" the little, bent, kindly-eyed maid said, as she took Katherine's soft hands in his hard brown ones. "How air ye, Katherine? But I needn't to ask. You're as pretty and sweet as one of Patience's pinks there. And John, too—well, well!"

Uncle Dan was quite overcome with surprise and delight.

"So you're going to Japan, eh? Ain't that a rather sudden move for ye? I'll wager you'll wish yourself back inside of three days of your landing."

"I've no doubt of it, sir," Jack answered, looking anywhere but at Katherine, who sat opposite him at the small round table.

"Very foolish in him, is it not?" she said, trying to speak as naturally as was possible under the circumstances.

"These boys—these boys! Soon's ever they get full grown they needs must be scampering off to see new sights and new countries, as if their own warn't good enough for them! I'd like to know," turning to John, "if we'd better settle down like a sensible creature, I'd like to know? Here's Katherine—what's the matter with Katherine, John?"

Katherine flushed hotly.

"Can't agree, Uncle Dan," she laughed.

"Speak for yourself, Katherine," Jack said in a low direct tone.

Jack's train left at five, and in the course of the afternoon he coaxed Katherine to visit with him those scenes in which they had a common and very tender interest. There was one spot especially—a place by the brook where a willow drooped its graceful boughs almost to the surface of the restless, sparkling water. The willow had been a tender sapling in the days when they played at housekeeping beneath its branches.

Katherine sat down on the soft turf and drew her hand lingeringly through the clear, cool water. Recollection lent a sweet gravity to her pale face, and Jack, watching her with his whole tender, aching heart in his eyes, thought he had never seen her look so lovely.

"Do you suppose, Katherine," he asked at last in an odd, low voice, "that you will ever come here after I am gone?"

She was silent.

"I should like to know that you would," he went on wistfully, "for old times' sake, if for nothing more."

She rose suddenly to her feet, flirting the drops of water from her hand with a little, impatient movement. In the light that sifted through the quivering green leaves she looked quite pale.

Jack caught her by the shoulders.

"Tell me Katherine," he cried passionately, "shall you?"

She swung loose from him, laughing a little—faintly.

"Shall I—come, do you mean? Oh, yes, I suppose so! I never visit Aunt Patience without strolling down here, you know. I like the water and the willow and the—quiet."

Jack set his teeth hard, and turning, began to walk silently at her side. Katherine felt the silence keenly.

In the distance the whistle of an approaching train sounded shrilly. He stopped with a dismayed exclamation.

"It can't be possible—but yes, it is—it is my train!" He glanced at his watch. "We lingered too long under the willow, Katherine. I shall have barely time to bid Aunt Patience good-bye now."

Katherine put her hand to her throat. Her lips moved vainly in an effort to speak. Then a low sob burst from them.

"Katherine, my dear, my dear, do you really care like this? But I must go—there's my train!"

He caught her hands hard. Then of a sudden her voice came back to her. She cried out piteously—

"Oh, I can't let you go—I can't live without you, Jack—Jack, stay until—I can go, too!"

Aunt Patience was frantically beckoning to them from the porch as they leisurely approached the house, hand in hand. The train was just gilding out of the station.

"Jack," she called, as soon as they were within speaking distance, "there goes your train! It's too bad! I tried to warn you in time, but—"

Something in the young people's faces as they drew nearer gave her a suspicion of the truth.

"Surely you ain't going?" she said in slow wonder.

"Well, no—at least not until I can take Katherine with me. You see I've just made a promise to that effect, and—congratulate me, Aunt Patience! I'm the happiest man alive, and she is—"

"The happiest woman," finished Katherine, softly.

TAMMANY IN SADDLE

HOPES TO RECOVER NEW YOR FROM THE REFORMERS.

The Tiger Is Versatile, and Among Othe Things Expects a Reaction to Set in I Its Favor as It Did in 1894—Wheel Within Wheels.

It has been noted that Tammany, with characteristic energy, has already begun its campaign for the Mayorality of Greater New York, and is unfolding a plan of attack on the Reformers, who hope for four years more to keep control of the city received from Tammany three years ago.

The organization has entered upon the campaign with almost as much confidence in victory as it felt in 1892, when it had no opposition except the feeble fight put up by the Republican machine. It is of interest to understand upon what this confidence is based. It is based upon the belief that a "reaction" is due. Signs of this reaction have been shown in the town elections throughout the state. It cannot impossible to beat Tammany twice in succession. Even after its crushing defeat in 1894, Tammany won in the local election the following year; and last November, in spite of the big Sound Money Democratic revolt, it rolled up 155,000 votes for Bryan. It has always been difficult to arouse the citizens of New York to a supreme effort for reform city administration, and after having aroused them once, it seems impossible to get them to make another supreme effort in the next Mayoralty election. It is true that the recently organized "Citizen's Union" exhibits a gratifying determination on the part of the Municipal Reformers to make an early start this year, but there are special reasons, to be explained, why Tammany believes this movement will not have the force and momentum of the Committee of Seventy campaign of 1894. In other words, its leaders believe that the political pendulum is swinging its way this year, and that it will reap the benefit of all the discontent, the various petty hardships, and the personal disappointments resulting from the Strong Administration. In a local election few people have the courage and public spirit to rise superior to their private interests. Even though the administration, as a whole, may have benefited the city, if it has hurt any personal interest, that personal interest will work and vote against it, independent of any other consideration. And the Strong Administration has tread upon the toes of many small personal interests, which, in the aggregate, represent a small army of discontent and enmity. If there is any one achievement of the administration which may be called, without exception, signally successful, it has been in the cleaning of streets. In fact, even if Tammany elects the next Mayor, it will either retain Colonel Waring in office or maintain his methods. But, nevertheless, Colonel Waring has undoubtedly lost many votes for reform at the coming election. Every grocer, baker and small merchant who formerly stabled his truck in the street, but who has been obliged by Colonel Waring to store it elsewhere in order to clear the streets of encumbrances, will probably vote against "reform," and their name is legion. The city as a whole is benefited by this change which is true. Consequently, but thousands of small merchants are suffering in pocket because they can no longer use the streets as storage places for their private property. In some of the other departments it must be confessed that there has been a failure. There have been scandals in the Fire Department, and the condition of things in the Police Department is such that even Mayor Strong himself says that is a shame and a disgrace. However, the Strong Administration has resulted in a decrease in taxes, with no decrease in rate of property assessments. As Strong is a Republican, such acts of the Republican party in the state as have come to the surface and injury will be used by Tammany to its advantage in a fight against any combination that may be formed against it in the city election. Thus, every person who has been injured by the Raines law, it is claimed, will vote for Tammany. Moreover, there are a number of leading men who have taken part in the non-partisan or bipartisan movements for municipal reform who are beginning to be convinced that the city has been sold or done, there can be no really effective city government except through parties, and that non-partisanship is a dream. Ex-Mayor Grace, who aided materially in electing Strong, has expressed himself plainly to this effect. It is significant in this connection that the new charter has been drafted on the principle of party government. It may be asked why, if there is any basis of reality in Tammany's confidence of victory in the Greater New York election, Senator Platt should be so determined to create the Greater New York. Some of the Republicans up the state have been asking this question, and doubting the wisdom of passing the charter. But Senator Platt may hold to Edward Lauterbach's expressed view that the reaction against "reform" in municipal government will not set in favor of Tammany, but in favor of the Republican machine organization. Besides, the charter has been so constructed that even if Tammany should elect its candidate for Mayor, the Republicans would be pretty certain to obtain an important minority representation in the Municipal Assembly and perhaps control of one or two of the boroughs.—Philadelphia Ledger.

HOW TO QUIET THE BABY.

The Best Way Is to Gently Shut Off an Infant's Breath.

An infallible method for quieting a crying baby probably will never be discovered.

Some entirely new methods have recently been introduced in some of the New York hospitals which prove successful in a larger percentage of cases than the old-fashioned ways.

The new scientific method for quieting crying babies proceeds, upon an entirely new principle. It disregards the cause or source of irritation, but on the other hand tries to train the baby to practise self-control.

The scientific method is based upon the theory that the average baby is strong enough to control itself in all but cases of very severe illness. It is, incidentally, very much more dignified and entails far less effort than the attempts most people make to quiet their children. The old plans of trying to catch the baby's attention by standing on one's head and by similar violent methods are quite discarded.

Instead, as soon as the child cries the nurse catches it up, and, holding it gently, places her hand over its mouth and nose so that it cannot breathe. The crying will obviously soon cease. It is important, however, not be held very tightly over the face, since the object is merely to produce a slight smothering. As soon as the crying ceases the hand is removed. If the crying recommences, as it is very likely to do, the same operation is instantly repeated. This is continued until the baby imagines that the more or less painful stoppages of the breath are caused by its own efforts to scream. As soon as it grasps this idea it is careful to keep quiet. It is claimed that the plan works like a charm, and that wonderful self-control is exhibited by infants treated in this way, even when less than three months old.—New York World.

Origin of the Three Gold Balls.

People who are compelled to go to their "Uncle" for temporary advances on personal property have often speculated as to the origin and significance of the three balls which are the most conspicuous exterior adornments of the establishments appertaining to the aforesaid "Uncle." The pawnbroker's sign was, originally, the arms of the famous family of the Medici in Italy, whose ancestor was a physician and adopted as his device three pills. The Medici became bankers and money lenders, and amassed enormous wealth from lending money at the high rates of interest prevailing in their time. When banks were established in other cities than Florence, the three balls or three suspended balls became the mark of a bank, and the practice spread into France, Spain and Germany. By and by, however, as this sign was adopted by a lower class of money lenders, who made advances on personal property, it fell into disrepute among the higher grade of financiers, and, being dropped by the bankers, was still continued by the lower class, and finally was restricted entirely to such money lenders as took pledges as security for loans.—St. Louis Democrat.

He Was Made a Sergeant.

A pretty story, savoring of the romantic, is told in the French press about the kaiser. Recently his majesty went to the Berlin barracks alone. The corporal on guard recognized the kaiser immediately, and saluted him. The kaiser was pleased, and, approaching the soldier, said: "Why do you look so sad, corporal?" The corporal did not reply. The emperor then asked if he was disappointed in love. At this the corporal found his tongue, and told him that he wished to marry Marguerite, the daughter of his sergeant-major, but that her father would not give his consent until he became a sergeant. "And do you love her very much?" asked the kaiser, in a tone very unlike the kaiser. "Then," said the emperor, "go and tell your future father-in-law that William II. makes you a sergeant."

He Took Advice.

M. du Maurier, his son tells us, had no idea of appropriateness in dress, and did not know one fashion from another. "My sisters," said Mr. du Maurier, "looked to it that he got the right things in his pictures. He would come home sometimes and sketch something which had attracted him in a passer-by on the street. Often it would be some impossibly queer arrangement, and my sisters would protest: 'Why, father, you mustn't use that in Punch. Nobody wears those things now; they are dreadfully old-fashioned,' and he would give in immediately to what he recognized as their superior judgment." This will be a blow to the hundreds of people who modeled their dress upon that Du Maurier's men and women. His fashions, however, were good for his family saw to it that they should be.

A Bostonian's Neglected Education.

"Browning, dear," said Mrs. Emerson to her husband, "what is a cutaneous pastime?"

"A cutaneous pastime, love? I never heard of such a thing."

"Well, I heard two men on the street car talking, and one of them spoke of a skin game."—Brooklyn Life.

Didn't Have to Walk.

Banks—"And because you couldn't find a penny to pay the fare, did the conductor make you get off and walk?"

Jenkins—"No, he only made me get off; I could have sat on the road all day if I'd wanted to."—From the Sketch.

A NEW JOURNALISM.

NOTHING SO GREAT AS TO PHASE RETAILERS OF SENSATIONALISM.

President Harrison's Opportunity to Become a Reporter at $1,000 a Day—A Woman Tells of Her Efforts to Do Original Work for New York Newspapers.

A woman correspondent writing from New York to the London News entertainingly gives an insight into the methods of New Journalism, as it is practiced by the World and Journal originators, and hundreds of small imitators throughout the country:

The path of glory that leads elsewhere but to the grave, here leads as inevitably into journalism. Ex-President Harrison was offered $1,000 a day by a New York paper to report the proceedings of the last National Republican convention. William Jennings Bryan, after a term in Congress, and being defeated for the Presidency, is considering the proposition to come to Washington as the special correspondent of a New York paper. In the universality of its aim and scope, journalism in the United States has left very little to the exclusive use of the dime museum.

During the past summer, Julian Hawthorne, the novelist, figured in New York journalism as a society reporter at Newport and Bar Harbor; Edgar Saltus, the philosopher of negation, is winning new laurels as a police reporter in New York, and Stephen Crane, with truly American enterprise in journalism, after first getting himself into the police court, engaged his genius as a police court reporter.

Any hint of the characteristics of American journalism would be incomplete that failed to include a notion of the part women played in it.

While the New Woman has crowded into clubs, usurping the places of men, she has fairly bloomered journalism in the United States. She has given it a sex. There is a distinct woman-journalism prevailing in this country which compasses a line of work not done by men, not possible to be done by them, since its whole value adheres to the sex it represents. This originated in New York with certain productions of a sensational character, done by a woman, which while gaining additional value from the feminine touch it gives, still retained some of the elements of legitimate journalism. It was imitated all over the country, and finally developed into a pure exhibition of sex—a hippodrome of the abnormal woman. The most successful of these departments of the Press in America are frequently unable to write a grammatical paragraph; they are "journalists" in the exercise of extraordinary physical age, or by virtue of an application of principles of psychology impossible for a man to assume. A record of their most brilliant "journalistic" achievements would include going down in a diving-bell to the bottom of the sea; driving a fire engine; feigning pregnancy to expose fraudulent medical practice among the medical profession; feigning drunkenness on the street in order to get committed to jail to expose the experiences of a woman behind the bars; assisting to arrest a murderer; acting with the police in New York harbor; spending a night in a tomb; riding one among seven men on an eight-manned wheel; wrestling with the trainers of professional prizefighters, etc.

The fine gradations of value in this work I have personally tested.

I undertook for one of the New York dailies to acquire the experience of a woman seeking a place in the Government at Washington. I solicited office from the New York Senators, the members of Congress, from all the Cabinet officials and from President Cleveland himself. The editor on receipt of this story telegraphed me his satisfaction, and I looked for the next Sunday's paper, expecting to figure as the "heroine." But alas for the greatness of the American lady journalist, I appeared as a mere sideshow, while the honors of the day were carried off by the production of another more brilliant lady journalist, who had dances, fights and gymnastics, and entering the circus, ring, had done an act in the lion's den. The other woman was paid $100 for her feat, while I was paid only $75.

Grimly determined to beat lion-taming, if I had it really in me to be a journalist, I set forth to acquire the experience of a lobbyist in Congress. Posing as the representative of a wealthy business concern, I endeavored to "lobby" an amendment to the tariff at the time the Wilson bill was before the Senate. By spending some money and promising a great deal more, I succeeded in so far influencing legislation as to have an amendment to the tariff involving the interests of the concern I represented, to the extent of $2,000 a year introduced in the Senate, and to receive the assurance of a distinguished Senator that he would "see it through" in committee, when in the order of the procedure of the bill that item of the tariff should be reached. This necessarily would not be for two months, so I concluded my story with a recital of these achievements, posted it to New York, and waited for the reward and applause I expected would immediately follow. Instead my chief editor wired me: "I fail to see that you have accomplished anything. Force Senate to pass amendment at once."

Force the United States Senate—well, I had never driven a fire engine, "knocked out" a prize fighter, run down a murderer—indeed, I had never done any truly successful newspaper work, and right there I gave up trying. I have since lived humbly by my pen, not striving longer to realize the glorious possibilities of a woman's nerve or pen in journalism.

GAGE AND THE INTERVIEWER.

Circumstances Under Which the Treasury Secretary Would Grant Them.

Frank H. Brooks, a Chicago newspaper man, relates a story of a friend's experiment of his, in which Lyman J. Gage figures. It fell to his lot to pet to Mr. Gage, C. T. Yerkes, Marshall Field and Samuel Allerton this question: "If you should suddenly lose every dollar of your property, find yourself deprived of credit, health and friends, and could not get work anywhere, what would you do?"

To this question Mr. Gage answered, "I should hunt up a job, of course."

"But suppose nobody would give you a job?" it was suggested.

"Well, that is hardly possible, I guess, and that it is—why, in that case, I'd get a shovel and clean sidewalks or set up a peanut stand, or do something like that," Mr. Gage replied, confidently.

"But, Mr. Gage, suppose you hadn't even capital enough to buy a shovel or a spot of peanuts, what then?"

"Well, then, I suppose," said Mr. Gage, thoughtfully, "I'd have to go on the streets."

"And suppose, again, nobody would give you a cent, same as thousands are refused on the streets every night?"

Here Mr. Gage waved his hand impatiently and remarked: "Oh, well, in that case I suppose I would steal, and you take the editor who gave you this fool assignment that I believe he would, too, under the same circumstances."

CORNELIUS N. BLISS.

New York's Member of President Mc-Kinley's Cabinet.

Cornelius N. Bliss is a member of the firm of Bliss, Fabyan & Co., in Dover street, representing the greatest cotton mills in New England.

Mr. Bliss has had charge of the party funds in the past two national campaigns, and that part of the work has been left entirely to his discretion. Chairman of the committees have frequently declared his services to be invaluable. He is as shrewd a financier as he is dry goods merchant.

In state politics Mr. Bliss has been one of the leaders of the Union League faction that has vigorously opposed Mr. Platt's machine domination. Despite this fact there is said to be cordial relations between the two. Mr. Platt has expressed satisfaction with Mr. Bliss as a Cabinet appointment.

[illegible] TW[illegible]PR[illegible]TS.

Henry Barnard, the Great Educator, a Man and Most of Them.

The life [illegible] of our public school system [illegible]gely due to the energy and perseverance of Mr. Barnard. He began working to improve it when he was a member of the Legislature from 1837 to 1840, when he suggested the passage of an act providing for the recording of school statistics and their publication by the Comptroller. This was followed by other acts, among others providing for the supervision of common schools and one for the building of better schoolhouses.

In 1843 he visited the schools in every State in the Union, and spoke on education before several associations. He made the acquaintance of the leading teachers in sixty American cities, and corresponded with them for years after.

From 1830 to 1842 he was Secretary of the Connecticut Board of School Commissioners; from 1842 to 1849 he was School Commissioner for Rhode Island; from 1850 to 1854 Superintendent of Connecticut State Schools and from 1857 to 1859 President of the University of Wisconsin. Then until 1867 he was busy writing on educational subjects, particularly in his Journal of Education, which he had established in 1855. He also founded in 1866 the American Library of Schools and Education, and began to agitate for the establishment of Education.

James A. Garfield was among the first to endorse Mr. Barnard's work. He introduced a bill in Congress to effect its passage, and Mr. Barnard's talked President Johnson into signing it. President Grant did more than that. He appointed Mr. Barnard Commissioner of Education.

Through the general interest which from the beginning of his career he excited in his work, Mr. Barnard was brought into intimate relations with many public men. He knew personally every President of the United States except the first three, and most of them he was on terms of heartiest friendship.—New York Press.

Intermittent Speech.

Some days he can talk; some days he cannot. Such is the predicament of Theodore Heinze, a railroad employe in Argentine, who was one of the strangest that has ever come under the notice of the local medical profession for some time. Heinze's troubles are caused from a stroke of paralysis, sustained last March, by just why he can talk plainly on some days, while on other days he is as dumb as an oyster, the doctors are at a loss to understand.—Kansas City Times.

BENEAH DE ORANGE BLOSSOM.

Lived Miss Jane one day in May.
Benead de orange blossom;
Jined her, but 'twus jest in play.
Benead de orange blossom;
Her blushed at frust and den looked shy,
But she de fire flashed from her eye;
Dat's me, but I said goodby,
Benead de orange blossom.

Lived Miss Jane an odder day.
Benead de orange blossom;
Seen in de winter, not in May.
Benead de orange blossom;
Observe my heart was swelled wid pride,
But 'low Miss Jane's got by my side;
So she do bride, an' she do bride,
Benead de orange blossom.
—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

THE SECRETARY.

Henry Markham, M. P., had accepted an invitation from his political friend, Sir George Howard, to his country house. As the visit was more political than private, Mr. Markham thought his private and political secretary, John Warrington, with him. An important measure was before the House, and a division was expected to take place immediately. Sir George represented Ind, Mr. Markham capital, and Warrington knew more about both than either. Beside, Mr. Markham was vivaciously engaged on a work dealing with bimetallism. Warrington had ideas on the subject, and Mr. Markham believed in these so far that he had decided to put his own ideas to them.

"Warrington," he explained to Sir George, "is a deficed clever fellow. He works up my speeches. You see, I am very busy, and upon my soul, I could not do them better myself."

This statement was scrupulously true. Mr. Markham and his secretary achieved immediate and merited unpopularity with Sir George Howard's household and guests. Markham was ignorant, ill-bred and arrogant. The secretary was a man of undoubted natural gifts—he was highly educated and had a fine literary style—but he was lacking in the savoir-vivre that makes civilization worth while. A young character, he wanted that premental adjustment necessary to those who look on life as it is, and leave the conduct of life as it ought to be to remote posterity. Warrington's apparent indifference to his own and chief's social failure was pure affectation. He was miserable, and tried to disguise his emotion by an overdone haughtiness, and a preposterous interest in bimetallism. He worked night and day at Mr. Markham's book, with only an hour off in the afternoon for pistol practice—his sole recreation.

Miss Ethel Howard, Sir George's daughter and mistress of his house, was at first civil to the private and political secretary. It was her duty. Bimetallism she earnestly believed to be a bore, though a harmless one, but when she discovered the bimetallist was also a socialist, she was not sure that she ought not to send for the police. The secretary's fate was sealed, henceforth there must be a great taboo. Warrington was a dangerous character, and the great division was ill in the future. The dangerous character must perforce be tolerated for the present. A committee of public safety was meantime organized. Its president was a public school boy, and its active agent its present president.

One evening the secretary was strolling through the grounds, thinking about bimetallism and other things, in a dark corner of a shrub-bordered path he stumbled over the outstretched leg of a man on the grass. Warrington apologized, but the man was not appeased. His coarse face, enormous muscles and whole set-up could hardly be mistaken; he was a prize fighter, or should have been. He would accept no apology.

"I have apologized," said Warrington; "what more do you want?"

"I want to know if, as you think yourself a man, you'll put up your fists!"

"No," said Warrington; "I won't. But I'll tell you what I'll do."

He put his hand into his hip pocket and snatched out a short, black object with a barrel, which he pointed at the man's face.

"If you advance a single step I'll put a bullet in your skull."

The man fell back. There was a sight movement in the shrubbery. Warrington noticed it.

"Observe," he said sharply. "You think I could not hit you in the head in his light? See me take that branch of the yew!"

He pointed the pistol straight at the densest growth of underwood. There was a hasty scramble and the sounds of running footsteps. The pugilist spoke gave ground.

"Go!" said Warrington. "And if ever you molest me again I'll fire and think no matter over afterward."

In the smoking room that evening Warrington was reading and smoking a cigar, when young Charles Telford, the president of the committee, exclaimed,—

"What do you think of a sweep who draws a revolver on an unarmed man?"

"That he is a sweep," came so unanimously that it was evident the scene had been rehearsed.

Warrington did not appear to hear.

"What do you say, Warrington?" Telford asked, pointedly.

"It depends," replied the secretary, "upon what the unarmed man is doing or going to do. If he was inoffensive, the man with the gun was a criminal ruffian."

"Suppose the unarmed man was offensive?"

"Then the man with the gun was an ass."

"For what?"

"For not firing."

"Oh, indeed! Perhaps under the same circumstances, you would have fired."

"Why, certainly."

"That's curious," broke in two or three, "for they say that you yourself were molested this evening and that you didn't fire."

"I was molested, as you say, but it wasn't necessary to fire, fortunately for me, as I had not got a gun."

"We won't haggle over the word gun. It is certain you had a pistol."

"Oh, that be, no," said Warrington, knocking the ashes off his cigar. "I had only a pipe case."

The subject was dropped, and with it the private secretary. When Miss Howard received the report of the committee she laughed immoderately. So they had had their trouble for nothing. At the same time the girl did not forgive the secretary certain sins of omission. He had treated her from the first with marked indifference. Still she was glad of the overthrow of the committee. She wanted to be her own executive.

Miss Howard told her best girl friend that she began to hate the secretary heartily on his own merits. She often met him as he was entering or leaving the castle for his daily walk. When she was expecting a new or particularly attractive guest she was certain to meet him. This coincidence was without exception. The secretary's tired face began to brighten as she passed. Her antipathy was really less violent than she had described it to her friend. But she was still unconscious. He had not yet bent the knee, and did not seem likely to do so.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Markham's visit was nearly over. The last evening had come. A skating party had been improvised. All the guests except the secretary were on the ice—a lake five miles over a lonely moor. Warrington went there too, but only to look on. He did not care to join the skaters. They did not care either. One, perhaps—but that would anticipate. As the evening advanced snow began to fall. It came gently at first, and the skaters enjoyed it. It dulled the sharp ring of their skates into a muffled rumble as they sped over the fast-coating ice. It clung in delightful little frosty diaments to the eyelashes of the girls and whitened the mustaches of the men. It was grand. Then the snow king changed his mind suddenly. He sent forth his tempest in a moment. The little fleecy flakelets were followed by blinding drifts. Darkness covered the land and an impenetrable snowfall the skaters. Racing blindly for the lake shore they found banks here and there in detached groups; sometimes three or four together, hand in hand; often one by one, blinded, dazed, demoralized.

The secretary sat on a tree stump by the bank and watched, careless of his snowy jacket. The thing interested him—nothing more. He told himself when he had got a straw of the whole party, man, woman and child, perished in the drifts. Still he waited persistently. He did not tell himself for what. At last he rose. Just then a muffled hum of a pair of skates sounded on the ice. The sound waxed louder and fainter alternately. Like the traveller in a primeval forest who has lost his way, this skater was moving in a circle. Let him circle till he perished. The secret now lay well on his way to the castle. But—duty! Warrington put his two hands to his mouth and sent a deafening shout across the ice. A faint cry answered back. He shouted again to indicate the direction. Then he heard the sound of skates plowing through the deepening snow straight for him. The sound swerved to the right.

"This way!" Warrington roared from the shore.

In ten seconds Miss Howard fell exhausted into his arms. It was impossible to keep the snow off her. He could only wait until she had recovered breath, and then without a word of apology he took her up in his arms and carried her to the partial shelter of a belt of underwood. The cold came intense. Warrington soon saw that before she had even recovered strength the girl's circulation was running down. She must be kept moving or she would freeze to death. She was already half asleep. Fortunately he had a small flask of brandy that the housekeeper of the castle had pressed upon him when he started. He forced some drops into the girl's lips, and when she partly revived said sharply:

"Now then! March!"

"I cannot move a step. I am faint. I cannot get breath. This awful snow!"

He shook her roughly. She would not stir. He hardened his heart, and struck her in the face with his open hand. She only moaned and hid her head upon his shoulder. He tried to cover her from the awful downfall, which momentarily increased. Then, failing in this, he burst out passionately:

"Listen to me. Where are your friends gone? Why have they deserted you?" (They had not really missed her.) "Do you hear me? I am going to stand by you, and won't you even try to move?"

"I cannot; save yourself," she moaned.

"No, I am not that sort. Now, then!"

He raised her in his arms, and slowly plodded through the snow. He had cramped hands and very often, and knew it well. But the snow was terrible. Down it came, thickening every minute. It beat him soon. He was knee deep in it, and he was off the track. When he stumbled into the deep coating, he stopped. Warrington was no coward, but his heart failed him. He was physically incapable of carrying the girl farther. No shelter was near. The girl herself was absolutely exhausted. He appealed to her again.

"Could you not try to walk a bit just to rest me? I can do no more; do try."

"What's the good of trying?" she answered, feebly. "It is no use. Why don't you leave me? I want to sleep. I want to die."

"That's where the trouble is. I don't want you to die."

Again he struggled forward. The shelter must be at hand; surely it must be near. If neither one or the other—well, he could take a rest on the back of the lady. Little people can be carried in his weary determined arms. He, too, could die game; and so, forward! The snow was worse than ever. The girl by a great effort aroused herself and said:

"You have done enough—too much. I am sorry I was not quite understood you. I know you now. God bless you! Save yourself; I asked you before."

"I will not save myself," he cried, hysterically. "I will not leave you. I will fight on."

But he was dead beat. The girl flung herself from his arms, saying: "Together then!" Hampered by her dress, the exertion of forcing her way through the drifts was terrible. His courage gave her strength. The end came soon. They faced each other silently, each waiting for the other to speak. Then the man said quietly:

"The snow must be clearing off, or we are in the lee of something—some shelter."

"God grant it!" said the woman. "I noticed it, but I feared it might not be true."

They could not see a yard ahead. Another effort! After a few steps they were brought up by a wall. It must be an outbuilding of some farm house. They found the door; they were saved for the moment. The house, a mere cattle shelter, was fortunately nearly full of hay. He twisted a firm whisp of hay, and brushed her skirts clear of snow. She must have perished if the thick coating had been allowed to thaw and drench her. He wrapped her up in a heap of hay and induced her to swallow a few more drops of brandy; then he incontinently finished the flask himself. Going to the open door of the shelter, he stood on guard.

As the night wore away, the snow gradually ceased. The moon at last shone out. To his surprise Warrington recognised the locality—a hillside half way between the castle and the road by which Miss Howard's married sister lived. She was asleep when he went to her. He awoke her gently. She was now well rested and almost strong.

"So we can get back to the castle before daybreak?" she asked anxiously.

"No," he answered. "We can make the rectory—not the castle."

"Why not the castle?"

"There are various reasons," he said, quietly.

She would not argue with him; he had saved her life. They started for the rectory, and now that they had sufficient light to avoid the deeper drifts, reached their destination without much difficulty. They rarely spoke during the journey.

"Not that way," Warrington interposed, sharply, as Miss Howard was making for the hall door of the rectory. He wrapped her handkerchief round his right hand and broke the pane of a ground floor window. "This will serve better," he said, as he unfastened the clasp and threw up the sash. "Let me help you."

He took the girl up in his strong arms and set her in the room. The wind was rising; the moonlight failed; snow began to fall again.

"Good-night," he said, softly; "I hope you won't be any the worse—"

She seized his outstretched hand and held it fast. "Where are you going?" she asked, faintly. "In the first place, to lose myself in the snow again."

"For what purpose?"

"So that, don't you see, when I find my way again, I will be at the castle, you here. That—that cattle shelter business is all right. I say so who should know. You see now?"

There was a pause, and then the girl said with a slight sob,—

"You are sure you will find your way to the castle?"

"Oh, yes, sure enough, and not very particular whether I do or not."

"You must be not only particular, but certain; else—"

"Else what?"

"I go with you. I know what it means, but I will go—unless you promise to find your way to the castle and —"

"How much more?"

"To come back to-morrow or—"

She kissed him on the lips. He forgot the piercing cold, the merciless snow. He took her face in his benumbed hands and drew it close to him again.

"Do you mean it?" he asked in a trembling voice.

"Yes, with all my heart."

"Then I promise."

He turned from her and set his face against the storm. Soon he passed out of her sight into the snow.

"He will come tomorrow," she said in a low, happy voice.

Will Cure Your Cough.

A sudden and wearing attack of coughing often needs immediate attention.

In an emergency that ever-useful remedy, hot water, will prove very effective. It is much better than the ordinary cough mixture, which disorder the digestion and spoil the appetite.

Water almost boiling should be sipped when the paroxysms come on. A cough resulting from irritation is relieved by hot water through the promotion of secretion, which moistens the irritated surfaces. Hot water also promotes expectoration, and so relieves the dry cough.

FACTS ABOUT BLOTTING PAPER.

And Something About the Sand Boxes of of Not So Very Long Ago.

Blotting paper is not new, but it was first made in this country only about forty years ago. Before that time we used some of the thin English blotting paper, imported; but, more commonly, to prevent ink from blotting, we used sand, which was poured upon the written sheet out of a sand box. The sand box was a common article of desk furniture, and almost as commonly seen as the inkstand. It was made sometimes of tin, but sometimes of wood. It was, perhaps, three inches in height, and maybe two and a half inches across the top, where its diameter was greatest. It was something like a pepper box in the manner of its use; but as to shape, instead of having a conical top it had a concave top, like a little saucer. The bottom of this saucer was perforated. The box was filled with sand through these perforations. When the box was used the sand was poured from it upon the writing. A little of that was gathered to the fresh ink and kept it from blotting. Very much the greater part of the sand poured out lay scattered upon the paper. Lifting the book or paper, the surplus sand was poured back into the box.

Many of the wooden sand boxes were handsomely turned articles. The sand used was a peculiar fine black sand of uniform grain, brought from Lake George in this state.

The very best blotting paper is made wholly of cotton rags. Some poorer grades are made partly of wood pulp. —New York Sun.

Bad Luck Confederate Gold.

When Richmond was deserted by the Confederate Government there was in the treasury and the banks gold coin amounting possibly to several millions of dollars. Much of it was carried off by surviving heads of the Southern Government with a view to paying off the troops of Joseph Johnston's army. For a long time there was a general impression that a large amount of this treasure had been placed in a coffin and deposited in a vault in Hollywood Cemetery. So strong was this supposition that the vault was searched, but without success.

The gold seems to have a dread fatality attached to it. A reference to that fatality was made in one of the Richmond papers was the cause of a duel, in which one of the participants fell badly wounded at the first fire. A leading State official, who had carried off some of this gold for safe keeping, came near being drowned in crossing a stream with the money in a pouch around his waist. What was left was paid out as salaries to the various Confederate officials stationed here, some of whom after the war returned to the city and received in the Federal Government.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

In the Bowels of the Earth.

There was a very unique wedding ceremony performed down in the Dolomite mine, Colorado, which is 160 feet deep. Sixteen miners were present, and Mr. and Mrs Andrae, friends of the happy couple, stood by to witness the service. The mine was illuminated with candles and Chinese lanterns, which were not so brilliant as the electric lights in some grand old church in New York City, but the ceremony was just as impressive and binding.

It was the planning of Mr. and Mrs. Andrae, as the young couple had met the first time in the mine. The arrangements were highly approved by the miners, and the young groom was one. Mr. Andrae, the manager of the mine, had one of the men spend a half day in decorating the tunnel, which was over 300 feet in. The shaft to the lower level down which the bridal party climbed by means of ladders, was 100 feet deep, and at the bottom the ceremony took place.—New York Tribune.

Trained Chameleons.

Much has been written about the beauty, stupidity and viciousness of the lizard tribe, and I want to say a word about the intelligence of the chameleon, a little reptile belonging to the lizard family, and the antipode in size of the alligator, its big brother. A young girl living in Philadelphia was presented with two Florida chameleons, and she at once began instructing them. By kindness she won their confidence, and at her call they would raise their heads and listen, and then come running to her. Soon they responded to their names—Briton and Baby, and nodded their little heads knowingly. She then taught them to stand up on their hind legs and put their little forepaws together and stand in the attitude of praying, looking solemn and closing their eyes. At a signal they would quickly prostrate themselves, roll over on their backs, and pretend to be dead, lying without motion until told to rise and embrace, which they did with every sign of joy.

A Chicken Hatched Terrapins.

The Louisiana tale of the Cow Island hen which hatched out a brood of young alligators and nursed them with a mother's care after its parallel in the exploit of a North Carolina fowl which has brought triumphantly forth from her nest twelve lively young terrapins, which look up to her with filial respect and tenderness.—New York Tribune.

"Mister," said the small boy to the druggist, "gimme another bottle of them patent pills you sold father day before yesterday." "Are they doing him good?" asked the clerk, looking pleased. "I d'no whether they're doin' father good or not, but they're doin' good. They jis' fit my new slingshot."—Detroit Free Press.

CURRENT COMMENT.

Parting one's name in the middle is not a common American custom, but parting it one sided or in two places is worse. The man who is named R. W. John H. Pope could afford to drop a few of his initials or twist the John in front of the rest of them.

English statesmen hiss English sailors and their own government. Right enough, too. The firing of English shells into a camp of Christians who are struggling to free themselves from a Moslem power that is hated by all Europe was a shameful performance, for which no excuses are possible.

After denouncing the politicians for a season or two the Populists have proved themselves to be the most oppressive politicians their states were ever burdened with. In Kansas it is said they have multiplied place holders until they can hardly get around the offices, and they are all as keen for dollar as if they had voted for honest money instead of silver. It is an exhibition that will decrease the popularity of Populism if there is any popularity left.

One may be a pauper and yet have pride. Since Hi Wang was admitted to the almshouse in Flatbush there have been grumblings. The guests of the institution said that the social tone of the place was lowered by having a Chinaman in it, and some of them felt so badly about it that they went to board elsewhere. So it is kind of Wang's fellow countrymen to form a fund for his removal and maintenance, and the almshouse will once again become a select resort.

Some kinds of men may be more willing than heretofore to serve on a jury. Down in Kentucky a juryman learned so much about counterfeiting from the testimony in a case that he helped to try, that he became a counterfeiter himself and might have made money in the usual sense of that term, if the inevitable had not happened to him. And now his neighbors will sit upon him. The new journalism does not make it necessary to go to court in these parts to study modes of crime.

The Y ears burn, though you do not feel them at the time. One victim of the exhibition of the cathode ray apparatus in Baltimore has almost lost the use of his hand for a while. The skin has reddened and peeled, the arm is swollen, and the nails have become painful and are thickened at the joints, the nails are falling out and movement is difficult. It is to be known, however, that he let the light through his flesh for four hours a day for three weeks, and his case is no inducement to stop the use of the rays for medical and surgical purposes.

The Court of Appeals of New York has made a decision in a breach of promise case which seems to extend considerably the legal limitations of flirtation. Formerly, the opinion of the Court says, the rule was that an engagement could be inferred from circumstances. Under this rule mere "keeping company," if continued long enough and assiduously enough, might imply a contractual and afford a basis for a suit for breach of promise. But it appears that this is changed by the statutory permission to the parties to testify, and that now a specific contract must be "expressed or disclosed."

It has passed into a proverb that the pursuit of the almighty dollar is the chief occupation of the American citizen. There may be so basis in the current of contemporaneous public office? All the wires that converge at Canton are shrobbing with appeals for place. Petitions for appointment to Consulships and Postmasterships and Collectorships are going round, and possessors of actual or supposed influence with the next Administration are every day importuned for "indorsements." Literally hundreds of thousands of capable Americans are hoping and praying and begging for offices that will add in four years yield them as large a money return as an energetic business or professional man with fair opportunities ought to earn in one. The proverb about the almighty dollar must be at fault.

Cycling is not good for everybody, and if abused is good for nobody. With the last two years people of all ages have rushed into cycling in the most haphazard way. They have regarded neither age nor previous habits nor their physical condition. Small wonder then that many have found evil rather than good come from an exercise which inevitably demands a heavy expenditure both of nervous and muscular force. Probably just the same outcry would have arisen if the same class had suddenly taken to running or rowing or mountain climbing without any previous preparation. It is easy to preach moderation, but it must be remembered that moderation is a term varying with the individual, and every one finds for himself how much he can do. There is no need to make a bicycle a very wheel of Ixion, especially with a "safety," for it is easy to get off and equally easy to remount; therefore the cry "You must go on or you will fall" seems to us to ignore the fact that we are reasonable animals.

NEW YORK LETTER.

Of the many interesting facts that can be told about the old Arcade building at No. 71 Broadway, soon to be razed in favor of an up-to-date sky scraper, the most peculiar, perhaps, is that the history of the building is familiar to fewer people than that of any other ancient landmark in the city. All Wall street, practically, knows it as a place to dine in the week and about all the thousands of bankers, brokers, speculators and clerks, who walk through the building on their way to and from the financial district, can tell you about it is that Russell Sage has his office there, and not a few years ago the famous bomb explosion occurred. The two most noted characters who have occupied offices in the Arcade are Russell Sage and Jay Gould. Mr. Sage, when he leaves the last quarters in the Bank of Commerce building next month, will have been a tenant for more than 15 years. Mr. Sage was the originator of a line of business which grew to great proportions in Wall street. He instituted the "privilege system," by which brokers and traders in securities who had small means were enabled to test their judgment by large operations, and at the same time protect themselves from heavy loss. He sold "puts" and "calls," "spreads" and "straddles," with the result that dealings on the Stock Exchange greatly increased. As is frequently the case, the inventor profits little, but he has made several millions of dollars in the privilege business, and that, too, in a half week. It was toward the end of May, 1894. Mr. Sage had sold puts upon thousands and thousands of shares of stock. The market suddenly became weak, prices dropped away, and a panic was threatened.

RUSSELL SAGE.

It should be borne in mind that "privileges" are contracts not enforcable by law. It is also borne in mind now that Russell Sage went back on his word. For three days he sat with pen in hand and, amidst the excitement, when over 200 brokers were clamoring to get into his presence, signed check after check upon the Importers' and Traders' Bank, until he had used up several books and had seen, so it was estimated at the time, $1,000,000 of his fortune melt away like snowflakes in the sun.

It was on December 5, 1891. Friday, and as he came at 12:30 o'clock, for Secretary Menzie's watch stopped at that moment, when the crash, Norcross, who wanted over $1,000,000 of Mr. Sage's money, threw the bomb that killed himself and injured Mr. Sage and others and blew the office into kindling wood. That event was of too recent date to need a reminder of the details and the discovery of the would-be assassin through the medium of a cheap cotton which was picked up in the building. Everybody in the building was shaken up and scared out of considerable growth.

While some outside barbarian accuses New Yorkers of lack of civic pride, the loyal Gothamite usually points to Madison Square Garden and the Metropolitan Opera House as evidence to the contrary. "Here," he has been wont to explain with true Knickerbocker pride, "are two magnificent monuments to public spirit. Both these splendid structures have been built and maintained at a loss by men who dedicated them to the service and amusement of their fellow-citizens." But there is a limit to good nature. The stockholders of the Madison Square Garden Company think that they are satisfied with the experience they have gained, and are quite willing now to have someone else shoulder the load. So they decided. Any enterprising agriculturist who wishes to try his hand at this sort of gardening can get the site at a bargain, and have the famous bronze Diana, that moves with every wind on the latest style of ball-bearing axis, thrown in. The Garden was evolved out of the old Hippodrome building, and assumed its present shape in 1890. It is the largest building in the country entirely devoted to purposes of amusement. The arena holds 11,000 people, the theatre 1,200 and the assembly hall 1,200 more. It has been the scene of many notable events, social, political and sporting. The hope is that some multi-millionaire, or a syndicate of them, may come forward and buy in the building, and either continue it in its present form, or remodel it, so that, while preserving its essential features, additions may be made that will render the property, in a measure, a profitable investment.

CYRUS THORP.

Good Place for Cats.

There is a special cat church in Florence the church in which so many Medici are buried. The cloisters of San Lorenzo are reserved for homeless cats, whether they come there by themselves or are brought by people who want to dispose of them. New York Journal.

WHALING EXPERIENCES.

THRILLING EPISODES IN LIFE ON THE NORTHERN SEAS.

Rev. W. E. Crampton Tells How the Big Amphibian is Captured and What an Exciting Time He Had One Day.

Rev. W. E. Crampton gave the second lecture in the course of three at the Y. M. C. A. building Tuesday before a good sized audience. His lecture was a review of his experiences while on a whaling voyage early in life. He referred to Jonah and the whale and said that some people believed that the story could be blotted out of the Bible and yet they could be Christians. The speaker was firmly convinced that the whale could swallow Jonah and then went on to illustrate how he could. He said that he had seen thousands of whales and killed them by the hundreds. A whale is the biggest of all of God's living creatures on land or sea, and the speaker said that he had on many occasions crawled through the throat of one which could easily get away with a cow or horse, and if this was true why could'nt a whale swallow a man.

He believed that when people persistently deny the Bible story regarding Jonah and the whale they were either ignorant or inexperienced. He said that the old truth had stood long before skeptics were born and it would continue to stand long after they were dead.

Mr. Crampton then told how a whale is captured, and gave his experience of a trip he made on a whaling ship. They were sailing in the western seas when the sailors caught glimpses of a whale. The very sight sent a thrill through every man, and as quickly as possible the sailors were in their boats and off after the large fish. He was in the boat that arrived first and they found the whale asleep. As soon as possible he was harpooned. In an instant the whale went downward and the men played out the rope very fast. Presently the rope began to feel slack, and the men knew that the whale had stopped. This move put the sailors in a nervous condition for they did not know just where he would come up. In a few minutes the whale made his appearance and to the surprise of all he came up beneath their boat. All of the men were thrown out and in a second they were battling in the water for their lives. It was a mad whale on one side and drowning men on the other, the speaker said that he was in a very pecu liar position. Then to make the affair more exciting a hundred sharks made their appearance and it was all the men could do to keep them away. Finally the other boats came up and the men in the water were saved and the whale was captured.

The balance of Mr. Cr mpton's talk was devoted to thrilling experiences he had on another voyage when the ship was in danger of being taken by a gang of pirates. There were only twenty-five of them while the pirates were present by the hundreds. The men in the ship finally succeed in killing most all of the pirates and thus they escaped with their lives.

Rheumatism Quickly Cured.

After having been confined to the house for eleven days and paying out $25 in doctor's bills without benefit Mr. Frank Nelson, of Salt Ste. Marie, Mich., was cured by one bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm costing 25 cents and has not since been troubled with that complaint. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, Apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

A PLEASING AFFAIR

First Church of Christ Women Know How to Entertain.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the First Church of Christ gave a pleasing entertainment in the church Tuesday before an appreciative audience. The following programme was exceedingly well rendered: Recitation, Miss Higgins; vocal solo, Elsie Campbell; recitation, Miss Scribner; vocal duet, Misses Benner; reading, Rev. B. W. Hand; tenor solo, Eli Odam; dialogue, "The Night at the Opera," Mrs. Van Middlesworth and Miss Van Middlesworth; vocal duet, Miss Benner and Eli Odam; recitation, Miss Ethel Woolley.

After the rendition of the above, ice cream and cake was served in abundance and a good social time was passed by all. The proceeds will be devoted to the church work and a most gratifying sum was received.

Dangers of the Grip.

The greatest danger from LaGrippe is of its resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for la grippe, we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that this remedy is a certain preventative of that dread disease. It will effect a permanent cure in less time than any other treatment. The 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale by T. S. Armstrong, Apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

DUTIES OF A CITIZEN.

REV. A. E. MAIN'S THOUGHTS ON CHRISTIAN CITIZENSHIP.

The Problems of the Hour are Weighty and Mighty and Deserve the Honest Consideration of all Christian People.

The rain that began about seven o'clock Tuesday night prevented a large attendance at the Christian Citizenship lecture given by Rev. A. E. Main in the Seventh Day Baptist church to the Christian Endeavorers of the city. A number of interested young people, however, gathered in the lecture room at the appointed time, and spent a very pleasant hour.

A service of song began the evening, led by D. E. Titsworth, with Miss Elizabeth Allis as pianist. Prayer was then offered by E. E. Anthony, President of the Christian Endeavor Local Union, after which came the address of the evening.

Mr. Main began by saying that before the men and women of today there lie weighty, urgent, perplexing problems. Religion is the one sure foundation of all goodness, and therefore of good citizenship. One of the highest of Christian Endeavorers should be the producing of good citizens. An ideally good citizen is one who uses the privileges and duties of citizenship in the spirit of Christ and Christianity. By the divine providence there has come into being the American commonwealth, a gift great, but bringing many responsibilities. Slavery has been abolished from our country, but there now confronts us the problem of training three millions of freed colored people for the duty of citizenship. Our country is said to be richer than any other; money is power, for good or evil, and the fruit of Christian citizenship should be a deeper sense of duty, justice and stewardship.

Our public school system is a fine one, and from it flow streams of intelligence into all our homes; but the peril of secularism is becoming a serious one, some even holding the view that the name of God should not be mentioned in a school.

How shall we make good, intelligent, loyal citizens of the thousands of immigrants that are yearly landed on our shores? This is a tremendous problem for us.

Statistics show us that the liquor evil is stronger in our country than abroad. Between good citizenship and the liquor traffic here is a deadly conflict.

Society's only hope of relief from the ruinous results of the wretched principles of socialism, which would abolish the state, the family, God, is in the strength of the Christian citizenship of the future.

Let the loyal hosts of Christian Endeavor stand firm as a bulwark, against the peril's that threaten our country, for the highest, truest Christian citizenship.

After a closing hymn, prayer was offered by Rev A. H. Lewis, D. D, and the congregation dispersed

ABOUT SODA AND SOAP.

SECOND CHEMISTRY LECTURE IN UNIVERSITY EXTENSION SERIES.

The Various Compositions and Methods of Manufacture Explained by Prof. Myers in the Bryant School.

The last of the series of University Extension lectures which have been held at Irving school, during the last two months, was delivered by William C. Myers, associate professor of chemistry in Rutgers College, in the Irving chool use Tuesday. It was the second of the lectures on chemistry and the subject was "Soda and Soap."

Prof. Myers told of the need of large quantities of alkali in soap-making, glass-making and other industries, how many years ago the need of something to take the place of caustic potash, as produced from ashes by the use of caustic lime, was felt and how it was discovered that caustic soda, which was just as good as caustic pot ash, could be made from common salt by treating with sulphuric acid, limestone and coal. He showed that a change in the price of any one of these articles would greatly affect the price of soda, glass, soap and the many other articles which are affected by these.

The other way of producing soda, as explained by him, was through the Solvay process, in which the raw material used are ammonia, common salt and limestone. Up to the present time the latter process has failed to give the bleaching powder successfully as does the other method. He explained the two methods and partially illustrated them as fast as he was able with experiments.

One of the principal uses of the caustic soda is in the manufacture of soap. Soap, the professor explained, is made with soda and fats. He gave something of its history and how soap was made and used by the ancients. He ended the lecture with showing some samples of the different kinds of soap and told how they are made.

Charles Willis, of the borough, is very much improved from a long illness.

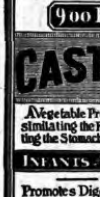
900 DROPS

CASTORIA

A Vegetable Preparation for Assimilating the Food and Regulating the Stomachs and Bowels of

INFANTS CHILDREN

Promotes Digestion, Cheerfulness and Rest. Contains neither Opium, Morphine nor Mineral. NOT NARCOTIC.



A perfect Remedy for Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea, Worms, Convulsions, Feverishness and LOSS OF SLEEP.

Fac Simile Signature of

NEW YORK.

Aft months old

35 DOSES—35 CENTS

EXACT COPY OF WRAPPER.

SEE THAT THE FAC-SIMILE SIGNATURE —OF— Chas. H. Fletcher IS ON THE WRAPPER OF EVERY BOTTLE OF CASTORIA

Castoria is put up in one-size bottles only. It is not sold by bulk. Don't allow anyone to sell you anything else on the plea or promise that it is "just as good" and "will answer every purpose." See that you get C-A-S-T-O-R-I-A.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

A WOMAN'S IDEA OF GOVERNMENT.

Miss Yates' Lecture on the United States Constitution.

Plainfield women are well known to be progressive, and the organization of the Woman's Parliamentary Club, some time ago, was received with enthusiasm by the many women who were anxious to become able to preside at the meetings with grace and dignity. The club has succeeded remarkably well in its objects, and its members are heartily interested in their work. This season they arranged with Miss Elizabeth Upham Yates, a special special student at Radcliffe College in constitutional government, to deliver two lectures, one on the United States Congress, and one on the British Parliament. The first lecture was given Wednesday, in the Y. M. C. A. hall, before a deeply interested audience of cultured women, and was thoroughly enjoyed.

Miss Clementine Yates, president of the Woman's Parliamentary Club, introduced the speaker, a very handsome and attractive woman, in an exquisite gown of wine colored velvet, trimmed with rich creamy lace.

The lecture opened with a brief history of the United States Constitution, and the early elections and sessions of Congress. Miss Yates then spoke of the Senate as it is at present, the most highly empowered of any legislative body; its legislative and executive powers and the election of its members.

In the Senate there is no way to stop debate, as by "moving the previous question" in the House. Bills from the House may be amended beyond recognition. Legislation in the United States, said Miss Yates, has not yet reached perfection. The worst that can be said against the committee system, which may be the best for us, is that it gives us an incoherent legislation.

The question of amendments to the Constitution was now briefly spoken of by the lecturer. She told the history of the amendments we have at present, and showed that it is not easy to get a "pet measure" incorporated into the Constitution. She also spoke of some "pet measures" she would like to see adopted: Changing the term of the President to seven years, giving the ex-President an honorary but active relation to the Government, and having the new Congress assemble immediately after election. However, in closing, she advised her audience not to lead off in any radical measures against the United States Constitution.

The lecture one week from this morning will be on the "British Parliament," and will doutless be very interesting. Single tickets will be sold for this lecture.

Settled the Loss by Fire.

Elston French, of this city, has settled the loss with Mr. Welsh, of Westfield, on the fire at his home last week. The cause of the fire was through the efforts of Mr. Welsh's four-year-old daughter, who was looking for a kitten under a sofa, and in order to see the feline she was obliged to light a match. In this way the drapery on the sofa caught fire, which caused the damage.

Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Knox, of Grant avenue, have returned from a trip for health and pleasure.

NEW JERSEY SUPREME COURT

To Richard Garretson, defendant, or whom it may concern:

Please take notice that the following writ of Seire Facias has issued out of the Supreme Court of the State of New Jersey, to wit:

STATE OF NEW JERSEY, ss.

The State of New Jersey to the Sheriff of the County of Somerset, GREETING:

WHEREAS, lately in our Supreme Court, at Jadgments holden at Trenton, before the Justices thereof, by the judgment of the same Court JOHN D. BARTINE recovered against RICHARD GARRETSON the sum of five hundred and thirty dollars and eighty-three cents damages which he had sustained by occasion of certain promises and assumptions to him made by JOHN D. BARTINE, as then lately made by the said RICHARD GARRETSON, defendant, and also thirty-one dollars and seventy-three cents for his costs and charges about his said suit laid out and in his said behalf expended, whereof the said RICHARD GARRETSON is convicted, as appears of record, and now in behalf of the said JOHN D. BARTINE, we have been informed that the said judgment is thereupon given, yet execution for the said damage and costs still remains to be made to him. Whereupon the said JOHN D. BARTINE hath humbly sought us to provide him a proper remedy in this behalf. We being desirous that what is right and just should be done on the occasion, command you that by good and lawful men of your County you cause to be made known to the said RICHARD GARRETSON that he be before our said Justices at Trenton aforesaid, on the thirtieth day of March next, to show if he has or knows any thing for the said defendant why the said JOHN D. BARTINE should not have his execution against him for the damages and costs aforesaid, remaining in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-seven.

WITNESS, MERCER BEASLEY, Esquire, Chief Justice, at Trenton, aforesaid, the seventeenth day of February, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-seven.

STEELE & MEEHAN, Att'ys.

BENJ. P. LEE, Clerk. 2 25 5w

CYCLE CATERERS

Plainfield Cycle Company Ready to Do a Large Business.

Although the cycle season has hardly opened as yet, one of the busiest stores in this city is the one conducted by the Plainfield Cycle and Sporting Goods Company on North avenue, and it is surprising to see and know how many people have the bicycle fever. In order to meet the demands for wheels this season the above company has purchased the finest line of wheels that has ever been offered to the people of this city, who can be suited in every way possible. They have all the various makes of saddles, handle bars, gears, tires and colors. A very efficient corps of clerks are employed, who are willing and anxious to show you the goods and different kinds of wheels in stock. The company have wheels to sell such as you can buy in department store if you desire that kind. They have everything in their line that you could wish for, including cycle and golf suits, hose, shoes, caps, sweaters, and all kinds of bicycle sundries at prices to meet everyones pocketbook. With their storing department they have accommodations for one hundred and fifty wheels, which also makes this the finest in the city. The repair department is also one of the most complete in the state.

Committees Appointed.

The following committees have been appointed by President S. St. John McCutchen, of the North Plainfield Board of Education: Teachers and text-books — Samuel St. John McCutchen, Henry B. Wells, A. V. D. Honeyman, Henry A. McGee; Grievances—George D. Hallock, A. V. D. Honeyman, George F. Brown; Buildings and Grounds—E. J. Waring, E. A. Overton, George D. Hallock; School-supplies — George F. Brown, R. M. Fountain, E. A. Overton; Auditing and finance—F. J. Waring, R. M. Fountain.

AMOS H. VAN HORN, Ltd.,

Carpets Low Priced

yet new as new can be—they're all Spring patterns and colors—a whole floor's given over to them. No store in Newark can APPROACH the variety or price-smallness.

25c yard for Good Ingrains
50c yard All-wool Ingrains
75c yard Best Moquettes
$1.25 yard Axminsters

55c yard for Brussels
90c yard Body Brussels
75c yard Velvets
70c yard Mattings

10.50 for this Oak Suit. It's honest, reliable and worth MORE.

5.95 is price of above Corduroy-covered Couch. We have a wonderfully complete Couch and Lounge stock. Any covering you can possibly want is HERE.

If you're wanting a Parlor Suit 16.50 will get it.

75c Up—Cane Seat Dining Chairs—no larger variety in Newark.

$3.95 takes this Oak Extension Table—precisely like cut in every way.

$10.75 for above Sideboard. Other patterns—a big line.

$80. RECYCLES FOR $29.—1896 patterns want to close them out—you can buy on them. They'll RIDE as well as any '97 make. Only a few on hand. Better snap 'em up.

AMOS H. VAN HORN, Ltd.

73 Market St. Near Plane Street NEWARK, N. J.

CASH OR CREDIT. Telephone 58—Goods Delivered Free

Our Special Sale

FOR THIS MONTH ONLY.

NEW CABINET GRAND UPRIGHT PIANOS,

All Improvements, $225,

Payable $7 monthly. Warranted five years.

TWAY PIANO CO.,

Tway's Musical Guest mailed free 88 FIFTH AVENUE.

d 16 6m

STILLMAN MUSIC HALL!

GEORGE E. ROGERS.....Lessee, | GEORGE H. WILLEY.....Manager

ONE NIGHT ONLY,

THURSDAY, Mch. 25

William Calder's Spectacular Production of the Sensational Melodrama,

SAVED From the SEA.

POWERFUL COMPANY.

MAGNIFICENT SCENERY.

3 MARVELOUS MECHANICAL EFFECTS

SEE The Explosion at Sea. The Rescue. The Breaking Bridge. The Revolt of the Convicts.

Prices, 25c., 35c., 50c., 75c. Seats on sale at Box Office Tuesday, March 23d.

Ask your Druggist for a generous 10 CENT TRIAL SIZE.

Ely's Cream Balm contains no cocaine, mercury nor any other injurious drug. It is quickly absorbed. Gives Relief at once. It opens and cleanses the Nasal Passages. Allays Inflammation. Heals and Protects the Membrane. Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell. Full Size 50c.; Trial size 10c. at Druggists or by mail. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren Street, New York

CATARRH

COLD IN HEAD

Salesmen Wanted

Pushing, trustworthy men to represent us in the sale of our nursery stock. Specialties controlled by us. Highest salary or commission paid. Outfit free; exclusive territory; experience not necessary; steady work assured workers; special inducements to beginners. Write at once for particulars to

Allen Nursery Co.,

Rochester, N. Y.

Miss Harriet Halloway, of LaGrande avenue, has returned from Newark, where she has been spending a few weeks with relatives.

Arrangements Completed.

At the meeting of Post No. 73, G. A. R., Tuesday, the members discussed the coming of the Second N. J. Brigade, April 9th. The Post will not meet again before the event takes place and all arrangements, so far as the Post is concerned, were made last evening.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXX. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, APRIL 1, 1897. NO. 13

"Support the Constitution, Which is the Cement of the Union, as Well in Its Limitations as in Its Authority."—Madison.

WOULDN'T STAND TRIAL.

WILLIAM ROBINSON RESIGNS FROM THE POLICE FORCE.

The Policeman Had Trouble With Fire-man Studer About Riding on a Hook and Ladder Truck—Said to Have Been Abusive.

William Robinson, one of the new police appointments made by Mayor Pisk the first of February, resigned his position Tuesday as the outcome of a dispute with George Studer, a member of the Hook and Ladder Company, as to his right to ride on the company's truck to the fire Tuesday morning.

Sometime ago Chief Doane issued an order to the effect that only firemen or officers should be permitted to ride on the fire department apparatus, and it was Studer's endeavor to enforce this order, in ignorance of Robinson's position, who did not disclose his identity, that caused the rumpus. When the alarm of fire was sent in Robinson was near the fire department headquarters and spyinel there is time to jump on the hook and ladder truck before it got under good headway. Robinson was in citizens' clothes and Studer ordered him off the truck, in compliance with Chief Doane's orders. Robinson refused to budge and there were some high words spoken between the two men. It is alleged that Robinson used rather unbecoming language in replying to Studer.

After the outgong was sounded and the truck had returned to headquarters Robinson sought out Chief Doane and told him of the fact that he had been ordered off the truck by Studer. It was learned that Studer did not know Robinson was an officer and the Chief endeavored to settle the misunderstanding by introducing the two men. Chief Doane says that Studer apologized to Robinson for ordering him off the truck, explaining that he did not know that he was an officer. Instead of accepting the apology gracefully, Robinson, it is alleged, became abusive and assumed a domineering air. The Chief called him to account for his actions and Robinson went out of the fire headquarters to return later and renew the quarrel. He was cautioned to behave himself by Assistant Chief Martin and after some talk he again left, only to return a third time and threaten Studer, so it is said, with many harsh words and gesticulations. He was ordered out a second time by Assistant Chief Martin.

Chief Doane was notified of Robinson's conduct and he determined to have him disciplined. Accompanied by Studer he secured Acco-mpanied by Studer he secured Acco-mpanied by Studer he secured Justice De Mora, and the latter said he would notify Chief Grant to have Robinson before him at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

The Chief was unable to find Robinson, however, and late in the afternoon Chief Grant, reported the affair to Mayor Pisk. After hearing the circumstances the Mayor decided that Robinson would have to be disciplined. Later on Robinson was called before the Mayor and asked concerning the charges. Robinson admitted that he had had trouble with Studer, but was not inclined to be submissive.

The Mayor decided that his conduct was unbecoming enough to have an investigation and he told Robinson that he would suspend him until the charges were settled by a police board trial. Robinson said that he would not stand a trial, but would resign right then and there. Taking him at the word, the Mayor had the resignation written out and Robinson signed the document immediately, thus ending his career for a second time as a member of the police force.

FOR A GARBAGE CREMATORY.

Plainfield Sanitary Company Awarded Contracts Tuesday.

A meeting of the Plainfield Sanitary Company was held Tuesday when the various contracts for the erection of the crematory were awarded as follows: Mason work, Firman Gise; carpenter work, Pearson & Gayle; excavating, T. A. McCarthy. The title has been passed and the work of excavating will be started Wednesday.

The committee having in charge the purchase of the necessary wagons and material for operating the crematory are doing all that they can to have the same ready when needed.

The company has secured office room at 187 North avenue, where someone will always be found. L. Spanzenberg, of the company, will start in a few days to solicit among the Plainfield people for business.

Eddy Clak, of Philadelphia, has been secured as architect and sanitary engineer.

To Lay Out Roselle Streets.

Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett has secured the contract for surveying and laying out the streets of Roselle, and H. C. VanEmburgh has been employed to look after the work.

THE MOTHER'S INTEREST.

MRS. M. B. ELLIS RELATED OPPORTUNITIES OF MOTHERHOOD.

The Great Need Is That Mothers Should Become Thoroughly Acquainted With the Temperament of Their Children.

"General Lew Wallace puts into the mouth of Ben-Hur the old Eastern proverb, 'Because God could not be everywhere, he made mothers.' Nothing can be more beautiful than a true mother's love, and the responsibilities and duties committed to a mother are of the greatest." Thus began the drawing-room talk on "Motherhood," by Mrs. M. B. Ellis, National Superintendent of Legislation for the W. C. T. U., Tuesday afternoon, the announcement of which created so much interest that the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church parlors were very well filled. Mrs. Ellis's talk was exceedingly interesting, and thoroughly practical. She brought forth the laws of heredity, and urged that mothers be themselves what they would have their children become. She spoke very earnestly of the great need that mothers become thoroughly acquainted with their children, giving ready sympathy in all their little interests and trials and never sharply refusing to answer their many questions. The mother has the first opportunity with her child; let her heed how she uses it. Very heartfelt were Mrs. Ellis' words on the temperance question, as she urged that everything possible be done to prevent the growth of an appetite for strong drink in children. In the latter part of her lecture she described the efforts of the W. C. T. U. to get better laws passed for the protection of the young along the lines of temperance and social purity, to make the life of the girls in our great city shops more tolerable by having seats provided for them, and in every good work which the warm mother heart could devise.

At the close of the address, a social tea was held.

LOCAL ATHLETES TO ENTER.

High School Representatives to Contest For a Princeton Trophy.

The Princeton University Track Association has made arrangements for an interscholastic meet to be held annually at Princeton The event will be open to all schools of the New England and Middle States. The games this year will be held at the Princeton track on the morning of May 15th, the day of the Harvard-Princeton baseball game

A silver cup worth $250 has been offered by the Princeton Association as a prize for the school scoring the greatest number of points at these games for three years, not necessarily in succession. A banner will also be awarded to the victorious school each year, and gold and silver medals will be given to the man who finish first, second and third in each event.

An invitation has been sent to the athletic association of the High School of this city to participate in the games and it is probable that Plainfield will be represented by a number of young athletes. While the chances of securing the cup are very remote, the local contestants will try to bring back some of the individual prizes.

W. E. MARTIN'S GOOD LUCK.

To Be Assistant Chief Operator in the B. & O. R. R. Office.

W. E. Martin, who for the past two years has been the manager for the Postal Telegraph Company in this city, has secured a very lucrative position as assistant chief operator for the B. & O. Telegraph Company at their office located on the ground floor of the Produce Exchange, New York City. This station has the control of the foreign freight, and Mr. Martin will have charge of forty operators. He will still retain his position as manager of the office in this city, but he has secured Charles K Latourette, an experienced operator, to be assistant manager, and he will have charge of the local office most of the time. Mr. Martin will commute to New York and will be in Plainfield every evening to look after the night work.

For the Fresh Air Fund.

Dorothy Harrington Revell, a talented woman, will give a monologue entertainment on the subject of "Switzerland," in the Y. M. C. A. building on Tuesday evening, April 27th, under the auspices of the Advance Circle, Kings Daughers, of the First Presbyterian church. The proceeds will go to the fresh air fund and toward the support of the city nurse. This noted woman has given the entertainment upon eight hundred different occasions.

—They are a "snap." They are real "plums." That's just what they are, Doane & Edsall's $2 and $3 shoes.

HORRIBLE DEATH LURKED IN THIS PIECE OF WOOD

ONE MAN INSTANTLY KILLED AND ANOTHER BADLY HURT AT SCOTCH PLAINS.

A Piece of Timber Saturated With Nitro-Glycerine Explodes With Disastrous Effect—Whole Neighborhood Aroused and Startled by the Noise and Effect—Barn Set Fire and Plainfield Fire Department Called on to Lend Assistance.

The quiet village of Scotch Plains was the scene Tuesday afternoon of one of the most terrible accidents that has ever occurred within its borders. It was a nitro-glycerine explosion and one man was killed instantly and another severely injured.

It was about four o'clock when suddenly a great sound was heard. It was at first thought to be a blasting on the mountain back of the Plains, but those more credulous thought differently and it was not long before the people of the village had learned the results of the explosion. It happened near a barn belonging to John Cook, which was located in the heart of the town.

A few days ago Mr. Cook decided to build a shed adjoining the barn setting in the rear of the house. He engaged Conrad Peltz and Carl Bardenstetter, two carpenters, to do the work It was while attentively engaged at their work that the explosion occurred and as a result the latter was instantly killed, while the former escaped with his life though he is badly injured.

It was not until three hours after the catastrophe that the cause could be determined upon, and in the meantime there were many wild rumors in circulation to the effect that it was dynamite, which Cook had stored in his barn, that caused the explosion and, in the absence of Mr. Cook to explain, that was the generally accepted theory. The facts of the accident are these: Last winter Bloodgood's nitro-glycerine factory, located between Westfield and Rahway, was abandoned and Mr. Cook purchased the building. The structure was torn down and the best of the timber removed to Cook's place in Scotch Plains, and stored in the rear of the house. If there was anyone who knew that the timber taken from the nitro-glycerine factory was dangerous to life and limb, they did not inform Mr. Cook.

When he decided to build the addition to his barn he looked over the timber and decided to use it. Among the timber brought from the demolished factory was a square post about six inches in diameter and twelve feet long. This was selected to serve as one of the corner supports of the roof to the shed. About four o'clock Tuesday afternoon Bartenstetter and Peltz finished excavating a hole for the post and raised the timber to an upright position. Peltz climbed up on step ladder to get the post in plumb while Bartenstetter balanced it from the ground. The post was a little out of plumb and Peltz told Bartenstetter to strike it with a mallet so as to get it even. The latter complied with the request with two or three sharp blows. This was followed by a terrific explosion that shattered the post into slivers at the point where it had been struck with the mallet.

The shattered post was scattered about and in a moment a quantity of hay near the barn blazed up and started a lively fire. The report was heard a mile away and the houses in the immediate vicinity were jarred preceptibly by the concussion.

It was soon learned that it was an explosion and that there was a fatal accident. Men ran here and there in their frantic attempts to do something. As quickly as possible an entrance was effected into the Excelsior Hook and Ladder house and the fire bell was sounded loud and long. Others ran all the way to Fanwood and secured the chemical engine from that place and hastened back with it to assist in putting out the fire, which by this time was well under way. The dense black smoke made it almost impossible for the men to get any where near the barn where the explosion occurred. They were urged by the knowledge that there were two men near the fire and their lives were in danger. As soon as men could get near enough they found the two men.

Bartenstetter's condition was indescribable. His features were obliterated and the flesh was in a jelly. It could be seen at a glance that the man was past hope, and the men turned their attention to Peltz in the hopes that he might be rescued. He was found not a great distance away, and while he was terribly injured he did not lose consciousness. His face was scorched, an arm was broken and his eyes were severely injured by dirt and pieces of wood which were scattered about when the explosion occurred. Both men were removed from the place of the disaster and the dead man was taken to his boarding place, not far away, while the injured man was brought to Muhlenberg Hospital in a carriage. Dr. Westcott was one of the first to arrive and he did all that was possible.

In the meantime the members of the fire department succeeded in getting the old hand engine to work, and in a little while there were two streams of water on the burning building. The engine was taken a short distance from the fire house, and water was secured from a cistern which happened to have a good supply of water. By this time everyone in the village, from the oldest man to the smallest boy, was assisting in some way to put out the fire. The old men performed valuable work on the hand engine, while the young men were working about the fire and saving the adjoining property.

The fire-bell was kept ringing so that everybody would be called to the scene of the fire. The church bells were also sounded. The firemen did not make great progress, although they were able to confine the flames to the one building where the fire started. It was evident that the latter building could not be saved and all efforts were in vain.

After working for nearly an hour with the hand engine, Chief Hall, of the fire department, thought it best to telephone to Chief Doane, of this city, and ask him for assistance. This was done and the latter sent in a special call of six blows. The chief then sent Alerts hose wagon with a quantity of hose to Scotch Plains. No. 2 engine was also sent, but when the apparatus arrived the Scotch Plains firemen had the fire well under control and the Plainfield men were not needed.

The building where the fire started was a total loss. It contained a number of farming implements, but nothing of any great value.

The only man who witnessed the explosion was John Miller, who had but a minute before assisted the other men to carry the post and set it in the hold in the ground. The force of of the explosion tore out the end of the barn nearest to the point where it occurred and completely wrecked the interior. Immediately after the explosion there was a strong smell of acid about the vicinity.

After the debris had been cleared away and the people of the neighborhood had regained their composure to some degree an investigation was started to determine the cause of the explosion. It was found that the post that had exploded was saturated with nitro-glycerine, evidently having come in contact with the dangerous fluid while in the process of manufacture at the Bloodgood factory. It seeded to set a severe jar to make it explode with disastrous effect. Coroner Sheriff Kyte and County Physician Westcott cut off a chip about a half an inch square and placing it on a stone struck a sharp blow with a hammer.

It went off with a report and concussion equal to that of a shotgun. A chip as large again made a noise like that of a cannon. Mr. Kyte took a piece to the Fanwood station and put it on the railroad track. As the car wheel passed over it, it made a loud noise. After these experiments it was generally conceded that the post had been saturated with the dangerous stuff and when struck with the mallet by Stetter the explosion occurred.

Mr. Cook had gone to Brooklyn with his wife and did not return until To'clockTuesdaynight when hewas informed of the accident. He was completely taken aback, as he had no idea that he had such dangerous material lying around loose. The dynamite which he uses for blasting purposes at his stone crusher is buried in the garden.

While all this excitement was going on Mrs. Peltz, wife of the injured man, was standing nearby and though she was unable to speak a word of English, she was fearful that something had happened wereby her husband had been killed. Mrs. Hoskins, a neighbor, who speaks German, told the distressed wife that her husband was not killed, but that he was only injured. This did not seem to pacify her and she paced back and forth almost frantic with grief. Her son, who lives in Bayonne, where he conducts a barber business, was sent for and when he arrived he told his mother what had happened and she appeared to understand the circumstances better. Later the son went to the hospital where he saw his father.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 8.

A VIOLET RECEPTION.

PLEASING LENTEN EVENT GIVEN BY MISS MAUDE VAN DYKE.

The House Prettily Decorated With the Sweet Flower, and a Happy Time Spent by the Guests Who Were Present

One of the most pleasing events of the Lenten season was the violet reception given last Tuesday in honor of Miss Maude Eleanor Van Dyke, of East Front street. The house was prettily decorated with violet colors, and the effect in the parlors was exceedingly attractive. There were broad bands of violet-colored ribbon festooned about the room, while scattered here and there were pretty bunches of crushed violets. The chandeliers were also arranged with the predominating colors.

Miss Van Dyke received her guests and she was congratulated by them, as the event was given in honor of the celebration of her birthday.

During the evening Miss Snediker and Robert Clark sang a duet, and Miss Snediker gave a recitation, entertaining the sociability the young people enjoyed some dancing, and Miss Mary Van Eps favored those present with several instrumental piano selections. Charles Angleman also sang several tenor solos.

Refreshments were served about 11 o'clock, after which instrumental and vocal music was enjoyed and the guests departed for home at an early hour wishing their hostess many happy returns of the day. Those present were:

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Anthony, Mr. and Mrs. Vanderhoff, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Linderman, Mr. and Mrs. William Williams, Mrs. Josie M. Tier, Mrs. Charles Randolph, Mrs. Cooley, Mrs. Brooks, the Misses Cora Laire, Adelaide Baxter, Olive Newell, Jennie Quick, Bertha Jenkins, Sadie Randolph, Lou Snediker, Josie Banks, Mabel Sabenck, Edith Hurlbert, Edith DuBois, Grace Clark, Mary VanEps, Nettie Sandall, of this city, Miss Evelyn Kirk, of Newark; Edward Randolph, Robert Clark, Edward Clark, Charles Angleman, Herbert Martin, Richard Randolph, Mr. Crane, Fred. VanEps, J. H. Van Winkle, Jr., also of this city, and E. Van Doren, of Bound Brook.

INTEREST IN MISSIONS.

It Seems to be Very Lively With a Park Avenue Baptist Society.

A steady increase in attendance and interest was the principal feature of the reports of the officers at the annual meeting of the Women's Foreign Mission Circle of the Park Avenue Baptist church, held Tuesday afternoon in the parlors of the church. The opening exercises were conducted by the president, Mrs. G. F. Opdyke. There were also two solos by Mrs. J. V. A. Craighead.

Mrs. Nelson Runyon, as treasurer, made her report showing that $175 had been raised during the year and that about that sum had been spent in the support of foreign missions, leaving a small balance in the treasury.

The report of the secretary, Mrs. A. W. Rand, was very encouraging. It showed that the membership had increased during the past year and that the attendance at the meetings was much larger of late than ever before.

A number of articles were read on subjects of interest in the foreign missionary field by Mrs. Ernest Thompson, Mrs C. R. Compton, Mrs. W. H. Freeman, Miss Emma V. Fish and Miss May Thompson. A collection was taken and the mite boxes were turned over to the treasurer. The collection amounted to $6 43.

The election of officers concluded the business of the meeting. All the officers were re-elected except the vice-president. The officers elected were president, Mrs. G. F. Opkyke; vice-president, Mrs. W. H. Freeman; secretary, Mrs. A. W. Rand; treasurer, Mrs. Nelson Runyon. The president made a short address on the work for the following year and then the meeting adjourned.

Dunellen Gun Club Shoot.

The members of the Dunellen Gun Club held a prize handicap shoot at inanimate targets, Saturday afternoon. Each man shot at twenty-five clay birds, and some of the shooters were allowed a handicap of several more. Below is the individual scores:

	Shot	Targets
Osborn, P.	16	22
Dunham, A.	23	25
Giles, C.	17	19
Dunham, A.	17	20
Brautigham, T.	22	24
Nelson, W.	21	23
Lindsley, J.	23	24
Gray,	18	24

—A. C. Vail, of West Eight street, is improving his handsome residence by a coat of light paint.

—The young people of Bound Brook are preparing to give another Assembly soon after Easter.

FOR THE CITY'S HEALTH.

MORE SEWER CONNECTION ORDERED ALONG VARIOUS STREETS.

New Rules to Govern Plumbing Work—The Inspector Busy Making Investigations of the Local Establishments.

Much business occupied the attention of the Board of Health at the regular meeting held last evening in their rooms on Park avenue.

The president was requested to order connections with city sewer along Front street from Plainfield avenue to Watchung avenue; on Watchung avenue, from Front street to Sixth street; on Sixth street, from Watchung avenue to Plainfield avenue; on Plainfield avenue, from Sixth street to Front street, and along all streets within the territory bounded by these streets, as rapidly as inspections can be made and the work done by Plainfield plumbers.

After April 15th a fee of $1 will be required from city plumbers when the work consists of only soil pipe and one or more sinks. For soil pipe, one or more sinks and water closets, a fee of $2 will be charged. For the same, as above, with further fixtures, the regular fee of $3 will be made. Plumbers are required to report all alterations or additions made to the Board of Health whether plans have been filed or not, in order that the work may be inspected.

The president was also requested to order connections with city sewer in any part of the city when it shall appear from the report of the Inspector of this Board that such connection is desirable.

It was declared that the outhouses in the thickly settled parts of the city are a nuisance and the president was directed to order that the use of such vaults be discontinued, emptied and disinfected, when in his judgment such action is desirable.

The president and secretary were appointed a committee to confer with a similar committee of the Board of Health of North Plainfield, and with power to act in any matter of importance to the city and borough.

The monthly report of the the Inspector shows that there are now only four cases of contagious disease in the city. There have been thirty-seven visits to houses where there was contagious disease. There have been thirty-two inspections made on complaints of violations to the plumbing ordinance. Five bakery shops have been inspected, and the number of inspections of water tests and sewer connections were fifty-four. The Inspector found eight cases of defective plumbing, and he made 121 house to house inspections.

CHILDREN OF LOCAL PRIDE.

A Young Auxiliary to Help Women Make a Pretty City.

About forty members of the Junior Town Improvement Association met in the Y. M. C. A. building Tuesday afternoon for the first time since they organized. The object of the meeting was for the election of officers chiefly, and the following were chosen:

President, Wilhelmina Patton; first vice-president, Pendleton Rogers; second vice-president, Elsie Goddard; treasurer, Charles Robert.

Charles Robert acted as chairman of the meeting and Mrs. Pond served as secretary pro tem. The members decided to divide the city into districts and then to sub-divide the districts. A captain will be appointed, and he will appoint his assistants, who will see that the work is done properly. The objects of the association have been stated in these columns before and the principal object is to make good citizens for Plainfield. The young association will assist the older association all they can and great things are expected of them. The next meeting of the association will be held two weeks from yesterday at 3:45 in the afternoon.

Business, Tricks and Oysters.

They had a great time around at the meeting of the Independent Fife and Drum Corps, Tuesday. A business meeting of the Corps was held at first and routine business was transacted. Then the members were entertained with a number of sleight-of-hand tricks by Profs. Adams and Sherwood. The evening was concluded with an oyster supper, to which all the members were invited. It was very successful and the members were highly delighted with the evening's fun.

Quilting and Sewing.

The Woman's Association of the Congregational Church will hold a meeting in the church parlor on Thursday afternoon, April 1. The programme for the month's meetings will be reversed, as Thursday's meeting will be for quilting and sewing, while the missionary meeting will be held during the latter part of the month.

FINE CHINA PAINTING.

EXHIBITION OF MRS. COLLES T. POND AND PUPILS NOW ON.

Some Creditable Specimens of Handwork by Plainfield Women Who Have a Taste For Art—Few of the Exhibits Mentioned.

It is seldom that the people of this city have the opportunity of attending a china painting exhibit of such rare merit as that afforded by the one which was opened Thursday afternoon in the Babcock building by Mrs. Colles T. Pond, a thorough student in the art. Mrs. Pond has several scholars who have been preparing for the exhibit during the past few months. In the collection furnished by Mrs. Pond there are some fine specimens in china painting which includes royal blue china with raised gold and cut-tooling of dainty roses, a dove with purple asters and a salad bowl with fround ferns. Mrs. Pond's work in painting fruits and roses is especially fine.

The largest exhibit presented is that furnished by Mrs. Thomas Minford, which is very large and beautiful, and among the pieces which are attracting favorable comment are three large floral sets, a punch set and a mantel set. Mrs. Minford's work shows great care and rare talent in the art. She is deeply interested student and produces fine work.

A very attractive bit of work is a rose bowl supported by three cupids. This is the work of Mrs. Charles Lyman and is exceedingly rare.

Mrs. Stephen Krom has in her collection a vase which is very beautiful and valuable. On the vase is painted a landscape scene of Bayou Teche, on the Mississippi. In early years Mrs. Krom resided at this place and the picture is an ideal one. One side is a winter scene and the other side is a summer scene.

Miss Lillian Fritts has among her collection a pretty lemonade set which is greatly admired by all. A violet tray, the work of Mrs. Littell, shows carefulness and taste. Mrs. Thiers has produced a very beautiful jardiniere which is richly painted with appropriate colors. Miss Utter presents a loving-cup very pretty and dainty, while Mrs. L. W. Randolph has in her collection a chocolate pitcher which is artistic in design and beautiful in color. A dainty bureau set in blue by Miss Langdon attracts considerable attention by the lovers of art. Mrs. Seymour Smith presents as a masterpiece a claret pitcher which is rich in color and effect, and Mrs. Samuel W. Clark's work on a dainty lamp is beautiful. A cracker jar by Mrs. William O. Worth shows excellent taste in design and color.

All of the above-mentioned women are students under the direction of Mrs. Pond and they have succeeded in producing a display of valuable work. Everyone has exhibited rare talent for the work in which they are engaged and they were highly commended by the large number of people who attended the exhibit.

SUNDAY SCHOOL OFFICERS.

First Methodist Society Hold Their Annual Meeting.

The teachers and officers of the Sunday school of the First M. E. church held their annual meeting, last Friday, in Vincent chapel. The principal business of the evening was the election of the officers for the Sunday-school for the opening year. All the old officers were re-elected as follows:—President James R. Jackson; secretary, Nelson Y. Hull; treasurer, Arthur E. Crane; librarian, Louis M. Dunavan. George R. Cornwell and and G. M. Bittenbouse were appointed assistant superintendents.

The missionary society of the Sunday-school held an election also and chose Samuel Bingaman as president and James R. Joy as vice-president.

Annual reports were received from the secretary, treasurer, and librarian and from the missionary society. The latter reported that the Sunday school had contributed $200 during the past year for the support of the missions.

Junior Superintendents Confer.

The regular bi-monthly meeting of the Junior Christian Endeavor Union of this county was held Thursday afternoon in the Central Baptist church, Elizabeth. There were superintendents present from Plainfield, South Plainfield, Rahway, Cranford, Roselle and Elizabeth. The subject of the meeting was "Missions Among the Juniors," and after a long and interesting discussion it was decided to try if possible to organize Junior Christian Endeavor societies in the colored churches in each city in the county. It was also decided to hold the May meeting on the afternoon of the date that the County Christian Endeavor Union hold their annual meeting.

For a Kindergarten School.

The one story building on West Fifth street, near Central avenue, formerly occupied by W. H. Rogers, the bicycle dealer, is now being painted, papered and thoroughly renovated. It will be opened on April 5th as a kindergarten connected with the public schools.

Judson R. Giles, of East Sixth street, is able to be out after an illness.

Y. M. C. A. CYCLE LEAGUE.

ENTHUSIASTIC WHEELMEN ARRANGE RUNS FOR THE SUMMER.

Plainfielders Active in the League Which Was Started Last Year—Dates and Destination of Their New Scheduled Runs.

Everything points toward an active season for the wheelmen of New Jersey. Last year the Y. M. C. A.'s of this part of the state took an initiative step toward organization and united effort and this year the associations have enlarged their scope and promise to give their wheelmen an unusually active season. An informal league was organized last year at Westfield by representatives of five of neighboring associations. Plainfield was one of the first to take up the matter and push it forward to a successful completion, Thomas U. Cuming, captain of the cycling division of the Plainfield association, taking an active part in the organization of the of the league.

Another meeting was held in the rooms of the Y. M. C. A. in Elizabeth, Thursday evening, to reorganize the league for active sport for the coming season The league is known as the Y. M. C. A. Cycle League of Northern New Jersey. The meeting was called to order by S. E. Houston, of Summit, president of the league last year. G. H. Barnston, of Elizabeth, was chosen president for the coming year and D. W. Littell, Jr., of Plainfield, secretary. Representatives from the associations of the following cities and towns were present:—Plainfield, Summit, Rahway, Passaic, Madison and Elizabeth. Montclair was represented by letter. It is understood that Orange, New Brunswick and Morristown will join the league at once. The Plainfield delegates were Thomas U. Cuming and D. W. Littell, Jr.

The principal business of the meeting was the arrangement of the schedule of runs. They were arranged as follows:—May 6, Rahway; May, 20; Passaic; June 3, Plainfield; June 17, Madison; July 1, Montclair; July 15, New Brunswick; July 29, Morristown; August 12, Orange; August 26, Elizabeth; September 9, Summit. As can be seen the runs will be held on every other Thursday evening.

All the runs are to arrive at the entertaining association's rooms by 9 o'clock.

TROUBLE IN A SCHOOL

WESTFIELD PEOPLE STIRRED UP OVER THE PRINCIPAL'S DECISION

He Orders a Certain Hymnal to be Used at Devotional Exercises, and It Arouses Both Catholics and Protestants to Protest

Principal Edwards of the Westfield Public School, created quite a storm Thursday that is liable to increase in fury for days to come. It is required by law, that the Bible be read in the public school, and this has always been done there; though the exercises are being conducted as non-sectarian as possible. Thursday began the discussion. During chapel exercises, Principal Edwards notified the scholars that unless each brought a Bible and a copy of the Pentacostal hymnal to chapel, he would withhold the pencil-tablets from them. That is what caused the storm. The Catholics are indignant because they say there is no Parochial School there to which they can send their children, and while they are willing and satisfied with the public school and send their children to them, they do not think it just for the principal to prescribe what hymnal they shall use, especially under a penalty. The protestants are almost as angry. They claim that the pencil-pads are furnished by the Board of Education along with the other supplies and that the principal has no authority to withhold them from the pupils. It is likely that the matter will be brought to the attention of the School Board.

NEW TEACHERS.

North Plainfield School Corps Increased in Capable Instruction.

Another teacher has been added to the North Plainfield High School Corps in the person of Miss Elizabeth E. Mann, A. B., a graduate of Smith College, Northampton, Mass., and of the Teachers' College, New York City.

Miss Maude Acock, a graduate of the New Jersey State Normal School, has been secured to take the place of the late Miss Glinn. Both of the above teachers are thoroughly competent for the positions they take. This school now has a corps of teachers which is second to none in the State. They all have diplomas and every one has qualified for the position of teacher. Miss Grace Howard Petrie, A. B., a Plainfield young woman, is a graduate of Elmira College, and she has a very important class in this school. The other teachers have also graduated from schools of reputation. The people of North Plainfield are to be congratulated in having such a fine and efficient corps of instructors who are doing their best to make the school one of the best in New Jersey.

—VanEmburgh & Son's dry goods store will be opened every evening from this date on.

BOOTHS OF NICE THINGS.

SUCCESSFUL SALE CONDUCTED BY A SUNDAY-SCHOOL CLASS.

Miss Lizzie Dunn's Young Students, of Trinity Reformed Church, Manage an Affair That Was Quite Profitable.

Even with the many and varied attractions that were offered to the Plainfield public, last Thursday, the sale that was conducted in the parlors of the Trinity Reformed church, yesterday afternoon and evening, by the members of Miss Lizzie Dunn's Sunday-school class, did not suffer by comparison. There was a good attendance and the sale itself was a great success. The parlors presented a very pretty appearance with the different booths in their many colored decorations.

As already stated, the sale was arranged by the members of Miss Dunn's class. In this they were assisted by a number of their friends. Miss Dunn had a general supervision over the affair and her skill and taste were evident on all sides. The sale was for the benefit of the carpet fund.

The first booth to attract the attention of the guest on entering was the grab-bag, or rather grab-box, decorated in pink and white. Miss Ida TenEyck and Miss Lulu Vail were in charge. In the corner on the left was the lemonade booth, built in a rustic manner, with orange the prevailing color. Wheat was used by the decorators. Miss Grace Emmons was in charge and Miss Minnie Arnold acted as cashier.

A dainty structure of green, with here and there a bit of white bunting and extremely real-looking carnations, was the fancy table, worthy of its name. Miss Gertrude Tier and Miss Elizabeth Denckla supervised the sale of the charming articles of a fancy nature that were exposed for sale.

In one of the alcoves in the rear of the room was the candy table and its near relative, the pop corn table. Green, pink and white were the colors used in the decoration of the two booths. Miss Beulah Waters and Miss Lillian Hope looked after the candy, with Miss Cora Young as cashier, while Miss Freda Volkmann was kept busy at the pop corn table.

Aprons were on sale at an artistically decorated table in another corner of the room. Orange and white were the prevailing colors of the decorations there. Miss Mabel Wilson was cashier, while Miss Lida Day and Miss Lizzie Williams looked after the sale of the aprons.

Last but not least comes the cake table, groaning under an abundance of delicious home-made cakes. The table didn't groan very long, however, as the cakes disappeared in short order. Pink and white were used as the decorating colors and an arch was arranged over the front of the booth.

In one of the side rooms ice cream and cake were sold. The waitresses in charge were the Misses Beade TenEyck, Grace Ten Eyck, Hattie Randell and Lucy Coriell.

The decorating of the different booths was done by the girls in charge and their efforts seemed to be very successful. Mrs. Josie Tier collected the tickets at the door.

The programme in the afternoon consisted of a recitation by little Elsie Tier.

In the evening the following programme was rendered: Instrumental solo, Mrs. Templin; recitation, Miss Bessie Martin; instrumental trio, Mrs. George Saums, Mrs. Corle, Mrs. Templin; recitation, Miss Minnie Arnold; vocal solo, Mrs. Templin; instrumental trio, Mrs. Saums, Mrs. Corle, Mrs. Templin.

Every one of the above numbers was well received and many encores were given. It would be manifestly unfair to offer any criticism regarding any one number, for each one shared alike in the generous applause accorded.

The net proceeds of the sale was $68. The expenses were slight, and it is thought the above amount will be almost clear gain.

A PASTOR SURPRISE.

Mt. Zion A. M. E. Members Make Rev. J. E. Groves an Unexpected Call.

A pleasant surprise was tendered Rev. James E. Groves, of Mt. Zion A. M. E. church, last Thursday. The surprise was complete. An address was delivered by Mr. Samuel Till appropriate to the occasion. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Hooper, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Maynard, Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Grobes, Mr. and Mrs. McNeally, Mrs. A. Peters, Mrs. G. Jones, Mrs. S. Marsh, Mrs. C. Peterson. Mrs. T. Dunham, Mrs. G. Heywood, Mrs S. King, Miss L. Gee, Miss S. Washington, Mr. P. Simmons, Mr. J. Bonner, Mr. G. Cannon, Mr. and Mrs. S. Till, Mr. and Mrs. H. Lare, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Downs, Mr. and Mrs. L. Coles, Mrs. R. Vorhees, Mrs. J. Fisher, Mrs. L. Brown, Mrs. H. Jones, Mrs. A. Brown, Mrs. M. J. Mitchell, Miss H. Langford, Miss S. Taylor, Miss J. Curtis, Mr. T. Johnson, Mr. F. Kelso, Mr. D. Martin.

THE SERGEANT'S VISION

IT WAS OF THE COAT TAILS OF AN ESCAPED PRISONER.

Sergeant Kiely Pursued the Dusky Prisoner and Captured Him after a Short but Thrilling Meeting—Parker Was the Man

Sergeant Kiely had a vision, Thursday afternoon, that was unlike anything he had seen for many a day. It was of the coat tails of one of the prisoners disappearing over the back fence that surrounds the back yard of the city lockup. And when the coat tails vanished from view the Sergeant knew that he was not dreaming but that the prisoner was gone, and that his vision was a true one. It was not very long before the Sergeant saw those coat tails again but under different circumstances, and now the wearer of the coat to which they were attached is mourning over his folly in attempting to escape from the clutches of the Plainfield police.

In Thursday's Press was told the story of the arrest of William Parker, a colored resident of this city, on the charge of assault, by Miss Annie Randolph. Parker was arraigned before Justice Nash Thursday afternoon for hearing. Annie Randolph told her story simply and very convincingly. All the cross-examination of the lawyer for the accused could not change her testimony. The Justice deemed the evidence sufficient and held Parker in $300 bail for the Grand Jury. As the bail was not forthcoming, Justice Nash ordered Constable Mattox to take the offender to the county jail at Elizabeth. Mattox planned to take him there later in the afternoon.

It was about four o'clock when Sergeant Kiely went to Parker's cell and ordered him to take his pail and empty it in the back yard as all prisoners are accustomed to do. Parker took his pail and walked out into the fresh air while Kelly remained inside. Parker did not come back and the Sergeant wondered what was the matter. Perhaps the heart of the dusky offender had relented and he wanted to confess his crime. The Sergeant stepped to the door and there just sliding over the high board fence to the roof of Odam's slate shed were the coat tails of the prisoner who had escaped.

It took the Sergeant just three leaps to get out of the front door of the jail and not many more to reach Park avenue. As he reached that street he saw a streak of dusky hue pass up Fourth street. John Keeley was passing in his hack and into that jumped the pursuing officer. They drove up Fourth street to Arlington avenue and then down to Third street. On Arlington avenue near Third street there is a row of little houses known as the Hatfield row, which are mostly occupied by colored tenants. It was to these that Kiely thought the escaped Parker had fled. And he was right.

The Sergeant entered one of the yards to find Parker standing in the back yard close by. There was no room for the man to run so he put up his fists in true sporting style. Now he didn't know the Sergeant. The fight did not last long, in fact, it only needed one blow from the officer's fist, which landed squarely on the chin of the other man, to lay Parker in the dust or rather the mud.

Kiely escorted the recaptured prisoner back to his cell and not long after the poor Mr. Parker, of Plainfield, was en route for Elizabeth, well-secured at the side of Constable Mattox. He was placed safely in the jail to dream of freedom and watermelons. His attempt to escape will be counted against him at his trial.

MISSIONARY SOCIETY ELECT.

Officers Chosen For a First Baptist Church Auxiliary.

The annual meeting of the Young Ladies' Missionary Society of the First Baptist church was held Friday afternoon in the church parlors. The following officers were elected for the ensuing term:

President, Mrs. Dewitt C. Brokaw; First Vice President, Miss Laura J. Bunyon; Second Vice President, Miss Susie Woodland; Recording Secretary, Miss Bertha Needham; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Frank Jones. The following committees were also appointed: Work—Mrs. Harold Serrell, Mrs. E. Van Name, Mrs. Chas. Conover, Miss Helen Speer. Lookout—Miss Ida Yerkes, Mrs. Budd Vail, Miss Laura J. Bunyon, Miss Mamie French. Literary—Miss Julia Shinn, Mrs. George Batcheler. Collectors—Mrs. E. Van Name, Miss Ida Lewis, Miss Margaret Harold, Miss Hattie Shreve, Miss Grace Yerkes, Mrs. F. M. Slater, Mrs. L. Simpson and Miss Mamie Franch.

The society at present has a membership of 105 and is constantly growing. Sewing meetings are held every two weeks and the efforts of the members are divided between the home and foreign work. The annual reports, as published in these columns a few days ago, were presented at the meeting yesterday afternoon.

Miss Phebe Lovell, daughter of L. N. Lovell, a student at Vassar College, has returned to her home on Crescent avenue for her Spring vacation.

DISGRACE TO THEIR SEX

DRUNKEN WOMEN WHO MADE SIGHTS OF THEMSELVES.

Johanna Haley Just Out of Jail, Gets in a Drunken Stupor, and Goes Back to Board With Jail Warden Blore Thirty Days

Three victims of the rum habit lined up before the City Judge last week to plead for mercy again. Two of them had been there many times before, and it was the same old story with them. Strange to say, the gentler sex predominated among the offenders.

James Emmons was arrested for being drunk and disorderly about the city streets during last Thursday. He pleaded guilty of the charge. The Judge gave him his choice between a fine of $3 and thirty days in the county jail. The fine was paid.

A glance back over the blotter at the police station shows the name of Johanna Haley at frequent intervals. She comes from Paradise Alley and is one of its most famous denizens. In that neighborhood, she has kept the police in a hustle for many a time. It was her love for "Jersey lightning" that brought her into trouble Thursday. Perhaps she thought that the clouds looked so like a thunder storm that some "lightning" was needed. At any rate she indulged and soon she was in too far to be good for the benefit of the community.

Somebody told Special Officer Edward Martin that the North avenue station that she was trying to go to sleep in the rear porch of a Watchung residence and the officer went after her and with the assistance of a friend, landed her in the bottom of one of the cells in the rookery.

She had to say when they brought her before City Judge De-Mess but it did not amount to much and the Judge decided that she needed a thirty days sojourn to recover from the effects of her little racket.

Another woman, helplessly drunk, made a sad spectacle on West Second street. She was not able to take care of herself and spent her time in trying to hold up the fence. Patrolman Flannagan escorted her to the city jail where she spent the night and appeared before the Judge, this morning, and penitent. She gave her name as Mary Duffy and as she was but a regular boarder of the city, the Judge let her off with a fine of $3.

LIVELY MORNING BLAZE.

A BARN, OWNED BY EX-COUNCILMAN JOHNSON, BURNED.

Used by Fred W. Hand in Yard Now Owned by W. D. Manning—The Loss Very Nearly Covered by Insurance.

About 9 o'clock last Friday Fred W. Hand, of South avenue, noticed that the barn in the rear of his house was on fire, and as soon as possible he went to Box 28, which is near by, and sent in an alarm. Only a few minutes elapsed before the chemical engine and other fire department apparatus appeared on the scene and did good work in confining the fire to the barn which stands in the centre of the wood and coal yards which belong to W. D. Manning. The barn is owned by ex-Councilman Johnson, and Mr. Hand had stable room in it.

After sending in the alarm Mr. Hand went back and rescued his horse. His only loss was a set of harness Mr. Manning had a quantity of hay in the barn, and this was consumed. The barn was insured for $150, and it is not thought that the entire loss will be much over $200.

The supposition is that the barn caught fire from the sparks of a passing locomotive. There was no one around the yard at the time, and had not Mr. Hand been home the result of the fire would probably have been much worse. One tank was emptied from the chemical engine, and then the apparatus was sent back. Several lines of hose were laid from the nearby hydrants and an immense quantity of water was used before the fire was extinguished. The recall was sent in about 10 o'clock.

A BOOK SOCIABLE.

Participants in Congregational Sociable Representing Literary Work.

Forty young people assembled in the parlors of the Congregational church last Thursday for the "Book" sociable of the Christian Endeavor Society of the church. Although the idea of representing books was not a new one, it proved very successful and all who were able to come spent a very pleasant evening. Nearly every body made some attempt to represent a book, and while the attempts were not very elaborate, some of them were particularly taking. After an hour in which the guests chatted and tried to guess the names of the different books which the others represented, games were played and some of the members gave musical selections. Refreshments closed the sociable. The committee in charge consisted of Miss Julia Belknap, chairman; Miss Ella Beekman, Mrs. C. L. Goodrich, Miss Mary Chase, Miss J. Pond, Miss Captola Conover and Miss Maud Belknap.

HEAVY DAMAGE SUIT.

A RUTHERFORD MAN MADE THE DEFENDANT IN THE ACTION.

Dr. Wood's Wife Alleges That Theodore T. a Brook was the Cause of an Injury—There Had Been a Dispute About a Bill.

Reed & Coddington, Plainfield's well-known lawyers, have just opened a very interesting case in the Supreme Court and the result will be watched with a great deal of interest. About one month ago Mrs. Wood, wife of Dr. Wood, of Crescent avenue, received an injury to her spine which almost resulted in death. It appears that at that time Theodore Ten Brocek, of Rutherford, Essex county, called at Dr. Wood's house to collect some money for an apparatus which Dr. Wood had purchased sometime previous. There was an agreement that the machine was to cost a certain amount, but Mr. Ten Broeck, who is a member of the firm of Ten Broeck & Van Houten, of New York, came to collect additional money which he claimed for extra expense.

Mrs. Wood offered the man a check for the agreed amount but this he refused to accept, saying that he must have the full amount. Mr. Wood refused to give any more than the agreed upon. Mr. Ten Broeck then said that he would take the apparatus out of the house and it is supposed that it was for this reason that he came to Plainfield. Dr. Wood appeared and stated that it was against his wishes that the apparatus should be taken out of the house, and he was ordered from the house. In opening the front door it is alleged that Mr. Ten Broeck struck Mrs. Wood with such force as to throw her against the sharp point of a desk. When she fell she struck her spine. She was quickly picked up and was not thought to be severely injured at the time.

Later developments showed that the spine had been injured and had caused semi-paralysis. Since then Mrs. Wood has suffered the most excruciating pains and her life was despaired of. In fact, she is not out of danger at present.

Mrs. Wood has retained Reed & Coddington and the firm brought suit for $10,000 in the Supreme Court last week against Theodore Ten-Broeck.

Mrs. Wood has been under the care of Drs. Hedges and Tomlinson since her injury, and every effort is being made to restore her to health.

UNDER THE COLORS OF N. J. A. C.

Plainfield Athletes Who Will be Among the Crack Amateurs.

Four of the best athletes of the Plainfield High School are all expecting to compete this summer under the colors of the New Jersey Athletic Club. The athletic committee of that organization understand that what they want is the younger element of athletes who are to be the champions in a few years. Sulzer, the crack short distance runner of Pingry's School of Elizabeth, and Manvell, of the same school, who has such a reputation for a quarter and half-miler, are members of that club and will represent it in all events outside of school meets.

The Plainfield young men, who have become or soon will be athletic members of the New Jersey Athletic Club, are Bradley H. Hillman, Carroll L. Bunyon, George Proctor Smith and Walter S. Serrell. Hillman and Bunyon will be in the bicycle squad. The former has learned how to ride on the club's unbanked track and is a hard man to defeat. Bunyon will train on that track this summer and is a good middle rider with lots of endurance. Smith will enter in the pole vault, throwing the hammer and putting the shot. Serrell will train for the running broad jump and possibly the quarter mile.

POTTERS BOWLERS LOST.

Cleveland Cyclers Went in to Win and Accidentally Made Other Purpose.

The Cleveland Cyclers didn't do a thing to their bowling team last Friday on the Ulrich alleys. The former team had blood in their eye and they were determined to win the game. The utmost excitement prevailed throughout the evening, and each side piled themselves hoarse. There were no high scores made, but the Cyclers bowled so well that their opponents could not touch them, and when the totals were footed up it was learned that they had 294 more pins than the Potter team. Below will be found the scores:

Cyclers.		Potters.
Young	145	Shannon	132
Hand	158	Evans	136
Babcock	151	Bailey	138
Overbaugh	150	Conett	136
Giles	146	Bailey	136
Hall	136	Shinglor	130
Gutphen	145	Gleason	136
Hall	140	Carl	136
Overbaugh, M.	150	Whalen	136
Tumlaren	130	Malcolm	136
	1450		1360

The scores were L. Scheelein and Bert Sutphen, and the umpires were Peter Bilmm and C. Sutphen.

Ladies' Aid Elect.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Hope chapel, at its recent meeting, elected the following officers: — President, Mrs. S. R. Struthers; Vice-president, Mrs. J. B. Biggins; Secretary, Mrs. McComas; Treasurer, Mrs. Page

INDIA INVITES HELP.

CHRISTIAN MISSIONARIES NEEDED IN THAT FAR EAST LAND.

Mr. Scudder, Who Has Lived and Worked Among the People of That Country, Tells of Their Queer Life and Customs.

It is seldom that a missionary lecture attracts a very large audience now a days, such, was the case last Friday at Trinity Reformed church, where Mr. Scudder, a native missionary of India, gave an illustrated lecture concerning the manners and customs of the people of his country. The views used by Mr. Scudder are the finest ever seen and portray very accurately the subject which is so dear to his heart. It was with the greatest interest that the audience listened for two hours to a talk brimful of facts which not only gave them a clear idea of the general conditions of affairs in India, but also carried them as to the needs of the people.

Mr. Scudder began his lecture by telling something regarding the people in India and of their condition, and the manner in which they live. He showed their depravity in many forms and explained the difficulty experienced in getting the natives to listen to the missionaries. He spoke of the high and low caste, and related many interesting things concerning the distinction in a social way between these two classes. Superstition, he held, was even worse than idolatry, for in the former regard the natives are very hard to reach.

The excellent work being done by the Reformed church was set forth, and many pictures were shown of natives who had been converted and, in contrast to those who had not been, were was a striking comparison. In showing the foundation of the work in India several views were showed of Reformed churches located at different prominent places where there are large settlements, and the structures in each case are in keeping with the churches in this country. In smaller places an improvised structure is arranged and answers very well the needs. At the latter places a teacher can be supported for the sum of $5 a month and good work is done by the native missionaries who are converted and have a desire to labor for the salvation of their people.

Mr. Scudder spoke at some length regarding the impurity of the people of India and how immortal they are, especially among the so-called priests who pretend to be so good.

A deserving compliment was paid to the American missionaries who try their best to save souls from being lost and he urged the people of this country to give more money for their support. He said that he was going to return to his native land, but the Board of Missions did not feel as though they could send him. Another discouraging factor was that the Board felt as though they must reduce the expenses and wherever possible the appropriations had been cut. He hoped that the people would be led to give more largely of their means.

There were many things related by Mr. Scudder which would be read with deep interest by many but space will not permit their being published. The lecture was an exceptionally interesting one and all present felt as though they had been drawn nearer to the cause of missions by hearing it.

A collection was taken far the cause at the close of the lecture, and, after the singing of "From Greenland's Icy Mountains," the evening of profit and pleasure came to an end.

PRIZE WINNERS AT EUCHRE.

Sunday Night Club Entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dryden.

The Saturday Night Euchre Club was very pleasantly entertained last Saturday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dryden, of Watchung avenue. The entire membership of the club was present and the guests were Miss DeLamp, of Chester, and Dr. Anderson, of this city.

The first ladies' prize, a chafing dish, was awarded to Mrs. Peter Schultz, while the second ladies' prize, a cut-glass bowl, was presented to Mrs. W. B. Codington. H. C. Van Emburgh won first honors for the men, a sterling pencil-holder, and a smoking match case was presented to Nicholas Terhune, as second prize.

After the game a social time was passed during which dainty refreshments were served. The club will be entertained Saturday evening, April 10th, by Mr. and Mrs. DeLong, of Sandford avenue.

Died From a Paralytic Stroke.

Michael Coleman, of Chatham street, who was reported so ill last week as the result of a paralytic stroke, died at his home early Monday morning. He leaves a wife and two children. He was a machinist by trade and worked at one of the local shops. His body will be removed to Worcester, Mass., for burial, and his family will reside at that place.

Petition for Library Appropriation.

A petition is being circulated and numerously signed, asking the Common Council to vote the appropriation asked for by the Board of Directors of the Public Library.

$200 FOR FALSE CHARGE

THAT IS WHAT DAVID BLOWER WANTS J. W. VANSICKLE TO PAY.

The Butcher Accused the Colored Man of Being the One Who Bunsoed Him Out of McVey's Leg of Lamb Tuesday.

He took nobody's leg of lamb and he intends to make it warm for the man that says he did, so avers David Blower. He was formerly the colored bootblack in Lemuel Perry's barber shop, but is now employed at the residence of Gen. James Negley, of West Seventh street.

Readers of The Press will remember the story of the fore-quarter of lamb that was so easily removed from the butcher shop of J. W. VanSickle by an unknown colored man. Now it seems that Mr. VanSickle identified Blower as the man who obtained the quarter of lamb, and Mr. Blower says that his character is hurt to the amount of $200. Suit is to follow and there promises to be lots of excitement.

According to the statement of Blower and his witnesses, Van Sickle told McVey, to whom the lamb belonged, that he thought Blower was the guilty party. McVey left word at Perry's shop to have Blower stop in and see him. Blower did so and then, it is said, Vap Sickle and Patrolman Robinson, who was standing near by when the colored man, who ever he was, took the fraction of the lamb, both identified Blower as the one who played such a game on the North avenue butcher.

Now Blower says that he is entirely innocent of the charge and that he can prove an alibi, as he goes to work for General Negley at 6:15 in the morning and that the alleged offense was not committed until almost seven o'clock.

Blower was indignant at the charge and was very much wrought up over the matter. It was a stain on his character that must be removed. Thereupon the angry Mr. Blower hurried to Joseph R. Runyon, of the law offices of C. L. Moffett, and secured that gentleman to act as his legal adviser in the matter.

It was decided that a suit should be brought in one of the local justice's courts for $200 for damages to the character of Blower, and Mr. Runyon will take the necessary steps at once.

A WEDDING RECEPTION.

Mr. and Mrs. William Symons Given a Pleasant Welcome.

A delightful wedding reception was given last Friday by Mr. and Mrs. William Symons, at their home No. 409 East Third street. The bride and groom arrived yesterday in this city from Rutland, Vt., where they were married on Wednesday night in the Methodist church. The officiating clergyman was Dr. Gates, who was a classmate of Dr. Barnes, of this city.

The choir of the First-M. E. church of this city, of which the groom is a member, presented him with a very handsome chair, and there many other gifts both costly and useful.

Those present at the reception included Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Davis, Miss Lucie Palmer Davis, Robert Davis, Aivah Davis, Mr. and Mrs. George Firstbrook, Mr. and Mrs. George Firstbrook, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Richard Kissam, Mrs. Samuel Lunger, Mrs. Charles Gaskill, Mrs. Lizzie Firstbrook, Miss Lizzie Firstbrook, Mrs. Wm. Hewitt, Miss Alice Jenkins, Miss Edith DuBoise, Miss Lizzie Stafford, Miss Cora Sheppard, Miss Delia Randolph, Miss Etta Thorn, Miss Julia Shinn, of this city, Miss Viola McAllister, of Belleville; Charles Sprague, James Stafford, J. Hewitt, Charles Hewitt, J. D. McKay, Lorenzo Townley, also of this city. Music for the occasion was furnished by Messrs. Hewitt and Davis, and this added greatly to the enjoyment of all.

The groom is employed at Potter Press Works as an electrician and he is a valued employee. Mrs. Symons is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Alexander, of Rutland, Vt., and she is a highly esteemed young woman who has many accomplishments.

Make Room For All.

It has been suggested that, inasmuch as the re-union of the New Jersey Brigade, which is to be held in this city, April 9th, is to be a city affair, it would be a good idea if Music Hall could be secured for the afternoon exercises. Many have expressed their desire to attend the exercises and it would be impossible to accommodate all who would like to go, at Reform Hall.

A Complete Library.

A most complete and valuable library is the one at the Monroe Avenue M. E church. There are at present about 500 copies of the best books in the library, and to James McGee is due the greater part of the work in getting them together.

Saturday Night Jollity.

The dance of the Plainfield Scandia Society in their hall in the VanDeventer building, on East Front street, Saturday evening, was largely attended. These Saturday night hops are becoming quite popular among the rapidly increasing Swedish element in the city and borough.

HUBS CRASH TOGETHER.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT AVERTED BETWEEN FIRE APPARATUS.

Drivers Townley and Fiering Just Escaped Colliding, Owing to Another Wagon Blocking Their Way on a Corner.

A serious accident was narrowly averted Friday afternoon between two of the fire department apparatus while responding to the alarm of fire from White's dry goods store.

Driver Townley was coming toward Park avenue from Alerts house at a high rate of speed and Driver Fiering was coming toward the same avenue from the opposite direction. Just before Park avenue was reached both drivers noticed that Michael Powers with his horse and wagon was standing right in their way. The crowd yelled to him to get out of the way, but he did not seem able to move his horse one way or the other. It then looked as though a collission between the two apparatus was inevitable. It required the most careful driving to escape, but it was impossible to pass each other without striking. The chemical engine and Alerts wagon came together and the crowd stood motionless, for they expected to see someone killed. The whole affair only required a few seconds, but the escape was most fortunate. The only damage resulted to Alerts wagon. One cap was knocked off the wheel and the cap on the rear wheel was twisted out of shape. An axle was bent considerably. There was no damage to the chemical. If the roadway had been kept clear no collision would have occurred.

The fire broke out in the cupola on the top of the building occupied by White, the cupola containing the working machinery for the elevator, and it is covered on the outside with sheet iron. H. C. Corsa and Thomas Gorman were at work painting the roof and cupola with tar. Close to the latter there was a small pot of fire, which was used to keep the tar warm. The workmen did not watch the fire as closely as they should and presently they detected the smell of smoke. Mr. Corsa at once sent word down stairs to have an alarm of fire sent in. He then said he could not do anything, for the fire had warmed the tar to such a heat that it was boiling and had set fire to the tar paper beneath the iron. The department responded quickly and very soon the fire was extinguished. The damage was trifling and can soon be repaired.

Previous to the arrival of the firemen Mr. White ascended to the roof and with the aid of a hand fire extinguisher succeeded in confining the flames until the firemen could arrive. When the latter reached the roof they used their own extinguishers.

—J. C. Paul's house on Central avenue, is being painted by William Osman, the painter.

NOW TO DEEPER STUDY

CHILDREN ADVANCED IN SEVENTH DAY BAPTIST SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

Nine Children Promoted From the Primary to the Main School With Appropriate Exercisers for the Occasion.

Nine children of the primary department of the Sunday-school of the Seventh Day Baptist church were graduated into the main school, Saturday afternoon, with very impressive exercises. The review of the lessons for the quarter lasted for a short time and then the graduation ceremonies were held.

All the members of the primary department united in singing several selections. The graduating class recited Scripture selections and then showed their knowledge of Bible geography and history. A large relief map of the Holy Land, made of sand, was brought forward and the children located the prominent cities telling some incident relating to each and then located the rivers, boundaries and well-known land marks.

Each of the children was then presented with a diploma and the right hand of fellowship was extended by D. E. Titsworth, superintendent of the Sunday-school, who also spoke a few words of welcome to each one. After an ernest prayer by Rev. A. E. Main, and more singing, the exercises closed. They were made very impressive by those in charge.

The exercises were conducted by Mrs. Joseph P. Mosher, superintendent of the primary department and her assistants, Miss Ida L. Spicer, Mrs. George E. Stillman and Miss Mabel Maxson. The teacher of the new class thus formed is Clarence Rogers. The children who graduated were Gertrude Anderson, Edna Randolph, Charles P. Titsworth, Wendall Mosher, Lawrence Miller, Charles Naegle, Daniel Randolph, Daniel Rogers and Fred Rogers. There are now twenty-nine members of the primary department remaining.

The Firemen Thanked.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—I desire to thank the firemen of the city of Plainfield for their promptness in responding to the call, and for their valuable assistance in extinguishing the flames at my place on Friday morning.

John Johnston.

ANOTHER WHIST VICTORY

PARK CLUB FOUR CAME OUT ON TOP IN STATE CONGRESS.

They Had a Hard Contest, Though Against the Crack Princetonians and the Averse Sympathy of Other Players.

It was a narrow escape, but the whist players of the Park Club made one great effort and the cup was theirs, for a while at least. There has been a great improvement among the whist players of the State during the past year, and the other clubs, besides the Park's, have been making great progress in the game, so that the Park's found no easy thing to win at the whist congress of the State Association, held last week. By careful work, the Park's won their way into the finals which were played on Saturday evening. The other team was from the Princeton University Whist Club.

The Princeton players were careful and steady in their game and took the lead from the hitherto victorious Park's at the start. The sympathy of the crowd of over a hundred whist experts who were in the contest for progressive pairs, was with the Princetons, as they wished to see the Park's meet their match, but they didn't.

Up to the last round the Princeton team was ahead by four points, and then the Park team played as they had not played before. It was a strong game in which they are famous, and it succeeded, for when the final score was announced the Park's were found to be two points ahead of their opponents.

The teams represented were: Park, George T. Rogers, Samuel Townsend, S St. John McCutchen and Joseph H. Howell; Princeton University Whist Club, Messrs. Leavitt, Howe, Henry, H. Dyke, B. Frank Carter, Edwin S. Lewis.

The result of the games was as follows: First round, Princeton 4, Park 3; second round, Princeton 7, Park 4; third round, Princeton 2, Park 8. Total score, Princeton 13, Park 15.

At the termination of the games President T. E. Otis, in a few well chosen remarks, presented each of the winners in the Park four, Progressive four and the pair contests with a solid gold medal. The design is the ace of spades, the State association emblem, surrounded by a wreath. The medal is engraved with "New Jersey State Whist Association, 1897," together with the name of the contest in which it was won. The spade and name of the association was in black enamel.

As the victory in the congress counts for two, the Park's now have nine victories to their credit, out of fifteen necessary to win the trophy as their personal property. All the clubs have challenged and the order in which they will play will be decided by lot. The next game will be played in this city on next Monday evening when the Park's will play whoever is first on the list.

WORK OF VANDALISM

CHILDREN'S SUMMER CAMP HOUSE TURNED TOPSY-TURVY.

Discovered by H. H. Webb While Strolling Along the Mountain—Shutter Broken and Entrance Made Through a Window.

Vandals have worked with a good deal of frequency in the last few months on the numerous small summer lodges and houses on the mountain and the latest piece of work of this kind was discovered Sunday afternoon by H. H. Webb, while strolling along the mountain ridge. In approaching the structure connected with the children's summer camp, maintained by the Local Union of the King's Daughters, Mr. Webb noticed that it looked in a rather dilapidated condition. He investigated, and found that the boards covering the windows had been pried off the fastenings and some of the panes of glass had been shattered in an effort to get at the catch to open the window and thus gain an entrance. It is evident that the invaders climbed through the window and opened the door from the inside. The interior of the house looked as though it had been ransacked and turned topsy-turvy, though if there was anything missing Mr. Webb was unable to account for it, not being acquainted with its furnishings.

Mr. Webb fixed up the house the best that he could under the circumstances and returned to this city and notified the King's Daughters.

Fixed the Street Themselves.

Property owners along West Third street have been clamoring to have some crushed stone sprinkled on that thoroughfare. During the recent thaw and rain storm the street was next to impassible, so some of the residents gathered up stones and clam shells from their premises and filled in some of the dangerous spots.

Pythian Silver Anniversary.

The silver anniversary of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, Knights of Pythias, will be held on June 13th. At the meeting of the Lodge, Friday evening, a committee was appointed to look into the subject of celebrating it and suggest plans. The committee consisted of Joseph C. Blimm and Britton Higgins.

GALLOWS THEIR FATE.

TWO SOMERSET COUNTY MURDERERS SENTENCED MONDAY.

Jacob S. Johnson Will be Hung May 5th and Elmer Clawson a Week Later—Took Their Sentence Rather Calmly.

May will be an eventful month in the criminal annals of Somerset county, for during the month two of the four murderers confined in the county jail at Somerville will bid their last farewell to this world and end their life on the gallows in the yard of the Somerset county jail. Such was the decision of Judge Magee who sentenced the two men last Monday before a court room crowded with people.

Last Monday was the time set for the sentencing of Jacob S. Johnson, the colored preacher of Somerville, and Elmer Clawson, the boy murderer of Harry Hodgetts. Long before the appointed time, the crowd began to assemble and filled the court room to overflowing. Judge Magee was in the chair.

Jacob S. Johnson, it will be remembered, was arrested for the murder of Annie Rogers for her money. The crime was committed on September 15, 1895. After his trial, he was found guilty and sentenced to be hanged in the jail yard on March 11, 1896. The case was appealed and subsequently argued before the Supreme Court of the state, which affirmed the judgment of the lower court.

At 11:20 o'clock Johnson walked into the crowded court room for resentence, escorted by Sheriff Wyckoff and two deputy sheriffs. He was not handcuffed. He looked unconcerned and glanced about the room apparently careless as to the result of Judge Magee's deliberations. He listened without emotion while the charge was read and when the Judge solemnly pronounced the sentence of death by hanging in the county jail yard. The date set for the execution was May 5th, between the hours of ten and three o'clock. Johnson was then led back to his cell still exhibiting no sign of distress or sorrow.

Five minutes later Elmer Clawson was escorted into the room by Sheriff Wyckoff and his deputies. Last September, Clawson went to the home of his former employer, Harry Hodgetts, a farmer living in Bedminster township, and calling him out of the house deliberately shot him on his own threshold. He was captured and tried for murder in the Somerset county court. The court declared him guilty. The case was carried to the court of Errors and appeals, which affirmed the decision on the county court. Clawson was but eighteen years of age when he committed the crime.

Clawson was not handcuffed when brought before the Judge. He looked pale and worn, showing the ravages of the close confinement on his young life. There was a smile on his face as the Judge slowly and impressively pronounced the sentence of death by hanging. He showed no sign of mental tribulation, although his hands shook as he walked.

The Judge sentenced him to be hung in the yard of the court house on May 12th, between the hours of 10 and 3.

The death watch was set at once.

THEATRICAL.

A real novelty in farce comedy this season is the Grand Army Veteran character sketch, introduced by John and George Gorman, in the second act of "The Hillsboro Mikado," which is to appear at Music Hall, on Friday night. The dancing at the finish is exquisitely humorous and arouses the audience to a pitch of enthusiasm seldom witnessed in a theatre. This feature must be seen to be appreciated.

Red Men Have a Jolly Time.

An unusually enjoyable meeting was held by Miantonomoh tribe of Improved Order of Red Men, Friday evening. Two candidates were elected to the tribe and one proposition was received. The committee on the dance made its report. Then the braves were entertained by the programme which the good and welfare committee had provided. It consisted of humorous readings by Michael Lahy, a piano solo by William F. Trust, songs and recitations by John B. Hartpence, short talks by Past Sachems W. A. Westphal, William Newcorn, David Morning and Francis Whiteley, guitar selections by John R. Hewitt, baritone solo by Charles L. Holdstein. The pipe of peace was smoked and the meeting adjourned.

Better Street Car Service.

According to a recent order issued by Superintendent John Adleman, of the street railway service, the West Front street and Dunellen cars now run on twelve minutes headway, where heretofore it was fifteen minutes. This change seems to indicate a rapid and steady growth of traffic, especially in the west end of town.

Contest for a Bicycle Prize.

The membership contest at the Y. M. C. A. closes on Thursday. So far the leading contestant has scored sixteen points. The wheel is on exhibition in the window of the Plainfield Cycle and Sporting Goods Company on North avenue.

TOWN SOLONS AT ODDS

WESTFIELD OFFICIALS HAVE A VERY LIVELY SESSION.

Committeeman Endicott and Emree Form a Coterie and Leave Committeeman Hamlin to Act All By Himself as Minority.

The meeting of the Westfield township committee last Saturday evening proved one of the "warmest" meetings, it is said, for the past eight years. A small sized hornet's nest was stirred up. It was supposed to be a special meeting for the transaction of special business. Just as the meeting was under way, L. G. Cohen, one of Westfield's most prominent and intelligent citizens, appeared before the committee and sprung a most peaceable surprise. He was permitted to address the august body and this is what he said: "Gentlemen, I want to ask the committee to engage special counsel to vigorously prosecute the suits at law, pending against ex-Collector, A. K. Gale and the present assessor, John M. C. Marsh, to recover the money which the township has illegally paid over to them."

"But," asked Mr. Embree, "can we get the money?"

"You may rest assured of that," said Mr. Cohen, "ex-Judge Davidson, who is a member of the grand jury said that if the money was not forthcoming you could take the body and in that case the money is usually forthcoming."

Mr. Cohen says that if the committee takes no action before the next grand jury is convened he will go before that body and ask for a presentment, as was done in the spring of 1895.

No action was taken in the matter and as soon as Mr. Cohen was through he left the room, as, he said, "for more congenial atmosphere."

Routine business was resumed, and then began the internal friction. Either Mr. Endicott or Mr. Embree would make a motion, the other would second it and one would put it to a vote and both would vote for it, leaving Committeeman Harden out in the cold, if not entirely ignoring him.

The question of leaving the present rooms was brought up, which was doubtless the real object of the special meeting. Mr. Embree said his reason for leaving were personal as well as economical ones. It was decided to take the rooms of Mr. Grogan at $10 per month. Mr. Hardin refused to take any part in the proceedings, on the ground that the action of the committee was illegal.

The good money was also a bone of contention. Mr. Endicott and Mr. Embree wished to divide the township into three districts and the money into three parts, and each committee be responsible for the roads in his district. This was also objected to by Mr. Hardin, as illegal, and the matter went over.

Mr. Hardin got in another shot at his colleagues then by taking up the matter of township counsel.

"How much did you pay Mr. Bergen last year?" he asked.

"$100."

"The annual report says $250."

"Have you made any proposition to have him as counsel this year?"

"No."

"I wish to go on record right here," he continued, "as being opposed to having as our legal adviser one who is so intimately affiliated with the Union Water Company as is Mr. Bergen."

The committee let the matter drop then and adjourned.

Mr. Grogan, when seen Sunday, said that the committee could not have his place unless it signed a lease for a year.

It was rumored about town Sunday that the committee had decided that their meeting of Saturday night was illegal and would call another special meeting for some evening this week, before the first of April, setting forth in the notice the object of the meeting.

The taxpayers are keeping an eye on the committee and nothing but favorable comments are heard for the open stand Mr. Hardin has taken, and they are ready to back him up in the matter.

REV. A. E. MAIN TO CONTINUE.

Seventh-Day Baptist Congregation Engage the Present Pastor Again.

A congregational meeting was held at the Seventh-Day Baptist church last Sunday for the purpose of calling a pastor, as the term of Rev. A. E. Main, the present pastor expired. The members decided unanimously to call Mr. Main for one year, beginning with April 1st.

Mr. Main has served the church as pastor for the past five months and has given the utmost satisfaction. In recognition of his earnest work the members evidenced their appreciation by giving him a call for another year.

A Fire Chief to Be Appointed.

On Friday evening of this week the borough council will meet in regular session. At this time the appointment of a chief for the fire department will be made and other important business will come up for consideration.

—Edward White will place on sale tomorrow 1200 yards of plain colored organdies at a remarkably low price.

The Constitutionalist.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

TRUE CHRISTIANITY

There are many Christians who believe that socials, fairs, festivals, concerts, pantomimes and other worldly entertainments are occupying too much time and attention of church members who should be engaged in more direct work of saving souls. A prominent Plainfield religious worker believes that this is especially true of Plainfield and he asks to have the following words uttered by Bishop Foster on the subject printed in The Press:

Just now four out of five on church rolls are doing nothing, almost absolutely nothing; and God's blessed cause is not made one whit stronger in numbers or influence by their living. The church of God is today courting the world. Its members are bringing it down to the level of the ungodly. The ball, the theatre, undue and wicked social luxuries, with all their loose moralities, are making inroads into the sacred enclosure of the church. As a satisfaction for all this worldliness, Christians are making a great deal of Lent and Easter and Good Friday and church ornamentations. It is the old trick of Satan. The Jewish church struck on that rock; the Roman church was wrecked on it, and the protestant church is fast reaching the same doom. Our great dangers, as we see them, are assimilation to the world, neglect of the poor, substitution of the form for the fact of godliness, abandonment of discipline, a hireling ministry, an impure Gospel, which, summed up, is a fashionable church. That Methodists should be liable to such an outcome, and that there should be signs of it in a hundred years from the primitive meeting in the "sail loft," seems almost a miracle of history; but who that looks about him today can fail to see the fact? Formerly Methodists attended class and gave testimony of experimental religion. Now the class-meeting is attended by very few and in many churches is abandoned. Seldom the stewards, trustees and leaders of the church attend class. Formerly, nearly every Methodist prayed, testified or exhorted in prayer meeting. Now but few are heard. Formerly shouts and praises were heard; now, such demonstrations of holy enthusiasm and joy are regarded as fanaticism. Worldly socials, fairs, festivals, concerts and such like, have taken the place of the religious gatherings, revival meetings, class and prayer meetings of earlier days.

STREET SPRINKLING.

Though few may realize it, street sprinkling is a problem that the Common Council will eventually have to take up in an effort to provide suitable service for such sections of the city as it seems imperative to have free from the dust blown by every passing summer breeze. The fact of the matter is that the need to have the business streets sprinkled, even at this time of the year, is evident, but it is delayed by the simple business proposition confronting Mr. French, who furnishes the service, that he cannot start his watering carts until those who are to be directly benefited are willing to pledge the necessary expense. Mr. French says that it is with great difficulty that he secures enough signers who are willing to contribute a portion of the expense, an instance of which he relates in the fact that only one out of about every six of those in business on Park avenue are willing to pay their share for the service.

Now, it cannot be denied that in a progressive city, claiming, as Plainfield does, to be thoroughly up-to-date, that obviating flying dust in the business streets in a season when open doors and windows are the rule, is a requirement that cannot be ignored. Whether or not there are sufficient merchants who are liberal enough to pay their pro rata share of benefit, the city must recognize the indispensability of having the atmosphere, at least in the business section, free from the particles that are far from agreeable to have lodge on any other place than Mother Earth. There may come a time then, that the authorities will be called upon to provide this service, and assess it in the general tax bill, in lieu of the contribution of individuals, as at present.

WOMAN'S VOTE NOT WANTED.

Though the advocates of woman's rights are ardent and persistent in their pleas with the sterner sex to be put on the same plane in mental work and decision in public affairs, their views were ignored rather summarily in the Methodist conference at Trenton, Friday. A vote was taken on the question, "Whether women shall be admitted as delegates to the General Conference," and without any discussion whatever the proposition was defeated by a vote of 103 to 68. Of all the places where there should be a favorable feeling for woman's participation in affairs now exclusively in the hands of men, the church, it would seem, should incline that way, in view of the fact that it is the energy, the sincerity and the time devoted by women that makes the Christian societies survive the perfunctory visits of the majority of men. It is not to be presumed, however, that the rejection of woman's desire to serve in the higher official church body will dampen their ardor in the work.

THE RESERVES TO BE.

There was such manifest opposition on the part of the majority of the citizens of the State to the bill introduced in the Senate to disband the State Naval Reserves, which was prompted by a misdirected effort for economy, that the measure met with decisive defeat when called up for a vote yesterday in the upper house of the Legislature. The Naval Reserve is of equal importance with the militia, even though it is a new adjunct to the State's protective forces, and is a great credit to the State's patriotism. During the consideration of the bill a petition was read in support of the Reserves which was signed by Craig A. Marsh, ex Judge W. A. Coddington, General Sterling, W. K. McClure, J. B. Coward and other Plainfield citizens.

HARD ROAD TO THE MINISTRY.

When the committee on examinations made its report on candidates for orders to the Methodist Conference at Trenton last week there was no report concerning George H. Greenig. It was stated that he had been persuing his studies for sixteen years, and the question whether he should be continued as a candidate was discussed. Some of the members wanted him dropped from the list, but more wanted him continued, as being worthy and making an uphill struggle. One minister said that the applicant had been doing service for the church at a "hungry hill" charge on a "starvation circuit."

JEALOUS NEW BRUNSWICK.

Plainfield has a population nearly 6,000 less than New Brunswick, and its postal business is much less than that of this city, yet the Government provides Plainfield with very handsome and spacious quarters in the Babcock building, and pays $1,500 a year in rent. Every way the equipment of the office is immensely superior to that in the office in this city. Our office has a very humble appearance compared with that in Plainfield. But then when we get our $125,000 Government building, Plainfield's P. O. won't be in it.—New Brunswick Home News.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, 75c. Hall's Family Pills are the best.

EXEMPT FIREMEN NOMINATE.

Members Who Will Officiate a Year After April 21st.

At the meeting of the Exempt Firemen's Association held last Monday the following nominations were made for officers:—President, A. Saltzman; Vice-President, Alex. Titsworth; Secretary, G. Thorn; Collector, George Clark; Treasurer, Eugene Laing; Trustees, D. W. Littell, Eugene Laing, W. A. Woodruff, E. A. Vermeule, G. H. Fairchild; Representatives to Firemen's Relief Association, A. Saltman, G. Thorn; Representatives to the State Convention, Eugene Laing, D. W. Littell, W. A. Woodruff, Julius J. Stahl, G. Thorn and Edward Flannery.

The election will be held April 21st. William Townley, of this city, and Adolph Kahrmann, of Netherwood, were elected to membership. No other business of any importance was transacted.

Dispute About Rent.

The McDermotts, of Terrill road, were in court again, Monday afternoon, or at least, Mrs. McDermott was. She was plaintiff in a landlord and tenant case in the court of Justice Newcorn, and was suing John McDonald for rent she alleged was due on the rooms he had rented on the Brisbane farm out Terrill road. The defence was conducted by City Judge DeMeza, lawyer for the defendant, who claimed that the lease of the house had been made with Martin McDermott and not Mary McDermott. Mrs. McDermott explained that the farm had passed from the hands of her husband to her and that she should get the rent. The lease showed no change in ownership and the Judge decided that she had no cause for action and the case was dismissed.

Not Bargained For, But Accepted.

In a consignment of fish sent to Rogers, the sea-food man, last week, there was an alligator gar fish, four feet, nine inches long. It is now being mounted for Mr. Rogers by Frank Hedden.

Common Oatmeal

Sold from barrels or oftentimes in fancy packages (but still common oatmeal) is hard to cook, bitter in taste and overheating to the system. It overtaxes the digestive organs and the body derives no benefit from it—it injures rather than helps.

H-O

gets rid of all that is objectionable in oatmeal and preserves all that is valuable. It makes oatmeal a human food, palatable and easy of digestion, without taking away any of the elements needed for the building up of body, bone and brain. All other oatmeals—"steam-dried," "kiln-dried" and "partly cooked"—leave off just where H-O begins.

Subscriptions Free to

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly
Illustrated American (Weekly)
Truth (Weekly)
New England Magazine
Chatterbox (Monthly)
The American Kitchen Magazine
Home Magazine (Monthly)
and Bit Gaston, N. Y.

WITH COUPONS FROM THE

H.O.Co.'s Goods

HOSPITAL'S BUSY MONTH.

REPORTS RECEIVED BY THE BOARD OF GOVERNORS.

Nineteen Persons Cured During the Month at the Institution—Those Who Assisted in the Production of "Caste," Thanked.

The regular meeting of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital was held last Monday. The meeting was a comparatively short one as there was not a great deal of business to be transacted. A resolution was offered and unanimously adopted, in which all those who assisted in the presentation of "Caste," for the benefit of the hospital, were thanked. This includes the stage manager and his assistants and those who gave donations of any kind. Each one will receive personally a copy of the resolution.

The managing committee, who had charge of the erection of the Nurses' Home, made a report stating that the home was completed and in use. The report also gives a list of the donors to the home and those who assisted in its erection.

During the past month the total number of patients treated at the hospital was 26. There was discharged 19, and 3 were discharged improved. The number of deaths were 3. One of the latter lived only twenty-four hours, while the other, Mrs. McNair, of Scotch Plains, was brought to the hospital fatally burned. In the dispensary department the number of patients treated were 40, and the number of visits 93. The past month has been the busiest for sometime and it is seldom that so many are treated during that length of time.

The balance of the meeting was devoted to the transaction of routine business and the meeting adjourned about 9 o'clock.

Americans are the most inventive people on earth. To them have been issued nearly 600,000 patents, or more than one-third of all the patents issued in the world. No discovery of modern years has been of greater benefit to mankind than Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, or has done more to relieve pain and suffering. J. W. Vaugn, of Oakton, Ky., says: "I have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrœa Remedy in my family for several years, and find it to be the best medicine I ever used for cramps in the stomach and bowels. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

LIVES WERE IN DANGER.

JAMES DAWE AND FAMILY AWOKE IN STIFFLING SMOKE.

Were Just Able to Escape From the House With a Few Clothes Before the Interior Was all Ablaze—The Loss and Insurance.

A serious fire, in which several lives were endangered, was discovered Sunday morning about 5 o'clock in the house occupied by James Dawe and family, and owned by John O'Keefe, of this city. The house is located on West Sixth street and Plainfield avenue. Mr. Dawe and his wife and two children went to bed leaving everything all right as they supposed. Before 5 o'clock one of the children was awakened by coughing. This aroused Mr. Dawe, who was almost suffocated with smoke, as was also his wife and children. With great difficulty the family was able to get some of their clothes and escape. In the meantime a neighbor was aroused and went to Dr. Simpson's office, where he secured a key to send in an alarm from box 34.

The department was unusually quick in responding at that hour of the morning. Alert hose wagon was the first to arrive and the chemical engine was close behind, while the others came in quick succession. When the firemen arrived they learned that they had a very hard fire to fight, but they succeeded in keeping the flames in the house. Nearly everything in the house was burned or soaked with water and the loss is almost a total one inside. The fire started in the basement where the stovepipe was hung too close to the wainscoating. In this way the wood work was set on fire and it had been burning about two hours before it was discovered. It had burned through the floors and side walls to the second floor, and in the basement some heavy timber had been burned to a crisp. In fact every thing below the second floor was burned inside. The loss will probably be about $200 and Mr. Dawe had his goods insured for $500 with J. C Pope & Co. The house was insured by the owner for $1,400 and it has not yet been learned what his loss is. It is thought to be very slight, however.

Mr. Dawe and his family were obliged to go to the house of a neighbor as soon as they escaped from their burning house, and they were unable to take anything except what they had on.

The house is of the balloon pattern and is provided with no cut offs. That it was saved is a miracle, but the firemen did good work in confining the fire to the interior. Four streams of water were used for over an hour before the fire was extinguished.

HOME MISSIONS.

Special Service in the Congregational Church Sunday.

Home Missionary Sunday was observed at the Congregational church Sunday morning. A handsome American flag draped the reading desk, a generous collection was taken for the benefit of the Home Missionary Board, and an unusually interesting missionary talk was given by Miss M. Dean Moffett, who has been engaged in mission work in our great cities, in the country districts of New England, and in the west. Her talk was divided about the different classes of people among whom the home Missionary Society works; the people in the tenement house districts of the great cities, where they live in such fashion as is almost beyond the imagination of those in comfortable homes; the dwellers in the country districts of New England, where everyone is popularly supposed to attend church, but where many families regard Sunday as no different from any other day, and house-to-house visitors find a fruitful field; and the great, half-set tled west, with its thousands who have never heard the Gospel, its outlaws, its cowboys, and its immense churchless areas. Miss Moffett spoke in a very bright and earnest manner, and thoroughly interested her large audience.

The Rev. W. H. Weaver, pastor of the U. B. Church, Dillsburg, Pa., recognizes the value of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and does not hesitate to tell others about it. "I have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," he says, "and find it an excellent medicine for colds, cough's and hoarseness." So does everyone who gives it a trial. Sold by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

—The Ladies' Aid Society of the First M. E. church will hold their sociable on Friday evening in Vincent chapel. The sociable was postponed from last Thursday evening.

After using a 10 cent trial size of Ely's Cream Balm you will be sure to buy the 50 cent size. Cream Balm has no equal in curing catarrh and cold in the head. Ask your druggist for it or send 10 cents to us. ELY BROS., 56 Warren St., N. Y. City. I have suffered from Catarrh three years; it got so bad I could not work; I used two bottles of Ely's Cream Balm and am entirely well; I would not be without it.—A. C. Clarke, 341 Shawmut ave., Boston.

One Minute Late.

It makes no difference whether you were one minute or one hour late, if you missed the train. Better get there on time, even if you have to wait. One hour early is better than one minute late. Delay costs thousands of lives each year. "Neglected colds" is the beginning of the story; and consumption is the end. Few remedies, and but little of them, cure in the beginning. Later, many remedies long continued, and tedious journeys, too frequently end in disappointment.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil with the Hypophosphites soothes the cough, heals the inflamed membranes, and restores the parts to a healthy condition. This it does promptly and permanently, if taken in time. One bottle does more now than five would accomplish later on. If weak, pale, and thin, Scott's Emulsion will give you strength, color, and flesh.

"Just as Good" is not SCOTT'S EMULSION.

50c. and $1.00 at all druggists.

SCOTT & BOWNE, New York.

JOHN RISBERG RELEASED

NO EVIDENCE TO HOLD HIM FOR MARY NOBLE'S DEATH.

Mrs. Francisco Extracted Her Plea of Not Guilty and Entered One of Non Vult—She Was Remanded for Sentence.

John Risberg of this city, who has been held as an accomplice for the death of Mrs. Mary Noble, formerly of this city, was released on Saturday in Newark and came to Plainfield Monday. This morning he was met by a Daily Press reporter, and to him he was free to talk concerning his confinement. He said that after the most severe examination by the county officials it was learned that there was not the slightest evidence to hold him for trial. He claims that he is innocent of any of the charges preferred against him, and is inclined to feel that there are some people in this city who have not been friendly toward him and that they were very anxious that he should be prosecuted.

When all was in readiness for the trial of Mrs. Amelia Francisco in the Court of Quarter Sessions at Newark Monday, the accused, acting in accordance with the advice of her counsel, again changed her mind and entered a plea of non volt. The jurors and witnesses were accordingly discharged and the woman, who was charged with a high misdemeanor, growing out of the death of Mrs. Mary Noble, of this city, was remanded for sentence.

It was alleged that she gave to Mrs. Noble some powders for a criminal purpose, and that as a result the woman died. Mrs. Francisco subsequently made and signed a confession. Her indictment followed, but when she was brought to court last week to plead she caused a general surprise by denying the charge.

Her case was then put down for trial Monday, but before witnesses were heard the prisoner's counsel, Frank M. McDermitt, advised her to plead non vult, and she did so at once.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The fac simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

Central Railroad of New Jersey.

Time Table in Effect JANUARY 26th, 1896.

Leave New York, Foot of Liberty St.

PLAINFIELD AND NEW YORK.

Leave Plainfield: 5.30, 6.30, 7.30, 8.30, 9.30, 10.30, 11.30 a. m., 12.30, 1.30, 2.30, 3.30, 4.30, 5.30, 6.30, 7.30, 8.30, 9.30, 10.30, 11.30 p. m., 12.30 night.

Leave New York: 5.30, 6.30, 7.30, 8.30, 9.30, 10.30, 11.30 a. m., 12.30, 1.30, 2.30, 3.30, 4.30, 5.30, 6.30, 7.30, 8.30, 9.30, 10.30, 11.30 p. m., 12.30 night.

PLAINFIELD AND NEWARK.

Leave Plainfield: 5.30, 6.30, 7.30, 8.30, 9.30, 10.30, 11.30 a. m., 12.30, 1.30, 2.30, 3.30, 4.30, 5.30, 6.30, 7.30, 8.30, 9.30, 10.30, 11.30 p. m., 12.30 night.

Leave Newark: 5.30, 6.30, 7.30, 8.30, 9.30, 10.30, 11.30 a. m., 12.30, 1.30, 2.30, 3.30, 4.30, 5.30, 6.30, 7.30, 8.30, 9.30, 10.30, 11.30 p. m., 12.30 night.

PLAINFIELD AND SOMERVILLE.

Leave Plainfield: 6.30, 8.30, 10.30 a. m., 12.30, 2.30, 4.30, 6.30, 8.30, 10.30 p. m.

Leave Somerville: 6.30, 8.30, 10.30 a. m., 12.30, 2.30, 4.30, 6.30, 8.30, 10.30 p. m.

PLAINFIELD AND LAKE HOPATCONG.

Leave Plainfield: 8.30 a. m., 4.30 p. m.

Leave Lake Hopatcong: 8.30 a. m., 4.30 p. m.

EASTWARD.

Leave Plainfield: 5.30, 6.30, 7.30, 8.30, 9.30, 10.30, 11.30 a. m., 12.30, 1.30, 2.30, 3.30, 4.30, 5.30, 6.30, 7.30, 8.30, 9.30, 10.30, 11.30 p. m., 12.30 night.

Leave Dunellen: 5.30, 6.30, 7.30, 8.30, 9.30, 10.30, 11.30 a. m., 12.30, 1.30, 2.30, 3.30, 4.30, 5.30, 6.30, 7.30, 8.30, 9.30, 10.30, 11.30 p. m., 12.30 night.

Leave Bound Brook: 5.30, 6.30, 7.30, 8.30, 9.30, 10.30, 11.30 a. m., 12.30, 1.30, 2.30, 3.30, 4.30, 5.30, 6.30, 7.30, 8.30, 9.30, 10.30, 11.30 p. m., 12.30 night.

Leave Somerville: 5.30, 6.30, 7.30, 8.30, 9.30, 10.30, 11.30 a. m., 12.30, 1.30, 2.30, 3.30, 4.30, 5.30, 6.30, 7.30, 8.30, 9.30, 10.30, 11.30 p. m., 12.30 night.

Leave Manville: 5.30, 6.30, 7.30, 8.30, 9.30, 10.30, 11.30 a. m., 12.30, 1.30, 2.30, 3.30, 4.30, 5.30, 6.30, 7.30, 8.30, 9.30, 10.30, 11.30 p. m., 12.30 night.

Leave Bridgewater: 5.30, 6.30, 7.30, 8.30, 9.30, 10.30, 11.30 a. m., 12.30, 1.30, 2.30, 3.30, 4.30, 5.30, 6.30, 7.30, 8.30, 9.30, 10.30, 11.30 p. m., 12.30 night.

Leave Raritan: 5.30, 6.30, 7.30, 8.30, 9.30, 10.30, 11.30 a. m., 12.30, 1.30, 2.30, 3.30, 4.30, 5.30, 6.30, 7.30, 8.30, 9.30, 10.30, 11.30 p. m., 12.30 night.

Leave Bound Brook: 5.30, 6.30, 7.30, 8.30, 9.30, 10.30, 11.30 a. m., 12.30, 1.30, 2.30, 3.30, 4.30, 5.30, 6.30, 7.30, 8.30, 9.30, 10.30, 11.30 p. m., 12.30 night.

Through coaches on all points at lowest rates. Baggage will be checked and tickets sold in advance to the local agent at the station.

J. H. OLDACRE, Agent, Plainfield.

GEO. A. CUMMINGS, Gen'l Pass. Agent.

R. P. BALDWIN, General Passenger Agent.

LEHIGH VALLEY RAILROAD.

In effect December 8d, 1895.

LEAVE SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

WESTWARD.

7 44 a. m. Daily (Sundays a 9 1) Local for Manch Chunk.

9 20 a. m. Daily express for Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Chicago, and principal intermediate stations.

10 07 a. m. 8 m. 7 22 p. m. daily except Sunday. Local for Bound Brook.

12 56 p. m. Daily except Sunday. Local for Manch Chunk.

12 22 p. m. daily except Sunday. "BLACK DIAMOND EXPRESS" for Rochester and Buffalo.

5 44 p. m. daily except Sunday. Local for Manch Chunk.

7 24 and 10 p. m. daily except Sunday, express for Wilkes-Barre, Scranton, Pittston, Wilkesbarrie, Hazleton, and principal intermediate stations.

8 35 p. m. daily. Local for Easton.

7 23 and 10 p. m. daily, solid vestibuled express for Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Chicago and principal intermediate stations.

9 22 p. m. daily except Sunday. For Buffalo.

EASTWARD.

For New York and Brooklyn—Local at 7 14, 7 23, 9 08, a. m. 2 26, 4 46 and 6 56 p. m. Sunday 8 08 a. m. and 11 55 p. m. Express 7 26, 8 57, 10 06 a. m. 12 14, 2 17, 4 22, 7 07 and 9 p. m. Sundays—7 26 a. m. and 7 07 p. m.

For Perth Amboy and intermediate stations—7 14, 9 08 a. m. 12 14, 2 26, 4 46, 7 07 p. m. Sunday 8 08 a. m. 9 20 and 11 55 p. m.

For Manch Chunk only 6 22 p. m. except Sunday.

For further information consult Ticket Agents.

ROLLIN H. WILBUR, General Superintendent.

E. St. Johnsbern, Pa.

GEO. A. LEE, General Passenger Agent, Philadelphia, Pa.

A. W. SONNEMACHER, Asst General Passenger Agent, South Bethlehem, Pa.

NEW YORK TERMINALS—Foot of Cortlandt or Desbrosses street.

Arrival and Departure of Mails.

NEW YORK MAILS.

Arrive—7.30, 9.05, 11.20 a. m. 2.30, 5.25, 8.20, 9.30 p. m.

Close—8.00, 9.30 a. m. 1.20, 5. and 7.30 p. m.

SOMERVILLE and EASTON.

Arrive—9.05 a. m. 3 and 6.15 p. m.

Close—9.30 a. m. and 4.20 p. m.

PHILA. WASH. and WESTERN—Direct.

Arrive—2 p. m.

Close—9 a. m.

WARRENVILLE.

Arrive—12.30 p. m. Close—9.30 a. m.

SUNDAY MAILS.

Office open from 9.30 to 10.30 a. m.

Mail closes at 6.15 p. m.

J. M. HETFIELD, P. M.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

Celebrated for its great leavening strength and healthfulness. Assures the food against alum and all forms of adulteration common to the cheap brands. Royal Baking Powder Co., New York.

ROLLED ON TO VICTORY

CLEVELAND CYCLERS DEFEATED THE LYCEUM CYCLERS.

Was the Last of a Series of Bowling Contests and Great Efforts Were Made to Win —The Rooters Were Out in Full Force.

There was an expression of sadness on the face of the Lyceum Cyclers last Monday when they had concluded their two games with the Cleveland Cyclers on the Ulrich bowling alleys, as they expected to win both games. It was a five men contest and the former team had picked their best men. When the bowling commenced there was lots of enthusiasm, but as the contest continued the exuberance of spirit seemed to dwindle so far as the Lyceum team was concerned. Their supporters did not seem to have the heart to cheer for their team. On the other hand the supporters of the Cleveland team yelled for all they were worth. Notwithstanding the fact that the latter team won both games the scores were not so large, and they did not have a great deal to crow about. In the main the contests were very close, but the Clevelands won and that seemed to be the point aimed for. The attendance was very large and much interest was manifested on the part of all. The fact that none of the men have a great deal of time to bowl accounts in a great measure for the small scores. The highest score, 164, was made by Young, and this is due to the amount of time he puts in practicing. Beville made the next highest score, 163. The rest of the men put up good scores and all bowled good. Below will be found the scores of the two games:

CLEVELANDS.	1st game	2d game
Overbaugh, H.	101	113
Overbaugh, F.	148	127
Daly	148	154
Wilson	148	156
Young	164	154
	699	661

LYCEUMS.	1st game	2d game
Hanson	141	109
Reed	90	139
Mitchell	97	111
Conner	111	102
Beville	163	128
	647	633

BATTLE OF BOUND BROOK.

Monument Marking an Historical Spot to be Dedicated April 13th.

Preparations are going steadily forward for the dedication of the boulder on April 13th, to mark the site of the Battle of Bound Brook, fought April 13th, 1777. The stone is being prepared by Essex A. Yaeger, and is nearly ready to be set up in the triangle in Main street, opposite the railroad subway, which will probably there after be known as Monument Square.

It is proposed that at 7:30 o'clock, on the evening of April 13th the monument be presented to the borough authorities by George LaMonte, President of the Washington Camp Ground Association, and accepted by his Honor, Mayor Codrington.

At eight o'clock dedicatory exercises will be held in the Bound Brook Hall. Rev. T. E. Davis will tell the story of the battle and Rev. J. W. Daily will give a sketch of General Benjamin Lincoln, who commanded the American forces.

New Lodge of Red Men.

A preliminary meeting was held at Little Falls, one of the suburbs of Paterson, for the purpose of instituting a new tribe of Red Men. Great Sannap Wm. Newcorn, of this city, was present to address the meeting. There were addresses by several other great chiefs. Forty-six names were secured to the charter list, which will be kept open for several weeks, and it is expected that the list will number 100 names when closed.

Received into the Naval Reserve.

Clarence Rittenhouse, Volney Green, Walter Hetfield, Jr., and Ben. Webster, of this city, went to Newark last week, and were mustered in the Ambulance Corps of the Naval Reserve. Several other young men from this city will join in a short time.

The Dog to Blame.

Abner Bartlett, of Westervelt avenue, has been confined to his home for several days on account of an accident he received Friday morning while running to the fire on South avenue. A small dog ran directly in his path and tripped him up. Mr. Bartlett fell cutting his knee severely and spraining his back.

DEFIED THE CONSTABLE.

OFFICER WOULDN'T SHOW HIS AUTHORITY AND WAS IGNORED.

Claimed to Have a Writ of Attachment on Goods in Expressage—Goods Sent to Their Destination Just the Same.

A local representative of the civil law and the Plainfield manager of the United States Express Company met with rather exciting results, last Monday, which finally ended in the household goods, which Constable Rockafellow says that he was trying to attach, being placed aboard the train and sent to their destination. The constable lays the blame on Manager E. W. Mills, of the Express Company, but Mr. Mills and a number of witnesses of the trouble say that Rockafellow refused to show his authority by which he wished to detain the goods.

John and Mary Thompson have lived at 669 Essex street. They lived in a simple way and purchased their clothing from L. Sternburg and Co., on the installment plan. Monday one of their neighbors went to A. Aaron, manager of the firm in this city, and told him that the Thompsons were quietly preparing to decamp with their household effects and did not intend to notify their creditors. At hearing this, Mr. Aaron was considerably affected and set about to take steps to hold the property until he could collect the amount due to the firm by the Thompsons, which amounted in all to $22.67. The neighbor also said that a portion of the goods had been sent away early in the afternoon by express and that the rest would go out on the 8:30 train in the evening.

Mr. Aaron went to Justice Newcorn, and the latter issued a writ of attachment to hold the goods until the case of Sternberg & Co. against Thompson could be tried. The case was started to recover the amount due. The writ was placed in the hands of Constable Rockafellow to serve.

When the Constable arrived at the station, the goods were on one of the Express Company's trucks ready to be loaded on the train. One of the employes of the company was there to show him. Rockafellow explained his errand and the man allowed the Constable to make an inventory of the effects.

Manager Mills and the train arrived on the scene at nearly the same time. Mr. Mills ordered his men to put the goods in the express car when Rockafellow strenuously objected. Then there was trouble. Mr. Mills says that he asked Rockafellow for his authority and that the constable refused to show him any, so Mr. Mills felt justified in his determination that the goods should go.

Constable Rockafellow, finding that his protestations were of no avail, attempted to seize the goods bodily. Now it happened that several bags of United States mail were lying on the pile of furniture. The constable started to move them when Mail Messenger Frazee rose up in all his dignity and warned the Constable not to lay hands on Uncle Sam's property unless he was looking for trouble. Then Mr. Mills ordered his men to put the goods in the car. Constable Rockafellow wanted to arrest Mills and all the other men but they pushed him one side and despite his struggles, the goods were safely landed in the car and the train pulled out leaving an exceedingly wrathy Constable behind.

With threats of vengeance, the Constable repaired to the office of Justice Newcorn to tell how he had been baffled and to get the necessary papers to arrest Mr. Mills. The Justice had a little talk with the Manager and heard his side of the story and then decided not to issue any warrants.

Mr. Aaron went to Jersey City late last evening and had a writ of attachment served on the goods.

DIED IN CANADA.

Remains of Mrs. P. J. Voorhis, Formerly a Resident of this City, Buried Here.

The death is announced of Mrs. P. J. Voorhis at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John L. Gallett, at Lachine, Canada, March 23. She was once a resident of this city, the widow of the late Peter J. Voorhis, sister of David D. Smalley, of 33 Manning avenue, and a sister-in law of Peter E. See of Somerset street. The remains were brought to this city last Thursday morning for interment in Evergreen Cemetery, beside her late husband and children, and were met at the depot by her relatives and by her former pastor, Rev. Cornelius Schenck, and taken directly to the cemetery. The deceased leaves a daughter, Mrs. G le ti, of Canada, and a son, Edward L. Voorhis, of Philadelphia.

Two years ago R. J. Warren, a druggist at Pleasant Brook N. Y., bought a small supply of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He sums up the result as follows: "At that time the goods were unknown in this section; to-day Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is a household word." It is the same in hundreds of communities. Wherever the good qualities of Chamberlains Cough Remedy become known the people will have nothing else. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

CITY WILL DO ITS SHARE

TOWARDS ENTERTAINING THE SECOND NEW JERSEY BRIGADE.

Proposed to Rent the Cycle Academy to Accommodate the Crowd That Will Want to Hear the Fine Addresses.

The attention of some of the city councilmen and the Mayor has been called to the intended visit of the Second New Jersey Brigade to this city April 9th, and they have been considering the advisability of securing the Cycle Academy for the occasion. Owing to the fact that it was the city who extended the invitation to this distinguished body of men they now feel as though the officials should take some hand in the matter of receiving and entertaining them while here for the day. It has been realized that Reform hall is too small for the event and as stated in The Daily Press there will be a large number of people who will want to hear the speeches of Gens. Sickles, Price, Bussling and Stryker. It is considered a great honor to have these noted men here and every effort will be made to give them a good time and one equal to the occasion. At the next meeting of the city council it is expected that something will be done in an official way toward preparing for the coming of the Brigade. A large number of people have responded generously to the appeal for funds and the arrangements for the event are nearing completion.

OAKUM MADE LOTS OF SMOKE.

Candle Set Fire to the Material in Galbraith & Walsh's Shop.

About 10 o'clock a. m. Monday the fire department was called out in response to an alarm sent from box 21 by Edward Martin, porter at the North avenue station. The latter heard a young man on the avenue calling fire at the top of his voice and this led him to pull the box. The fire was in the cellar of the building occupied by Galbraith & Walsh, plumbers, and it was caused by a quantity of oakum being set on fire from the light of a candle in the hands of Wm. Maher, an employee, who was searching about the cellar for a piece of leather. The action of heat on the oakum is very rapid, and it was not long before the cellar and store was filled with smoke.

The chemical arrived quickly and a line of hose was taken into the cellar where, in a few minutes, the flames were extinguished without the aid of water.

A quantity of the oakum was burned and some of the beams were slightly scorched. The total damage will be very slight.

THIEVES LOOT A POSTOFFICE.

Basking Ridge Visited by Burglars Early Monday Morning.

The postoffice at Basking Ridge was broken in about 3 o'clock Sunday morning. The thieves effected an entrance by prying the front door off its hinges, and then blew open the safe by using dynamite. The noise awakened Mrs. Howlett, who lives in the adjoining building, but she did not pay much attention to it.

Joseph L. Buck, the postmaster, said today that the thieves had secured $375 in money and over $100 in stamps. The thieves also secured several thousand dollars in notes belonging to the estate of the late John Buck, of which the postmaster is administrator. The notes had been placed in a shotbag in the safe for safekeeping, but the thieves discovered them, although they overlooked a package containing $50 in stamps. The box containing the money taken was found half a mile from the post office, on the road to Somerville, by Edward Dargel, and it supposed that the thieves came from that direction.

A NEW SECRETARY CHOSEN.

George F. Brown Resigns His Duties With Borough Board of Education.

The members of the North Plainfield Board of Education met last Monday in regular session. The resignation of George F. Brown, as district clerk, was very reluctantly received, and R. M. Fountain was elected to fill the position. The members of the finance committee were directed to examine into the matter of a place to hold the High School commencement exercises and report at the next meeting.

The committee on supplies was instructed to secure some suitable design for the graduating class diplomas. This concluded the actual business transacted, and the rest of the evening was devoted to routine matters.

Mrs. A. Inveen, residing at 720 Henry street, Alton, Ill, suffered with sciatic rheumatism for over eight months. She doctored for it nearly the whole of this time, using various remedies recommended by friends, and was treated by the physicians, but received no relief. She then used one and a half bottles of Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which effected a complete cure. This is published at her request, as she wants others similarly afflicted to know what cured her. The 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, cor. Park and North avenues.

Build Up Your Health

By nourishing every part of your system with blood made pure by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. Then you will have nerve, mental, bodily and digestive strength. Then you need not fear disease, because your system will readily resist scrofulous tendencies and attacks of illness. Then you will know the absolute intrinsic merit of Hood's Sarsaparilla The best Spring Medicine and Blood Purifier. $1, six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

In the Spring

Hood's Pills act easily, promptly and effectively. 25 cents.

Sweet Peas.

Do not delay planting them, our own mixture contains only the choicest and latest varieties.

LAWN & GARDEN SEEDS and FERTILIZERS.
HARDWARE and HOUSEFURNISHINGS.

A. M. GRIFFEN,
119 East Front st.
Telephone Call, 6.

W. R. CODINGTON,
Counsellor-at-Law.
Commissioner of Deeds, Master in Chancery, Notary Public. Offices Corner of Park avenue and Second street.

SEEDS ...FOR THE... Garden and Farm
Vegetable and Flower Seeds. All the newest and best varieties. Prices always surpassed. Illustrated Catalogue FREE.
WEEBER & DON, Seed Growers and Importers
114 Chambers St., New York City.

What a Lot of Eggs the hens lay when fed on Green Cut Bone. With a dozen hens

Mann's Green Bone Cutter

will pay for itself in a short time in the increase of eggs. $5 BUYS ONE. Sent on trial. 180 highest awards received. Catalogue free if you name this paper. F.W. MANN CO., Milford, Mass.
2 24 9 10 11 12—7 mos.

SAVED

After years of suffering. It has at last been proven beyond a doubt that

NASALENE

Is a positive remedy for local diseases which are the result of cold and climatic changes. Cold in the Head, Hay Fever.

CATARRH,

Deafness, (caused by catarrh), are instantly relieved.
It is pleasant to use, convenient to carry. Price 50c. and $1, at all druggists.
U. V. EAGLE, Leeds of Sing Sing, says: "Nasalene is very beneficial."
HUNTER MEDICAL CO.,
84 E. 31st Street, N. Y.

WANTS AND OFFERS.

BY women, each with an infant or young child, situations in the country (general housework, plain cooking, etc.). Small wages expected. Railroad fare paid by Association. Apply State Charities Aid Association, 105 East Twenty-Second street, New York City. 3 18 1mo

DIED.

VAN HORN—In North Plainfield, March 26th, 1897, Jacob S. Van Horn, aged 87 years, 1 month and 15 days.

GADDIS—At Port Richmond S. I., Sunday, March 28, 1897, Eva M., wife of Arthur N. Gaddis, aged 25 years, 5 months and 20 days.

VOORHIS—At Lachine, Canada, March 23, 1897, after a short illness, Mrs. J. P. Voorhis, aged 73 years and 10 months.

POULTRY We keep everything in the Poultry line, such as POULTRY LICE, Fencing, Feed, Incubators, Live Stock Powders, Remedies and our business. Call or let us send you our Illustrated catalogue—it's free for the asking—it's worth having.
Excelsior Wire & Poultry Supply Co.,
28 Vesey Street, New York City.
2 24 3m

Salesmen Wanted

Pushing, trustworthy men to represent us in the sale of our choice nursery stock. Specialties controlled by us. Highest salary or commission paid weekly; steady employment the year round; outfit free; exclusive territory; experience not necessary; big pay assured workers; special inducements to beginners. Write at once for particulars to

Allen Nursery Co.,
Rochester, N. Y.

JAS. M. DUNN,
Dealer in
GROCERIES, PROVISIONS, VEGETABLES, FRUITS &c
GARDEN SEEDS
fresh and carefully selected.
224 PARK AVENUE,
OPPOSITE NORTH AVENUE.
Everything usually found in a first-class grocery.
Goods delivered free of charge.

Lewis B. Coddington,
[Successor to T. J. Carey.]
Furniture & Freight Express
Office—24 W. FRONT ST.
Large Covered Vans or Trucks. Goods delivered to any part of the U. S. Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges reasonable. P. O. Box 1. Piano moving a specialty.

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS
For all Blood and Nervous Diseases. They purify the Blood and Nerves, and restore action to the entire system.
Cure DYSPEPSIA, HEADACHE, CONSTIPATION and PIMPLES

SALESMEN WANTED
To sell our hardy Kansas grown Forest Tree Seedlings. Many new specialties offered this year for the first time. Liberal terms. Handsome outfit free and permanent. No previous experience necessary. Apply at once, stating age. Forest Tree Seedling Nursery, Box 4, Topeka, Shawnee County, Kansas.

PATENTS
CAVEATS, TRADE MARKS & COPYRIGHTS.
CAN I OBTAIN A PATENT? For a prompt answer and an honest opinion, write to MUNN & CO., who have had nearly fifty years' experience in the patent business. Communications strictly confidential. A Handbook of Information concerning Patents and how to obtain them sent free. Also a catalogue of mechanical and scientific books sent free.
Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice in the Scientific American, and thus are brought widely before the public with the result that a large circulation is secured for any invention with which the public is to be introduced. The widest circulation is given to any scientific work in the world. No intelligent man should be without it. Weekly, $3.00 a year. Single copies, 25 cents. Every number contains beautiful plates, in colors, and photographs of new houses, with plans, enabling builders to show the latest designs and secure contracts. Address MUNN & CO., NEW YORK, 361 BROADWAY.

WANTED SALESMEN.
We want one or two men in this County to take orders for Nursery Stock, and are willing to pay a good wage. We agree to KEEP PLACE FILLED at this time from natural causes, and have a choice line of SEED POTATOES. GIVE US A TRIAL.
THE HAWKS NURSERY COMPANY,
ROCHESTER, N. Y. 3 27 4m

DIME
Savings Institution,
Of Plainfield, N. J.,
Is now receiving deposits payable on demand, with interest, allowed on all sums from $5 to $3,000.
JOHN W. MURRAY, President.
J. FRANK HUBBARD, Vice-President
J. C. POPE, Treasurer.
Money deposited on or before January tenth will draw interest from the first.

GEORGE W. DAY,
General Auctioneer.
Sales of Personal Property solicited. P. O. Box 323, Dunellen, N. J. or address in care of Constitutionalist. Terms reasonable.

Townsend's
Marble and Granite Works,
30
Somerset st., North Plainfield.
If you have not engaged your work I should be pleased to do it for you.
I buy only the best Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to set up the work with credit to myself and justice to the purchaser. I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally charged.
I am under a very small expense in running my shop, and can therefore do the best of work at the lowest prices. I do my own cutting of work, and personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business principles as the basis of success. Material at fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my work which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no one can produce more work and name stock any cheaper than I can.
Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,
J. E. TOWNSEND, Manager.
Branch yard, Westfield, N. J.

WANTED by large concern a gentleman of influence and social standing, who has large circle of friends and ability to sell BICYCLES in this town and vicinity. Previous experience not requisite. Genteel occupation, not necessarily interfering with other business, and liberal remuneration to right party. Replies strictly confidential.
Address, P. O. Box 1981, New York City
2 24 4

DYNAMITE!!!
Rocks, Trees, Stumps, &c., removed
W. C. WILLIAMS,
12 24 3m Babcock Building.

CARNEY BROS.,
MADISON AVENUE,
Between Front and Second streets.
Tinners,
Plumbers
Gas Fitters,
Grates and bricks for all kinds of stoves can be found here at Jobbers' prices. Bring your tinware mending to us. The best tinners, the best plumbers, and the best gas-fitters in this section. We use none but the very best of materials, and our work always gives satisfaction. Keys of all kinds are made here. Tinware made to order. Ranges, brick and portable furnaces. Sanitary plumbing.

Wm. A. Woodruff,
Fire and Life
INSURANCE AGENT,
OFFICE,
corner Front St. and Park Avenue,
Plainfield, N. J.
Real Estate for Sale and Exchange. Money to Loan on Approved Security.

Sanitary Plumbing,
Brick and Portable Furnace
Gas Fitting, Tin Roofing,
Etc., Etc., Etc.
I am prepared to do any of the above branches in strictly first-class sanitary and workmanship manner.
Having associated myself with the Master Members Association of New York City, I employ none but first-class mechanics and non-union men. I believe in every man running his own business, at all times and in all cases.
D. W. LITTELL,
No. 112 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J.

ALBERT HEDDEN
Livery & Boarding Stables
FOURTH ST.,
between Watchung and Park avenues.
First-class Livery. Horses boarded by week or month. Telephone call, No. 314.

A. WOLFF,
Manufacturer of
CIGARS.
Ambidexter in all kinds of Smoking and Chewing Tobacco, and smokers' articles, has removed from 231 W. Front street, to 261 West Front street, one door east of Madison avenue and solicits the patronage of his friends and the public generally.

P. P. VanArsdale,
PIANO TUNER.
Instruments put in thorough order. Terms reasonable. Pianos and organs for sale and to let. Orders by postal, P. O. box 160, or left at Willett's shoe store, No. 107 Park avenue, will receive prompt attention. Residence 201 E. Front street, corner Elm street. 9|27

WANTED—AN IDEA Who can think of some simple thing to patent? Protect your ideas; they may bring you wealth. Write JOHN WEDDERBURN & CO., Patent Attorneys, Washington, D. C., for their $1,800 prize offer.

BRAZER
AXLE GREASE Best in the West
Manufactured expressly for use in axles running three boxes of any other brand. Sold at nearly three times the price. Ask your dealer for it.
FOR SALE BY ALL DEALERS.

E. B. MAYNARD,
PRACTICAL
BARBER AND HAIR DRESSER,
204 PARK AVE.
Ladies' and Children's Hair Cutting done at their residence. Shaving, Shampooing, etc., satisfactorily performed. 11|7|1

Woolston & Buckle,
PAINTERS.
Wall Papers, Painters' Supplies
141-145 North avenue.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE.
PATENTS
TRADE MARKS, DESIGNS, COPYRIGHTS &c.
Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. Oldest agency for securing patents. We have a Washington office. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice in the

SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN,
A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.
MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

RISKED HIS LIFE TO KEEP HIS WORD.

An Oregon Embezzler Who Swam Torrents to Surrender to Justice.

"You need not send an officer for me I will come when I am wanted."

Vincent Sutton, Postmaster at Ore town, Tillamook County, was wanted for embezzlement by the United States authorities. A plain tale, truly, and one which smacks of the vulgar commonplace but none the difference of it.

This Sutton is a man of simple mind and to him it seemed no harm would be done if he eked out the pittance of his office of postmaster by adding the sums paid in for the purchase of money orders, a matter of some $350 when all was counted. He would make it good in his own time, and in truth he thought it no wrong. But the United States does not do business that way, and in due time there came an indictment, found by the Grand Jury, against Sutton heard He realized that he had done wrong. He was ready to meet his punishment. Nay, he was ready to go to meet it at the peril of his life. Nothing prevented if he chose to leave the state. Knowing him to be in the bitter weather did he prefer to hide in the fastness of his own trackless mountains, but it came home to him, what he had not realized when he took the money, that he had done wrong, and he alone must bear the burden.

Now, this was not a matter of walking downtown to give yourself up to the police or the marshal.

So it came that the simple-minded man 'of primitive mold sat down and wrote a letter to Marshal Grady in Portland, that he would come himself to the nearest station on the railroad, Sheridan, and there surrender to an officer of the law. Let the officer come to Sheridan by a certain day and he would be there. He kept his word. He kept more than once it nearly cost him his life.'

Sutton has a wife. He kissed her good-bye and stuffed his pockets with the food which she, poor woman, had put up for him with loving care enough to last him two days, it might be, on the way to Sheridan. The Three Rivers, triple thunderer in sooth, was booming with sullen, hungry roar, turbid with swirling mud, carrying on its angry breast sweeping logs and jagged roots, torn from their anchorage in the searching flood. Five times it had to be crossed by Sutton on his way, swimming or wading, or chancing his life on a treacherous log. Once he was nearly smothered in a bottomless pit of mud in a dismal swamp. Once remorseless suck of a quicksand that never gives up its dead. It was bitter cold, and he must keep afoot or perish. But there is iron in this man's blood. He had pledged his word and he got there.

Now, when this simple tale was told to Judge Bellinger, sitting in Portland as the representative of Federal law, he, being a man, was troubled in mind, for here was one who had set his life at the value of a pin for thinks the law might have its way, and yet justice must be done and punishment meted as is set down in the books. Nevertheless there are degrees, and Judge Bellinger resolved that this was a case where it would not strain the quality of justice were it softened with mercy. Therefore he imposed the lowest penalty, which is imprisonment for six months and a fine equal to the sum which Sutton appropriated.—Correspondent San Francisco Examiner.

He Required Kansas Excitement.

William Allen White tells a story of a Kansas man who left the state, but soon returned to it because he missed the excitement. "Why, man," said White, "what do you mean? What excitement can there be in living where there isn't a piece of vegetation high er than a sunflower, and where human beings are as few as summer showers?" "Well, you see, it's like this," he replied. "You put in a crop, and from the moment the seed's in the ground you're in a state of harvest. It's a gamble whether or not you get a full crop or barely enough to feed a mule. The sustained excitement amounts to what you would get out of a four months' poker game in which you had put up everything. Oh, there's plenty of excitement about it, and I've become so accustomed to that feature of it that I'm lost without it." This farmer was a Greek letter fraternity man, and, ludicrous as it may seem, he unquestionably spoke with the utmost seriousness.—New York Tribune.

A Peculiar Bequest.

Dresden owns a singular piece of property. It is a morning newspaper, the "Dresdener Anzeiger." This daily, upon the death of its last proprietor, was willed to the city, upon the condition that all profits arising therefrom should be spent upon the public parks. This year a large playground of nearly eight acres was purchased from Prince George, the King's brother and heir-apparent, and it will be ready for use next spring. The paper continues to hold the respect of all citizens, for the trust has been carried out in its broadest spirit, and the power has never been employed to foster any school of opinions.—Fourth Estate.

Silly Sentimentalism.

The late C. Jerome Cary, of Milwaukee, directed that his body should be burned, that the ashes should be used to nourish a certain rosebush, and that the blossoms should be distributed among his friends.—New York Sun.

One of the severest penalties to which criminals in Holland were in ancient times condemned was to be deprived of the use of salt.

A PALATIAL PRIVATE CAR.

President Green Has the Handsomest in Existence.

What is undoubtedly the finest private car at the disposal of a railroad magnate in this or any other country was recently built for E. H. R. Green, president of the Texas Midland railroad. Palatial is the only word which is applicable to this car, which is the private car of British royalty sole into comparative insignificance beside the possession of the son of the richest woman in America.

The exterior of the car resembles the ordinary Pullman coach. It has a reception room, a private sleeping apartment, a dining room and a kitchen. The principal and largest apartment is the observation or reception room at one end of the car. This occupies an area of more than seventeen feet in length. Includes two sleeping sections on either side, which are nine feet long, but during the day they can be changed into comfortably cushioned lounging seats. The room is handsomely carpeted and furnished with wicker chairs, a roll top desk, and other writing tables. There are also a tape recorder, air pressure gauge, chronometer, clock and electric fans. At night, if the occasion requires it, the room can be divided into three parts, each partitioned by portières which fold against the upper panel. Two of these can be turned into sleeping apartments.

The passageway runs to the side of the car and opens into a suite of rooms appointed state room, each more than seven feet long. In one is a stationary bed, while the other contains a folding bed. Between these two rooms, and connecting with each, is a bath room about seven feet and a half feet square, with a shower attached.

Next comes the kitchen, to which eight and one-half feet of the length of the car is devoted.

Beyond the kitchen is the dining room, served with a larger table, at which eight persons can be seated.

The room is ten feet long and comfortably furnished with the usual dining room paraphernalia. The windows of the car are a trifle larger than those of the ordinary drawing room car, and are fitted with heavy plate glass. The interior is hung with heavy portieres and window curtains.—New York Herald.

A COLLEGE GIRL'S PRANK.

She Gives a Cat Concert During the Small Hours.

The Cincinnati Commercial Tribune has been telling tales out of school. It has collected a number of the amusing pranks of college girls of a few years ago, making the explanation that such capers are out of date now, one of which is the following:

During the freshman year of a student she conceived the novel idea of giving a cat concert some night after the retiring. To this end she collected all the stray felines there were around the place, and stored them away in the attic. By the time the date set for the serenade came around she had decoyed about a dozen cats to the attic, singly and in pairs. With the assistance of one of the workmen, open to bribery, she conducted from the basement to the top floor—a goat. This beast was added to the zoological garden in the attic, and together with the cats paced the floor till silence had fallen throughout the house.

And then this little person, so meek that suspicion never fell upon her, stole up the attic stairs and tied to each animal a bell, opened the door and turned the flock loose. Pandemonium reigned. The frightened cats meowed and meowed, the goat bleated, and the faculty chased, commanded and came to despair. Through the midnight watches the slinking cats tinkled their bells through the halls, the outraged teachers breathed out threatings against the culprit, and the girl who was in future years to be of the head of the institution slept on the sleep of the just.

Much Too Clever.

Sir Charles Napier was at one time Governor of Gibraltar. One day, by some mischance, he mislaid the key of his safe. Search being unavailing he sent down to the engineers' yard to know if they had a man capable of picking a lock.

A certain super whose skill at lock-picking was well known was sent to the Governor's house, and, with the aid of a few pieces of wire, he very shortly succeeded in opening the safe. Napier was amazed at his celerity, but said nothing.

Next morning the sapper was sent for by his colonel, who handed him a five-pound note, and informed him that by Napier's order he was to return to England, for home service, by the next boat, as the Governor did not think it safe to keep a man at the Rock who could pick the most complicated lock as easily as he could eat his breakfast.—Answers.

The Judge Was Not Convinced.

In a suit for separation, counsel for the plaintiff pleaded, among other reasons, incompatibility of temperament. He depicted the character of the husband as "brutal, violent, and passionate." The husband's advocate rose in his turn and described the wife as "spiteful, short-tempered, and sulky." "Pardon me," interrupted the judge, addressing both limbs of the law, "I cannot see, gentlemen, where the incompatibility of temperament comes in."—Tid-Bits.

Baboony—Me boy, you look as if you had just stepped out of a fashion plate.

Grinkleton—That so? I knew I had rheumatism, but I didn't suppose I was as stiff as that!—Harlem Life.

CURRENT COMMENT.

Sam Jones's price for fighting the devil is $2,000 per month. When we consider the time Sam has been engaged in the business and the fact that the devil is still doing business at the old stand, it would seem that his charges are rather steep.

Pittsburg is to have illuminating gas at 50 cents per thousand feet, and the men who will supply it are not in the business for its hygienic advantages, either. They are eccentric enough to believe that a profit of 20 or 30 per cent on their investment will warrant them in going into the enterprise.

Two more convicts in Auburn have gone insane through the idleness enforced on them by the labor unions, and may therefore become permanent charges on the public. Take these prisoners out and set them to work on the roads. Then something will be got out of them, and the labor unions as well as other people will be the better off.

When the Kansas Legislature completes the task of giving "statutory force" to the Ten Commandments, it should go ahead and promote public health by passing a law to make illness a penal offense. By the same token it might improve the general welfare by enacting a bill to make drought a misdemeanor and a thunder storm a breach of the peace.

Some of Chicago's experimental philanthropists propose that all vacant lots in that city shall be turned over to the poor for the cultivation of beans. The best idea is merely a variation of the Pingree potato scheme. It is worth trying, however, and if it brings the bean pots of the East into closer relationship with the mess pork of the West, it will develop into a solid institution.

Secretary of State Palmer of New York has completed his report to the Legislature showing the criminal statistics of the state, as reported to him by the clerks of sixty counties. The report, which is purely statistical, shows, so far as recorded, convictions for crime which prove that the people of this state are growing better, and that crime is on the decrease, as compared with the record made in 1885.

To one who loves the study of nations the evolution of national character and the shifting of the world's controlling influences, surely Spain to-day must open a field unexampled in modern times for tragic interest. Long removed from friction with either the constructive or destructive politics of Europe, blessed in natural resources and rich in tradition, she has continued steadily a victim of herself, rather than of her enemies.

Experts estimate that 75 per cent of the silks now worn by American women are manufactured in this country. If this is correct, it indicates an enormous expansion of what is everywhere regarded as one of the most difficult and exacting of all textile industries. It has taken infinite care and expense to establish American silks in public favor, but the fact that it has been done is a positive triumph for the methods employed in the manufacture and treatment of those fabrics in this country.

More than 3,000,000 persons in the famine-stricken districts of India are now subsisting on public and private charity, and this number will probably be increased to 5,000,000 before the beginning of June. The relief rendered by the government is inadequate, but it is draining the resources of the country so completely that a long period of industrial and and business depression must necessarily ensue after the present distress has passed away. The combined effects of famine and plague will be to bring upon India the severest and most protracted interval of financial hardship she has ever experienced.

The Brooklyn Eagle, Democratic, says: When Gen. Stewart L. Woodford said in Washington yesterday that he believed that the appointment of Mr. Bliss would be satisfactory to Republicans of all shades in this state, he justified the confidence which his friends have in his ability to do and say the right thing at the right time. If Gen. Woodford had been unable to recognize the merit of a rival, and had not had sufficient self-control to speak courteously of that rival in the hour of his success, he would have been unfit for the office to which he aspired. Such conduct as this conserves civilization. It makes it easy for men to work together for the general good, because it shows that the general good is what we care for more than for personal advancement. We are headed in the right direction, and the time will soon come when men can strive for office without believing that the other man is a villain. Difference of opinion does not involve moral obliquity, nor does the availability of a man for a certain office prove that other men would not fill the office just as well.

AN UNFAIR DIVISION.

Cabby Had a Strong Leaning Toward Fairness to Himself.

Hank Miller of New York, some times called the "Omnibus King," was good-natured, and full of fun, and he enjoyed a patronage which eventually netted him a neat income. One evening Hank was making his rounds of the stable, as was his wont, when he overheard the chink of money and a subdued muttering. Glancing over a stall, he discovered one of his drivers counting his fares as follows:

"That's two shillun' for Hank, and two for me," laying the shillings in two piles. He kept on dividing his fares, until he came to the last piece of money, an odd shilling.

"There," said he, "that's too bad to come out uneven, 'cause I wants to be square and go halves with Hank. Let me see, shall I throw this in his pile? No, I'll toss it up; heads for me and tails for Hank," and he spun it up in the air. "Tails it is!" he cried as it fell. "Well, that's Hank's I suppose," but he hesitated. "No, I guess I'll toss again." This time it fell down heads. "Ah, I knew that first toss wasn't fair!" and having divided the money to his satisfaction, he slipped away without knowing that Hank had been watching him.

Hank chained his face before the thieving driver arrived to leave his fares. "Good evening, Jack," said he, as the man entered. "Luck good today?"

"Rather poor, Mr. Miller," and he laid the money on the desk.

"Well, Jack, I guess we can dispense with your services from now on."

"Eh! How's that? What have I done?" cried the astonished Jack.

Hank gave a quiet smile, and then, looking fixedly in the eye, said: "You see, Jack, you didn't treat me fair. By rights, I should have had another chance at that odd shilling."

A TORTUOUS TOBOGGAN SLIDE.

Some but the Daring Could Ever Have the Courage to Try It.

The steeplechase course of the tobogganing world is a twisting, winding mountain path—an icy incline three-quarters of a mile long, with a descent of over 600 feet—running from St. Moritz, in a valley of the Swiss Alps, in the province of Grisons, to the fields of Cresta, nearly a thousand feet below. St. Moritz is near Davos Plats, and, like it, is a famous Winter health resort.

As soon as a foot of snow has fallen the St. Moritz tobogganers begin to lay out the course, which it takes twelve skilled laborers, with some assistance help, to construct. From the beginning four men, arm in arm, tramp over the projected course several times, beating down the snow.

Then snow shovels are used to fill up inequalities, and to bank the curves and corners. The sides is then iced until it is more slippery from start to finish than the fabled descent to Hades.

If it were in a straight line it would be nothing remarkable, and sliding down it would be no whit's day that it is on the long direct chutes in this country, Canada and Russia. But its course is, instead, most devious and desperate.

It twists and turns, describes semi-circles and S's, goes downhill and up, over, and through ice ridges. It has "leaps," and "corners," "banks" and "straights," which give the daring coaster wildest excitement of the more part during every one of the forty-odd seconds while he is hurling headlong down its length.

If the very sharp corners and curves were not banked high, like a cycle track, there is no telling where the adventurous tobogganer would finally land.—New York Journal.

Refused to Officiate.

The Mayor of a village in Brittany recently resigned rather than officiate at the marriage of a divorced man. The assistant Mayor and four Municipal Councilors were asked in turn to perform this ceremony, and, rather than comply, resigned one after the other. The Sub-Prefect of the district refused to accept the resignations and the disappointed bridegroom sued the recalcitrant officers for damages.—New York Tribune.

Business and Honor.

Said Judge Peterby to Rev. Whangdoodle Baxter:

"Just think of the deception practiced every day. Why, it is dreadful. Now, if you could make $150 by a lie, your sense of honor wouldn't allow you to do it, would it, Mr. Baxter?"

"Dunno 'bout dat ar," replied Whangdoodle. "Seems fer me dat in de matter of bisness, whatin honah ain't got nuffin ter say. Say, jedge, who is de man wid de $150?"—Texas Siftings.

Mme. Patti's Fear of Burglars.

Burglars are the great terror of Mme. Patti's life at Craig-y-Nos Castle. She has had all the window-shutters fitted with electric bells, which start ringing at the slightest touch, while by the same machinery a gun is fired, and a number of dogs are let loose in the grounds. Special watchmen are told off every night on "round" duty.

A Polite Official.

Bill the Burglar—"De warden 't dis penitentiary ain't got a bit 'f feelin'. I told him dis mornin' dat dis wuz de tenth anniversary of de day I came in here."

Petey the Pickpocket—"Wot did he say?"

Bill the Burglar—"He wished me many happy returns 't de day.—From Puck.

ONE OF THE OLDEST SHIPS.

An American Bark 133 Years Old Still Doing Duty in English Waters.

The bark True Love, built in Philadelphia in 1764, has been found upon search to yet afloat in the capacity of a coal hulk engaged in active trade at the age of 133 years. The True Love has not only outlived her builders and their successors, but has also outlived every craft that was built in her time and for many years afterward, and this fact, coupled with the report that the historic craft is still engaged in active pursuits, places Philadelphia at the very top notch as a shipbuilding centre.

In 1764, when this famous old craft was launched on the banks of the Delaware, although her length was but 96 feet 6 inches, she was then the largest vessel of commerce that the Delaware had ever floated. Contrast the dimensions of the boy's Hamburg-American Packet Company's steamship Pennsylvania, the latest addition to commerce, whose length is 587 feet, while the new White Star liner building is 704 feet long, and one will be amazed with the magnitude of the modern ship of commerce. The True Love, upon being completed, sailed away from Philadelphia early in 1765, and the record is had of her return to this city until August 22, 1873, when at the age of 109 years she came into port from Tvitut, Greenland, with a cargo of oil in command of Captain Thomas Nathaniel, consigned to R. Crowley. She was discharged here and surveyed by the American Lloyds in October, 1873, and sailed away, never to return again. Upon her arrival she was put on board in London she was sold and turned into a coal hulk, in which capacity she still serves.—Philadelphia Press.

Boarding Patent Articles.

They have a novel method of pushing the sale of patent articles in London. A number of men are smartly dressed as servants and sent out to suburban shops to purchase the commodity it is desired to boom. The men are specially selected, with a view to prospective shopping Mrs. Harvey employers are persons of good position. A score of these ingenious individuals will call at all the fashionable shops in the districts allotted to them, and ask for the specific article they wish to introduce. They will taste upon having this and no other, regarding with scorn the suggestion that they might accept a substitute. In many cases, of course, the proprietor has not the new article in stock; but a few calls by other commercial travelers will induce him to order a parcel. A smart tradesman who declines to disappoint his customers will invariably avail himself of this opportunity to give an order for the article in question. This shrewd scheme has resulted of undoubted utility in the introduction of a really good article of produce. It is scarcely objectionable and frequently forms the basis of a sound and extensive business.

Women Voters in Europe.

The only countries in Europe where women vote to any extent are in Norway and Iceland, and to least expect it; for example, in Finland and Iceland. On the Continent the woman suffrage movement has made no great headway of late years, says the Chautauquan. The women have no voting privileges to speak of in either France or Germany.

In several European countries they are allowed to vote by proxy. Thus, in the Australian provinces women can vote for members of provincial Parliaments, only by proxy. They can vote in person at local elections. The same is true of Russia, where women who are heads of households vote at local elections. As to Sweden, they have power to vote at municipal elections in Belgium, while in Italy they can vote for members of Parliament.

The Lady's Age.

The Prince of Wales, about five years ago, was chatting with a young lady well known in London society, at Hamburg. "You are young enough," he said, in the course of conversation, "for me to be able to ask your age." "Twenty-five, was the ready reply. This summer his royal highness met the lady at Wiesbaden, and asked again, with a humorous smile, "is your age, I wonder?" "Twenty-five," again said the lady. "But you said that the last time I met you," remarked the prince, with a smile. "Well, sir," replied the lady, "I would you leave me contradict myself!"—Lady's Pictorial.

Rare skill.

Probably the most remarkable drummer who ever lived was John Henri, the famous troubadour-major of the Emperor Napoleon. One of his feats was to play on fifteen different toned drums at the same time in so soft and delicate a manner that, instead of the deafening uproar that might have been expected, the effect was that of a novel and complete instrument. In playing he passed from one drum to the other with such wonderful quickness that the eyes of the spectator could hardly follow the movements of his hands and body.

Weak on Geography.

Little things illustrate certain Englishmen's knowledge of American geography. The other day a Nottingham Englishman who had taken the Pacific express at Philadelphia called out on going to bed before the train started:

"Portah! Portah!"

The porter came. "What is it, sir?" he said.

"Please wake me up when we get to SanFrancisco, you know," said the Englishman.—Pittsburg Bulletin.

A NEW WHITE HOUSE.

How the Executive Mansion Might Be Enlarged.

The new "first lady of the land" will enjoy the use of only five bedrooms, a dining room, a sitting room and a parlor. Nearly all of the White House is now occupied by the Government for official purposes, so that the President and his family are squeezed into the corner of it.

Incidentally, the privacy is seriously interfered with. It is likely that some day a Chief Magistrate will have a large family and an independent set of males will gently rebuke the country by living a house in Washington, utilizing the official house merely for business and occasional purposes.

Every President who has ever occupied the White House has been troubled for lack of room. Even Mr. Harrison, a bachelor, found the quarters inadequate to meet the ordinary demands of hospitality.

Other tenants who happened to have large families, like General Grant and Secretary Garfield, have suffered considerable discomfort in this way. They did not have a spare chamber to offer a guest.

Mrs. Harrison's family was fairly large, and she complained that she was never able to entertain more than one guest at a time while in Washington. Mrs. Harrison took the trouble to express her ideas on the subject during her husband's administration, to the shape of plans executed at her own expense, for the President's house as it ought to be. The designs were made under her direction by an architect, with the help of Mr. Edward Owen, of Washington, who holds the copyright for them now.

Mrs. Harrison's design retains the old building substantially intact, so as to interfere not at all with its historic interest. Wings are added on the west and east sides, and in the rear is built a conservatory for plants.

Thus the whole arrangement is a quadrangle of buildings, surrounding an open court, the buildings themselves being connected by covered passageways. The upper floor of Secretary Tom's wing and all of the executive offices would be transferred to the new west wing.

The first floor of this wing would be devoted to a grand salon for large receptions, with parlors and reception rooms, while the second floor would be given up to the President's office and the room in which the Cabinet meets. The new east wing would be a museum and art gallery, the latter containing portraits of all the Presidents and their wives, as well as of other Americans who have distinguished themselves. Arranged in the manner described, the reconstructed White House would be very beautiful and thoroughly appropriate in all respects for the purposes contemplated by a building which is to be at once a home and office of the President.

One interesting point about the present White House is that Mrs. McKee's private living rooms are on the first floor, for private purposes, will have seven bathrooms. The bathroom attached to the bedroom occupied by herself and husband has two tubs. It has walls and floors of tiles, and is fitted up with the latest improvements in plumbing calculated to make bathing a luxurious pastime.

Unfaithful Logic.

The logic of the infant mind is usually right, although its theory may be wrong. Four-year-old Raymond lived in a suburban town and in a frame house that had an L. From the roof of that L arose a tall chimney, of which Raymond's own chimney stood Raymond's head. One evening he was made to go early and alone to bed, as a punishment. He had not been long in bed, hardening his stubborn little heart against the voice of conscience, before a violent gust toppled over the brick chimney of the house with a thunderous crash that shook the whole house. Close upon the noise of the tumbling bricks the startled household heard cries of terror from Raymond's room. His mother rushed to the little fellow's bedside and soothed his fears. When the fright was gone curiosity came to take its place.

"Mamma, what made our chimney blow down?" he asked.

"The wind, dear."

"What made the wind blow our chimney down?"

"God made it, I suppose, son."

"What did God want to blow our chimney down for?"

Here the mother, like many other religious teachers, could not resist the temptation to point the acts of God as a whip in her own hands.

"Perhaps because Raymond has been such a bad boy today."

Assuredly this had a very grave aspect. After a few minutes of silent cogitation this comment: "Well, God never have blown down our whole chimney. He might have knocked off a few bricks, and it would have scared me just as much."—New York Tribune.

LEGAL NOTE.

Mr. Hedrick has begun action for immediate separation from his wife Lily.—Ocala Banner.

...OTH FROM CATTAIL.

...PLANT PUT TO BETTER USE THAN AS AN ART SUBJECT.

...ted to Have Become a Marketable ...e—Is Manufactured into Plush ...d Serves as Stuffing for Soft Pillows ...d Down Quilts.

...ery few, probably, are aware that ...r vegetable down, of the cat-...s a marketable article, superior to ...ny notion for many purposes. ...e matter of fact, a great many peo-...e today using articles covered ...cat-tail products who have no ...where the material comes from.

...s a vast extent of country, coun-...ively speaking, from which the ...ail is gathered. It comes from the ...ge along the numerous creeks ...put in from the Delaware bay, ...Morris river to Cape May. The ...amount gathered in the sea-...s a ton. The work of pick-...and transporting it, and then ...ing it into the many forms which ...ail take before becoming salable, ...utes a considerable industry.

...of the most elaborate uses to ...ch this material is put is that of ...ering sofas. Very many of the ...plush-covered divans are really covered with a fabric of ...ail. It wears better than the ...th, and is infinitely cheaper.

...same argument that applies to ...soft is applicable to the pillow, ...ever, however, such pillows go ...another name.

...ese pillows, also, are made of cat-...ail because a pillow avowedly cov-...with cat-tail would probably be ...ected with contempt.

...the family album which graces the ...ent table in the parlor of so many ...es is also in many instances ...ished with cat-tail covers, although ...housewife cannot be convinced ...y are not plush.

...It is becoming a prevalent custom to ...e cat-tail fur on the back of hand ...ror brushes, which have here-...en backed with plush. Some ...that the substitute is really prov-...better than the original. The head ...ail, too, seen on the easy chair, is often ...of cat-tail—and is none the less ...ionable for that.

...Another article for which the cat-...l is used is the bed quilt. The older ...ne quilt is an old-time article of ...ery. The cat-tail quilt is every ...as comfortable, and costs about ...e quarter as much.

WATER FROM A PLANTED REED.

...ck Trapper's Device Worth Remember-...g Where Streams Do Not Abound.

...When people are suffering from ...ot they will resort to all kinds of ...ns to get water," remarked a gen-...man who was at one time a member ...the United States geographical and ...ystem expedition to the Indian ...ritory. "For some time we had ...n without water and were suffer-...greatly. Among our number was ...old trapper, who was as keen on ...scent for water as is a hound on ...trail of a bear. Finally, he paused ...place and stopped.

"I think there's water here, if we ...ld dig a well,' he observed.

"But we can't,' I replied.

"'No, but we can do something else,' ...said.

"With that he cut a reed, tying some ...ss on the end of it. Then he dug ...e earth, placed his reed in the ...e and packed the earth around the ...d. He waited for a few moments, ...n he said: 'Now you can suck ...r out of that thing?' I asked.

"'Yes, there's water near the sur-...e.'

"He drew at it with much satisfac-...n.

"'Good,' he remarked; 'would you ...nk?'

"With little confidence in the result ...ached at the reed, with the sur-...ising result of getting plenty of clear, ...e water. To my parched tongue it ...s the very nectar of the gods.

"'It's as clear as the water of a ...ook,' I said.

"'Yes, the moss is our filter,' he re-...ied.

"We pursued our journey much re-...shed, and I never forgot the old ...per's device."—Detroit Free Press

Good Suggestions.

A stooping position, maintained for ...e length of time, tends more to un-...ine the health than is generally ...ught.

...Small parts of honey, olive oil and ...e home-made wine, made from ...pe juice or currants, is both sooth-...and strengthening for a bad cough. ...Physicians are advocating the use of ...ive oil which comes from California, ...e weak lungs. It bids fair to take ...e place of cod liver oil, and it is ...ught by many pleasanter to take.

...The toothache caused by a cold in ...e facial nerves may often be re-...ved by wringing a soft cloth out of ...t water and sprinkling it with ...ong vinegar. This should be laid on ...e face like a poultice, and will often ...e followed by refreshing sleep.—Bal-...more American.

Where Reform Reigns.

"Josephine has an interesting mess-...e to put before the mothers' con-...ress.

"'What is it?'

"'She wants a law compelling every ...an who has a son to remember ...at he will probably be some other ...an's husband."—Chicago Record.

Fair Warning.

"Do you think your father would ...ve no personal violence if I were ...ld him for you?

"No, but I think he will if you ...ry pretty soon.—Cleveland Plain ...ealer.

AN INFANT SANDOW.

When Only Nine Months Old Could Lift a Twenty-five Pound Weight.

Henry Edward William Ward, the child of Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Ward, of Lewiston, Me., developed very fast and at an early age began to show signs of remarkable strength for an infant.

Mr. Ward, who was something of an athlete in his younger days thought he saw the foundation for a remarkably strong man in his son and when he was about three months old adopted a gentle system of exercise, through which he put Henry every day. He also put his little son on a diet that was muscle producing and in a few weeks was delighted to notice a great improvement.

Then some light dumbbells were provided for the boy, and under the careful tuition of his father he soon manipulated them surprisingly well. Young Henry's weight was so great for a youth of his age that he did not develop much speed as a sprinter and his main strength, brought about by his dumbbell and Indian club practice, is in his arms and chest. When only nine months old he was able to lift a dumbbell weighing 25 pounds clear of the floor.

The boy is not surprised at anything, and takes his training as a matter of course. He has learned to talk rapidly, and is as bright as a new dollar. Every muscle in the little fellow's body stands out prominently, and his father is looked upon as a professional boxer's. His biceps are developed in an astonishing manner and feel like iron.—New York World.

BRANDED WITH ICE.

A Student Imagined He Was Being Terrified by Burning Irons.

At Harvard University some years ago a great row was made over the discovery that in one of the societies it was a custom to brand some of the new members with a hot iron by way of initiation. The Chicago University students have modified this Spartan treatment by using ice instead of the hot iron. Seven neophytes, candidates for Snell Hall, were blindfolded and put through a course of good-natured horse play peculiar to college boys. Then one of them, Cleveland by name, was called forward for the branding process.

Cleveland had been a candidate for the '96 eleven, and was anxious to wear a "C" on his foot ball sweater. He was now told that his desire for athletic fame was to be gratified; that is, he was to have the "C" branded on his chest. The young athlete was stripped, his hands and feet were tied, and then a hot mustard plaster was applied to his breast, so that he might become "accustomed to the heat." In the meantime he could hear the hot iron sizzling close at hand. When the young man was just in the right condition of terror the branding was begun. His tormentors, taking a piece of ice, inscribed on his bare breast, frigid "C," while the poor fellow, with teeth set, writhed in agony. Six other boys were subjected to the same imaginary torture, and they all said that the sensation was painful enough to have been the real thing.—New York Journal.

Nitro-Glycerine in a Barnyard.

A peculiar accident befell a hog belonging to a farmer residing six miles northwest of Hartford City, Ind., in the Dundee oil field. An oil well had just been completed and the shot was put in to give the finishing touch, says the Chicago Chronicle.

One of the nitro-glycerine cans sprung a leak and several quarts were left upon the ground. It is odorless and has a sweet, pungent flavor which seemed to be just the thing for the hog which found the composition. The animal gulped it down with a relish and in a few minutes began to froth and snapped and snarled at everything in sight.

In the barnyard it bit at the heels of a horse, which made a vicious kick and hit the wild-acting swine squarely in the side. An explosion followed that was deafening. The hog was torn to shreds and small bits of flesh were plastered up against the barn and outhouse on every side, while the horse escaped without a scratch.

A Pair of Laconians.

Dr. Abernethy, the famous Scotch surgeon, was a man of few words, but he once met his match in a woman. She called at his home in Edinburgh one day and showed a hand badly inflamed and swollen, when the following dialogue, opened by the doctor, took place: "Burn?" "Bruise." "Poultice." The next day the woman called again, and the dialogue was as follows: "Better?" "Worse." "More poultice." Two days later the woman made another call, and this conversation occurred: "Better?" "Well, Fee?" "Nothing," exclaimed the doctor. "Most sensible woman I ever met!"

A Profitable Earthquake.

Earthquakes occasionally profit mankind as in the case of Ouzoun-Ada, a port of the Caspian, which is the starting-point of the Trans-Caspian railway of Central Asia. The port of Ouzoun-Ada was visited by an earthquake and since then it has been found open to steamers which could not enter it before, owing to the shallow water.—Tid-Bits.

Versed in His Mother's Method.

Neighbor: "Bertie, your mother is calling you."

Bertie: "Yes'm, I know it; but I fancy she don't want me very bad."

Neighbor: "She has called you seven times already."

Bertie: "Yes, I know; but she hasn't called 'Albert' yet."—Tid-Bits.

A CURIOUS INDUSTRY.

...CE HAS ALMOST A MONOPOLY ...MANUFACTURING MASKS.

...ge Is the American Market Yearly ...e Million Dozen Fairy Faces—Some of the Disguises are Almost Portraits of Noted Men and Women.

It is estimated that the yearly importation of masks to America reach the figure 6,000,000 dozens of masks of all kinds and degrees.

France and Germany produce nearly the entire output of this curious industry. The best—that is to say, the most artistic—productions come from France.

In Paris alone more than 2,000,000 masks are used annually, and perhaps as many more are shipped to other parts of the world. The largest single of those exported go to the United States and South America, where there is a constantly growing demand.

Some masks are finished with such marvellous accuracy that at the first glance one would almost believe them to be part and parcel of the wearer.

Special masks, being almost portraits of noted men and women, are expensive and cost up to $5 and $10 apiece. They are made with extreme care, having real hair and eyebrows, besides an immaculate complexion, provided the original boasts of such. The prospective purchaser of a mask can have his own face copied, should he, as has often happened, choose this peculiar mode of hiding his own identity. The leading establishment has over 10,000 different models, and a customer is permitted to try the effects of just as many as he pleases.

Of late there has been a disposition to masquerade in the guise of some animal, and this idea has opened a large field for the mask manufacturer. There is not a single one of the larger animals, either wild or domestic, that is not faithfully imitated. And as for grotesque freaks of the most astonishing character their number is equally large. It is scarcely possible that this industry will gain a foothold as a profitable business in the United States on account of the many complications that it involves. It is one of the few trades where it is hard to introduce labor-saving machinery, and wages are too high in America to make the attempt without it.—Chicago Tribune.

New Peril for Firemen.

An entirely new danger from electricity was discovered in a fire the other day in the electrical power house in Chicago. The fire was confined to the basement, and it was found necessary to chop holes in the floor of the dynamo room in order to play a steam hose down upon the blaze. While waiting for the dynamos to be shut off the firemen crept through the hole thus formed and turned a stream on the machine. In an instant the men were prostrated, but were soon resuscitated.—New York World.

The Motto Sows in Fertile Ground.

"I never see that good old motto, 'Honesty is the best policy,'" remarked Senator Sorghum, "without being carried back to my boyhood days."

"It is a grand old motto," replied his friend; "one that is well to impress early in life."

"Yes. I'll never forget the time I had to pay the smart boy of the school seven cents and a jackknife to write that line in my copybook, so as to keep me from getting marked below the average in penmanship."—Washington Star.

Where Whiskers are Popular.

"I'm sorry," said Mr. Stormington Barton, tragedian, "to interfere with your comfort, my dear, but in our next performance of 'Hamlet' you will have to omit the beard from your make-up of Polonius."

"But, sir—"

"There is no use in protesting. We are, as you may know, about to play in a territory where there is intense populistic sentiment. The last time I produced 'Hamlet' there they mistook Polonius for the star, and I'm not going to take any more chances."—Washington Star.

A Fatal Defect.

"I understand, Rastus, that your daughter is quite a singer."

"Deyn't no doubts erbout dat, boss." "That's lucky; I suppose you will have no difficulty in getting her a position in one of the church choirs in town?"

"She's tried dat, boss, but it didn't wuk. Eby time she done open her mouf, it made sich a fuss in de synagog dat de congegation caught colt an' she hatter resign."—Richmond Dispatch.

A Kitchen Hint.

A little soap is as useful in cleaning a stove or range as in cleaning other kitchen ware. A flannel rubbed with soap and then dipped into stove polish will lighten labor when the stove is to be made bright. Of course, the finishing touch must be a dry brush or cloth, applied with energy. Stoves so blackened are said to retain their polish much longer.

A Friend in Disguise.

Weary Raggles—If I was to join any assembly, it wud be one o' dem fer de preservation o' forests.

Wandering Willie—Why so, pard?

Weary Raggles—'Cause, if dey hed their way there wudn't be eany wood to saw.

ALCOHOL'S ABUSE.

DR. E. C. PELLEW EXPLAINS HOW IT IS BOTH FOOD AND POISON.

Used to Excess it is Worse Than Opium and Vitiates Character and Intellect—Inebriety in Women Harder to Treat Than in Men—The Gold Cure.

C. E. Pellew of Columbia University gave the last of his series of lectures on "Alcohol and Alcoholic Beverages" in the New York State Museum of Natural History recently. He discussed the "General and Special Properties of Alcohol" before a large audience, which followed him closely. He first talked about the theory that alcohol is a food, and admitted that it is such when taken in quantities below a certain limit, beyond which it becomes a poison. What this limit is he described later. Usually, he said, from one to two ounces can be consumed by any person in a day.

"When in such quantities, alcohol is entirely consumed in the stomach, and is a food," he declared.

In regard to its effect on the gastric juice in aiding digestion, he said:

"According to Chittenden's experiments, alcohol has no effect on the fluid when taken in such quantities as described, but in per cent. or less of it. From 2 per cent. to 10 per cent., it is usually helpful in the digestive process. Above this it is only harmful.

The notion that alcohol produces warmth, he declared, is utterly wrong. "This was discovered first in Arctic explorations thirty years ago, the explorers have left the ingredient behind entirely, and have also left behind those addicted to its use. It drives the blood to the surface, and while it thus diffuses warmth through the skin and surface tissues, temporarily, for a short time, the blood has left the vitals, and pretty soon the temperature of the body is 2 degrees below the normal.

"If you wish to endure the cold," he said, "take something to keep the blood inside. Food will do this. So will coffee. But if you have got wet and come in cold and fearful of pneumonia, take some whisky, which will drive the sluggish blood about in your body, and then take food and go to bed and you'll be benefitted. But notice, take your whisky after exposure, not before it."

He placed great stress upon the fact that alcohol becomes a poison very quickly.

"It is the most destructive of all poisons," he declared. "It destroys one's life, intellect, character, and the happiness of others. Opium and tobacco do not stray only those who use them. Alcohol emphasizes man's weaknesses. If he has a taint of the brutal in him, his brutal disposition is aggravated by its use. If he has passions of any kind, they are aroused by its overuse.

"Opium and rum are cruel for this reason. The Chinaman can get it right when he said: 'If me dlink lum, me go home and kick; if me eat opium, me go home and wife kick me.' Men know there are certain things they are unable to do. If they drink enough they will attempt to accomplish them, and thus will make fools of themselves, even if they don't go further and become beasts."

The alcoholic habit, or inebriety, which becomes a disease, Dr. Pellew said, is much less prevalent among the upper classes than the lower, because their superior intelligences and various business and social relations act as a restraint. "It won't do now for a man to get drunk at dinner and be obliged to go to bed, as was once the case," he declared. "The business and social world would not tolerate one who did it. This fact is having its effect on laborers. To hold their positions they must be strictly sober, and the more responsible the position the severer is this rule, while the firms that will not tolerate an occasional spree in which the social glass are becoming more and more numerous. This is working a great revolution."

The first requisite for curing the disease of inebriety, he said, was to strengthen the will, and he paid his respects to the Keeley cure.

"It's called the 'gold cure,'" he exclaimed, "but there's nothing gold about it. Its success is due to the fact that two newspaper men took it and then printed in their newspapers that it had at last been discovered that drunkenness was a disease and Mr. Keeley had had sense enough to find it out. This flattered men, and they flocked to Mr. Keeley.

"His method is this: He administers solutions of strychnine and two or three other drugs that brace up the nerves and then gives his patient a bottle of whisky or brandy, and tells him to drink it, if he must. 'But don't drink it if you can help it,' he'll say.

"The patient of course drinks it. The next time the doctor sees him he gives a dose of apple compoline. This has the effect of producing the most frightful seasickness when one drinks rum. So that after the dose of apple morphine, if one takes a drink of whisky, he'll never want to take another. That's the Keeley cure, which, by the combination of drugs and enthusiasm, works a temporary cure. But it is terribly exhausting to one's system, and if a patient backslides and takes the cure a second time his constitution is likely to be so shattered that it may kill him.

The true treatment is to build up the patient's nerves and system by slow and hygienic methods, such as physical and mental exercise, with a judicious use of drugs. But it should be remembered that when a man once has acquired the habit, no matter for how long he may leave it off, it is likely to return again with one glass of whisky."

PAINTS WITH HIS MOUTH.

Armless Englishman Makes Water Colors an Attractive Specialty.

The achievements of the Berlam Hiles, an Englishman, surpass in numerous and perseverance those of all other armless artists. Hiles is a young man who is making his mouth play a double part in his existence. With its aid he is taking honors in drawing and as an artist, and he has made not only a living for himself but a reputation for the excellence of his designs and compositions.

Without arms of his own Hiles, the Magazine of Art says, paints beautiful women with exquisitely modelled limbs and the mark and not only in possession of all their muscular capacities might be glad to lay claim to.

Hiles had arms, but when eight years old was the victim of a tram-car accident and lost both. Before this event he had developed so strong a passion for drawing that both accident and in no way diminished his determination to become an artist. So Hiles educated his mouth until it grasped a pencil, for brushes were beyond his wildest dreams then. First he learned to write, and then to draw fine lines.

The muscles not only of the mouth but of the neck required training, and it was between five and six years before such control of them had been obtained as permitted Hiles to work with a free touch. From that time Hiles has continued to progress, and has not only obtained a number of English medals and prizes in the decorative industries, but won a scholarship at the National Art Training School tenable for two years. Hiles has visited Italy to study in Rome, and now is earning his living in England, combining decorative art with pictoral work.—New York World.

A Fatal Omelet.

Ignorance of cooking it not often the direct cause of a man's death, but such an instance is related by Miss Edith Lichal in a recent volume entitled, "The Story of Two Salons." In the time of the French revolution one Monsieur Condorcet, upon whose head as an aristocrat a price was set, sought refuge with a friend, Monsieur Suard, who bade him return at nightfall, when means of escape would be provided.

Unhappily Condorcet, being unable to get without tobacco, went into a tavern to buy some. Still prostrate from fatigue, he thought he would take advantage of this opportunity to get some dinner and ordered an omelet.

"How many eggs do you wish to be used?" inquired the landlord, who had been eyeing him suspiciously.

The innocent Condorcet was at his wit's end. He reflected upon the size of the ordinary omelet.

"Twelve," he boldly replied.

His fate was sealed. None but an aristocrat could be so ignorant or so extravagant. He was arrested and led away to prison, from which he never emerged.

How Two Famous Songs Were Written.

"Marching Through Georgia," the favorite of military bands, and sometimes called "The American Marseillaise," was written in Chicago in 1865, by Henry C. Work, a remarkable song writer. He was a printer, and often composed the words of a song at the case as he set up the type, and then if he had access to music type, he would also compose in his mind and set up the music; these pieces seldom requiring more than two or three alterations. "Marching Through Georgia" was thus composed, without ever being put in manuscript. Mr. Work wrote "Wake, Nicodemus," "Father, Dear Father, Come Home," "Loss of the Lady Elgin," and among two or three hundred others "My Grandfather's Clock," which brought him a handsome return.

"My Old Kentucky Home" is said to have been suggested to Stephen C. Foster on hearing an old negro speak with love and longing of his home in Kentucky. Several of Mr. Foster's best songs were composed on pieces of brown wrapping paper in the back room of a little grocery store in New York.—Lady's Home Journal.

The Peanut Peanut.

Everyone eats peanuts and scarcely anyone knows anything about them. The peanut crop is one of the most profitable of the south. The yearly production of peanuts in this country is about 4,000,000 bushels, of twenty-two pounds each, the bulk of the crop being produced in Virginia, Georgia, Tennessee and North Carolina. These 4,000,000 bushels constitute but a small proportion of the peanut crop of the world, as the exportation from Africa and India to Europe in 1892 amounted to nearly 400,000,000 pounds, half of which went to Marseilles to be made into oil.

Peanut oil is used for lubricating and for soap, and is a good substitute for olive oil, lard, and cotton seed oil. The residue from oil making, known as "peanut cake" in Europe, is highly valued as a cattle fodder and is also ground into fine flour and used as human food.

Never Forget His Prayers.

Mr. D. L. Moody, the evangelist, told a story in Philadelphia the other day about his life before his conversion. When a boy of seventeen he said he was a pretty bad boy in his unregenerate days, deep in the follies and errors of the world, he never broke so far away from his early religious training as to forget to say his prayers every night. "I used to wrestle with my brother," he said, "and if either one of us happened to jump into bed without first getting on his knees, the other would swear at him vigorously, and kick him out on the floor."

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

AN AMERICAN GIRL WHO IS DOING THE CLASSICAL IN MUSIC.

Spiritiste, Sardou's New Play, is Like His Other Pieces—The Plot is Old and Threadbare from Frequent Use—Spiritualistic Situations.

It is no longer a disputed fact that American composers are coming rapidly to the front, not only men, but women as well. Miss Marie Von Hammer, though yet only a young woman in her twenties, has achieved as great a success with her musical compositions as many of her older and more experienced contemporaries.

An American girl, she always preserved the patriotic spirit, received her musical instruction in America, and now aspires to take her place in the foremost ranks of conscientious and painstaking American composers. It was only a few years ago, after the completion of thorough musical training and travel in musical centres of Europe, that she discovered she possessed the marked talents of a musical composer, and thenceforth devoted all her time to this art. She has composed music of the higher class, that of the classical schools, as nothing light or sensationally popular has ever come from her pen, and to-day the musicians of New York, among whom is the great conductor, Anton Seidl, pronounce her work as that of a genius whose efforts will live.

MARIE VON HAMMER.

Spiritiste is the name of the latest job from Victor Sardou's workshop, for which a great deal has been invented in the line of novelty. Reading the story, however, one fails to find much departure from the general lines followed in Fedora, La Tosca, Gismonda, and the others. The inevitable Sardou woman is there, with enough passion, and her heart torn by contending emotions, is the central figure of all of them. Sometimes she is Russian, sometimes of other nationality. In Spiritiste she is French, rich, beautiful, and with unlimited capacity for wild passion. Her name is "Simone." She is the wife of an old man whose life is devoted to occult philosophy and investigations of the unknown. The first act contains a good deal of commonplace sentimentalic love. It is observed, however, that "Simone" is intriguing with a lover, "Manuel" by name, whose intentions are to compromise "Simone" so that she may be divorced and compelled to marry him, in which plan he will assume command over her fortune. The opportunity presents itself. "Simone" is about to spend a few days with a countess of her acquaintance. "Manuel" accompanies the pair to the station, covers "Simone's" face with a thick veil and takes her with him to his own apartments, while the Countess awaits her. "Simone" holds back, but the prosing of a pure-minded friend so irritates her that she decides to go.

The next act shows the apartments of "Manuel." "Manuel" bids "Simone" fly with him, and so the dialogue goes on until suddenly the news of an accident at the station is brought in. Footsteps are on the stairs, and "Simone" escapes just in time to avoid meeting her husband. He is scarred and burned with long searchings in the debris of the wrecked train, in which "Simone" is supposed to have perished.

After a little discussion the husband departs, only to learn that the body of his wife has been identified by means of her jewels, but is otherwise unrecognizable. The situation is ingenious. "Simone" creeps out from her hiding place at the bidding of the pure-minded friend, and discovers that she is to aid intents and purposes, dead. Now she is free to fly with her lover, but curiously enough "Manuel" pales has cooled, now that she is no longer the wealthy "Simone." She, however, has by this time recognized the value of her husband's love and the baseness of the man who would betray her. She can not bring herself to go back to her husband and she is with the unwilling "Manuel;" accordingly she solved the difficulty by going away by herself.

In the last act the powers of spiritualism are once more called into play in order to bring husband and wife together. By the kind offices of the incorrigible ami des femmes a plan is arranged by which she may explain to the unseen friend of the dead. He is free to do so, and forgiveness. The spiritualistic husband is induced to believe that his wife is to be manifested to him at his special request; the shade of the departed are invoked and "Simone" appears. She confesses everything to the poor man, who, thinking that he is in the presence of the departed, can not withhold his pardon; nor when the spirit becomes flesh in his arms has he the hardihood to cast her away, so that the end is peace.

ROSE FANCHON.

SPORTS

Sun Rises: 5:56 a. m.
Sun Sets: 6:22 p. m.
Bicycle lanterns must be lighted at 7:28 p. m.

CYCLING COMMENT.

H. B. Munger, of Washington avenue, has purchased a Keating wheel from the Plainfield Cycle and Sporting Goods company.

The present fine weather which is now being enjoyed by the lovers of the wheel and the fine roads has been the means of bringing out a great many wheels. The local cycle dealers are wearing a broad smile in consequence.

Rogers, the North avenue cycle dealer, has just received a marvelous contrivance which will be appreciated by cyclers who will want to stop and have their tires filled with air. The arrangement is outside and works automatically. It will fit the nipple on any tire without changing.

E. Maxwell Honeyman, of Duer street, while trying to avoid a collision with a carriage at the corner of West Front and Grove streets, Tuesday morning, met with a lively tumble. He ran into the curb while going quite rapidly and was thrown over the handles of his machine. The front forks were completely demoralized but Honeyman escaped serious injury.

In purchasing a new wheel, the cyclist is called upon to solve several difficult and important problems, one of the most important of which is the choice of tires. The single tube tires and the clincher tires, which seems to be the best of the double tube tires, are there to choose from. Last year, the single tube tire was the preference but this year there seems to be a strong movement in favor of the clincher tire. Of course, the racing man and the wou d be racing man want the lightest that they can get which happens to be the single-tube tire, but for the real cyclist who goes out for pleasure and enjoyment the clincher-tire offers many advantages. The claim is made by the manufacturers of the latter tire that it is almost impossible to have any accident to the tire which cannot be repaired so that it will last long enough to get home and thus do away with the very unpleasant alternative of walking. The inner tube can be patched or, if nec essary, tied up while a hole or cut in the outer shoe can be repaired with a handkerchief or piece of cloth. A Bayonne man is a firm believer of the clincher tire after a little experience he had with one of them the other day. He was out riding and after going some distance from home his tire flattened out and he was compelled to dismount. An examination showed that a sharp stone had pierced the outer and inner tubes. Of course, his repair kit had been left at home. After emptying his pockets in an effort to find something with which to repair the puncture, he found a postage stamp. This he carefully stuck on the inner tube and then blew up the tire. The pressure of the inner tube against the outer kept the stamp in place and no air escaped while the delighted cyclist rode home in safety. For three days the stamp remained in position and then he had the tire regularly patched. He wrote to the tire company telling of the stamp and used that same stamp to carry his letter. It is needless to say that the company is proud of the stamp. While this is only a solitary instance, it shows how easy the tire is to repair which, at the present day, counts greatly with the cyclist. There are advantages of the single tube tire which should not be overlooked and the cyclist should think well before deciding on the tire he expects to ride this summer.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The state interscholastic games will probably be held at Bergen Point on Saturday afternoon, May 22.

A special meeting of the New Jersey Interscholastic Athletic Association will be held on Saturday morning at the building of the Newark Academy.

A meeting of the executive committee of the National Interscholastic Athletic Association was held last Saturday morning. It was decided to hold the national games on June 12th on Columbia Oval, New York, under the auspices of the Knickerbocker Athletic Association.

Carrier Pigeons Released.

Twenty-four carrier pigeons circled around over the North avenue station and then, getting their bearings, started off in the direction of Elizabeth. A crate of the birds was sent to this city, Tuesday, by John D. Schweers, a well known pigeon fancier of Elizabethport. The birds were released Wednesday at the station by Baggage Master Garretson and started on their way after a few circles over the town.

Connecting With the Sewers.

Quite a number of Plainfield householders have connected the plumbing of their houses with the sewer during the month of March. The total number is almost forty.

A HORRIBLE DEATH.

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1.

Bartenstetter, who was killed, has not lived with his wife for a long time. She lives with some friends on Terrill road and it was not until late in the day that she heard of the accident. The dead man had been boarding with friends at Scotch Plains, and his body was removed to that place as soon as possible by some of the firemen.

Driver Townley, of Alerts hose wagon, made the trip to the Plains in seven minutes. Chief Doane followed close after, while the engine arrived a few minutes later. The Scotch Plains firemen were very grateful to the firemen of this city for their assistance.

The condition of Conrad Peltz is slightly better. He does not seem to suffer any great pain, and he does not remember how the accident occurred. His son questioned him closely and he cannot tell anything about the explosion except that he remembers that he was thrown a considerable distance.

The old hand engine was years ago used in this city, and was known as Gazelle engine. The apparatus showed yesterday that it was equal to the occasion, and did good work.

Chief Hall says that the telegram sent to Chief Doane in his name, was done so without any authority.

THEATRICAL.

The only fun in town this week will be at the Music Hall next Friday afternoon and evening when the big guns of the comedy, the Gormans, will appear in their successful musical sketch "The Gilhoolys Abroad," assisted by an excellent company of comedians, singers, dancers and pretty girls. "The Gilhoolys Abroad" is the funniest and best musical comedy produced in years, and has been entirely rewritten for this season. It is overflowing with specialties and combines all the recent musical successes. Every artist has been especially engaged with a view of their adaptability to their respective parts. "The Gilhoolys Abroad" is an entertainment for dyspeptics, there being not a dull moment in the whole show. There is everything to please the eye and ear, nothing coarse or rude, but good clean wholesome fun, and plenty of it.

Mirth and melody will reign supreme at Proctor's Twenty third street, New York, this week. First and foremost in musical attractiveness is the renowned 'cellist, Auguste Van Biene, whose pre-eminence as the most brilliant and sympathetic 'cello player of modern times is universally admitted. The mirth provoking portion of the programme is headed by George Fuller Golden, the king of eloquence and laughter, whose funny stories and up-to-date comments on the world in general have made him a vaudeville star of the magnitude. But Mr. Golden will not monopolize the muse of the comedy, as drollery and diverting specialties will be in continuous evidence from noon to 11 p. m. McAvoy & May do a grotesque and wildly eccentric comedy skit that never fails to set the house in a roar. John Tirney will be on hand with comic specialties. Slade Murray, the English comedian, will introduce his Music Hall repertoire with song and dance ingredients. Canfield & Carlton will appear in a bright comedy sketch, and Platoff & Dunn are billed for a turn of the farcical song and dance order.

READY FOR SEEDING.

All is Activity at the City Sewer Farm at Present.

All is activity at the sewer city farm at present. The time has arrived for the planting of the different crops that the street committee of the Common Council have decided are to be raised there. The preparation of the beds for the reception of the seed was one of the first things to be done on the arrival of the good weather.

All the beds, except those in constant use, of which there are three or four at present, have been ploughed and prepared for the planting, and all that is needed now is the seed. The street committee has selected corn and potatoes as the principal crops to be raised on the farm this summer, and the beds will be sown with the necessary seed in a few days. There has been some delay on the part of the local dealers in getting the seed, but it will make no material difference.

Bible Class Entertained.

The Young Men's Bible class of Monroe Avenue church was very pleasantly entertained last Tuesday at the home of Adam Neumann, of No. 510 Madison avenue. Vocal and instrumental music together with sociability, helped to pass an evening of enjoyment.

Tired, Nervous and weak men and women find new life, nerve strength vigor and vitality in Hood's Sarsaparilla, which purifies, enriches and vitalizes the blood.

Hood's Pills are the favorite family cathartic, easy to take, easy in effect. 25c.

900 DROPS
CASTORIA
A Vegetable Preparation for Assimilating the Food and Regulating the Stomachs and Bowels of
INFANTS CHILDREN
Promotes Digestion, Cheerfulness and Rest. Contains neither Opium, Morphine nor Mineral.
NOT NARCOTIC.
Recipe of Old Dr SAMUEL PITCHER
A perfect Remedy for Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea, Worms, Convulsions, Feverishness and LOSS OF SLEEP.
Fac Simile Signature of
NEW YORK.
At 6 months old
35 DOSES - 35 CENTS
EXACT COPY OF WRAPPER.

SEE THAT THE FAC-SIMILE SIGNATURE —OF— Chas. H. Fletcher IS ON THE WRAPPER OF EVERY BOTTLE OF CASTORIA

Castoria is not sold in bulk. Don't allow anyone to sell you anything else on the plea or promise that it is "just as good" and "will answer every purpose." Be sure that you get C-A-S-T-O-R-I-A. The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

A TALKING MATCH.

The Feature of a Craig Place Social Affair.

Quite novel and entertaining were many of the features of the reception that was given by Mrs. James Harned and Mrs. DeVol to their guests and friends at their home on Craig place, last Monday. After the guests had assembled and enjoyed a social chat, an informal programme was given. There were piano solos by Miss Maud Acock and Miss Mabelle Force, several vocal solos by Miss Harris, of Elizabeth, and a mandolin selection Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, accompanied by Mrs. H. J. Johnston.

C. E. A. Heywood introduced a novel Indian club drill. The Indian clubs were hollow and filled with cotton. This was ignited and all the lights in the room turned out. Then Mr. Heywood went through a number of movements, the fire giving them a weird and pleasing effect.

A talking match was something entirely new. The guests were seated around the room and to the one who talked the most in the given time the prize was awarded. The honors in that contest went to one legal gentleman who began by reciting the Declaration of Independence at his partner and after touching on Blackstone, concluded with some special selections.

There was a final surprise in store for the guests, for on their departure they were saluted with a shower of rice to the great enjoyment of the passersby who thought some matrimonial knot had just been tied.

Among those present were Ex-Mayor and Mrs Needham, Ex-Mayor John H. Van Winkle, Mr. and Mrs Will F. Williams, Rev. and Mrs. H J Johnston, Rev. W. C. O Donnell, Mr. and Mrs. James Harned, Mr. and Mrs. DeVol, Mr. and Mrs. DeVol, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Eugene A. Laing, Allan Laing, John H. Van Winkle, Jr., Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Julia Force, and the Misses Hilder. Laura M. Sydenham, Emma V Tautune, Maud Acock, Belle Smith, Berths Needham, Alice Needham, Nora Williams, Josie Johanson, Louella Harris, Mabel Force and Helen Harned.

REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

Several Properties Bought and Sold During the Past Week.

The following property transfers have been recorded in the Union County Clerk's office, March 18th to 24th, inclusive:

Watson Whittlesy et ux., Bath Beach, to Alfred A. W. Costales, Plainfield, lot 12, block 14, Leland avenue, map of Netherwood. $125; W. D. Manning et ux., and Marcus W. Manning et ux., to Maggie M. Hand, Plainfield, lot West Second street, Plainfield, $1; Maggie M. Hand, et ux., to Jere. M. Hand, et ux., Plainfield, lot West Second street, Plainfield, $1; John Ross, acting executor of Peter Ross, deceased, Plainfield, to John C. Abbott, lot Madison avenue, $1,800; Jennie Cramer, Plainfield, et als., to James W. Winant, Westfield, property Carleton avenue, Plainfield, $4,250; John De'aney et ux., to Vincent W. Nash, Plainfield, lot Park avenue, $305; John B. Muller et ux., to W. H. McGee, Plainfield, lot easterly side of Westervelt avenue, adjoining Kelley property.

Alhambra Club Entertained.

The members of the Alhambra Club and their friends were entertained on Saturday evening by the Misses Buckle, of Westervelt avenue, in honor of their guest, Miss Florence L. Spaulding, of Bound Brook. A very pleasant evening was spent.

THE BRITISH PARLIAMENT.

Miss Yates Explains Some Features of English Politics and Government.

The many who enjoyed Miss Elizabeth Upham Yates' delightful lecture on the U. S. Congress, last week, found her talk on the British Parliament, in the Y. M. C. A. hall, Wednesday, even more interesting and instructive, since it was about a less well-known subject.

Miss Yates first described the House of Lords, the highest judiciary body in the realm, to which appeal may be had from the courts all over the Nation. This House has over five hundred members, but rarely more than thirty are present at one time, and a quorum to to transact ordinary business consists of two members and the Lord Chancellor.

The House of Commons has 670 members. These members do not necessarily reside within the borders of their constituency. If they are not approved by the people of their own borough, they may represent another. Elections do not occur at any stated time, as with us, but whenever the Queen issues a writ of election. Candidates pay all the expenses of the election; there is absolutely no public appropriation for the purpose. Bribery is prohibited; a candidate's wife cannot even give a lawn party to a set of people she is not in the habit of inviting.

The Queen has no veto power; if a bill is passed by both Houses, she is obliged to sign it. Royalty is not what it was a few hundred years ago. However, she has two undoubted prerogatives. She can call, prorogue, or dissolve Parliament at any time, and if she is anxious about the fate of any bill in the House of Lords, she can create enough Peers of her own way of thinking to insure its being passed.

A SOCIAL END.

Pleasant Conclusion to Series of University Extension Lectures.

A fitting conclusion for the series of University Extension lectures which have been held in this city during the winter, was held last evening in the Irving School, in the shape of a concert, in which the best of Plainfield's talent participated. A large audience listened to the entertainment and thoroughly enjoyed the different numbers which were excellently rendered. The artists were Mrs. Elizabeth Raelin Fassett, soprano; Miss Nellie Sperry Udell, violinist; Mrs. Charles L. Lewis, accompanist; Charles L. Lewis, baritone; Albert E Smith, prestidigitateur.

The programme was as follows:

"The Heart of a Sailor".....Adams
Charles L. Lewis.
Hungarian Rhapsodie.....Hauser
Miss Nellie Sperry Udell.
"She Wandered Down the Mountain Side" Clay
Mrs. Elizabeth Hamlin Fassett.
Ventriloquist and Facial Imitations.
Albert E. Smith
a. "Cradle Song".....Hauser
b. "Tarantella".....Papini
Miss Udell.
"Floating Days".....Bailey
Mrs. Fassett.
a. "Happy Days".....Strelezki
Mr. Lewis.
Violin Obligato by Miss Udell.
b. "Beauty's Eyes".....Tosti
Sleight of hand performance.....Mr. Smith

—To obtain new goods and latest styles see Harry M. Jaquetta ad tomorrow, the clothier, furnisher and hatter of 129 East Front street.

Amos H. Van Horn, Ltd.

DO NOT BE HOODWINKED

by the so-called "cash houses." WE are accomodating the people with credit, yet sell lower than ANY cash house in the city.

100 patterns of Parlor Suits in all the new coverings, Brocatelle $17.50; Plush $23.00; Silk Brocatelle, $28.00.

Largest line of Bedroom Suits in the city—50 different patterns. The above only $10.00.

All Spring styles of Carpets now ready for inspection. Ingrains, 28c yard; All-wool ingrains, 55c yard; Brussels, 55c yard; Velvets, 75c yard; Mattings, 10c yard.

Do not buy a Baby Carriage until you have seen our line. No house in the city. Prices low, from $3.75 up.

Refrigerators—complete stock now ready. Special low prices during this month. Prices from $3.50.

$50.00 BICYCLES FOR $29.00.

1896 pattern—want to close them out—you can RELY on these. They'll RIDE as well as any '97 make. Only a few on hand. Better snap 'em up.

Amos H. Van Horn, LTD. 73 MARKET ST. Near Plane Street NEWARK, N. J.
Note name AMOS and NO. 73 before entering store
CASH OR CREDIT.
Telephone 238
GOODS DELIVERED FREE TO ANY PART OF STATE.

Our Special Sale

FOR THIS MONTH ONLY.

NEW CABINET GRAND UPRIGHT PIANOS,

All Improvements, $225.

Payable $7 monthly. Warranted five years.

TWAY PIANO CO.,

Tway's Musical Guest mailed free 88 FIFTH AVENUE.

d 16 6m

STILLMAN MUSIC HALL

GEORGE E. ROGERS..... Lessee. | GEORGE H. WILLEY..... Manager.

FRIDAY EVEN'G, APRIL 2,

The World's Greatest Producers.

The Gormans

in the X-Rays of Farce-Comedy.

The Gilhooly's Abroad

Everything New. Funny Comedians. Pretty Girls. New Music. New Specialties.
A GREAT SINGING COMPANY.

Bargain Matinee.

Prices 75, 50, 35, 25. Matinee, 10 and 20. Seats on sale at box office Wednesday, March 31st.

Peter Working Miracles.

The devotional exercises at the meeting of the Primary Teachers' Union held Monday afternoon were conducted by Mrs. Powlison, and the lesson was taught by Miss Beeching. The subject was "Peter Working Miracles," and Miss Beeching used the sand map to illustrate the points of the lesson. The latter part of the meeting was devoted to a consecration service, which was in charge of Mrs. Baker. The attendance was very encouraging and the interest was great.

—The Greek costume tableaux which were given in Vincent chapel, last winter, will be repeated in Bound Brook by the young women of the Congregational church of that place on Monday evening, April 19th.

ELY'S CREAM BALM is a positive cure. Apply into the nostrils. It is quickly absorbed. Gives relief at once. A Cure not a Palliative. Not a Drying Powder or Liquid. Does not injure the most sensitive. Sold by druggists or by mail; 50 cents. Sample 10c. by mail. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren St., New York.

—The world is at very very little know; but it seems awful large those who hear of the choice good Pepk's and are just out of reach them.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL XXX. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, APRIL 8, 1897. NO. 14

"Support the Constitution, Which is the Cement of the Union, as Well in Its Limitations as in Its Authorities."—Madison.

A SAD ENDING FOR BENNY

MET DEATH IN A WHIRLING, BUBBLING EDDY OF WATER.

A Four-Year-Old Boy Lost His Balance And Fell Into the French Grist Mill Flume to Be Hauled Out Dead.

'Twas a sad ending to a day of pleasure for little Benny Denise and although he kicked and struggled, the cruel waters closed over his little head and his screams for help were smothered ere they left his mouth. One more was added to the already long list of those who met their death by drowning. The fatal accident occurred yesterday afternoon in the entrance of the flume to French's mill on Somerset street.

Little Benjamin Denise, Benny is the name by which he is best known, lived with his mother in one of the tiles on West Front street, over Grane & Clark's store. He was only a lad of four summers and had not attained the dignity of being a school boy yet. His little sister, two years older, went to the public school every day. When the sister returned from school Tuesday afternoon at about 3:40 o'clock, Benny was missing.

Benny had been away before but had always been found and brought home safe and sound. Mrs. Denise and her youngest daughter to go out and find Benny. The little girl went forth after a search found her brother. He had wandered from Front street through the lane to the rear of French's mill which fronts on Somerset street. The little girl found another friend and the three were watching the water in the mill race when little Benny started to walk across the planks that span the beginning of the flume ere it disappears under the wall of the mill.

The end of the mill race, where the gates into the flume are, is about five feet from the side of the mill. The water rushes through the gates and passes through a screen made of iron bars to the turbine water wheel just inside. The turbine causes an eddy in the water in the flume. The screen is to prevent refuse from going in and blocking up the wheel. Over the flume which is visible from the outside are two planks which form a rude foot-bridge by which those passing that way get on the other side of the mill race and flume. It was this bridge that Benny attempted to cross.

How it happened no one knows. Someway Benny fell from the planks and tumbled head first into the water below. The water is almost four feet deep in the flume. Perhaps his head struck the iron grating; maybe it was only fright that stunned him; but at any rate he failed to grasp the walls of the flume and sank under the water that bubbled and splashed as it rushed through the gates and into the turbine wheel.

Thomas Hughes is employed in Langhorne's photographic establishment and was at work developing pictures. From the window by which he stood he could see the flume. He was busy at his work, Tuesday afternoon at 4:15 o'clock, when he heard a child scream. He looked from the window and saw two children running away from the flume. One of them turned and ran back. Stooping over the side of the flume, the child peered into the water. Then she, for it was Benny's sister, screamed and ran. Hughes saw that something was the matter and hurried down stairs and out of doors.

Hughes first thought was that some one had fallen into the water, but when he reached the side of the flume he saw a child's hat floating in the water. Then he supposed that the little one had lost her hat and he prepared to recover it. He leaned over and reached down, when out from under the boards floated the body of a child. The next instant he had lifted the lifeless burden from the water and started to restore life by violent rubbing. The lips of the child were blue and the foam flowed from the mouth as the limp little body was lifted to dry ground.

Realizing that it was a serious case, Hughes carried his dripping burden into Rhaw's pharmacy on East Front street, Lewis R. Bird had seen Hughes hurrying to the scene and he followed in time to learn the trouble. He returned to the street, and, seeing Dr. Rushmore passing in his carriage, called to him. Dr. Long was hurriedly summoned on the telephone. The two physicians worked over the child for half an hour attempting to restore respiration and clear out the water from the lungs. Their efforts were unavailing, however, for the little lad showed no signs of consciousness and they finally reluctantly desisted. The remains were then left in the back room of the pharmacy to await the arrival of the county physician.

The body was removed to the child's home in the evening by permission of Chief Grant. The funeral will be held from the house this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The interment will be at Hillside Cemetery.

BRIGADE LINE OF MARCH.

FURTHER DETAILS FOR THE REUNION ON NEXT FRIDAY.

Woman's Relief Corps Have Completed Their Arrangements for Entertainment —Citizens Are Invited to Decorate.

Everything now seems to be in readiness for the coming of the members of the Second New Jersey Brigade on Friday. At the meeting of the Son's of Veterans held last Tuesday the members made arrangements to act as escort for the visitors upon their arrival in this city.

The members of the Woman's Relief Corps met Tuesday afternoon and completed their arrangement, and a meeting of the general committee was held last evening to arrange a programme for the exercises to be held Friday afternoon in Reform Hall.

The line of march will be from the Casino to Park avenue, to Front street, to Central avenue, to Reform Hall. Prominent city officials, officers of the G. A. R., Sons of Veterans and the Plainfield Cornet Band will escort the visitors to the Hall. It is earnestly requested that all as far as possible decorate along the line of march which is not very long. There is an opportunity for the citizens to display their patriotism and it is to be hoped that they will respond in this respect. Contributions are coming in satisfactorily and the committee will receive any money that the citizens desire to give.

The following official order has been issued by Commander I. L. McVoy, of Post No. 73, G. A. R.:

Headquarters of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, Department of New Jersey, G. A. R.:

The survivors of the Second N. J. Brigade will hold their tenth annual reunion in Plainfield April 9th, by joint invitation of the Post and Mayor of the city. It is expected that all comrades will heartily respond to this order and give the visitors a soldier's welcome. The members of the Post will assemble at headquarters at 9:30 Friday morning, in uniform to receive the visitors, and will re-assemble at 12:30 noon and escort the members of the members of the Brigade from the Casino to Reform Hall where dinner will be served. After dinner, Mayor Fink will welcome the visitors to the city, and there will be addresses by General Sickles and others.

I. L. McVoy,
Commander Post 73, G. A. R.
Official: E. C. Morse,
Adjutant.

LIKE THE COUNTY ROADS

CITY THOROUGHFARES TO BE TREATED TO A NEW METHOD.

County Inspector Fink Engaged to Improve the Business Streets in the Same Manner as County Roads are Built.

The progressive methods adopted by the present street committee of the city council are sure to bring some favorable results and Councilman Frost is determined that Plainfield shall have good roads if such a thing is possible with the means at hand. As a starter in this direction arrangements have been made with County Superintendent of Roads Fink to have Front street, from Watchung to Grove street, the latter street to the bridge, and Somerset street to the bridge, macadamized and re-built according to the methods adopted for the county roads. This work will be started tomorrow under the supervision of Mr. Fink for the purpose of ascertaining which is the best method to adopt, that is the present method used in this city or the one used in building the county roads.

The established reputation of the county roads is known far and near and if Plainfield can have such roads it will certainly be a great improvement over present streets. It has always been held by people of good judgement that in macadamizing the streets of the city too much dirt has been used with the stone, and when there is a heavy rain the dirt is at once turned into mud in large quantities. It is understood that Mr. Fink's methods are somewhat different and are more like those used in the building of hard roads.

HELD ON ANOTHER CHARGE.

Ellis Campbell Makes a Complaint Against the Oak Tree Assailant.

William Tighe and William McCann, the two men from Metuchen who figured so prominently in the assault of the Schumakers at Oak Tree, last week, have had another charge to answer to. The latter charge was brought by Ellis Campell, of Avon Park, who alleges that they maliciously wrecked a buggy which was in his barn. The two offenders were brought before Justice Wood on that charge and were held for the Grand Jury for that offence also. The Grand Jury met yesterday and their cases were considered.

Miss Schumaker, one of their victims, whom they dragged from her bed and carried away to leave in the woods, has slightly improved and will probably recover. Noah Schumaker is in a critical condition and may not survive.

BEYOND CHURCH DOOR.

CHRISTIAN ENTHUSIASM IS WANTED IN EVERYDAY LIFE.

A Larger Attendance and Increased Interest at the Endeavor Meetings—A. C. LaBoyteaux's Admonition to Workers.

The second of the evangelistic services under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Local Union was held Tuesday in Trinity Reformed church, and showed larger attendance, increased interest and a real Endeavor spirit.

The preliminary prayer meeting was led by Miss Emma Virginia Fish, and was an earnest and helpful service.

The larger meeting was led, as on the preceding night by E. E. Anthony, and opened with a song service, led by Horace J. Martin and the chorus choir, followed by Scripture reading by Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, and prayer by Rev. W. R. Richards, D. D. A solo, "No Sorrow There" was sung with much expression by L. H. Biglow, Jr., after which came a short practical address by A. C. LaBoyteaux with a three-fold subject, "Loyalty, Action, Dependence." We want to be Christians through and through, he said. Worldliness will creep into our churches and Endeavor Societies, and one of the saddest things in the world is to see the lack of consecration on the part of the church members of today. We want to be wholehearted, out-and-out Christians. Live for the eternal things; all else is but fleeting shadows. But we must do, as well as be. It is not enough to say "I love Jesus."

Enthusiasm that doesn't last beyond the church door is not worth much. We want to live to make Christ known: we should never be satisfied to be saved alone.

And then, remember Christ said "Without me you can do nothing." It is not only in the great things of life that we need his help, but in the least as well. We must depend upon him in these meetings, or they will come to naught: we can only be the instrument, he must do the work.

Another beautiful solo, "Moment by Moment," was sung by Mr. Biglow, then came the consecration hour, in charge of Miss Alice B. Spangenberg. The key-word of her brief but heartfelt talk was "Whole Thine." She spoke of the lack of realization on the part of Christians that they should belong wholly to God. Yet, said she, we have said, and we say on the morning of each day, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" Will you give yourself wholly to God for the work of saving souls? Then lay aside social engagements, and attend every one of the meetings that you can, and bring in others, who have not your Savior.

DRUMMERS GAVE THEIR FACES.

A Photographic Presentation to Warren Engine Company.

A regular meeting of the members of Warren Engine Company was held last Tuesday, at which time an oppor tunity was given for further nominations of officers. The only change made was in the nomination of a treasurer. The name of J. M. Higgins was substituted for that of E. E. Pope. The election of officers will take place on the first Tuesday in May.

After the transaction of the business the members of the Independent Fife and Drum Corps were received and an adjournment was made to the Crescent Hotel, where a repast was served. There was good music by the Corps, and several of the members favored those present with vocal selections.

A feature of the event was the presentation of a picture of the Corps to the Engine Company. The picture was presented by Major Frank Manchester, and it was received for the company by James D. Anderson. Remarks by the different members followed.

ENDEAVORERS ELECT.

East Third Street Mission Society Held an Important Meeting.

The regular business meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the East Third Street Mission was held last Tuesday in the mission. The reports of the officers and committees were made showing the society to be in a good financial condition and that much work had been accomplished during the last few months. The question of Junior Endeavor work was taken up and a committee was appointed to investigate the matter. The committee was composed of Miss Maggie Rocap, Miss Annie Kyle and Robert Love.

The election of officers was held and resulted as follows: President, Isaac Giles; vice-president, L. W. Randolph; recording secretary, Miss Florence A. Dodge; corresponding secretary, C. E. Hepburn; treasurer, Miss Lena Jomini.

ALL EYES ON VOORHEES.

HIS INDEPENDENT ATTITUDE CAUSES SOME LITTLE WONDER.

It Is Hinted That Voorhees Is Anxious to Head a New Political Machine to Down the Present Powerful Triumvirate.

What is Foster Voorhees driving at is one of the questions of the day, says a Trenton correspondent. That young man, who once seemed the logical leader of the party, the sure candidate for Governor, the cautious, conscientious, pains-taking and genial Voorhees! Some go so far as to say that he has split with Griggs; that their paths hereafter lie in different directions and that the defeat of Voorhees' proposed Judiciary amendments lies at the bottom of the estrangement, which means so much in Jersey politics. Voorhees had set his heart upon his ideas of how the constitution should be altered with regard to the formation of the State Courts and that upon a test of strength in the Senate he won. It is declared that if bigger hands had not been shown in the contest he would have won, too, in the House. His great error, it is hinted, was in opposing the confirmation of certain appointments. He is said to have been that stand upon the same ground that he opposed the Lentz-Dickinson scheme—party danger. He made the fight and lost, and its consequence will be felt in the days to come when higher trophies are at stake.

Voorhees is strong in Union County. That was evident when he divided its delegation against John Kean and contributed largely to the defeat of that shrewd and experienced leader, who was supported by such strong influences. It was shown again last year, when he was returned to the Senate in spite of opposition from certain sources. Now, is it Voorhees' probable purpose to set up a new machine, the object of which will be the overthrow of the present powerful triumvirate? If it be, he has probably counted the cost and weighed the chances, for it is a desperate leap to to take. Young birds sometimes make fatal errors in trying their wings. If the young man from Union has hopes of political future he will probably pocket a bit between now and the first of November, '98 If he means to throw down the gauntlet to the present leaders, place himself at the head of a new line and march forth to do or die, his recent course is no puzzle to those who have watched him carefully, with calculations as to the future in mind. Union County will be needed in caucus, as well as the other counties of the State, and it is probably well not to underestimate the value of one vote, particularly when that vote promises to count for a United States Senator.

SHOWERED WITH RICE FOR LUCK.

Pleasant Departure of Two Church Workers From Plainfield.

Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Taylor, who have resided for several years on Rockview avenue, Washington Park, and both of whom were active workers in Warren chapel, left Plainfield Tuesday, much to the regret of their many friends. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor kept the hour of their departure very quiet, but not so much so that their many friends did not hear of it. When they arrived at the North Avenue station they found a large number of their friends there waiting to give them an enthusiastic farewell. Rice was used in profusion and the departing ones will long remember the happy incidents in connection with their going from the scenes they had learned to love. They will take up their residence in Marion, O., at the home of Mrs. Taylor's parents.

TWO MURDERERS MUST DIE.

No Mercy for Either Johnson or Clawson, Now Awaiting Execution.

The Court of Pardons Tuesday decided not to commute the death sentence of Jacob Johnson, now in Somerville jail for the murder of Annie Rogers, and Elmer Clawson, the boy who killed his employer.

The case of Ackerman, the Paterson wife murderer, will be taken up next Tuesday, and the case of Edith Behr, of Union county, will be considered next Thursday afternoon.

TWO NEW POLICEMEN.

A New Police Beat also Established by the Board.

A meeting of the Police Board was held last Tuesday, at which time Florence T. McCarthy and John Watson were appointed regular patrolmen. One of these men will take the place recently resigned by William Robinson. The Board established a new post which is located from Cedar brook on Park avenue to the city line.

The Misses Keunlin, of Carleton avenue, will entertain a few friends at their home on Thursday evening.

PLAYED AGAINST CRACKS

FINE EXHIBITION OF BASKET BALL IN THE Y. M. C. A. GYMNASIUM.

Local Team Contested With Two New York Teams, Among the Members of Which Were Some Best Players in the Country.

It is rare that the people of Plainfield are treated to such an exhibition of basket ball as was given the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium, last Tuesday.

It had been arranged to have the first team and the business men's team play the first and second teams from the Riverside Athletic Club of Newark but a telegram was received by Physical Director Heywood secured two of the first team and three of the third team from the Twenty-third Street Branch to play against the business men. The New York boys called themselves "the Twisters." Shields and Wendleken of the team are two of the best players in the country.

The game between the Riversides and the first team was a lively one and the Plainfield boys played a rattling game for the first half when the score stood 14 to 8, in their favor. In the second half, they seemed to loose heart and did not with their accustomed snap. The final score was 30 to 16 in favor of the visitors.

The second game was great. The visitors were out-classed, the business men but the latter did not care and played their best. They secured three goals before the New York boys had any. The New York players waked up at intervals and kept the score close enough to be exciting. "Sandy" Shields showed the audience how basket ball was played and did some wonderful work. The Plainfielders made a desperate effort at the last and just lost the game by one point.

The team lined up as follows:—

R. A. C.	Y. M. C. A. (First Team)
Lowrey	right forward Moralier, E
Pierson	left forward Long, captain
Reatt	centre Egan
James	right guard Smith, G. F
Lehlbach	left guard Moralier, M

Score, Riverside, 30; Plainfield, 16.

	SECOND BEST TEAM.
Wheeler	right forward Doane-O'Donnell
Grist	left forward Marsley-Johnson
Byerley	centre Fuller
Wendleken	right guard Sutfen
Shields	left guard Smith, F. G

Score, Riverside, 28; Plainfield, 26.

Referee, C. E. A. Heywood. Umpires, A. H. Rhodes, of Newark, and Charles R. Morse, of Plainfield.

WOMEN TO HEAR SECRETS

THINGS THAT WILL NOT NOW BE TOLD WESTFIELD OFFICIALS.

Board of Education to Have Women to Assist Them in Managing Schools—What Was Done at Opposition Meeting.

At the meeting of the Westfield Board of Education, last Tuesday, one of the new members sprung an old chestnut in a new form. This member was the well-known lawyer, Harry Knight. He offered a resolution that at once made every man put himself on record. This is, in part, the resolution that was put: "That the Board of Education appoint a board of visitors, consisting of five ladies of discreet and mature age, to assist the board in its work."

Before some of the men could get a full breath, or recognition from the chair, Mr. Knight started in to make his argument in favor of the "ladies of discreet and mature age." In substance, Mr. Knight said that his reasons for offering the resolutions were that by having the ladies constituting a board of visitors, they could call on the teachers and ascertain facts that the teachers would hesitate to tell the members of the Board themselves.

Samuel Reese jumped to his feet, and in his usual vigorous style denounced the resolutions. Mr. Reese said that he "questioned the right of the Board of Education to appoint spies, or delegate its authority." Mr. Wells spoke in favor of the resolution and boldly intimated that there were certain things going on that the Board should know, but could not learn directly from the teachers.

Mr. Fink was opposed to it. He said that he understood there was to be a constitutional amendment permitting the women to sit in the Board and he thought it was time enough to act when the ladies could legally become members of the Board. How the vote stood: For the resolution, Clark, Cooper, Welles, Knight. Against, Reese, Schoonover, Taylor and Fink. The vote resulting in a tie, Chairman John B. Green cast the deciding ballot in favor of the resolution. The chairman will appoint the "Board of visitors, consisting of five ladies of discreet and mature age," before the next meeting of the Board.

—The Plainfield Medical Association held its quarterly meeting and banquet last Tuesday at the Hotel Touillerie. Dr. M. B. Long read a paper on "Compound Fractures." The meeting was well attended and the banquet proved a success.

RESULT OF LOBBYING?

A CORRESPONDENT EXPLAINS A COUNCILMANIC CHANGE.

Says That Enough Scions Were Leashed With the Political Whip to Change Their Minds and Vote for Library Request.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:

A careful reading of your valuable paper last evening caused me a sleepless night! For several weeks I had been reading lengthy communications in your columns, all favoring the erection of a "fire-proof" building in memory of the late George H. Babcock, to contain certain scientific works to be purchased from his legacy to fill it.

When the library was first opened years ago one of the leading citizens of this town came across 3,000 volumes—a job lot—which could be purchased for $1,000, spot cash. A brother trustee, to the story goes, asked what they were. "I do not know," was the reply, "but it is too good an opportunity to throw away; these books would fill our shelves nicely and think of the low price we pay!"

Plainfield is proud of her library, but if a fire consumed it tomorrow the people would all be the gainer—provided the building and books were fully insured.

It might be hard, of course, to obtain another petrified cat, which is so carefully guarded upstairs among the choice curiosities too bewildering to mention.

Of course, the loss of all the "Old Masters" would cause general distress, but Plainfield has, thank fortune, a number of ambitious artists who would only be too glad of a job.

Once the library was known as the Mark Library. The witty remark of Julia Ward Howe, who asked "If that place was for men only," caused a change, however, to the name it now goes under.

It is time to come other buildings can be added, if "leading citizens" come to the front with their cash and our City Fathers permit. Fill our graveyard, if we must, until it rivals the celebrated "Streets of Cairo" of Chicago Exposition fame!

According to the statistics published Monday night in the local papers by Councilman Frost it was clearly shown that our present library, with certain changes was large enough to contain 100,000 books or more. Why, therefore, should the taxpayers be be called upon for $7,000, with a City Hall and jail looming up; a needed High School to be erected and lots of other necessary improvements?

Are our City Fathers not afraid of Election Day next Fall?

How many these thoughts crowded sleep away last night, but it was only today that I read between the lines.

According to your reporter's notes, Councilman Dumont's proposed donation was defeated by a vote of 7 to 4. The reporter mystified when he stated that "the resolution was consequently killed for the time being. A little later the donation was again brought up, as there seemed to be some misunderstanding about it."

The second vote was a complete "flop" and the bill passed—7 to 4.

* * *

If your reporter had stated that a hurried recess had been taken, and on the Councilmen retiring to the conference room, had met a number of prominent officials, citizens, member of the press, club men—whose combined "influence" with heated remarks, with threats, perhaps, of resignation, your readers might have understood the situation more fully and refrained from unkind criticism.

That little side room, I fear, has seen this winter a lot of wire pulling and exchange of hearts!

"Big Six" never changed their votes during sessions; they always came prepared and one vote was enough!

Mr. Editor, favor us hereafter with all the news. We plain common people buy The Press for just that, and I am glad to say that we generally get it.

But seriously speaking regarding the result of Monday night's electioneering in the Council chamber in behalf of the citizens library appropriation, the figures as given by Councilman Frost, together with arguments supporting their application, cannot be gainsayed, disputed, nor ridiculed out of court.

A careful examination by any practical and intelligent person will demonstrate the utter inadequacy of space not only for the present contents of the library, but for the entire accumulation of books purchased by the Babcock legacy, under providing liberal space for reading tables.

Common prudence would, therefore, dictate the use of the present quarters by the Babcock library until such time as it was definitely demonstrated that larger quarters were desirable. The value of the scientific library would be fully tested and when the proper time had come, with the increase of population would have come increased revenue and a cheerful willingness on the part of the people to provide a handsome and suitable structure to replace what must be indefinite years remain an architectural eyesore to all the neighborhood.

Truth-Seeker.

STREET WORK PLANNED.

COUNCILMANIC COMMITTEE AWARD CONTRACTS FOR STONE.

Several Streets to be Leveled Off at Once—Sharp Dip at Park Avenue and Second Street to be Obviated.

The street committee of the Common Council held a meeting last week and arranged further details for work in that department.

The special object of the meeting was to receive bids for crushed stone to use on the city streets in repairing them. Two bids were received. That of Smalley Brothers was the lowest, offering to furnish the city with crushed stone at the rate of $1 a ton. The committee decided to give the contract to Smalley Bros.

Another important matter that was discussed was the present condition of Front street, West Eighth street and Central avenue. All of the streets, while much of the superfluous earth has been removed from their macadamized surfaces, are in poor condition, full of ruts and holes, and the committee deemed it advisable to repair them at once.

The sharp dip at the corners of Park avenue and Second street, which form the gutters, have been dangerous to the life and limb of cyclists and drivers. Those who have seen the effects on the apparatus of the fire department, have seen the need of a change. The committee was in favor of making some kind of a change at once. While it is a hard place to drain successfully in any other manner beside leaving the deep gutters across Second street, the committee was in favor of putting in iron culvert boxes. Estimates for the same will be presented to the committee at once by Sheriff William T. Kirk. No decisive action was taken in regard to them but the committee is understood to be in favor of the change and willing to make it if it can be done in an economical manner.

CORONER'S INQUEST.

The Remains of Bartenstetter Viewed and Adjourned to April 14th.

The coroner's jury called to inquire into the cause of the death of Carl Bartenstetter, who was killed at the nitro-glycerine explosion at Scotch Plains, Tuesday, March 30, met at Scotch Plains Saturday afternoon. The jury was composed of Edward Hand, Frank Allen, Benjamin Elliott, George L. McDonald, Sittes M. Parsek and Norman Dunn. Edward Hand was chosen foreman. Constable Rockafellow was in charge of the jury.

County Physician Westcott was present and took the jury to see the remains of the victim of the accident. Coroner Sinclair was also present. The jury then went to the scene of the accident and viewed the place and the fatal piece of timber. One of the jurors expressed his opinion that the explosion was from the outside. The jury adjourned until April 14th.

In justice to Mrs. Carl Barnstetter, of Scotch Plains, wife of the man who was killed in the explosion at that place March 30, The Daily Press desires to say that the departed man and his family lived happily together and were not separated as heretofore stated. The information was furnished on what was supposed to be the best of authority, that the family was separated.

ROOF SET ON FIRE.

Came From an Overheated Chimney But Was Soon Extinguished.

An over-heated chimney set fire to the roof of the house occupied by John Froelock, located at 734 East Third street, last Friday morning. Robert Yetman, who is working on the street in the immediate vicinity, saw the fire and he jumped on a wheel and rode to Box 16, at the corner of Front and Richmond streets, where he sent in an alarm. When the department arrived they found that it was not necessary to use the water from the hydrant as the fire was almost extinguished. Mr. Froelock, by the use of ladders, reached the roof and very quickly put out the fire. Chief Doane and his men had very little to do when they arrived. The roof had to be cut considerable to get at the fire but the damage was slight.

A Horse of Another Color.

Vanderhoof and De Hart, the Central avenue butchers, traded horses with William Baldwin, the hay carter. Mrs. DeHart had a chattle mortgage on the butcher's horse and got out a search warrant from Justice Nash last Friday to obtain the animal.

Constable Mattix went to serve it and remained at the barn from ten o'clock until daylight waiting for Baldwin. Then he brought Baldwin and the horse to the Justice. An examination of the mortgage showed that the horse called for was a gray one and this one was a sorrel. It seems that the butchers had traded their gray horse with a man from over the mountain for the sorrell some time before. Baldwin and his sorrel were then released.

Easter Music.

The choir of St. Mary's church are rehearsing the music for Easter Sunday, and something fine is expected. An orchestra will also be a feature.

EVERYTHING FOR SAFETY

EXTENSIVE ALTERATIONS MADE IN THE PLANS OF THE BIG DAM.

Entire Work Under Personal Supervision of a Recognized Expert Engineer—Dam Will Stand Very Hard Strain

The Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company, are progressing on their new dam at Washingtonville. Their former plans and specifications have been revised and perfected after long and careful study by two constructing engineers of New York city.

Extensive alterations and additions will be made and the entire work will be under the personal supervision of Mr. Frankfort, of the Mechanical Engineering and Construction Co., on Fifth avenue, New York, a gentleman of large experience in the construction of reservoirs and dams.

A substantial "core wall" is to be built the entire length of the dam and large iron pipes are to be substituted for the original waste grate.

An enormous buttress will be built under the dam while large boulders will be placed under the "spill-way," making it, according to the engineer's statement in charge, one of the strongest dams in the state.

Maps have been made of the entire water-shed and careful survey taken and according to the heaviest rain fall on record, water cannot pass over the dam at a depth exceeding six inches while provision has been made for a forty-two inch raise.

The company say that neither time or expense will be spared in making the dam a stronghold capable of resisting the severest force of nature.

PRESENT TO THE STATE.

DR. J. A. COLES' LATEST GIFT TO ADORN THE STATE CAPITOL.

It is the Celebrated Oil Painting Known as "The Good Samaritan" by a Distinguished Artist of This Country.

Dr. J. Ackerman Coles, of Scotch Plains, who has become noted for his gifts of paintings and statuary to colleges and public institutions, has now donated to the State a painting that will decorate the walls of the State House at Trenton. In his letter to Governor Griggs tendering the painting to the State, Dr. Coles gives an interesting sketch of the work. He says:

"I am now the owner of the celebrated oil painting known as "The Good Samaritan," by our distinguished American artist, Daniel Huntington. The picture, with its frame, measures about nine feet in width by about eleven feet in height, the principal figures being life size. It was executed by Daniel Huntington in his studio in Paris, in France, in the years 1852-53, in fulfilment of an order given him by the late Marshall O. Roberts, Esq., of New York city. The choosing of a subject having been left with Mr. Huntington, he selected the pictorial illustration or interpretation of the second great commandment of the law—'Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.' That he succeeded in his efforts has been conceded by critics, for here, with wonderful skill, is vividly portrayed the arrival at the inn, the sympathetic interest of the host, hostess and guests, and the respectful attention given to the orders of the Good Samaritan.

"Upon receipt of word from you that, as a gift, the painting will be acceptable to the State, I will, as soon as practicable, at my own expense, send it to Trenton, and have it hung in the place deemed most suitable for its reception in the Capitol, a building associated with pleasant meetings therein of my father, the late Abraham Coles, A. M., M. D., Ph. D., LL. D., with his friends, some of whom are still living, while the portraits of others adorn its walls. It is with special pride I recall the recorded words of the late Governor Daniel Haines, and those of the late Henry Woodhull Green, Chief Justice and Chancellor, who, in referring to the life and writings of the late Dr. Abraham Coles, affirm that 'to him the world owes a debt of gratitude for his labor and research which redound to the honor of our State.'"

The gift has been accepted by Governor Griggs for the State.

Death of Miss Emma Lanning.

Many friends of Miss Emma Lanning will learn with sadness of her death last week at the home of her brother-in law, J. Smith-Hart, of Pennington. Miss Lanning resided with her mother, Mrs. Blackwell, on East Front street, until last fall, when she removed to the home of her sister, Mrs. J. Smith-Hart, of Pennington. A sudden cold contracted in the summer resulted in pneumonia, from the effects of which she never recovered. Miss Lanning possessed fine traits of character, and her sterling worth secured for her many friends. Her funeral services will be held at Pennington this morning at 10:30 o'clock.

New Lawyers.

Fred A. Pope and Isaac P. Runyon, the young lawyers of Somerville, have opened law offices in this city on North avenue over the offices of the United States Express Company.

THE GET ONE'S FEASTED.

REWARD FOR PROCURING MEMBERS FOR THE Y. M. C. A.

Howard Leggett Presented With the Wheel He Won—Speeches by Several Who Are Interested in Association Work.

The members of the Get One Club gathered in the small hall of the Y. M. C. A. building, last week, ate, talked and laughed together for several hours, and then listened while one of their number was presented with a wheel as a prize for securing the greatest number of new members for the association.

It was the occasion of the banquet of the Get One Club of the Y. M. C. A. The club is composed of those who have secured at least one member for the association since the first of January, 1897. The guests assembled at seven o'clock and sat down to a pleasing repast, served by the Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. There was plenty for all and a great variety of good things. After the dinner was over, the board cleared and speeches followed. George R. Cornwell presided as the representative of the membership committee and did the honors in his usual happy manner.

After a few introductory remarks, Mr. Cornwell announced the winner of the prize bicycle to be J. Howard Leggett. Mr. Leggett was present and responded to the award, thanking the association for the gift and announcing his determination of working for it in the future as well as during the time of the contest. Mr. Cornwell then referred to the donators of the wheel, the Plainfield Cycle and Sporting Goods Company, two of which company, H. E Rider and Charles C. Lister, were present. Mr. Rider made a few remarks in behalf of the company.

Short speeches were also made by C. E. A. Heywood, the physical director, and Frank O. Bristol, assistant-secretary of the association. In conclusion, Curtis M. Thorpe, chairman of the membership committee, made a few remarks urging the members to renewed efforts to bring in the new members. It was not their dues which were so important, he said, as the association is largely supported by the voluntary subscriptions of its friends, but the association wished to have all the young men of the city on its rolls so that they might take advantage of the many opportunities offered and be under its influence.

Entertainment That Entertained.

The entertainment given under the auspices of the Helping Hand Society of the A. M. E. Zion Church on West Fourth street, last week, was a success in providing a pleasant evening for those who attended and adding quite a sum to the society's treasury. The church edifice was completely filled. The programme opened with a selection by the orchestra, followed by a vocal chorus, a baritone solo by Harry Freeman and a reading by Lemuel Perry. A funny dialogue varied the programme and was followed by a cornet solo by Israel Jones. Billy Woods gave one of his monologues, assisted by Charles Henry, and kept the audience laughing with his many ludicrous jokes. The entertainment was arranged by Lemuel Perry and Mr. White.

Evening Spent at Whist.

A surprise party was given to Miss Charlotte Messersmidt, of Washington street, last Thursday. It was arranged by Miss Mabelle Force. The evening was spent at progressive whist in which Miss Luella Mills and David Krymer were victorious. There were three tables. Dancing and refreshments followed. When the young men prepared to go they were reminded that it was the evening of April Fool's day. The sleeves of their overcoats had been sewed up and their pockets and hats filled with rice and paper.

Vote of Thanks.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of the Y. M. C. A. was held last Friday at the association building. One of the important proceedings of the meeting was the action taken by the Board in regard to the presentation of the '97 Apollo wheel to the association by the Plainfield Cycle and Sporting Goods Co. The Board gave a vote of thanks to be extended to Messrs. Rider and Lister, of the Plainfield Cycle and Sporting Goods Co., for their kindness in presenting a wheel to the association.

A Dangerous Place for Pedestrians.

There are not many bad walks in the borough but there is one in particular in front of the property at 22 Duer street, which is in terrible condition. It is a board walk and is very dangerous to life and limb. Several persons have narrowly escaped injury at this place, and the borough authorities should attend to the matter before any damage results. This is about the only board walk on that street.

Civil Engineering.

Civil Engineer Henry C. VanEmburgh, of Plainfield, has finished the levels at Roselle and is now making the additions to the grade maps of that borough preliminary to the examination of the suitability of the grades already proposed, which will be done by Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett, of this city.

NURSERY TALES IN LIFE.

ALL THE CHILDISH FANCIES SHOWN IN A FUNNY WAY.

The Entertainment was Simple, but it Afforded Much Scope for Burlesque and the Audience was Very Much Pleased.

Mother Goose and all the members of her family spent Thursday in the lecture room of Trinity Reformed church, entertaining a large audience for the benefit of the Sunday-school. The entertainment was simple, but of a novel character, and although Mother Goose is rather a familiar character in history, this view of her and her family was decidedly new. Some of the features were arranged in an up to-date manner. Mary's lamb, for instance, ran on wheels, and had an automatic bleat that far outrivaled any natural attempt.

After every seat was filled, and the excitement had reached a sufficiently high point, the sliding doors to the lecture room were pushed back and Mother Goose, with the familiar features of Miss Nettie Kreitling, made her appearance. After introducing herself she produced the little dog that laughed," which was remarkably small and constructed of china.

Simple Simon (Raymond Pool) then made his appearance, and tried to catch a whale from his mother's fabled pail. The "old bachelor" who was so troubled with rats that he had to buy himself a wife, appeared wheeling that useful creature, and the misfortune that befell them by the wayside was realistically shown. The couple were David Wyckoff and Miss Pauline Buckley.

"Little Boy Blue" tooted his horn most melodiously. That part was taken by John Yoss. "Tom, the Piper's Son" (Christopher Mobus) purloined a clay pig, lent for the occasion by George Egel, of the Fairview Market, and then fled before the raised stick of Mother Goose. At the appearance of each of these characters, Mother Goose sang the appropriate little rhyme.

Miss Bessie Martin, attired as "Mary," owner of the famous lamb, appeared with her pet in tow; and, although the lamb capsized at frequent intervals, it only added to the pleasing effect. "The little old man" (Bertram Leggett), who was unlucky enough to have a wife with a fortune while his finances were down to bed-rock, entered, driven before his spouse (Miss Bessie Randall). The strange characters, "The Man in the Moon" and the "Man from the South," were introduced, while their wonderful adventures were recited. They were Walter Emmons and Charles Jenkins. "The little old woman" (Miss Jennie Thorn) and her hen (Bertram Leggett) closed the first part.

Part second consisted of a number of short representations in which Mother Goose remained behind the scenes and sang the little ditties there. First came "Little Miss Moffett" (Lucy Coriell) and the spider on the end of a long string attached to Simple Simon's fish pole sat down beside her according to history. "Jack" and "Jill" tumbled down a trifle earlier than they expected but they went in the correct order so it was all right. They were represented by Miss Emma Line and Charles Jennings. E. E Anthony, wearing a gilt paper crown and wrapped in a fur rug, looked extremely regal. "King Cole" he was called. His pipe was thrust in his mouth by one of his trusty attendants (Bertram Leggett) while his three fiddlers (Raymond Pool, Charles Jennings and Fred Dunavan) came and prepared to amuse his royal majesty.

"Jack Horner" (John Yoss) put his thumb in the centre of an immense pie, made and presented especially for the occasion by Rudolph Kersting, the baker, and pulled out the required plum, Miss Bessie Martin and Raymond Pool, as "Jack Sprat and wife," licked their plates in their efforts to get fat and lean. "Tommy Tucker" howled vainly for his supper until the doors were closed. Christopher Mobus took the part of the disconsolate youth.

"Tommy Snooks" and "Bessie Brooks" (David Wyckoff and Miss Annie Randall) proceeded in short order. Miss Edith Fenner and Miss Edith Richards pictured the remedy for many evils.

After "Little Bo Peep" (Miss Nettie Young) had wept over the loss of her sheep and then found them, the audience was told to be prepared for the grand finale. A short interval passed and then the doors were thrown open and when everybody rose in their seats to get a better view, they saw only the empty stage with those young people behind the scenes shouted "April Fool," and the entertainment was over.

It was arranged under the charge of Miss Mabel Wilson, Miss Emma Gillem and Miss Lillian A. Force, whose untiring efforts made it the great success it was. Those who had the affair in charge feel very grateful to the public for their liberal patronage. They also wish to thank Messrs Terrill and Cole for the loan of camp-chairs etc.

Cadets to Participate in the Parade.

A detachment from the Plainfield and North Plainfield Cadet Corps of the Public High schools, under the command of Captain George Edwards, will take part in the parade in New York city, April 27th, in honor of the celebration of Grant's Birthday.

PURSE FOR THE PASTOR

DR. C. R. BARNES MADE A PRESENT OF $250 IN CASH.

The Methodist Sociable Was Really a Farewell Reception to the Pastor, Who Received a Substantial Token of Esteem.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the First M. E. church gave a sociable in Vincent chapel, last Friday, and as it was the last social gathering of the congregation before the departure of Rev. Dr. Charles R. Barnes for a new field of work, the sociable became a farewell reception.

There was a large attendance at the sociable. The programme formed the first part of the evening's enjoyment. After singing "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," there was a piano solo by Miss Florence Wier. "Lasca," one of Bret Harte's poems, was given by Miss Grace E. Overton. Miss Margaretta Van H. Barnes sang "Memories," and then Miss Overton gave another selection, "That Tune." Another solo, "Winter Lullaby," by Miss Barnes ended the programme.

Henry A. McGee acted as master of ceremonies and called upon James W. Jackson for a speech. Mr. Jackson spoke of the former pastors of the church and then of Dr. Barnes, telling of the pleasant relations during the four years he had been pastor of the church. He spoke of the difficulties Dr. Barnes had had to surmount and how successful he had been. He closed by presenting Dr. Barnes with what he called a diploma for good service, which proved to be a check for $250. Dr. Barnes replied in a fitting manner and then followed a few words by Rev. George W. Smith, presiding elder, and Rev. Dr. Whitney.

ALLEGED HORSE THEFT.

WILLIAM TAYLOR CHARGES ALEC FILLMORE WITH SERIOUS CRIME.

Taylor Says That Fillmore Hired a Rig For an Hour and a Half and Did Not Come Back as He Promised.

Wm. Taylor, proprietor of Taylor's Hotel at Dunellen, claims that an attempt was made to steal a horse from him last Saturday by a Plainfield young man who has heretofore borne a good reputation.

It was 10 o'clock in the morning when Alec Fillmore, who has been in the employ of William Hand, the truckman, for a number of years, called on Taylor and said that he wanted to hire a horse for an hour and a half to drive to a Mrs. Black's, three miles from Dunellen. After procuring the rig he asked William Cosick, a Dunellen young man, to accompany him. Instead of merely going to Mrs. Black's, it is said that they drove to Mannion's roadhouse, two miles from Bound Brook, where both got out to indulge in a drink. Cosick claims that Fillmore drove away without him, and acted in a suspicious manner. He notified Taylor and the latter started out in search of his rig.

He finally came to this city at 1:30 Saturday afternoon and found the rig standing near the corner of Front and Somerset streets. A few moments after young Fillmore appeared on the scene and Taylor caused his arrest. He protested that he did not intend to steal the horse. But, Taylor thought different, and the young man was locked up in the rookery to await a hearing.

Taylor says he found a bag of oats in the buggy, which had been put there after Fillmore took the rig, and he is confident that it was the latter's intention to steal it.

OLD CRESCENTS CAN STILL BOWL.

The Veterans Defeated the Y. M. C. A. Team Last Week.

The veteran bowlers of the Crescent Wheelmen, or at least five of them, made their appearance on the alleys of the Y. M. C. A., last Friday, after a long retirement. The "Old Crescents," as they called themselves, had not lost their head at the game, however, and they succeeded in losing the association bowlers in two games. The alleys were in poor condition, which accounts for some of the remarkably poor bowling of the veterans. Both games were close from the start to the fifth frame, when the Crescents woke up and upset the pins in quick order. The first game was rather close throughout, but in the second the Crescents swamped their opponents by nearly 100 pins.

The veterans were gotten together by C. E. Vail and John H. Doane.

The individual scores were as follows:

Old Crescents.	1st game.	2d game.
VanEmburgh	126	90
Barnes	144	119
Davis	133	151
Vail	148	189
Thiers	130	126
	680	664
Y. M. C. A.	1st game.	2d game.
Heywood	115	86
Schloss	173	127
Bristol	141	103
Long	120	127
Suydam, M	134	125
	643	573

To Play for a Big Prize.

The whist team of the Park Club, of this city, will play for the American Whist League trophy on April 17th.

THE FRENCH DRAMATISTS

THIRD OF MISS CAROLINE MINTURN HALL'S DRAWING ROOM RECITALS.

She Spoke the Work of Two Great Frenchmen; Who Hauk Next to Molliere, and Rendered Scenes From Some of Their Plays.

Friday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. J. Kirtland Myers, Miss Caroline Minturn Hall delivered the third in her series of talks on the French Dramatists, in the presence of a large and attentive audience.

In the first two talks, Miss Hall devoted herself to the subject of Molliere, the greatest of all French dramatic authors, and yesterday afternoon she spoke of the two men who, in the estimation of their country, even rank next after the great master—Corneille and Racine. Although their fame rests wholly upon their tragedies, yet the reading was enlivened by several scenes from Racine's one comedy "Les Plaideurs," a play which may be called a study, or almost a paraphrase of the famous "Wasps" of Aristophanes. The scenes in the court-room—the weeping children of the prisoner—who, by the way is a dog, arrested for the theft of a capon, the keen rebukes and the delicious irony were all heartily enjoyed by Miss Hall's auditors. Of the tragedies, scenes were given from the "Cid" and "Horace" of Corneille and the "Phedre" and "Iphimenie" of Racine; and the power and pathos of the great tragedians were as fully appreciated by the audience as the lighter touches of the comedy which formed the closing subject of the lecture.

The subject of the next and last of Miss Hall's talks will be Regnard and Marivaux. The reading will be given at the house of Mrs. Marion Ackerman.

Among those present were Mrs. Warner Ackerman, Mrs. A. D. Seward, Mrs. John Doull Miller, Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen, Mrs. Rowland Hyde, Mrs. Keith Hyde, Mrs. Rowland Cox, Miss Erskine, Miss Lillian Erskine, Mrs. M. H. Aston, Mrs. S. R. Evans, Mrs. Agnes, Mrs. Brooks, Mrs. Clapp, Miss Edith Clapp, Miss Kenyon, Miss Florelle Clark, Mrs. Hastings, Mrs. Mumford and Mrs. and Miss Mildred of Fanwood.

A DISTURBER WARNED.

Next Offender Against the Salvation Army Will Be Severely Punished.

Offenders at the Salvation Army meetings may expect a severe penalty when they come up in the city court. One of that class came up in the city court last Friday afternoon and although he escaped the severe punishment the escape was so narrow that he doesn't want to try it again. James McKenzie was his name.

He went to one of the meetings about a week ago to find a friend, and stood up and wandered about the hall. He was requested repeatedly to sit down or leave the hall, until at last Janitor Boice had to forcibly haul him from the building and deposited him in the hands of the representative of the law.

Janitor Boice came to the trial Friday and wanted to withdraw the complaint as the young man was very sorry for what he had done. The Judge refused to allow that, but suspended sentence with a very severe reprimand.

AN AFTERNOON TEA.

Delightful Social Event Given by the Misses Lovell.

A delightful tea was given Friday afternoon by the Misses Phebe and Laura Lovell, daughters of L. N. Lovell, at their home on Crescent avenue. The rooms were prettily decorated with roses and carnations while the pink tint of the tea room, produced by a profusion of pink carnations and pink-shaded lights, was most effective. The Misses Lovell were assisted in receiving by their mother, Mrs. L. N. Lovell, Miss Edith Gilbert and Miss Mabel Wilder, of New York. Mrs. Harry Borden and Miss Anthony presided at the table and were assisted by the Misses Anthony, Edith Tracy, Arlade Gilbert and Margaret Yates.

Fire Commissioner Nominated.

At the meeting of No. 3 Engine Company, held Thursday evening, the following officers were nominated: Foreman, R. B. Rogers; First Assistant, W. C. Chamberlain; Second Assistant, Harry Cognet; Secretary, A. Karhmann; Financial Secretary, James Doe; Engineer, Frank Schock; First Assistant, A. Karhmann; Second Assistant, Alex. Manning; Representatives to Relief Association, William Towsley, C. J. Newman, A. D. Jennings was selected as chief for the company. The election will be held the first Monday in May.

The following nominations have also been made by the members of Alerta Hose Company: Foreman, J. M. Hawkins; First Assistant, Abner Bartlett; Second Assistant, Roger Murray; Secretary, S. F. Kimball; Treasurer, E. H. Ladd, Jr.

Want a Street Macadamized.

There is a movement on foot among the property-owners on Franklin place, between LaGrande avenue and East Fifth street, to have that part of that thoroughfare macadamized.

DR. BARNES' FAREWELL.

END OF THE FIRST METHODIST CHURCH PASTORATE.

The Reverend Explained the Duties of the Ministry and the Essential Qualities That Help Make Their Work a Success.

The First M. E. church was filled with a good-sized audience last Sunday when Rev. Dr. C. R. Barnes, the pastor, preached a farewell sermon. It was the ending of the conference year and the close of the pastorate of Dr. Barnes in this city. The doctor took for his text Phil. 1:27 28, which reads as follows: "Only let your conversation be as it becometh the Gospel of Christ: that whether I come and see you, or else be absent, I may hear of your affairs, that he stand fast in one Spirit, with one mind striving together for the faith of the Gospel; and in nothing terrified by your adversaries." The doctor then spoke as follows:

"The church at Philippi was very dear to the Apostle Paul beyond that general regard which one might entertain for one's fellow-Christians. He had been privileged more than one to visit them, and they had tenderly ministered to him during his imprisonment.

"The object of the Epistle appears to have been the pouring out of the affectionate and grateful heart of the writer on account of the supply of his need; to express the tender sympathy he entertained for them in their persecutions; and to urge upon them such course of life as was becoming those who were followers of their Lord.

"The pastor of a church sustains very peculiar and tender relations to his people. As a preacher of the Word it is his business to give them wholesome doctrine, so unfolding the Word of Life that his preaching may become wise unto Salvation.

"He is to be the friend of all, rejoicing in their welfare, and sympathizing with their sorrow. He must adapt himself to all the varied phases of human life, and have for every condition the "Word fitly spoken." He should be wise in counsel, gentle in spirit, pure in character, never lacking in faith.

"Called upon to minister under such varied circumstances, his heart becomes enlisted in behalf of his people; and separation from them must cost him pain. In his new field of ministry he misses the old familiar faces, the sympathy, good wishes and confidence of those he has learned to love.

"But true friendship does not depend for its continuance upon the visible presence. Jesus, about to depart from His disciples, said, "Henceforth I call you no longer servants, but friends." And we, who have become friends through love for the Divine Friend, know how to retain and cherish that friendship in spirit.

"One characteristic of friendship is continued interest in each other's welfare. Saint Paul indirectly tells the Philippians that his good wishes for them were equally hearty, whether he was present with or absent from them.

"Nothing is more natural to the preacher than to preach, and the Apostle cannot refrain from telling his friends how good wishes for them may be realized.

"First—Holy living. 'Only let your conservation be as it becometh the Gospel of Christ.' This was an exhortation to the Philippians to lead holy lives, to so speak and act as to adorn the doctrines they professed to believe. The Gospel should take such hold of men as to mould their living, be an expression of inward faith and affection. Of course, there must be the indwelling life, for any affectation of it will be only a hollow pleasure.

"Second—Mutual concord. 'That ye stand fast in one spirit.' It is not necessary to enlarge upon this essential feature of church success. Envying, jealousies, hatreds, are not for one moment to be thought of in relation to church-life. 'The house divided against itself must fall.' The spirit of concord has characterized your church-life; encourage it. Let the more fortunate care for those who have not had so goodly a heritage. Let the latter rejoice in the former's good fortune. That man is weak who allows difference in temporal things to wean him from another's love. The world is full of class distinctions, but in God's house 'the rich and the poor meet together' as children of the Heavenly Father.

"Third—United activity. 'With one mind striving together for the faith of the Gospel.' What a sad spectacle is the professed Christian, who is never seen in vineyard or battlefield; whose hands are strangers to both sword and sickel!

"Somewhere, there is a work for you to do, a battle for you to fight. Some one has a burden which you should share, a work which should receive your aid, a battle which you should help him wage. The prosperous church is the church which is active, with an activity born of God-like love.

"Lastly—Courage. 'In nothing terrified by your enemies.' The church, having arrayed itself against the worldliness about it, has thrown down the gauntlet of challenge. In proportion to the spirituality of the church will be the intensity of the world's opposition. The method of warfare may, indeed does, change. But the spirit actuating it is the same. Do not reckon on the friendship of the world;

"So we separate, but it is only as those who enter different parts of the field, with the firm expectation of meeting again in the harvest-time rejoicing that our 'work has not been in vain in the Lord.'"

After the service a large number of those present remained to say goodbye to the one who during the past few years has led his people faithfully in the Christian life.

THE BRIGADE REUNION

G. A. R. AND COUNCILMANIC COMMITTEE CONFER AND ARRANGE.

The Use of the Casino Tendered to the Veterans—Exercises to be Held in Reform Hall—An Official Welcome to All.

Unless all signs fail, and there are no prospects that they will, the reunion of the Second N. J. Brigade in this city next Friday will be a noteworthy event. Last Saturday evening the Brigade committee, together with Councilmen Barrows, Lelvers and Tolles, met at Grand Army Hall and completed arrangements for the reunion. There was a great deal of enthusiasm evidenced and everyone seemed determined to make the event a success. The fact that the city was represented by three councilmen increased the interest materially. The city officials, feeling the importance of the meeting soon to be held, offered to the committee and their visitors the Casino free of all charge. It was decided after a discussion to hold the business meeting of the Brigade in the Casino in the morning. After the meeting an adjournment will be made to Reform Hall, where a sumptous dinner will be served to the visitors.

Following the banquet, exercises will be held in the upper part of the hall, when speeches will be made by the distinguished officers and members of the Brigade. The Plainfield Cornet Band has been engaged for the occasion, and they will furnish plenty of music all day. They will escort the Brigade from the Casino to Reform Hall, and will be present at the exercises after dinner. It was thought best to hold the exercises in Reform Hall, as the place will hold several hundred people, and will probably accommodate all that will come.

It was suggested that the citizens about town decorate their stores and houses, and no doubt a large number will accept the suggestion. Probably the visitors will be received by Mayor Fisk and several of the city officials. If Mr. Fisk cannot serve his place will no doubt be taken by Councilman Barrows, who has already evidenced a considerable interest in the coming celebration.

Everything now appears to be ready for the reception of the visitors. The finance committee of the Brigade committee stated at the meeting that there had been a generous response on the part of all who had been asked to contribute.

From all indications the reunion promises to be one of the very best yet held. The Brigade decorations which are used every year have been sent to Plainfield from Paterson, and as soon as practicable they will be arranged. The Casino and Reform Hall will be decorated with the materia sent to this city.

SCRAP IN PARADISE ALLEY.

Denizens of That Noted Thoroughfare Disagree Among Themselves.

The court room in the city lock-up was stuffier than ever this week when the regular Monday morning batch of offenders was arraigned before the city judge on various charges, drunk and disorderly being the most in evidence.

James McCauley, coachman, was drunk on Park avenue, Saturday evening, and Sergeant Kiely arrested him. Sentence was suspended on him.

Patrick Lyons was arrested by Patrolman Lunger for trespassing on the railroad. Sentence suspended.

Patrick Hayes was arraigned on the charge of being drunk and disorderly. He was arrested by Patrolman Post. Sentence suspended.

Paradise alley has awakened from its recent lethargy and came into city court again, at least some of its residents did. David McLearnan alias Dave Killoren, was arrested on Saturday afternoon for fighting in the alley. Later Louis Levine made a complaint against McLearnan and William Drake for jumping on his piazza and being otherwise disorderly. The circumstances of the case seem shrouded with mystery at present. Levine brought Chief Grant a stone nearly as large as his head which he said that McLearnan and Drake threw at his head. He wore a big bandage around his head to protect the wound, he said. The arrest was made by Boundsman Flynn. The Judge set the case down for trial for Saturday morning.

NEW SCHOOL OPENED.

OPENING EXERCISES MARKED BY PRESENTATION OF A FLAG.

Sessions Commenced in the Lincoln Building Monday a. m.—Board of Education Present—Short Addresses Given.

The opening of the new Lincoln Public School Monday a. m. was attended with exercises of an interesting nature and were very appropria te to the occasion. The members of the Board of Education, including Messrs. Lounsbury, Probasco, Jenkins and Lovell, together with Superintendent Maxson, were present and officiated at the opening.

A pleasant feature was the presentation of a large American flag to the school by Franklin Council, No. 41. J. O. U. A. M. This formed the most important part of the exercises Messrs. Firman Loop and E. T. Bogart, from the above council, were present, and the former with a few well chosen remarks presented the flag on behalf of the Council, after prayer had been offered by Rev. W. C. O'Donnell.

The flag is 14x22 and it looked very pretty as it was unfurled in the reception room.

The flag was accepted by President Probasco of the Board of Education. He spoke of the grand objects of the lodge which had given the flag and he thanked the members for it on behalf of the Board and the citizens of Plainfield. These remarks were fol*lowed with a short address by Rev.* Mr. O'Donnell. The remarks of the latter were full of patriotism and timely suggestion for all. He spoke on behalf of the citizens and taxpayers of Plainfield.

In addition to the above-named persons present there were about one hundred scholars and the following teachers: Miss Gregg; Miss Runyon Miss Miller, and Miss Thomas.

The flag will be suspended from the flag pole in the front of the building and will be displayed on every clear day.

Plainfield's rapid growth during the past few years has been remarkable, and this is partly due, so say many people, to the fine schools in this city. To substantiate this, one agent tells the story of a woman who told her grocer that she moved to Plainfield because she heard that the best schools in the United States were to be found here. Another incident is related where a prominent New York man came to this city so that his children might have the advantages of the schools. After he had moved here he found that the schools were so overcrowded that his children could not be accommodated. He was preparing to move back to New York when a member of the Board of Education heard of his case and made inquiries concerning it. It was learned that the above circumstances were true and the city official with difficulty made arrangements to have the children taken care of.

Just at this time, when the new Lincoln Public School has been completed, and was opened Monday for the first time, it is interesting to know when the Plainfield schools were built and how much they cost. The Stillman High School was erected in 1867 at a cost of $34,000, including land. The Washington was built in 1875, and cost $24,500; the Franklin in 1883 at a cost of $23,000. In 1886 the Bryant school was erected and cost $40,000. In 1892 an addition was built on the latter school with four more rooms, at a cost of $14,000, which amount is included in the $40,000. In 1888 the Irving School was built and it cost $37,000. The last building erected is the Lincoln School, which cost $38,375. All of the above amounts include land as well as the buildings.

Concerning the Lincoln building there is much that can be said which is of interest to every tax-payer. The Board of Education were very fortunate in securing the present site, Berckman street, between Front and *Second streets. It has a southern ex*posure and is in every respect an ideal one. The plans for the structure were selected from ten different sets of plans, and the successful architect was C. Powell Karr, of New York, who makes a specialty of school buildings. The contractor was John Abbott, of this city; heating and ventilating, The Dudley Engineering Company, New York; electrical work, A. D. Phillips, of this city; plumbing, Galbraith & Walsh, of this city. It can be seen by the above names that Plainfield men were hired as far as possible.

It has been the aim of the Board to secure a building which would be thoroughly substantial, modern and up-to-date from a sanitary standpoint. This has been accomplished and as a result one of the best school buildings in the state has been erected. The building is in the centre of a large plot of ground, with ample play grounds. In the front of the building can be found a spacious lawn, in the centre of which is stationed a flag pole. The building is easy of access from outside and especially is this true from the basement to the top floors. The main entrance for parents or visitors is in the front of the building, while at each end there are entrances for the boys and girls, and these entrances open into large halls which run the entire length of the building.

Each class room has two cloak rooms, one for the boys and one for the girls. In this way the teacher has personal supervision over the same, which is desirable. These rooms are fitted with hooks for the coats and hats, boxes for the rubbers, and racks for the umbrellas.

On the first floor is a large reception room, also four class rooms. The second floor is similar, with the exception of a principal's office, which is used for the school library. There are toilet rooms for the teachers with private lockers in which the teachers can keep their cloaks, hats and school supplies. All class rooms are provided with the new style blackboard. These are made of cement, the princi*pal part of which is the ground slate*, which is put on in three separate coats and makes a slate board without joints. At the bottom of each board are to be found removal chalk rails into which the chalk dust falls and can be removed when necessary.

One of the most important improvements introduced is that which is called the hygeia drinking fountain. The board were desirious of doing all they could to prevent the spreading of any disease and they were not satisfied with the common system In the case of the hygeia fountain the children drink from mounds of running water and their lips do not touch anything but the water. There are two of the fountains on each floor in the hallways and four in the basement for use during recess.

The sanitaries are located in the basement and the children are not obliged to go out doors in stormy weather. The system adopted is known as the "dry system," and has worked satisfactorily in other cities.

The building is heated by the hot air system, which is more desirable than steam or water. It admits of better ventilation which is so important. There are three large furnaces and they admit a large quantity of air warmed to a moderate temperature which is carried to the various rooms. In each room there is a flue which can be regulated as de*sired, giving either cold or warm or a* mixture. At the same time the foul air is drawn out.

The building is a good sensible one and is enclosed with an iron fence leaving an open space in front. This morning four class rooms were opened, one of which is a kindergarten. The other three classes are the lowest primary grades next to the kindergarten. Each class room is provided with the patent adjustable desk and seat so that it can be arranged to suit the pupil.

This building only relieves the overcrowded Bryant school. The latter school, together with all others except the Irving, are congested. The Irving school has twelve rooms, ten of which have been occupied during the year. The Board has been compelled to open the eleventh room and the other room will probably have to be used before long to accommodate the overflow from the Washington school.

The building recently occupied by Rogers, the shoe dealer, on West Fifth street, was opened this morning as a kindergarten, with Miss Blair as teacher. The district now demanding attention is in the centre of town to relieve the Stillman building as well as the Franklin building. This condition of affairs compels the board to seek outside quarters which they are now considering.

Each class room in the Lincoln school will accommodate forty five scholars. Two classes from the Bryant school were moved to the new building Monday, a. m, and three teachers from that building will be in charge.

Miss Gregg will have charge of the kindergarten, Miss Louise Runyon will teach the first grade, Miss Thomas the second grade and Miss Miller the third grade. All of the above teachers are from the Bryant school.

Ex-Mayor and Mrs. Gilbert Home.

Ex-Mayor and Mrs. Alexander Gilbert, of West Eighth street, who have been enjoying a trip through the Holy Land and the Orient, returned home yesterday noon. They arrived on the Fuerst Bismarck and the steamer was docked yesterday morning at 8:30. Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert were absent seventy days and during that time they had only three stormy days Their trip was in every particular a thoroughly delightful one and they are glad to return to their home and friends. During their absence there was not a single incident to mar the pleasure of the trip.

Jack Tars Gave an Entertainment.

A very enjoyabl eentertainment was given in the lecture room of the Seventh-day Baptist church, Saturday evening, by Rev. and Mrs. J. G. Burdick and a number of sailors from the Mispah Mission, New York. There were songs by Mr. and Mrs. Burdick, and then songs, violin and mandolin selections by the sailors who came from the ocean liners of the Red and White Star lines. A collection was taken for the benefit of the Mission at the close of the entertainment. The entertainment was very good.

BODINE NAMED AS CHIEF

MAYOR WILSON WANTED A. CARNEY, BUT COUNCILMEN SAID NO.

There Was Such a Difference of Opinion That it Was Necessary to Hold an Executive Session to Settle the Question.

Everything did not run perfectly smooth at the regular meeting of the Borough Council held last Friday, and before the session was over an executive session was required to set things right. The difficulty all arose over the appointment of a chief of the fire department. Mayor Wilson appointed Andrew Carney, and that is what caused the trouble. Mr. Woolston at once arose and stated that he for one would not vote for Mr. Carney, as he understood that he was not a member of the department, besides he thought that either of the two men previously mentioned, George H. Fairchild or David Bodine, would make good officers, and he thought it was the wish of the department that either of these men be appointed. On those grounds he said that he would not support Mr. Carney. He also said that he had been a member of the department for several years, and he knew that the people of the borough do not appreciate what is done by the members of the department who do all the work. He felt sure that should Mr. Carney be apointed it would create great dissatisfaction among the members.

Mr. MacLaughlin said that he would not vote for Mr. Carney if it was true that he was not a member of the department. Mr. Lounsbury was of the opinion that the members of the Council were elected for the purpose of acting in a fair and impartial manner, and he could not see why any members of the department should be displeased with the action of the Council. A continued discussion of the subject did not seem to bring the members any nearer to a settlement, and it was not until an executive session was held that the thing was settled. After the session the Mayor appointed David Bodine as chief of the department, and J. D. Anderson as assistant chief. The appointments were confirmed by the Council unanimously.

Tax Collector Spencer reported that since the last report he had collected $273.30 and the report was filed. George Stewart and W. V. Krewson asked the Council for exemption papers, and the matter was referred. Residents of Regent street from Somerset street to Grand street, asked the Council to macadamize the street, and they reported that they had subscribed $90 to help do the work. A crosswalk was asked for to be located at the intersection of Vine street and Park place.

The members of the West End Hose Company reported the election of the following members and they asked the Council to confirm the same: F. B Perry, W. W. Demarest, David Bagley, H. Johnson, H. Wedemeyer and George Smith.

The bonds of the following borough officers were reported and attested correct: Collector, H. N. Spencer; overseer of the poor, D. S. Weaver; borough magistrate, H. S. Thomas; chief marshal, William Wilson; constables, J. W. Van Horn and J. Line.

Mr. Woolston, of the street committee, stated that under this year's term of Street Commissioner Emmons $67.36 had been expended on the streets, and during the term of the present Street Commissioner $265.08 had been spent, while $25.06 had been received from the sale of dirt.

Mr. Lounsbury stated that he, together with the architect, had visited the West End hose house and had found the same completed. The electrical apparatus had not yet been put in the house owing to the fact that the company had not elected a foreman, and when the apparatus was put in it was desirable that a tapper should be put in the house of the foreman as well as in the engine house and when the work is done the committee wants to have it all fixed at once. Mr. Lounsbury also said that the hose wagon was now ready and could be moved to the new house as soon as the company was organized, which he hoped would be very soon.

A resolution was offered by Mr. Carey authorizing the License and Marshal Committee to purchase three uniforms, helmets and belts for the marshals. The uniforms are not to cost over $60 each. This resolution was adopted as was also another by the same councilman to the effect that an iron door and frame be purchased for the lockup at a cost not to exceed $45.

At this time the difficulty arose as to the appointment of a chief of the fire department as stated above. When a vote was taken on the appointment of Mr. Carney, Messrs. Carey and Lounsbury voted in the affirmative and Messrs. Burtis, McLoughlin, Schutt and Woolston voted in the negative. Immediately afterward Mr. Schutt arose and offered a resolution that George H. Fairchild's name be substituted for that of Mr. Carney. Mr. Lounsbury arose to a point of order and his position was well taken, for the corporation counsel stated that such action was out of order as the Mayor alone had the power of appointment in the case under consideration. The matter was finally settled as above stated.

Resolutions were offered by Mr. Woolston to the effect that $1,500 be borrowed and charged to the road account, and that the street committee be authorized to advertise for bids for the furnishing of crushed stone for the year. Both of the above were adopted, as was also one offered by Mr. Lounsbury that $1,000 be borrowed and the same charged to the fire account.

Another resolution was offered by Mr. Woolston that the borough authorities lay sidewalks in front of the property owned by the following people and a lien be effected on the property for the payment of the work: Wm. Ruttman, Geo. Linnett, Stephen Staats, R. Mahaffe, W. H. Voorhees, Phoebe Sprague, Martha Clare, Sardina Miles, Anna VanWinkle and Elizabeth Bailey.

Two more resolutions were presented by Mr. Wooiston. One was that the Council adjourn to meet in two weeks, and the other was that crosswalks be laid at Greenbrook road and Stone street, and Somerset street and Craig place. Both were adopted and the Council then adjourned.

ELECTED A NEW TRUSTEE.

HENRY M. MAXSON CHOSEN AN OFFICER OF THE SEVENTH-DAYS.

Selected to Fill the Vacancy Left by the Late E. H. Pope—Annual Report Showed Church Finances to be in Sound Raises.

The annual meeting of the congregation of the Seventh-day Baptist church was held Sunday afternoon in the church parlors. The report of the Board of Trustees was read by the secretary of the Board, J. A. Hubbard, who gave a statement of the finances of the church for the past year and an estimate of the expenses for the coming year. The financial condition of the church was shown to be excellent, and the church free from debt. Charles Potter is the president of the board.

Had the late Elias B. Pope lived, his term as trustee would have expired at this time and so the election of one to take his place was held. Henry M. Maxson was nominated and unanimously elected to the Board of Trustees.

David M. Titsworth acted as chairman of the meeting, and J. D. Spicer, secretary. A committee consisting of William Mosher and G. E. Stillman was appointed to solicit funds for the maintenance of the church for the coming year. The church is supported on voluntary contributions given in the envelope system.

Football Player in Christian Circles.

Robert R. Galley, centre rush on the Princeton University foot ball team, will lead the Friday evening service of the union Christian Endeavor series of meetings to be held next week. Every Christian Endeavor society is requested to hold a half hour prayer service Sunday evening previous to the regular church service.

Setting a Good Example.

The Children's Aid to the Town Improvement Association has elected Miss Lelia Howard as secretary, and Master Fleming as corresponding secretary. The association desires to have it understood that the members are not supposed to go about the streets picking up sticks and papers. The members are organized for the distinct purpose of setting a good example in the way of keeping the city clean and assisting the members of the older association.

Big Force of Men Laid Off.

The works of the C & C. Electric Company at Garwood closed down last week until the first of May. Over a hundred men were thrown out of work. No reason was given for the closing. The men have been working on short time for some time.

Informal Barn Dance.

An informal barn dance was held in the barn of Clifford Manning, near New Market, last week. About thirty were present and most of the time was spent in dancing. A very enjoyable evening was spent, a number from this city were present.

A Surprise Party.

A very enjoyable surprise was given to Nancy Raynolds, last week, at his home on Jackson avenue. The affair was arranged by his daughter, Mrs. Geo. S. Raynolds, in honor of his birthday. The surprise was a complete one. The evening was spent in playing games and tricks. Refreshments were served during the evening.

Investigating Local Industries.

Deputy State Inspector of Factories and Bakeries J. E. Dunn, of Boonton, Morris county, together with Health Inspector Wm. Addis, of this city, made a tour of the local factories and bakeries Saturday night and Sunday morning. They found everything to be in good condition.

Miss Mary French, daughter of John French, of West Seventh street, has returned from a trip South, where she has spent the past two months.

The Constitutionalist.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

WARNING TO HARD CIDER IMBIBERS.

It will be remembered that two years ago The Daily Press agitated the disgrace of having the cider joints open on Sunday so forcibly and persistently that the Common Council finally enacted an ordinance prohibiting the sale of hard cider on Sundays. That action was a credit to the moral standing of the community, but, of course, the prohibitive ordinance did not prevent hardened imbibers from indulging in the fluid from a bottle or jug purchased Saturday evening. But now comes a warning to the drinkers of this brand of "Jersey lightning" that should cause them to quench their thirst with some other decoction. For years an Iowa man has drank from one to three quarts of hard cider every day. Physicians who have diagnosed his case say he has drunk so much cider a "mother" of vinegar has formed in his stomach, and to remove it an operation will be necessary. The first effects of the cider were noticeable a year ago when he was confined to his bed and suffered with spasmodic pains at intervals of fifteen minutes. Since then the spells have reappeared at intervals of three weeks, and latterly of a week apart.

WORDS FITLY SPOKEN.

It has always been a matter for favorable comment that the local ministry have acted with marked unanimity in affairs of general religious interest, and at all times have maintained a spirit of brotherly love and interest in one another's work irrespective of the denomination and tenets with which they are identified. And it was in entire keeping with this feeling when Rev. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, in his prayer, Sunday, petitioned the Heavenly Father to extend to Rev. C. R. Barnes, who was at that moment about to say his farewell words to the First Methodist church, the Christian fortitude, grace and encouragement necessary for him to work with as much success in a new field of effort as he had in Plainfield.

HOT SHOT FOR ROLL.

It is doubtful if Union county ever had an Assemblyman who has made a record more unenviable than that of Martin Roll. His apparent favoritism to railroad corporations has not only met the severe criticism of the Democratic party, but of the Republican press as well. The latest "shot" is the following printed in the Newark Call:

Martin Roll, the Assemblyman who was notorious throughout the session as the slavish creature of the railroads, lives in a township which has no railroad, and when he goes abroad he has to walk or drive.

"GOOD OLD DAYS."

Though the New York Tribune is rankly Republican,it publishes the following seathing arraignment of the State Assembly in its last hours:

The scene on the floor of the Assembly was one that reminded the spectators of the "good old days" when bribery was not and boss rule was at its height in Trenton. Lobbyists—notorious ones at that—moved in and around the floor and ordered the representatives of the people to vote against the Voorhees amendments, and the representatives obeyed their orders. Many of them were opposed to the Voorhees plan in the first place, but others who had declared their intention of voting for it, changed their minds when the crucial rost came.

NEW STATE OFFICERS.

The term of Secretary of State Chelsey expired yesterday, and his successor, George Wurts, was sworn into office by Justice VanSickel, of the Supreme Court. Mr. Wurts appointed the present Assistant Secretary, Alexander Rickey,as his own assistant,and Mr. Rickey was also sworn in. The oath of office was also administered to William Bettle, who succeeds Mr. Wurts as Bank and Insurance Commissioner.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, 75c. Hall's Family Pills are the best.

A YEAR'S CITY EXPENSES

COMMON COUNCIL MAKES THE ANNUAL APPROPRIATIONS.

The Special Appropriation for the Library Also Granted, But Not Without Opposition—Other Important Affairs Acted On.

The regular meeting of the City Council held last Monday was a long and tedious session. There was a great deal of business transacted, and it required considerable time to get through with it. Every member of the Council was present, and the first business was the reception of a communication from W. H. Williams, secretary of the Second N. J. Brigade committee, in which the City Council was invited to be present at the banquet and exercises to be held next Friday in this city. The invitation was received and accepted. Residents of Hillside avenue asked the Council for an electric light and the matter was referred. A letter was received from E. C. Jones & Co., of Philadelphia, and they asked the Council to allow them $208 interest money on the bonds which they purchased from the city on account of the sewers. In a letter, which is now on file by the city clerk, the above firm agreed to allow the interest, and the clerk was instructed to notify them to that effect.

A petition was received from residents in the West End asking that necessary sidewalks be laid in that section of the city. The matter was referred to the proper committee. H. C. Corsa made application to be relieved as a bondsman for W. R. Maxtox, and the application took the proper course. The two-way hydrants were asked for, to be located at South avenue and Berckman street, and South avenue and Central street. This petition was placed in the hands of the proper committee. The resignation of William Robinson, as patrolman, was received and referred to the police committee. Later Mr Barrows stated that it was with reluctance that the resignation was accepted by the committee, but after due consideration it it was thought best. The Mayor had demanded the resignation, and considering the fact that a trial would necessitate a special meeting of the Council and a great deal of other work, it was thought best not to hold a trial, inasmuch as the officer did not demand it.

The Bricklayers' Association of the city, in a communication, asked the Council to confine the bids for all municipal work to Plainfield workmen. A crosswalk was asked for at the easterly corner of the Babcock building, and the matter was referred, as was also another petition for a crosswalk at the corner of West Second and New streets. Later the latter walk was granted. At this time President Dumont presented two petitions, one from five hundred citizens and the other from the teachers in the public schools, in which the petitioners asked that the necessary additions and alterations be made to the Public Library. They were both received and filed.

The following persons were appointed as special policemen by Mayor Fisk: Florence T. McCarthy, J. T. Watson, John Gettleson, R. H. Day, Andrew Saffron and James Connolly. The names were referred to the police committee and later they were confirmed by the Council.

Mayor Fisk asked for the privilege of withdrawing the name of John Watson, who was appointed a regular patrolman last February.

The reports of the city treasurer and collector were received and filed, and the report of City Judge DeMeza showed that during the past month there had been brought before him 110 persons, of which number 31 had been fined, 24 committed, 5 discharged and dismissed, 47 sentence suspended, 1 committed to the asylum, and there were two untried cases. In all there had been sent to the city treasurer $114.07 received as fines, etc. The report of Building Inspector T. O. Doane showed that twenty-eight permits had been granted during the month, and the number of sewer permits granted by Street Commissioner Gavett were fifty one.

Mr. Baker stated that all necessary work regarding the placing and arrangement of the $14,000 sewer bonds had been completed.

Mr. Frost reported that Smalley Bros. had presented the lowest bid for the furnishing of the crushed stone, which was $1 per ton, and H. C. W. Johnson's bid of 85 cents per foot for crosswalks was also the lowest. The same were accepted by the council and instructions were given to have the necessary contracts made with the successful bidders.

In addition to the above, crosswalks were ordered at Putnam avenue and Richmond street; Putnam avenue and Carleton avenue; Putnam avenue and Kensington avenue.

On a motion offered by Mr. Tolles an electric light was ordered placed at the corner of Woodland and Putnam avenues, and on a motion offered by Mr. Leivers a batch of licenses for peddlers and hackmen were granted; also the license for street sprinkling to P. M. French.

At this point the council went into a committee of the whole for the purpose of making the appropriations for the coming year. The following appropriations were made: Police, $14,500; lights, $11,000; printing, $2,800; renting, $750; elections, $5,800; Board of Health, $1,000; maintenance of sewers, $3,000; discounts, $500; streets, $16,000; sundries,$3,000; salaries, $8,400; Watchung avenue extension, $1,500; Madison avenue, fees of commissioners, expenses, $500.

Mr. Dumont stated that according to a state law the appropriation of $11,000 for streets could be collected by a special tax and thus the amount would be taken out of the general tax. By doing this it would bring the amount to be raised down to $33,000.

Mr. Baker then offered a resolution that the $11,000 be inserted in the tax ordinance.

The balance of the appropriations were as follows: Sinking fund for sewer bonds, $4 000; interest on sewer bonds, $1,960; support of poor, $5,000; maintenance of the Public Library and Art Gallery, $3,500; fire department, $16,000; dog license, $2 for every dog.

At this stage of the proceedings Mr. Baker offered a resolution calling for an assessment of $7,000 for the proposed additions and alterations to the Public Library.

Mr.Dumont took the floor and stated that he noticed by the evening paper that the people had been favored with an article written by one of the Councilmen, and the article proposed to solve a problem which nine trustees of the library could not solve. He thought that the article was an attempt to discourage all efforts to obtain the desired results. According to the proposed plan the library would be used as a store room. He held that the annual tax was small and not adequate to meet the running expenses of the institution. He thought that the question ought to be disposed of now and not allowed to go any further. He said that the city could not expect to receive any donations in the future if they were going to be treated as this one had been treated. The trustees, he said, did not propose to expend money carelessly,for they were anxious to get the most for the least possible expenditure.

Mr. Barrows spoke somewhat in favor of the resolution, and said that a year ago he opposed it. He thought that in this nineteenth century it was a disgrace that the city should have such a police station as it has now, and as he walked about the city with its fine streets and handsome residences he felt ashamed to think that the public spirit was so low. He thought that if the city could not get a city hall they could take a step forward by having a suitable library building.

Mr. Frost said that as far as he knew there was no complaint on the part of the people regarding the library. Continuing, he said: "I do not oppose the library, but the First and Fourth wards, paying more in proportion than the other wards, do not get the benefits of the library and art gallery. It is the $1.50 men that pay the bulk of the money that runs such institutions. The art gallery is opened from 10 to 4 o'clock, and if a workingman wants to go there he has to take a day off."

A vote was finally taken on the resolution with the following result: Nays—Messrs. Frost, Leivers, Newman, Runyon, Serrell, Westphal and Tolles. Ayes—Messrs. Barrows, Dumont and Stebbins. The resolution was consequently killed for the time being. A little later the question was again brought up as there seemed to be some misunderstanding about it. It was stated by Mr. Barrows that the $7,000 covered all and that the amount was to be raised by a special tax and that it would not come out of the general tax. Mr. Barrows also stated that the whole trouble with Plainfield is that her citizens want to get something for nothing. If they want the city to be progressive and up to-date they must pay for it. In connection with the subject, Mr. Baker also made a few remarks in support of the resolution. The previous vote was taken while the Council was in a committee of the whole and at this time the resolution was brought before the members as a council. The second vote resulted as follows: Ayes — Messrs. Barrows, Baker, Dumont, Leivers, Newman, Stebbins and Serrell. Nays—Messrs. Frost, Runyon, Tolles and Westphal.

A resolution was then offered by Mr. Barrows to the effect that the tax ordinance be amended so as to include $7,000 for the above-specified purpose, that is to make the necessary additions to the library building. The resolution was adopted, Messrs. Frost, Runyon and Westphal voting in the negative.

Mr. Baker offered an ordinance which provides for the assessment of taxes. The same was adopted and ordered advertised.

Mr. Newman desired to raise the appropriation for the fire department to $17,000, but he was informed by Mr. Dumont that he could not do it. A recess for ten minutes was then taken and when the members came together again it was decided to make the fire department appropriation $16,000.

Several resolutions were then offered. One by Mr. Serrell authorized the City Collector to receive the assessments for damages on the opening and extension of Watchung avenue. Another gave Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh $1,200 for extra work on the sewers. Mr. Westphal voted no on the latter resolution.

Mr. Serrell called back a former incomplete resolution relating to the enforcement of the Martin Act and in its place he offered one complete in which May 29th was set as the date to make application to the Supreme Court for the appointment of three commissioners to serve under the act. This resolution was adopted and was followed by two more resolutions which were offered by Mr. Dumont. The first one provided for the notification of all delinquent taxpayers prior to 1881, and May 9d was set as the time for a final settlement. This was offered owing to the fact that a great deal of property had changed hands and the present holders of the property on which there is delinquent taxes are not acquainted with the proposed method of procedure. Mr. Dumont said that for the first time in the history of the city as a corporate body they had a Collector and the taxes could be adjusted satisfactorily. He also stated that there is now over $30,000 due the city from this source. The second resolution offered by Mr. Dumont provided for the publication in the city papers of proper notices of such action by the Council.

Another batch of resolutions were offered which provided for the curbing of the following streets: Southeast side of West Eighth street; southwest side of West Ninth street; Crescent avenue, between East Seventh street and Park avenue; Washington street, from East Front street to LaGrande avenue; West Eighth street, Park avenue and Plainfield avenue. A resolution was offered which authorized the laying of suitable walks about the Lincoln School grounds on Berckman street.

On a motion made by Mr. Barrows the salary of the street commissioner was raised to $1,200.

According to law Mayor Fisk in a communication concurred with the Council in the appointment of The Daily Press and Courier-News as the official papers of the city. In connection with this Mr. Dumont stated that hereafter all resolutions offered for the obtaining of money outside of that provided for would have to have the approval of the Mayor.

Mr. Bunyon took up the sidewalk ordinance and it was adopted on the third reading. Mr. Runyon called up the ordinance relating to the duties of the city collector and that was also adopted. The ordinance regulating the salary of the street commissioner was adopted on a third reading.

Mr. Barrows asked for $250 with which to purchase spring uniforms for the police, and it was granted. After Mr. Barrows made a motion that when Council adjourn it be to meet in three weeks.

Spring Requires

That the impurities which have accumulated in your blood during the winter shall be promptly and thoroughly expelled if good health is expected. When the warmer weather comes these impurities are liable to manifest themselves in various ways and often lead to serious illness. Unless the blood is rich and pure that tired feeling will afflict you, your appetite will fail and you will find yourself "all run down." Hood's Sarsaparilla tones and strengthens the system, drives out all impurities and makes pure, rich, healthy blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the one true blood purifier and the best spring medicine. Be sure to get only Hood's.

Councilman Lounsbury to Move.

The many friends of Councilman F. C. Lounsbury, of Grandview avenue, will learn with sincere regret that he together with his family will move to Brooklyn May 1st. Mr. Lounsbury has exchanged his property in the borough for valuable property in Brooklyn owned by A. A. Taft, of Westervelt avenue. By this change the borough will lose a valued and very active official, who has always worked for the best interest of the place in which he lived. A more conscientious official has never served the borough and he will be greatly missed by all.

The Rev. W. H. Weaver, pastor of the U. B. Church, Dillsburg, Pa., recognizes the value of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and does not hesitate to tell others about it. "I have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," he says, "and find it an excellent medicine for colds, cough's and hoarseness." So does everyone who gives it a trial. Sold by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

—The Junior Auxiliary of the Church of the Heavenly Rest has packed and shipped the box for which the auxiliary has been working all winter to Rev. and Mrs. A. B. Hunter, at Raleigh, N. C., for use in their school and mission work.

—In consequence of the long continued illness of Mrs. Charles L. Lewis, of Evona avenue, the meetings of the Junior Auxiliary of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, hitherto held in the parish house, on Saturdays, will be discontinued until further notice.

You Can't Do It

It isn't possible to boil any oatmeal long enough to break the starch-cells, and so render it digestible. Starch is not converted into digestible material until 250 degrees is reached, and 212 degrees is the maximum boiling temperature. Oatmeal can only be made digestible by dry heat, and is the only oatmeal in which the starch is rendered soluble by bursting the starch granules. This makes it the only safe oatmeal for infants, children, and those of weak digestion.

H-O

Be sure and get the package with the big H-O on the end.

Subscriptions Free to

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly
Illustrated American (Weekly)
Truth (Weekly)
New England Magazine
Chatterbox (Monthly)
The American Kachen Magazine
Home Magazine (Monthly)
of Binghamton, N.Y.

WITH COUPONS FROM THE

H.O.Co.'s Goods

Excursion Rates For Students.

To accommodate students attending regularly established boarding schools and colleges the Central Railroad of New Jersey have arranged to sell them round trip tickets to any point on the Central Railroad of New Jersey, Philadelphia and Reading Railway or the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad at one fare and a third for the round trip. These tickets will be sold not more than three days after the beginning of the vacation and will be good for returning for fifteen days but in no case will tickets be limited for longer than April 30th. To obtain tickets at the reduced rate it will be necessary for the student to present a certificate signed by the president or other authorized officers of the college or school to the ticket agent. P&C

Mrs. A. Iveson, residing at 720 Henry street, Alton, Ill, suffered with sciatic rheumatism for over eight months. She doctored for it nearly the whole of this time, using various remedies recommended by friends, and was treated by the physicians, but received no relief. She then used one and a half bottles of Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which effected a complete cure. This is published at her request, as she wants others similarly afflicted to know what cured her. The 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, cor. Park and and North avenues.

—Read your evening paper, when you cannot thread your needle without difficulty or annoyance, call on our specialist, and we will tell you without charge whether glasses will correct the trouble, at 107 East Front street, every Thursday. Hours 10 a. m., to 4:30 p. m.

—The greatest sensation in the amusement line for the present season has been the pictures where every movement of living objects has been presented on canvas. There are numerous machines in operation for this purpose, but none better or more successful than the projectoscope to be shown in Music Hall Thursday and Friday.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The fac simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

Central Railroad of New Jersey

Anthracite Coal Used Exclusively. Schedule in effect January 20th, 1895.

Stations in NEW YORK Foot of Liberty St. Time Table in Effect JANUARY 20th, 1895.

PLAINFIELD AND NEW YORK.

Leave Plainfield 7 56, 9 00, 10 30 a. m., 12 30, 2 30, 4 00, 5 30, 6 30, 7 30, 9 00, 10 30 p. m., 12 01 night. Arrive New York 10 00, 11 30 a. m., 1 30, 3 30, 5 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 30, 11 00 p. m., 12 30 night.

PLAINFIELD AND BOUND BROOK.

Leave Plainfield 6 45, 8 15, 9 45, 11 15 a. m., 1 45, 3 15, 4 45, 6 15, 7 45, 9 15, 10 45 p. m. Arrive Bound Brook 7 00, 8 30, 10 00, 11 30 a. m., 1 00, 2 30, 4 00, 5 30, 7 00, 8 30, 10 00, 11 30 p. m.

PLAINFIELD AND RARITAN.

Leave Plainfield 6 45, 8 15, 9 45, 11 15 a. m., 1 45, 3 15, 4 45, 6 15, 7 45, 9 15, 10 45 p. m. Arrive Raritan 7 00, 8 30, 10 00, 11 30 a. m., 1 00, 2 30, 4 00, 5 30, 7 00, 8 30, 10 00, 11 30 p. m.

PLAINFIELD AND NEW BRUNSWICK.

Leave Plainfield 6 45, 8 15, 9 45, 11 15 a. m., 1 45, 3 15, 4 45, 6 15, 7 45, 9 15, 10 45 p. m. Arrive New Brunswick 7 00, 8 30, 10 00, 11 30 a. m., 1 00, 2 30, 4 00, 5 30, 7 00, 8 30, 10 00, 11 30 p. m.

Leave Plainfield 6 45, 8 15, 9 45, 11 15 a. m., 1 45, 3 15, 4 45, 6 15, 7 45, 9 15, 10 45 p. m. Arrive Trenton 7 30, 9 00, 10 30, 12 00 a. m., 1 30, 3 00, 4 30, 6 00, 7 30, 9 00, 10 30, 12 00 p. m.

Leave Plainfield 6 45, 8 15, 9 45, 11 15 a. m., 1 45, 3 15, 4 45, 6 15, 7 45, 9 15, 10 45 p. m. Arrive Philadelphia 8 45, 10 15, 11 45 a. m., 3 15, 4 45, 6 15, 7 45, 9 15, 10 45, 12 15 p. m.

Leave Plainfield 6 45, 8 15, 9 45, 11 15 a. m., 1 45, 3 15, 4 45, 6 15, 7 45, 9 15, 10 45 p. m. Arrive Bethlehem 9 45, 11 15 a. m., 4 45, 6 15, 9 15, 10 45, 12 15 p. m.

Leave Plainfield 6 45, 8 15, 9 45, 11 15 a. m., 1 45, 3 15, 4 45, 6 15, 7 45, 9 15, 10 45 p. m. Arrive Easton 10 45 a. m., 5 45, 7 15, 9 15, 10 45, 12 15 p. m.

Leave Plainfield 6 45, 8 15, 9 45, 11 15 a. m., 1 45, 3 15, 4 45, 6 15, 7 45, 9 15, 10 45 p. m. Arrive Phillipsburg 10 45 a. m., 5 45, 7 15, 9 15, 10 45, 12 15 p. m.

Leave Plainfield 6 45, 8 15, 9 45, 11 15 a. m., 1 45, 3 15, 4 45, 6 15, 7 45, 9 15, 10 45 p. m. Arrive Harrisburg 12 45, 2 15, 5 45, 7 15, 9 15, 10 45, 12 15 p. m.

Leave Plainfield 6 45, 8 15, 9 45, 11 15 a. m., 1 45, 3 15, 4 45, 6 15, 7 45, 9 15, 10 45 p. m. Arrive Pittsburg 4 45, 7 15, 9 15, 10 45, 12 15 p. m.

Leave Plainfield 6 45, 8 15, 9 45, 11 15 a. m., 1 45, 3 15, 4 45, 6 15, 7 45, 9 15, 10 45 p. m. Arrive Chicago 4 45, 7 15, 9 15, 10 45, 12 15 p. m.

Leave Plainfield 6 45, 8 15, 9 45, 11 15 a. m., 1 45, 3 15, 4 45, 6 15, 7 45, 9 15, 10 45 p. m. Arrive Cincinnati 4 45, 7 15, 9 15, 10 45, 12 15 p. m.

Leave Plainfield 6 45, 8 15, 9 45, 11 15 a. m., 1 45, 3 15, 4 45, 6 15, 7 45, 9 15, 10 45 p. m. Arrive St. Louis 4 45, 7 15, 9 15, 10 45, 12 15 p. m.

Leave Plainfield 6 45, 8 15, 9 45, 11 15 a. m., 1 45, 3 15, 4 45, 6 15, 7 45, 9 15, 10 45 p. m. Arrive Washington 12 45, 2 15, 5 45, 7 15, 9 15, 10 45, 12 15 p. m.

Leave Plainfield 6 45, 8 15, 9 45, 11 15 a. m., 1 45, 3 15, 4 45, 6 15, 7 45, 9 15, 10 45 p. m. Arrive Baltimore 12 45, 2 15, 5 45, 7 15, 9 15, 10 45, 12 15 p. m.

Leave Plainfield 6 45, 8 15, 9 45, 11 15 a. m., 1 45, 3 15, 4 45, 6 15, 7 45, 9 15, 10 45 p. m. Arrive Atlantic City 10 45 a. m., 5 45, 7 15, 9 15, 10 45, 12 15 p. m.

ROYAL BLUE LINE.

Leave Plainfield 6 45, 8 15, 9 45, 11 15 a. m., 1 45, 3 15, 4 45, 6 15, 7 45, 9 15, 10 45 p. m. Arrive Washington 12 45, 2 15, 5 45, 7 15, 9 15, 10 45, 12 15 p. m.

Leave Plainfield 6 45, 8 15, 9 45, 11 15 a. m., 1 45, 3 15, 4 45, 6 15, 7 45, 9 15, 10 45 p. m. Arrive Baltimore 12 45, 2 15, 5 45, 7 15, 9 15, 10 45, 12 15 p. m.

Leave Plainfield 6 45, 8 15, 9 45, 11 15 a. m., 1 45, 3 15, 4 45, 6 15, 7 45, 9 15, 10 45 p. m. Arrive Atlantic City 10 45 a. m., 5 45, 7 15, 9 15, 10 45, 12 15 p. m.

Leave Plainfield 6 45, 8 15, 9 45, 11 15 a. m., 1 45, 3 15, 4 45, 6 15, 7 45, 9 15, 10 45 p. m. Arrive Philadelphia 8 45, 10 15, 11 45 a. m., 3 15, 4 45, 6 15, 7 45, 9 15, 10 45, 12 15 p. m.

Leave Plainfield 6 45, 8 15, 9 45, 11 15 a. m., 1 45, 3 15, 4 45, 6 15, 7 45, 9 15, 10 45 p. m. Arrive Bethlehem 9 45, 11 15 a. m., 4 45, 6 15, 9 15, 10 45, 12 15 p. m.

Leave Plainfield 6 45, 8 15, 9 45, 11 15 a. m., 1 45, 3 15, 4 45, 6 15, 7 45, 9 15, 10 45 p. m. Arrive Easton 10 45 a. m., 5 45, 7 15, 9 15, 10 45, 12 15 p. m.

Leave Plainfield 6 45, 8 15, 9 45, 11 15 a. m., 1 45, 3 15, 4 45, 6 15, 7 45, 9 15, 10 45 p. m. Arrive Phillipsburg 10 45 a. m., 5 45, 7 15, 9 15, 10 45, 12 15 p. m.

Leave Plainfield 6 45, 8 15, 9 45, 11 15 a. m., 1 45, 3 15, 4 45, 6 15, 7 45, 9 15, 10 45 p. m. Arrive Harrisburg 12 45, 2 15, 5 45, 7 15, 9 15, 10 45, 12 15 p. m.

Leave Plainfield 6 45, 8 15, 9 45, 11 15 a. m., 1 45, 3 15, 4 45, 6 15, 7 45, 9 15, 10 45 p. m. Arrive Pittsburg 4 45, 7 15, 9 15, 10 45, 12 15 p. m.

Leave Plainfield 6 45, 8 15, 9 45, 11 15 a. m., 1 45, 3 15, 4 45, 6 15, 7 45, 9 15, 10 45 p. m. Arrive Chicago 4 45, 7 15, 9 15, 10 45, 12 15 p. m.

Leave Plainfield 6 45, 8 15, 9 45, 11 15 a. m., 1 45, 3 15, 4 45, 6 15, 7 45, 9 15, 10 45 p. m. Arrive Cincinnati 4 45, 7 15, 9 15, 10 45, 12 15 p. m.

Leave Plainfield 6 45, 8 15, 9 45, 11 15 a. m., 1 45, 3 15, 4 45, 6 15, 7 45, 9 15, 10 45 p. m. Arrive St. Louis 4 45, 7 15, 9 15, 10 45, 12 15 p. m

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

Celebrated for its great leavening strength and healthfulness. Assures the food against alumn and all forms of adulteration common to the cheap brands. Royal Baking Powder Co., New York.

SPRINGTIME REMOVALS.

CONFIDENTIAL CHANGES OF MANY PEOPLE HERE RECORDED.

Among Them are Several Who Have Moved From Other Towns, Recognizing Plainfield to be the Best Suburban City.

April 1st is the great time in Plainfield for moving and the vans of the local truckmen have been kept busy transferring the household goods of many families from one part of the city to the other or else across the borders into the borough. William Reid & Son have had their hands full in the last week or two and have moved many families.

Among those whom they have transferred from one house to another are: J. J. Pope from Elm place to West Front street; Rufus Jennings from West Front street to New street; Mrs. E. L. Hull from East Ninth street to East Fifth street; Mrs. Garretson from the Sixth street to Bound Brook; Fred W. Hand from Netherwood to Westervelt avenue, North Plainfield; Mr. Goodwin from Park avenue to New York; Mr. Hubbard from Norwood avenue to Sycamore avenue; H. Kohn from the Babcock building to Randolph's building, West Front street; Charles W. Bunyon from West Front street to storage; Caleb Dickenson from West Front street to Jackson building; Mr. Bullock from East Front street; Mrs. Peter Wyckoff from Park avenue to East Sixth street, Mr. Singleton from Monroe avenue to Monroe avenue; Miss Merrill from LaGrande avenue to Westervelt avenue; George Rogers from Watchung avenue to the Jackson building; Mrs. C. D. Rushmore from Grove street to Sycamore avenue; J. H. Halleck from East Ninth street to West Eighth street; J. Fritts from Westervelt avenue to East Sixth street; Richard Stevens from Park avenue to East Fifth street; Harry F. Crawford from Park avenue to East Fifth street; Miss A. G. Benedict from Park avenue to East Fifth street; J. F. Pangborn from Washington avenue to Arlington avenue; F. G. Welch from Cottage place to North avenue; Mrs. A. Moore from LaGrande avenue to Kensington avenue; Stephen Hope from Richmond street to East Third street; Mrs. J. B. Wilkins from East Fifth street to East Sixth street; Mr. Scheditin from Linden avenue to Duer street; Horace J. Martin from Fairview avenue to West Front street; Charles Hahr from Park avenue to West Sixth street; Charles Davis from North avenue to East Fifth street; Mr. Brandige from 314 East Sixth street to 402 East Sixth street; S. H. Patterson from Franklin place to East Ninth street; John Grisley from Arlington avenue to New street; W. N. Clum from Central avenue to LaGrande avenue; Mr. Bechart from Elizabeth to Plainfield; William Day from North Front street to Richmond street; D. H. Hebard from Washington street to storage.

Americans are the most inventive people on earth. To them have been issued nearly 600,000 patents, or more than one-third of all the patents issued in the world. No discovery of modern years has been of greater benefit to mankind than Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, or has done more to relieve pain and suffering. J. W. Vaugn, of Oakton, Ky., says: "I have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy in my family for several years, and find it to be the best medicine I ever used for cramps in the stomah and bowels. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

A New Time Schedule.

Another schedule in the time of running the street cars went into effect Friday night. Hereafter from seven o'clock at night the cars will run under fifteen minute headway. The twelve minute schedule will be operative in the day time.

John R. Mott, F. S. Brockman, and Gilbert A. Beaver, College Secretaries of the International Committee of the Young Men's Christian Association, were entertained over Sunday by Wilson D. Murray, of West Ninth street. Mr. Murray is chairman of the Committee on Foreign Work.

—A tasteful display of Easter cards is to be seen in one of the windows of E. F. Estil's store on Park avenue.

RUNS BY THE WHOLESALE

TWENTY-SEVEN HOME PLATE TOUCHERS WON THE BALL GAME.

The Season's Sport on the Diamond Opened Saturday Between Local School Teams—The Players and the Score.

The baseball season was inaugurated in Plainfield Saturday afternoon with an exciting game between the rival nines from the Plainfield High School and Leal's School. The Leal's School team finally won by one run made in the ninth inning. The game was played on the old Y. M. C. A. field, near Washington avenue.

The game was replete with exciting incidents. The small boys from the two schools were out in force and shouted themselves hoarse over the respective merits of ther teams. There were quite a number of other spectators. The catcher for the Leal's team, Bert Moore, was unable to play on account of a sprained thumb, and so a local player from outside the school was placed in that position. White, the pitcher for that team, was an easy thing, and the High School boys had lots of fun with him, making three-base hits and home runs as if they were everyday occurrences. After two innings White was removed from the box and Rockwell, one of the nine of the New York Military Academy at Sing Sing, who was home on his vacation, was taken from shortstop and pitched against the Plainfielders. His curves were rather more puzzling than his predecessor and to him the Leal boys mainly owe their victory.

The High School team was composed of the regular candidates for the team. Their fielding was often rather off color, but they did very well considering the fact that they have had sb practice before. There were errors on both sides, but there was lots of fun and so that made up for it. The High School boys led from the start up to the last inning, when the Leal boys finally tied them in the last inning, Honeyman making the run to tie the score and Boone winning the game by crossing the plate for the twenty-seventh run.

Sutphen pitched well for the High School, while Lederer did good work in the position of catcher. White, of the Leal School team, won the honors for difficult catches.

The teams were composed of the following:

High School.	Leal's School.
Lederer, capt.	catcher. Enright
Sutphen	pitcher. White
Smith	1st base. Boone
Dando	2d base. Stevenson, capt
Craig	ad base. Curren
Fisher	shortstop. Rockwell
Honeyman	left field. Dumont
Cerieli	center field. Honeyman
Long	right fel l. Taylor

Score by innings:

Leal's	0	4	1	0	4	1	5	3	—27
High School	5	1	3	2	0	0	1	3	9—26

Sunday-School Officers Chosen.

The annual meeting of the Sabbath-school of the Seventh-day Baptist church was held Sunday afternoon in the Sabbath school rooms. The officers of the school made their reports, showing that progress had been made in all the different lines of work. The election of officers was then held and resulted as follows: Superintendent, D. E. Titsworth; assistant superintendents, Henry M. Maxson and Asa F. Randolph; secretary, Frank J. Hubbard; treasurer, Arthur J. Spicer; librarian, Sydney R. Titsworth.

Public Library.

The following is the bulletin of new books in the Public Library for March, 1897:

American Catalogue, 1890-1895.
Bonner, Abbess and Churchess.
Brookings, Robert for Debate.
Bullock, Ring o' Rushes.
Canton, W. V., Her Book.
Curtis, Venezuela.
Dodd, On the Broads.
Doyle, Rodney Stone.
Fletcher, Literary Index, 1896.
Greeley, Arctic Discoveries.
Hardee, Family Feud.
Harper's Round Table, 1896.
Haswell, Reminiscences of an Octogenarian of the City of New York.
Hawkins, Heart of Princess Vera.
Hueffer, Italian and Other Studies.
James, Portraits of Places.
Saintsbury, 19th Century Literature.
Sienkiewicz, "Quo Vadis."
Stevenson, David Balfour.
Wilson, George Washington.
Wilson, Mere Literature.
Wood, Quotations for Occasions.

GIFTS.

Carpenter, Six Months at the White House.
Chautauqua Library of English History.
Kemble, Georgia Plantation.
Marshall Men of Mark.
N. J. Supreme Court, Reports of Cases, v. 29.
New Orleans Handbook.
U. S., Railways of the U. S., 1895.

Two years ago R. J. Warren, a druggist at Pleasant Brook N. Y., bought a small supply of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He sums up the result as follows: "At that time the goods were unknown in this section; to-day Chambelain's Cough Remedy is a household word." It is the same in hundreds of communities. Wherever the good qualities of Chamberlains Cough Remedy become known the people will have nothing else. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

—The ladies of the Crescent Avenue church are cordially invited to attend a meeting, to be held in the chapel of the First Presbyterian church, Friday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Mrs. Swift will speak on behalf of the Freedmen.

BACK FROM A LONG TRIP.

MR. AND MRS. E. R. ACKERMAN HAVE TRAVELED 10,000 MILES.

Journeyed Through the West Indies, South America and Mexico, and Saw Many Sights—Met Distinguished People.

After a trip of ten thousand miles through the West Indies, South America and Mexico, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest R. Ackerman returned to their home on West Seventh street, Saturday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Ackerman sailed from New York several months ago on the American Line S. S. "Ohio," visiting Bermuda and making short stops at the Danish West Indies, Dominica, St. Christopher, St. Vincent, St. Lucia, Barbadoes and Trinidad. Their first view of South America was at La Guayra, Venezuela, where they landed. They traveled by rail across the Andes to Garacas, where they were granted an audience with President Crespo.

Leaving the South American continent, they sailed north with brief pauses at San Domingo and at Kingston in Jamaica and at the City of Merida in Xucatan. They landed at Vera Cruz and from that Mexican City, traveled by the Mexican Central railroad toward the capital of that country. They found the tropical scenery of that region very beautiful and caught a glimpse of the famous mountain peaks of Popocatepetl and Iztaccihuath while making short stops at Orizaba and Puebla. They found the City of Mexico a wonderful place, especially remarkable for the cleanliness of the streets and town. A week was pleasantly passed there and short outings were enjoyed to the cities of Guadulajara and Zacatecas. They then returned to the United States by rail, reaching Plainfield Saturday evening.

THIEF RODE TWO MILES.

Then Repented and Returned the Bicycle to Its Rightful Owner.

L. Bojenhard Eckesen and brother rode to Plainfield Saturday afternoon from their home in Mat awan to see a friend living at 335 Carl don avenue. The brother rode his new Winton wheel which he had purchased the day before from a dealer in Trenton for $100. At 7:50 o'clock, they left the two wheels standing on the piazza. Twenty minutes later, they came out to find that some one had been there before them and the new wheel was gone.

Chief Grant was notified and, in turn, notified all the police departments in the neighborhood. Perhaps the thief heard of that, for in the morning the missing wheel was standing in the yard, the cyclometer showing that it had been ridden two miles. The tool-bag had been emptied of its contents and the seat with post attached had also been removed. The police were told of the discovery and the owner of the wheel rejoiced.

Will Stay in the Crew.

Raymond A. McGee, of Yale University, returned to Plainfield, Saturday afternoon, to spend Sunday at his home on Orchard place, Washington Park. McGee will be unable to return during the Easter vacation as all the members of the freshmen crew, of which he is one, will remain in New Haven during the holiday train. McGee has decided to give up his trip with the glee club during the vacation and train with the crew instead. He is the heaviest man on the crew and one of the leading candidates.

Who can fail to take advantage of this offer. Send 10 cents to us for a generous trial size or ask your druggist. Ask for Ely's Cream Balm, the most positive catarrh cure. Full size 50 cents. ELY BROS., 56 Warren street, N. Y. City. I suffered from catarrh of the worst kind ever since a boy, and I never hoped for cure, but Ely's Cream Balm seems to do even that. Many acquaintances have used it with excellent results. Oscar Ostrum, 45 Warren ave., Chicago, Ill.

A New Hat For the Chief.

In the resolution offered at the meeting of the Borough Council Friday evening which provided for the purchase of uniforms and caps for the marshals, no provision was made for the purchase of a new hat for the chief marshal. Mr. Wilson certainly needs a new hat, and it should have been included in the general order.

About Dependent Children.

A meeting of the Organized Aid Association will be held in the lecture hall of Crescent Avenue church on Monday evening next at 8 o'clock. Mrs. Williamson, secretary of the State Charities' Association, will give an address upon "Dependent Children of the State."

Fillmore Held For the Grand Jury.

Alec Fillmore, the alleged horse-thief, was brought before Justice Nash for a hearing Saturday afternoon and held in $300 bail to appear before the grand jury. As he could not furnish the bail, he was committed to the Somerset county jail at Somerville.

To Preach the Easter Sermon.

Rev. Mr. Snodgrass, who has been assigned to the pastorate of the First M. E. church, of this city, will occupy the pulpit for the first on Easter Sunday.

Spring

Is the season for new life in nature, new vigor in our physical systems. As the fresh sap carries life into the trees, so our blood should give us renewed strength and vigor. In its impure state it cannot do this, and the aid of Hood's Sarsaparilla is imperatively needed. It will purify, vitalize and enrich the blood, and with this solid, correct foundation, it will build up good health, create a good appetite, tone your stomach and digestive organs, strengthen your nerves and overcome or prevent that tired feeling. This has been the experience of thousands. It will be yours if you take

Hood's

Sarsaparilla The Best Spring Medicine and Blood Purifier. Sold by all druggists. $1.

Hood's Pills cure nausea, indigestion, biliousness, 25 cents.

Sweet Peas.

Do not delay planting them, our own mixture contains only the choicest and latest varieties.

LAWN & GARDEN SEEDS and FERTILIZERS. HARDWARE and HOUSEFURNISHINGS.

A. M. GRIFFEN,

119 East Front st.

Telephone Call, 6.

W. R. CODINGTON,

Counsellor-at-Law.

Commissioner of Deeds, Master-in chancery, Notary Public. Offices Corner of Park avenue and Second street.

SEEDS ... FOR THE ... Garden and Farm

Vegetable and Flower Seeds. All the choicest and most reliable quality. Assorted, Illustrated Catalogue FREE.

FISHER & BOND, Seed Growers and Importers, 114 Chambers St., New York City.

3 20 3m

What a Lot of Eggs the hens lay when fed on Green Cut Bone. With a dozen hens will pay for itself in a short time in the increase of eggs. $5 BUYS ONE, on trial. 100 highest awards received. Catalogue free if you name this paper. F. W. MANN CO., Milford, Mass.

Mann's Green Bone Cutter

2 3 4 9 10 11 12—7 mos.

SAVED

After years of suffering. It has at last been proved by a trial.

NASALENE

Is a positive remedy for local diseases which are the result of cold and climatic changes. Cold in the Head. Hay Fever.

CATARRH,

Deafness, (caused by catarrh) are instantly relieved.

It is pleasant to use, convenient to carry. Price 50c. and $1.00, at all druggists.

O. V. BACON, Wardwell Building, Utica, N. Y.

Nasalene is very local.

HUNTER MEDICAL CO.

54 E. 31st Street, N. Y.

WANTS AND OFFERS.

BY women, each with an infant or young child, situations in the country (general housework, plain cooking, etc.). Small wages expected. Railroad fare paid by Association. Apply State Charities Aid Association, 105 East Twenty Second street, New York City. 3 18 1mo

DIED.

LAWRENCE—At Dunellen N. J., April 2, 1897, William L. Lawrence, aged 87 years.

POULTRY We keep everything about Poultry. Send for 1897 Poultry Lice, Fancying Fowls, Incubators, Live Stock, Breeders—anything—it's your business. Call or write and we send you our 32 page illustrated catalogue—it's free for the asking—it's worth having.

Excelsior Wire & Poultry Supply Co.
39 Vesey Street, New York City.
2 26 3m

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS

For all Bilious and Nervous Diseases. They purify the blood and act directly upon the entire system.

Cure DYSPEPSIA, HEADACHE, CONSTIPATION and PIMPLES.

SALESMEN WANTED

To sell our high grade, hardy, imported Nursery Stock. Many new specialties offered this year for the first time, as well as the standard varieties of fruit and ornamentals. No previous experience necessary. Write for terms and particulars.

Geo. H. & A. Hinds, Maple Avenue Nurseries, West Chester, Pa.

JAS. M. DUNN,

Dealer in

GROCERIES, PROVISIONS, VEGETABLES, FRUITS &c

GARDEN SEEDS

fresh and carefully selected.

224 PARK AVENUE,

OPPOSITE NORTH AVENUE.

Everything usually found in a first-class grocery.

Goods delivered free of charge.

Lewis B. Coddington,

[Successor to T. J. Carey.]

Furniture & Freight Express

Office—24 W. FRONT ST.

Large Covered Vans or Trucks. Goods delivered to any part of the U. S. Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges reasonable. P. O. Box 1. Piano moving a specialty

PATENTS CAVEATS, TRADE MARKS COPYRIGHTS.

CAN I OBTAIN A PATENT? For a prompt answer and an honest opinion, write to MUNN & CO., who have had nearly fifty years' experience in the patent business. Communications strictly confidential. A Handbook of information concerning Patents and how to obtain them sent free. Also a catalogue of mechanical and scientific books sent free.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice in the Scientific American, and thus are brought widely before the public without cost to the inventor. This splendid paper, issued weekly, elegantly illustrated, has by far the largest circulation of any scientific work in the world. $3 a year. Sample copy sent free.

Building Edition, monthly, $2.50 a year. Single copies, 25 cents. Every number contains beautiful plates, in colors, and photographs of new houses, with plans, enabling builders to show the latest designs and secure contracts. Address, MUNN & CO., NEW YORK, 361 BROADWAY.

DIME

Savings Institution,

Of Plainfield, N. J.

Is now receiving deposits payable on demand, with interest, allowed on all sums from $5 to $3,000.

JOHN W. MURRAY, President.
J. DUANE BENEDICT, Vice-President.
J. C. POPE, Treasurer.

Money deposited on or before January tenth will draw interest from the first.

GEORGE W. DAY,

General Auctioneer.

Sales of Personal Property solicited. P. O. Box 128, Dunellen, N. J., or address in care of Constitutionalist. Terms reasonable

Townsend's

Marble and Granite Works,

30

Somerset st., North Plainfield.

If you have not engaged your work I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy and sell Marble and Granite and can do not sell unless at prices that will satisfy you. I stand on my credit in myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, and can afford to sell at a small profit on my work. I am personally attended to by my brother, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no one can excel me in the work and cannot work any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

J. E. TOWNSEND, Manager.

Branch yard, Westfield, N. J.

NEW JERSEY SUPREME COURT

To Richard Garretson, defendant, or whom it may concern:

Please take notice that the following writ of Scire Facias has been issued out of the Supreme Court of the State of New Jersey, to wit:

STATE OF NEW JERSEY, ss.

The State of NEW JERSEY to our Sheriff of our County of Somerset, GREETING:

WHEREAS, lately in our Supreme Court of said term, before the Justices thereof, and before the Justice thereof, by the judgment of the same Court, it was considered and adjudged that RICHARD GARRETSON is the sum of five hundred and thirty dollars and eighty-three cents for his costs and charges by the said Court, before the said Justice there, and also thirty-one dollars and seventy-three cents for his costs and charges by the said Court, before the said Justice there, if amended, when of the said RICHARD GARRETSON is convicted, as appears of record in the said Court, and the said JOHN D. BARTINE have been duly attached to answer the said JOHN D. BARTINE hath hitherto sought us to provide him a proper remedy in that behalf. We being desirous that what is right and just should be done in this case, and that the said JOHN D. BARTINE, a good and lawful man of your County, may not be delayed or hindered in the said RICHARD GARRETSON that he be before or said Justices at Trenton, on the third Tuesday of April next, to show if he hath or know of any thing for the said RICHARD GARRETSON why the said JOHN D. BARTINE should not have his execution against him according to the form, force and effect of the said recovery, if it shall seem expedient for the said JOHN D. BARTINE so to do; we command you that you cause the said RICHARD GARRETSON to be made known to him, and that he be and appear before our said Justices at Trenton, on the third Tuesday of April next, to show if he hath or know of any thing for the said RICHARD GARRETSON why the said JOHN D. BARTINE should not have his execution against him according to the form, force and effect of the said recovery, if it shall seem expedient for the said JOHN D. BARTINE so to do; and have you then and there the names of these writs. And what you shall do concerning the same you shall make known to him and this you shall in no wise omit.

WITNESS, MERCER BEASLEY, Esquire, Chief Justice, at Trenton, aforesaid, the twenty-second day of February, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety-seven.

JOHN W. WESTCOTT & MEEHAN, Att'ys.

BENJ. F. LEE, Clerk. 2 25 5w

CARNEY BROS.,

MADISON AVENUE,

Between Front and Second streets.

Tinners,
Plumbers
Gas Fitters,

Grates and bricks for all kinds of stoves can be found here at Jobbers' prices. Bring your tinware mending to us. The best tinners, the best plumbers, and the best gas-fitters in this section. We use none but the very best of materials, and our work always gives satisfaction. Keys of all kinds are made here. Tinware made to order. Ranges, brick and portable furnaces. Sanitary plumbing.

Wm. A. Woodruff,

Fire and Life

INSURANCE AGENT,

OFFICE,

corner Front St. and Park Avenue,

Plainfield, N. J.

Real Estate for Sale and Exchange. Money to Loan on Approve Security.

Sanitary Plumbing,

Brick and Portable Furnace

Gas Fitting, Tin Roofing.

Etc., Etc., Etc.

I am prepared to do any of the above branches in strictly first-class sanitary and workmanship manner.

Having associated myself with the Master Members Association of New York City, I employ none but first class mechanics and non-union men. I believe in every man running his own business, at all times and in all cases.

D. W. LITTELL,

No. 112 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J.

ALBERT HEDDEN

Livery & Boarding Stables

FOURTH ST.,

between Watchung and Park avenues.

First-class Livery. Horses boarded by week or month. Telephone call, No. 114.

A. WOLFF,

Manufacturer of

CIGARS.

And dealer in all kinds of Smoking and Chewing Tobacco, and smokers' articles, has removed from 234 W. Front street, to 232 West Front street, one door east of Madisen avenue and solicits the patronage of his friends and the public generally.

P. P. VanArsdale,

PIANO TUNER.

Instruments put in thorough order. Terms reasonable. Pianos and organs for sale and to let. Orders by postal, P. O. Box 166, or left at Willett's shoe store, No. 107 Park avenue, will receive prompt attention. Residence 301 E. Front street, corner Elm street. 2|17

WANTED—AN IDEA Who can think of some simple thing to patent? Protect your ideas; they may bring wealth. Write JOHN WEDDERBURN & CO., Patent Attorneys, Washington, D. C., for their $1,800 prize offer.

FRAZER AXLE GREASE

Best in the World

It is unsurpassed for lubricating purposes. It contains three times as much grease as any other brand. Sold by dealers everywhere. Be sure the Genuine FRAZER AXLE GREASE is on the box.

E. B. MAYNARD,

PRACTICAL

BARBER AND HAIR DRESSER,

204 PARK AVE.

Ladies' and Children's Hair Cutting done at their residence. Shaving, Shampooing, etc., satisfactorily performed. 11|71

Woolston & Buckle,

PAINTERS.

Wall Papers, Painters' Supplies

141-145 North avenue.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE.

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS, DESIGN PATENTS, COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. Oldest agency for securing patents. We have a Washington office. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN.

Beautifully illustrated, largest circulation of any scientific journal, weekly, terms $3 a year; $1.50 six months. Specimen copies and HAND BOOK on PATENTS sent free. Address

MUNN & CO.,
361 Broadway, New York.

THE MIRROR OF LIFE.

Do you wish for kindness? Be kind.
Do you long for truth? Be true.
What you give of yours if, you find
Your world is a reflex of you.

For life is a mirror. You smile,
And a smile is your sure return.
Your hate in your heart and vowwhile
All your world with hatred will burn.

Set love against love. Every deed
Shall armed as a fate recoil
You plant in the soil of your need
That you cast yourself in the soil.

Each act is a separate link
In the chain of your weal or your woe;
Curse not, and you need not to drink,
The taste of their dregs you shall know.
—Exchange.

THE EDITOR'S WIFE.

Great was the consternation when the rumor was circulated through the office that Harding was to be married —"actually married to a woman," as Edkins remarked, in a voice of mingled pity and contempt, as he imparted the news to Judkins, the night editor.

Every one was disgusted, for wasn't Harding the exclusive property of the Advocate's men?

And to share him with any woman was beyond all question.

"Yessir, my boy," wholefully remarked Judkins, as he buried his hands deep in his pockets, and blessed his stars for his own unattached condition.

"Just imagine Harding's rooms with a woman in 'em," in a voice of utter contempt. "No more midnight gather-things there, my boy; no Welsh rarebit, no cards, with a seasoning of smoke—oh, hang it, no nothing. Tidies, and ribbon, and bric-a-brac, and goodness knows what, wherever you step. Just a little call, and 'Good evening, Mrs. Harding—yes, our friend has got an assignment,' and off, leaving Harding trying to look happy, with a silk scarf twisted round his neck, and his feet plumb up against some other work of art. Hang it, what is the man thinking of?" and Judkins started up as if he would go to the protection of his misguided fellow editor.

But that same misguided young man seemed in no apparent need of protection, for he laughed and joked with the boys in his old-time manner, and when Judkins's dismal prognostications were related to him his amusement knew no bounds. Then and there he invited them to just come up and see, when he was married, for "I'll warrant you," he said, "that Mrs. H. will prove a delightful little box of Arcadian mixture, to which Edkins is so attached, and every blessed one of you will wish you were in my shoes before the first evening is over, for"—and here Harding, for the first time in the history of the office, descended to the trite and commonplace—"she isn't like other girls, you know—she—"

But here an explosion of pent-up wrath burst from the group, and Harding was suddenly ejected from the office, and as he stared blankly at the closed doors, behind which came most undignified sounds, he was heard to murmur:

"I wonder what I said," which goes to prove that even a callous editor is sometimes human.

* * * * *

But this was all a year ago. Now Harding was safely married. The boys were sure of that. As a proof of their devotion they had suffered themselves to appear in evening dress at the wedding; had been properly presented to the bride as "the boys, you know," and after paying due attention to the pretty bridesmaids, they had retired to the office, and there held secret conclave over glasses and pipes, and there early morning had found them, still wondering how the same man could be so inane as Harding had been.

* * * * *

Now things were different. "She isn't like other women," Judkins had reluctantly admitted after their first call.

"She really isn't, you know; and I guess, after all, it won't be so bad. She's almost one of us, you know, only somehow better and sweeter, and all that, and I shouldn't wonder if we'd better ease up a little on Harding."

And so, to quote Judkins, she was "almost one of them."

Harding's rooms had never seemed so hospitable as now, his big chairs never so tempting, and nights when the boys couldn't drop in for a moment's chat, at least, were off nights with them.

"I tell you it braces a fellow up," Edkins explained, in apology, the second time Judkins found him there.

"She's so awfully interested in all that we do, you know, and gives a fellow lots of tips. She ought to be on the paper herself, and I told her so, but, bless you, she blushed, and asked if I didn't think that she was better adapted to making chocolate, and handed me a cup, just as I like it, and as no one else on earth can make it but she."

"That finished you, old boy, of course," and Judkins laughed.

"But, honestly, you're right. Harding has improved wonderfully, and your pet column has gone up 50 per cent., and the society stuff isn't half as tame.

"We're almost up to the Vindicator now, and it won't be the confounded scoops they get on us we'd lead the town; but I say, Ed"—and here Judkins paused and glanced down the street, as if he feared the approach of some one—"it seems kind of mean to say it, but do you ever think that Harding isn't just quite with his wife, but makes deals with that woman on the Vindicator staff?

"No, I'm not crazy," as his companion stopped short and faced him.

"I've been looking this thing up, and if it wasn't for Mrs. H. I'd give the town the biggest sensation in years.

"It would mean discharge to Harding and promotion to me, and, hang it, if it isn't a temptation. But there is that wife of his; somehow"—and he spoke slowly—"somehow I don't like to hurt her.

"Oh! yes, I've got facts," as Edkins started to interrupt him.

"Mat upset the waste basket on my desk one morning, and didn't pick all the scraps up, and there on my desk was a letter addressed 'Daisy.' Thought I'd have no chance to guy some of you fellows, so I read it.

"'Twas from the editorial rooms of the Vindicator, and was addressed to Harding, and said, 'Meet me at 1 in the park. I must see you. Daisy.'

"You could have knocked me flat, but I followed it up by sending a boy to follow Harding. I knew enough not to follow him myself, and he came back with a full account of Harding meeting a veiled lady in the park, and they stood for a long time in a secluded spot talking very eagerly, and Harding held her hand, and, as the boy expressed it, looked 'sweet' at her.

"Then I put that with the fact that Harding was the only one who could get an interview with the Vindicator on that same affair, and every one knows that the power behind the throne there is a woman. And it strikes me that we have a pretty plain case. Harding is struck on the girl, and she is playing with him for the benefit of the Vindicator.

"See, my boy?"

Edkins drew a deep breath.

"Yes, I see what you say, and if it's true, by jingo, Judkins, we'll thrash Harding, that is all.

"I'm off," and Edkins departed with an air of resolution that was unusual, even to that eccentric individual.

The story grew, as it was whispered from man to man, and there was an uneasiness in the little circle that was wont to gather at the Hardings', for Mrs. Harding and his wife were acutely conscious of what the others were thinking. They alone were bright and cheery.

But the plot deepened as young Foster, who had been simply tolerated as a clever young fellow by the older men, became a frequent caller at the Hardings.

"The boy is in love," was the verdict of the older men, "and now we're in a mess, and how are we going to get out of it?"

Affairs were in this condition when one night Judkins and Edkins reached the Hardings' earlier than usual to find Harding very ill at ease, and his wife's face flushed and her eyes bright.

There was an awkwardness for a few moments, but even Mrs. Harding, with her quickly recovered composure, was unable to dispel.

Suddenly, without the least ceremony, the door opened and young Foster walked in.

He hardly noticed the men, but walked straight to where Mrs. Harding sat in her low chair by the tea-table, and, kneeling down beside her, he caught her hand in his and raised it to his lips.

The faces of the men wore a puzzled expression, and Judkins burst out, "It's time the thing was cleared up. For heaven's sake, Harding, what is it all about?"

"This is what it's all about," young Foster's manly voice rang out, without giving his superior editor a chance to speak:

"It means that you are an old duffer, Judkins, with your clues and your stories, and all that. Harding here is the only sane man on the paper.

"The nice little story you trumped up is all bosh, for here is your Vindicator girl whom Harding is struck on," and he smiled down into the face of Editor Harding's wife.

"Yes, you fellows," he continued, "this is your 'girl' who managed all the scoops, and 'played with Harding' for the benefit of the staff.

"She's the smartest newspaper woman in this country, and the best woman in the world.

"Do you know what she has done?

"No, of course you don't; you've been so busy ferreting out your mystery.

"Well, every blessed one of those scoops you thought stolen she worked out for herself, and had it all in copy before you ever dawdled here and gossiped about it.

"And when she might have had the biggest scoop of all, and been known the country over, and had her price for it all, she gave it up, gave up her position on the Vindicator, all because it touched the honor of one of our men. As she told the managing editor, when she absolutely refused to give the names he asked:

"'I have been an editor, but, thank God, before I was that, and, despite of it, I am a woman, a woman also, and I am Editor Harding's wife, and I will not betray the good name of one of his men.'"

The strong voice broke. "It was my father's name," he continued, "and now my father is dead."

There was a pause for a moment.

Then it was broken by the sweet voice of Editor Harding's wife.

"You take two lumps, I believe, Mr. Edkins? Yes see I remember."

* * * * *

"Which goes to show," said Judkins, as they trudged home an hour later, "that really 'she isn't like other women'."

The Comfort of Job.

Porter (returning in a hurry)—Beg pardon, sir, but I was a-makin' a mistake when I says your train starts from No. 6 platform. I have ascertained that it has previously started from No. 5. In bother words, sir, you 'ave lost it.—Pick-Me-Up.

A French Canadian couple, Louis Darwin and his wife, living in St. Paul, recently celebrated the eightieth anniversary of their marriage. The husband is 107 years old and his wife is 101.

RED HAIR A DEFORMITY.

Regarded by Some of the Scotch People With Strong Dislike.

In a sketch of the estimate mankind has put upon hair-color, a writer says that among some of the Highland clans red hair was regarded with so much aversion as to be considered a positive deformity. An amusing instance of this is still kept in memory. A certain nobleman paid a visit to an old Highlander, and was introduced by him to his family, consisting of six fine, stalwart sons. The nobleman, however, happened to be aware that there were seven, and inquired after the absent member. The old man sorrowfully gave him to understand that an effective dismember of Providence had rendered the seventh unfit to be introduced in company. "Ah, my poor fellow," said the sympathizing visitor, "I see—some mental infirmity?" "On the contrary," replied the father, "he is by far the cleverest of the family—there is nothing the matter with his mind."

"Oh, then, by all means, let me see him," said the nobleman and while the old man went in quest of the unpresentable youth, the prepared a kind word for the eclipse whom he expected to be produced. To his astonishment, however, the father returned, followed by a fine, tall, handsome young fellow, by far the most prepossessing of the family. "Excuse me," exclaimed the nobleman, "but I—in fact—I see nothing the matter with him."

"Nothing the matter with him!" mournfully exclaimed the afflicted parent; "nothing the matter with him! Look at his hair!"

The nobleman looked; sure enough, his hair was red!

"Ah, that explains," he readily exclaimed to the relief of the youth, "the reason why he is by far the cleverest of the family."

An explanation of the origin of this bitter aversion may be found in some quarrel between the different clans, since there were clans in which red hair predominated.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

LEGAL FEES.

A Lawyer Paid Himself as a Stimulus to Transact His Own Business.

A would-be client once wrote to Parsons, the American advocate, stating a case for his opinion, and inclosing a $20 note. The other did not reply; whereupon the man wrote a second letter. Then Parsons answered that he had read the case and formed his opinion, but somehow or other "it stuck in his throat." Whereupon, the man, perceiving what was amiss, inclosed a $100 note, and got the opinion. Nobody does anything well for nothing, and certainly not a lawyer. Lord Mansfield was so sensible of this that when, on one occasion, he had to attend to some professional business of his own, he took some guineas out of his purse and put them into his waistcoat pocket to give him the requisite stimulus. Sir Anthony Malone, an Irish Attorney General, was so imprudent as to omit this precaution, and, as the Rev. James Jefferson us, was grievously punished for it, for he was so inattentive as regards some property he bought for himself that he lost £3,000 a year by it. In future he caused his clerk to make an abstract of the title deeds of any property he bought, and lay it before him with a fee of 5 guineas, properly indorsed, which the clerk was scrupulously to account for, after which Sir Anthony made no more mistakes, as regarded, at least, his own affairs.—London Illustrated News.

How He Proposed.

"The best 'dinner yarn' that I ever heard," observed a woman at a Boston dinner party, "was the story of the young man who was much in love with a certain young woman, but hadn't the courage to tell her so. One evening they were dining out together, and it so happened that a bated rival took the girl in to dinner. The rival's manner made the bashful lover suspect that the rival intended to propose to the girl that very evening. As the dinner progressed the lover became absolutely sure of this, and, spurred on by necessity, he resolved to risk his own fortune to test, and at once. Tearing a leaf from his notebook he accordingly scribbled a line or two, folded it, and gave it to the nearest servant with a 'Hand that to the lady in blue.' (There was fortunately but one such at the table, or matters might have been complicated.) The girl received the note, opened it, and read: 'Will you be my wife?' followed by his name. He had forgotten to send the pencil, however, but the girl was as ready as the man was lacking, and she turning to the servant and said, calmly: 'Just tell the gentleman Yes.'"—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Mrs. Nanson's Carrier Pigeon.

Mrs. Nanson, wife of the famous Arctic explorer, is the owner of a remarkable carrier pigeon which, after being away from its home for nearly two years, winged its way back over a thousand miles of frozen waste and yet another thousand of ocean and frost and plain. Under its shining white wing it brought a note from Nansen, telling his wife that he was well and the expedition was doing finely.—Tid-Bits.

A Hustler.

Rozenheimer—How did you come to git your gonsends to young Swagg's request for your daughter's hand? He has noddings.

Old Swindlebaum—Yen he asks for her undt I tells him she ish only a schoolgirl, he says: "Yese, but I can wait," undt I says: "Yah undt I do but gif her to a young vellow vat ish such a hustler ash dot."—New York Journal.

BREEK'S POWER OVER BRUTES.

He Astounds Northwood by Fascinating Skunks, Mink and Foxes.

Nordorf Breek, a gypsy in North wood, N. Y., has amazed the natives by his success in approaching wild animals, even coming up with a fox and handling it as if it were a pet dog.

Breek lives by himself in a shanty, and bluejays and squirrels, mink and rabbits gather about his door to feed on the scraps that he throws to them, or to listen to his voice, which is so peculiar that many Northwood men say it makes them shiver.

Breek is somewhat of a mystery to nearly everybody asks him about his animal friends, and the other evening, when a skunk came waddling into the store at his heels, Dave Jones felt called upon to protest. Breek picked the skunk up. Every body drew away hastily, but the expected consequences did not come. Breek took the skunk to the door and dropped it from the stoop into the road. He came back, purchased a side of bacon and some cheese, and made his way up the road, followed by the skunk.

The Northwood woodsmen would never believe before Breek came that foxes had gone to men for protection from dogs on their trails, as foxes are said to have gone to Thoreau. Now seven persons have seen foxes seek shelter with Breek, and there are no skeptics.

It is believed that Breek's eyes are largely responsible for this power over animals. They are rather dark, full of lustre, and direct in their gaze. While not exactly fierce, they are rather menacing. A dog, angry at a child for having stepped on its tail or the store porch one day, started to snap at it. Breek said something quickly, and the dog, giving one glance at the man's eyes, slunk away with its tail between its legs.

Lotteries Began at an Early Date.

As late as 1806 Harvard College was raising money by a lottery. It offered 30,000 tickets for sale at $10 each, with prizes ranging from $15,000 down to $7. "In the above scheme," said the Prospectus, "the just expectations of the public, and the interest of the University, have been consulted. It is worthy the attention of adventurers, that the highest prize is the largest sum in value to any that has been drawn in this Commonwealth for many years past, though the usual price of tickets is preserved. The Managers solicit the patronage of the public in general, and of the friends of literature and of the University in particular; and considering the object of the Lottery, they will combine the prospect of gain with the certainty of benefiting the University: and by lending their aid to the means of education, will promote the best interests of their country."

Exit Tompkins.

Tomkins is one of those gentlemen of kind disposition who are ever on the lookout to improve their neighbors' minds. Seeing a man, apparently a country fellow, sitting on the curb, watching the telegraph wires carefully, Tomkins approached.

"Watching the wires, eh?"

"Yes, sir."

"Waiting to see the message go by, eh?"

The man smiled, and "Yes, sir," he replied. Then Tomkins spoke kindly to him and explained the mystery of the electric current, and that the message was invisible, and finished up: "Now you know something about it." Then as he was going away, he said, by the way: "What are you in for?"

"Me and my mate are telegraph workers, and we're just putting up a new wire."—Tid-Bits.

A Servant Dog's Bad Habit.

A dog in New Orleans has contracted the habit of smoking and his smoking propensity is of sufficently long standing to be now a habit with him. He acquired it, of course, in the old way that is, by keeping bad company. The dog seems to belong to no one in particular, and runs about the streets chasing rats in the gutters for a living. This Bohemian existence has made him the prey of evil ways. Picking up the cigar or cigarette stumps tossed in his way by idle or thoughtless smokers has given him a taste for the weed, and when his find happens to have the necessary fire at one end he seems to enjoy his smoke equal to the most confirmed nicotine devotee.—Philadelphia Times.

The Affectionate Dood.

It is not fair for cats and dogs to carry off the spoils. I allow me to tell a story from my own personal experience of gratitude in a goose. I was walking one day with a friend through his poultry-yard, when a goose hurried up to him, fondly rubbed its neck against his trousers, and followed him about everywhere. He told me he had once rescued it from being done to death by its feathered companions because it had a broken wing. Could any unfeathered biped have shown greater affection?

More Than One Way to Spell Chicago.

At the New York Post-Office, in sorting over the letters from various parts of the world, one hundred and ninety-seven different ways of spelling "Chicago" have been found; among them were "Jagjaco," "Hipaho," "Jajigo," "Scheechacho," "Hisago," "Chachicho," and a scholarly resident of Finland indulges in "Zizazo."

Introduction of Postal Cards.

Postal cards were introduced by Professor Emanuel Herman, of Vienna. They were first used in England, Germany, and Switzerland in 1870, in Belgium and Denmark in 1871, and in Norway, Russia, and the United States in 1872-3.

PENNY OF 1856.

Story that Gold Was Used in Place of Nickel Has Enhanced Its Value.

"Though the penny of 1856," observed a numismatist, "was issued in great sufficiency, the coins soon disappeared from circulation and are held as rarities. They are seldom offered for sale, but those which have been offered brought a large price. There are several theories existing among coin experts as to the disappearance of this penny, being of the older style and metals for the coin, a bar of gold was melted up by mistake for a bar of nickel, and that the reason why the penny disappeared was in consequence of its intrinsic value. The result of this and other stories about the 1856 penny is that there were at least as many coined as there were of '54, '55 or '57 pennies, one of the '56 pennies will to-day bring nearly one hundred times as much money as those of the other years mentioned. Some numismatists have even gone so far as to test the composition. They found no trace of gold. It is one of the many peculiar things about the scarcity of some coins."—Washington Star.

Firing Dynamite by Water.

In these days of invention the most extraordinary discovery causes very little astonishment. Still, it is a bit surprising to hear that the newest method of firing dynamite is by the use of water. Water is a time-fuse when the modes in use till now, and both had their disadvantages. The present ingenious arrangement is as follows:

A sensitive detonator, which ignites at the temperature of boiling water, is placed in the centre of the charge of dynamite, and around it is placed a layer of lime, which, in turn, is surrounded by a piece of lamp-wick. When the whole arrangement is sunk to the bottom of a boring, the wick absorbs water from the surrounding earth and conveys it to the lime. Of course the lime gets hot, and heats the detonator. And, in half a minute after reaching bottom, the dynamite does its work.

The great advantage of this means of producing the explosion is that there is no flame.

Statues.

To the uninitiated it is always a puzzle to know how a bronze or a marble statue is made. The natural impression is that the sculptor, armed with mallet and chisel, chips his conception from a huge block of stone after modelling it in clay.

Such was the method of Michael Angelo, but to-day another manner prevails. The sculptor having modelled his figure most carefully, a plaster cast is taken. In the meantime skilled mechanics have prepared a block of marble. The plaster cast is placed beside this block and used as a model, the stone-cutters copying point by point, measuring the cast with square, rule and calipers. The cutting goes on until a general outline of the statue is had. Then the skilled artisan, specially trained, takes it in hand, making a most faithful copy of the model under the sculptor's personal superintendence and direction.

When this work is completed it only remains for the artist to give the finishing touches, a fine here, an indentation there, bringing the statue into nearer realization with his conception.

The Russian Royal Baby.

The little Grand Duchess Olga is decidedly a pretty child, and her roseleaf cheeks and crown of fair hair look well against the background of the large white pillow on which she usually wears her head which form a kind of halo round her dainty little head. So far she has no marked preferences, but seems to like everybody, and her nurse remarked somewhat dolefully that although her imperial highness was very happy with her, she never sulked or cried when she was given to one of the others." The one exception she makes is in favor of her young mother, and the hardest lesson the grand duchess has yet to learn is that she must suffer in silence when the Czarina leaves the nurseries.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Fork is 900 Years Old.

By the way, it is just about 900 years ago since the fork made its appearance in Europe. In 955 A. D. a son of the Doge, Pietro Orsolo, had wedded in Venice the Brizzantine Princess Argila, who produced at the wedding feast a golden fork and gold spoon. Then the high Venetian families followed suit, and these martyrs to fashion pricked their lips with the new instrument. The fork prospered, however, and spread over Italy. In 1379 it had travelled as far as Prussia, and in 1608 a traveller brought it direct to England.

Couldn't Catch Pat.

Lately, when an auctioneer was disposing of an insolvent tobacconist's stock, he was interrupted by a half tipsy Irishman with—

"Oi bought a polpe from yez last night for a shilling that's worth only sixpence."

"I believe that, Pat," replied the auctioneer, who fancied himself witty, "if you tell me who my father is, I will give you back the shilling."

"The father of loies, you ch'ating spalpeen," readily exclaimed Pat.

His Prospects.

Tom—Think the heiress will accept Jack?

Dick—No; but I think that after he proposes he will have a rich sister.

CU ING RAD HABITS.

A Chinese Hypnotist Performs Wonderful Cures With His Power.

Chicago has brought to light the most marvelous hypnotist of modern times, if the powers his admirers claim are really exist.

On the front of a modest little cottage in the pretty suburban village of Englewood, just outside of Chicago, is the sign: "Hypnotism. Cures liquor, morphine, tobacco, cigarette and all useless habits. Stammering in speech, catching of the breath, etc. Private call hour and cause trouble."

Inside of the cottage is a young man from appearance scarcely out of his teens and with face and hands almost girlish in their delicacy, who is said to possess the almost supernatural power which enable him to do all that he claims he can on the board sign outside.

Charles D. Bronyette is his name, and he is a product of the Western metropolis. He works on the basis that a vicious habit is the result of an idea that possesses a man's mind. He wants to do the thing that the habit calls for. If you remove the idea you kill the habit. And that is what he does—takes away the idea.

A recent demonstration one of the patients was a young man who was to investigate reasons he had for saying the habit have on him that he consumed 150 cigarettes a day. The Professor placed him in a chair and stood before him. There was no mistaking the genuineness of the hypnotic sleep. Then he told him that the use of cigarette habit was injurious and he would not want to smoke again. Upon being awakened he was offered a cigarette, but refused, and showed signs of disgust at the sight of what before been his favorite form of pleasure.

Another patient was a man whose red nose and bleared face spoke very plainly of his love for liquor. He was put to sleep and the hypnotist told him of the evils of intemperance, and commanded him to thereafter pay no heed his passion for drink. He was then brought out of his trance and when whisky was given him it made him sick.

A very similar case was that of a man who was addicted to the excessive plug tobacco. The same formula of telling him how bad a habit the use of chewing was was gone through. After being revived he could not bear the sight of plug tobacco, and even to look at it from a distance nauseated him.

The remarkable part of these extraordinary exhibitions is that the patients are still as averse to their old habits as they were just after coming out of the hypnotic sleep. They have no desire to resort to the use of them, and can account for it in no other way than that the Professor did what he said he could—removed the ideas from their minds.—New York Journal.

She Adored Too Much.

They stood silently in the moonlight. He had told her goodby sixteen times, and yet was he loath to go.

He kissed her, and she loved him—so he thought.

She had not told him so; but he was a very young man.

"Cholly," she lisped, "there is one thing I would crave. May I trust you?"

Cholly's tackles tightened, and he looked down into her lovelit orbs with the calm resignation of one who was willing to give up all for the woman he loves.

"Trust me?" he asked. "Oh, cruel one, why ask such a question? What can I do to prove my constancy?"

"Get a hair cut."

The words fell upon a dank, moon besmeared atmosphere with a dull deathly rattle.

Cholly's arms dropped to his side, and he walked to the front gate, speechless. There he hesitated.

He who hesitates is lost.

To the east was the barber shop. To the west, the football field. With a firm step and heaving bosom the young man gazed to the east and then to the west.

"I will not!" he exclaimed, as he shook his fist at heaven.

And then he walked away with an air of resolution. His face was to the west!—Up-to-Date.

Fort and Fortress.

The United States army does not recognize in its vocabulary the word "fortress." The nearest we come to it is call Fort Monroe "Fortress" Monroe. How can we blame the young lady if she shoots in this wise?

"Now Jamie, what is a fort?" Mrs. Teacher asks.

Jamie, having looked it up—An independent defensible fortification; a small fortress or castle.

"What is a fortlet?"

"A little fort."

"And what is a fortress?"

"A female fort, Ma'am."

A Burglar Reporter.

A professional burglar in Berlin found a new and original way of getting to the ordinary profits of the profession, says Pearson's Weekly. After the burglary he sent a full account of it to one of the daily newspapers, asking for the he received payment in the usual way. But he tried his plans once too often. The editor got suspicious and gave information to the police, who found that the amateur reporter was able to beat all rivals in the way of early information.

Very Reprehensible.

Wiggins—"I suppose you've been a poor God fellow died suddenly last night?"

Jiggins—"Good gracious, no! Why, it's too bad of him; why, he promised to keep me a fiver to-day, faithful!"—Tid-Bits.

THE LOST CURLS.

Miss Tabby was a stoutly built English woman about thirty-five years of age, who was accustomed to take a daily walk round Regent's Park every morning, between six and seven, unless the weather permitted. She lived in her "constitutional." She was a daily governess, and lived on a meager salary on which she supported her aged mother. It was the time when ladies wore curls such as those which so unsightly decorate portraits of the late Mrs. Browning.

Miss Tabby was by no means a beauty; her face was too broad, her nose too wide, her lips too thin and her chin one too long; but her teeth were white and strong and regular. Her eyes were the sweetest in the world, and such merry ones they were too.

Miss Tabby were false curls. She had some real ones, but they were few in number, and to supplement them she wore on each side of her face three red brown ringlets that dangled from a little side comb, so she had only to put the comb into her hair and there she was.

As I have mentioned, Miss Tabby was a great walker. It was three miles round Regent's Park, and she did it in an hour. She walked with a long stride and a springy gait, and with a certain beat of her plump shoulders that was quite perceptible through the rabbit shawl which formed the invariable wrap in the walking costume of that period.

One lovely morning, when the park was at its brightest dress of verdure and green at the advent of the early season, when the hawthorn, lilac and chestnut trees were out in bloom, delighting the senses with their beauty and fragrance, Miss Tabby pursued her walk precisely at seven o'clock.

The morning she stepped jauntily along, holding up her dress over her striped skirt quite unaware that there was a tall military gentleman not very far behind her.

"Fine walker," said the gentleman, speaking evidently at the lady in front of him. "She must have been a soldier at some time in her life by a sergeant. I believe she could keep pace with me, and I never yet found a woman who could do that; but then, to be sure, an old bachelor like myself is not often seen walk with ladies. What a terrible woman she must be to wear those stout boots!"

Just then the lady in front dropped something; it was a little blackboard thing, all wiggles. The gentleman stopped, looked intently at it, poked it with his umbrella, but could make nothing of it. He finally stooped, picked up the strange object gingerly on his first finger and thumb, and twirling it at arm's length, gazed at it some time.

"Looks like hair," said he aloud, for being a lonely old fellow he was accustomed to talk to himself. Diving hastily into his pocket, he brought out his spectacles, set them on his nose, and pulled the mysterious article minutely.

"By Jove, it's curls!" he cried, and paused after the lady.

Miss Tabby was startled when he overtook her, and taking off his hat with a grand military bow presented him with the ringlets. She dropped a deep, raised both hands to her face, felt on one side an abundance of hair and on the other a vacuum, and with a little embarrassed laugh put on her hands for the curls. After inserting them in their place an inspection satisfied her, for this London-bred maid was as guileless as a little child, so gazing up innocently into the old gentleman's face, she said naively:—

"Will you be my looking-glass, sir, and tell me if they are on straight?"

"Really, ma'am, I cannot tell. I am often not accustomed to such things."

"Ah, well," said the lady, who had by this time recovered her self-possession, "it does not greatly matter. I suppose I have still a pretty face. But to fancy what I should have suffered if I had gone through Camden Town on three stout curls on one side of my face and two half starved ones on the other! All the street boys would have been gurying me." And she shook her ringlets at him and smiled.

The general was a sedate man with very small sense of humor; but when Miss Tabby drew this picture of herself he remembered how funny she looked when he first overtook her, and he laughed until the tears stood in his eyes. Wiping them away with a great white silk pocket handkerchief, he said:—

"Do you know you have made me laugh for the first time for ten years?"

"Have I?" she returned, with a twinkle in her sweet brown eyes. "My friends tell me I have a faculty that way. But I beg your pardon, sir; I really did not mean to do it, and I thank you very much for my pardon, sir."

"The laugh has done me good," said the general.

Miss Tabby waited for him to continue his walk, but he said,—

"If we seem to be out for a constitutional, have you any objection to our walking together?"

Miss Tabby, with all her sweetness, had a great deal of firmness of character—what is called backbone; therefore at this question her long upper lip rose slightly down upon her thin underlip, and the smile faded from her face; she considered for a moment, then answered very gravely,—

"As I am no longer young, and you appear to be a respectable elderly gentleman, I suppose we can safely walk together round the park."

They began their conversation by talking of the weather. People in England always do this. They advanced from the weather to town topics, and finally becoming confidential, talked of themselves. Miss Tabby was rather aghast when she found she was walking with a man whose name was written in the history of the British Empire; but she comforted herself by reflecting that he was but a man, after all, and so went on as if nothing had happened.

"Ahem!" coughed the general. "Will you accept the shelter of my umbrella?"

The matter-of-fact lady replied that she would be glad to do so.

"Ahem! Will you be offended if I suggest that by taking my arm you will receive more benefit from it."

Miss Tabby at once took his arm.

They walked on until they arrived at the ugly little street in which she lived. Her home was a few doors from that of the Italian conspirator, Mazzini. It was to this dingy dwelling that the gentleman led the door, therefore Miss Tabby felt herself compelled to ask her new friend to take shelter in the house. She devoutly hoped he would refuse, but he accepted the invitation with the most cheerful alacrity, and followed her into the diminutive parlor where her mother sat at the breakfast table awaiting her.

Mrs. Tabby was the fac-similie of her daughter, allowing for the difference in years.

"Mother, let me introduce to you General Banning who has come to take shelter from the storm."

The general bowed over Mrs. Tabby's hand in his best Sir Charles Grandison style.

"You will excuse us," said Miss Tabby, "if we proceed with breakfast, as I am due at Hyde Park Corner at ten o'clock."

"Certainly," said the general seating himself without further delay at the table.

Miss Tabby soon rose, and donning her waterproof said,—

"I must confide you to the tender mercies of my mother, general, as I have a long walk before me."

"You do not mean that you are going to walk all that distance?" he asked.

"I shall take an omnibus part of the way."

The general rose from his seat, drew himself up to his full height—Miss Tabby thought his head would touch the ceiling—and said in his best military manner,—

"I desire, Miss Tabby, that you remain here until I fetch a cab."

It was not long before he became a frequent visitor in Camden Town, and by-and-by he ventured to take the ladies for a stroll in the Botanical and Zoological Gardens.

He never escorted them to Kensington Gardens; he was afraid of meeting some of his rich relations, who might make inquiries concerning the ladies that he did not care to answer. He had quite a considerable fortune, and although his brothers did not care for him, they set great store by their money, and they kept their eyes on him for that reason. But as for any attention they ever showed him, it never went farther than an invitation to a grand party now and then.

Things went on this way until the end of September when the fashionables had left town and Regent's Park looked very deserted, wet and dreary. It was raining as usual, one Saturday morning, as the general and Miss Tabby were proceeding arm in arm under one umbrella. After quite a long silence the general said,—

"Do you remember Miss Tabby, the remark I made about your walking when first we met?"

"Oh, yes! You said I was the best walker, for a lady, you ever saw."

"And did I not say anything else?"

"You said I was the only lady who could keep step with you."

"Well, don't you think, as we walk so well together, we might as well keep step for the rest of our lives?"

Miss Tabby hesitated and blushed. She had not blushed for years until that spring morning a few months ago, when the general presented her with the lost curls, and ever since then she had been troubled in this particular.

Usually when she answered the general she raised her eyes to his face; she had to raise them a long way, as his height was considerable; but today she looked down at his boots and remarked unconsciously to herself that he had his goloshes on, while she had forgotten hers.

"Well, Miss Tabby, I am waiting for my answer," said the general.

Now he had on an Inverness cloak; it had a very large cape which hid the plump hand that rested on his arm; he therefore thought he might safely give it a little pressure.

"Well, general," said Miss Tabby, "do you think your relatives would approve of me?"

"Bother my relatives!" said the general, "I am not going to marry to please them, but myself."

The lady finally gave her consent, and so it came to pass that a few weeks afterward they were married in the little church at Highgate by its unpretending minister; and the general's brother, the rich Indian merchant, and his family were greatly astonished when they received a very large envelope containing a smaller and more ornate one, from which they drew two cards tied together by a little silver cord.

On the smaller ones were engraved the words, "General Banning, V. C., Hanover Terrace, Regent's Park." And on the larger one, "Mrs. Banning, Hanover Terrace, Regent's Park."

Great was their consternation, and many were the disagreeable remarks passed upon the couple by those rich and selfish people; but they never knew how much happiness was signified by the little silver cord that tied the cards together.

MRS. JANE B. BOWE.

PRINCE GEORGE OF GREECE.

How He Saved the Life of Nicholas II. Then the Czarwitch.

Prince George of Greece is the second son of King George. He was born at Corfu in June, 1869. The young Prince is a tall, handsome, broad-shouldered fellow of unflinching courage. After completing his studies at home he started to make a tour of the world. His companion through India and the East was the present Czar of Russia, Nicholas II., who was then the Czarewitch. While they were traveling through Japan the Czarewitch was attacked by a fanatical Japanese, and Prince George beat him off with a heavy stick. Prince George continued his travels alone and visited this country, accompanied by Admiral Loman of the Russian navy. He crossed the continent from San Francisco, stopping at the principal cities en route and arrived in this city on June 30, 1891. He received a hearty welcome from the Greek residents here. The young Prince inspected the Navy Yard and the torpedo station at Willet's Point. He was especially interested in naval affairs. He travelled incog as the Count Folstor, and his courteous manners and unaffected disposition made him popular everywhere. While on the trip to Willet's Point he drank beer in the cabin of the United States launch Rumsey, and when in town travelled around in street cars like an ordinary citizen. He always carried a white natural wood stick, which was said to be his master stick and the one with which he beat the crazy Japanese who attacked the Czarewitch.

PRINCE GEORGE OF GREECE.

After seeing the sights here, Prince George sailed for Europe on the Cunarder Servia, which broke a crank pin when two days out and was obliged to return. There was considerable excitement aboard, but it was said that the Prince was the coolest passenger on the steamer. When the Servia got back to this port the Prince immediately engaged passage on the City of New York and sailed the following day.—New York Sun.

Valuables Stowed Away.

In one of the old London banks a box was recently found, containing money and valuables, which had not been opened or called for in 100 years, for which now remains without a claimant. Incidents of like sort are not infrequent in banking history, though there is no other recorded instance of a package held in trust remaining so long unclaimed. Some years ago the Merchants' National Bank of Baltimore discovered a box containing $10,000 in bonds of the Pennsylvania Railroad, the ownership of which could not at first be traced. The coupons for the preceding fifteen years were still attached. It was finally discovered that the bonds belonged to the Hagerstown (Md.) Bank, and had been deposited as collateral. The president of the Hagerstown bank died; the cashier was superseded, and the institution lost all traces of the transaction. The disappearance of the securities, however, always remained, an unpleasant mystery until it was thus happily cleared up.—New York Tribune.

In Trade.

Mrs. A. Quitt—So you cleared that poor Mr. Liftem from the charge of stealing that turkey? Well, I'm glad of it, but he's such a worthless character that I don't believe you will ever get a cent for your pay.

A. Quitt (the famous criminal lawyer)—I may not, but I've got a blamed good turkey out in the woodshed.

Where the Trouble Was.

"Brother," said the minister, "you should try to be content with what you have."

"I am," said the brother, who had been grumbling. "It is what I ain't got that I am dissatisfied about."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Grasping the Opportunity.

She—"Perfectly lovely club, isn't it?"

He—"Are you a member?"

She—"No; only married women are eligible."

He—"Ah! Would you allow me to—make you eligible to membership?"—Pearson's.

Somewhat in Doubt.

Old Gent (to beggar, to whom he has given a halfpenny): "Now, my man, what shall you do with that coin?"

"Well, I hardly know, guv'nor, whether to purchase an annuity or invest in railway stock. Which do you idvise?"—Tid-Bits.

Where He Got It.

Householder—Hi, there! What do you want?

Tramp—Nothin'.

Householder—Then why are you hanging about here?

Tramp—This is where I always gets it.—Harper's Bazar.

HOW THEY DID IT.

The Various Ways Presidents Received Chauncey M. Depew's Regrets.

Chauncey M. Depew says that he has had personal experience in seeking office—not for himself, however but for others—from every Republican President. He says that Mr Lincoln would always listen attentively to what he had to say, and then tell a funny story. On his way back to the hotel he would think over the story, and finally see that it landed his candidate way out of sight.

General Grant always received an application for office as toasts to the memory of Washington are drunk—standing and in silence.

President Hayes listened for a while, then broke out into lamentations that the attention of the President of the United States should be diverted from the great affairs of state to distribute patronage. Then he would make a memorandum in a little red book, which was to remind him not to do it.

General Garfield would put his arm around your neck, tell you how much he loved you, and then forget what you had asked of him.

President Arthur would listen with polite attention to all you had to say; then refer you to some man in New York, whom you were never able to find.

President Harrison would sink down into his chair until you had presented the claims of your candidate, and then change the subject.

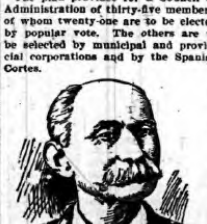
Major McKinley's methods have not been developed.—Chicago Record.

THE CUBAN REFORMS.

Outline of the Measures Which Spain Will Inaugurate.

CANOVAS, the Spanish Premier, has decided to inaugurate reforms in Cuba without waiting for peace.

The plan provides for a Council of Administration of thirty-five members, of whom twenty-one are to be elected by popular vote. The others are to be selected by municipal and provincial corporations and by the Spanish Cortes.



GENERAL GOMEZ.

This Council will arrange the local budget and prepare a tariff schedule under certain restrictions, a most important one being that Spanish goods shall be given a decided advantage over goods of other countries. Spain will continue to administer the finances in the departments of war, navy and the treasury, including the payment of the Cuban debt. But these cover 97 per cent. of the total expenditures. The farcical character of the proposed reforms is still more apparent when it is stated that there are to be no changes in the elective franchise. With only one-ninth of the total population of the island, the Spanish hold political control in two-thirds of the provinces. The new Council of Administration would therefore be, not Cuban, but Spanish, and by an overwhelming majority.

No wonder the Cubans reject with contempt such empty shells of reform. Warned by the past treacheries of Spain, the patriots will listen to no proposals of peace short of entire independence.

He Objected to Soap and Water.

Some of the Red Indians are almost as reluctant to wash themselves as they are to do a hard day's work.

A gentleman who was descending the St. Lawrence once met a poor Indian who had just come out of a prison. A more hideous and wretched-looking man could hardly be imagined. He was as limp as an old paper collar.

"Did they starve you in prison?" inquired the gentleman.

"No."

"Or did they treat you cruelly, overtask you with labor, or torture you in the dark cell?"

"No; the great white chief did none of these things."

"Then why this tortured look, and why is my red brother so anguished?"

"They made me wash myself. Ugh!"

A Good Choice.

Dashaway—"Hello, Uncle Jasper, I haven't seen you for a long time."

Uncle Jasper—"No, sah. De fac' is I'se so shabby dat I kinder hate t' 'pear 'fore 'spectable folks."

Dashaway—"Well, now, uncle, if I should offer you the choice between a good glass of whiskey and a pair of trousers, I've got up-stairs, which would you take?"

Uncle Jasper (scratching his head)—"Well, boss, dat's a powerful hard nut to crack. But I 'spec' if I had dat glass o' whiskey fuss', I'd be dat good ter myself an' so 'nuther givin' I'se dat pair o' pants, sah."

No Experimenter.

Perry Patetic—They say a man enjoys restin' a whole lot better after a good, hard day's work.

Wayworn Watson—Well, fer all I know it may be so; but I ain't round tryin' any dangerous experiments.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

SAFE RULES FOR BICYCLING.

Things to Do and to Avoid, as Set Forth by a Physician.

1. In purchasing a wheel take as much care to have it fit you as you would in obtaining a gown or a suit of clothes.

2. Be sure that when sitting upright you do not have to reach to maintain the ball of the foot on the pedal during an entire revolution.

3. Adjust the handle bars at a level which, when the arms are fully extended, will keep the body in an almost upright position. In riding long distances, the handle bars should be dropped a trifle, so as to increase the leverage by a backward as well as a forward push.

4. Before purchasing a wheel make an arrangement with the dealer whereby you may be allowed to make trials of different saddles until you find one that is perfectly comfortable, for a properly fitting saddle is the most necessary element in safe and comfortable riding. No one saddle will fit all riders; sometimes many must be tried before the correct model is found. Incline to a saddle that is stiff and moderately provided with springs, and which is broad and short, rather than long and narrow. A soft saddle, whether padded leather or inflated rubber, will always chafe when ridden a long distance. The pommel found on the majority of saddles is a very necessary adjunct; it cannot be dispensed with. There must be sufficient cut out at the sides of the saddle so that there will be no interference with the muscles of the interior and posterior aspect of the thigh on the downward stroke. This lack of common concavity to the sides is a common defect in the many so-called anatomical saddles. The most important object to be attained in the adjustment of the saddle is to have the pommel high enough to give the body a slight tendency to slip backward.

5. The average woman should never ride a wheel geared higher than 60 inches; the average man higher than 70 inches. Remember that the higher the gear, the greater the power required to make a given distance.

6. After having become accustomed to a bicycle, never take a ride so long that a good night's sleep will not entirely remove all traces of fatigue. Twenty-five to fifty miles a day, according to the surface of the country, should not be exceeded by the average rider.

7. Always walk up a steep hill; it saves your heart.

8. Never ride simply with the idea of arriving at the earliest possible moment at a given destination; ride for the pleasure that is to be gotten from it.

9. While riding use the same sense in drinking that you would in watering a horse. Also, like a horse, stick closely to water as a beverage. Remember that alcohol stimulates the heart and circulation in much the same way that exercise does, and that if you use it in any form while wheeling the reaction is speedy and long-reaching.

10. Never ride on a full stomach; it will interfere with the heart's action and respiration.

A SUGGESTION FROM PARIS

FASHION GOSSIP

If a woman would have the latest elegance in her petticoats, she must avoid the rustling kind and wear dainty, soft brocaded silk skirts, ruffled with silk crepe.

Narrow fancy belts are quite as popular as ever, and the latest novelty is of white leather, with clasps of gold and turquoise. The belt clasps are all more ornate than ever, being studded with rhinestones, imitation jewels and pearls, and fashioned in rococo designs of both enamelled and plain gold.

The new spring coat will have variety in style to recommend it, but the one which is expected to lead is the "Watteau" basque, with plait straight from and a plait in the back, and cut so that it outlines the figure at the side. Other jackets are on the order of the reefer, fit more closely in the back, and are either single or double-breasted.

SHOE EYELETS.

One of the Very Few Things that are Sold by the Million.

There are many things that are sold by the gross, and not a few that are sold by the thousand, but there are not many that are sold by the million. Among the things that are so sold however, are shoe eyelets.

The eyelets are made of brass, by machines whose operation is almost entirely automatic. Three of four machines are required to produce the eyelet in the form in which it is sold, the brass being fed into the first machine in the flat strips. As sold to the shoe manufacturer, the eyelet is turned down at one end only. The eyelets look as much as anything like so many little hats with narrow brims and without any tops in the crowns.

Eyelets are made of various sizes in diameter and of various lengths of shank or cylinder, according to the thickness of the material with which they are used; and after they come from the machines they are finished in great variety. Some are finished in white—these are silver plated; some are left finished and some are copper-ed. Eyelets are japanned in black or in various shades of russet; they are, in fact, made in any size and of any color that may be desired. Sooner or later the japanning wears off, exposing the brass. There are now made shoe eyelets that are covered with celluloid, which keep their color, but these are much more expensive than the kinds commonly used.

Shoe eyelets are packed in boxes containing 1,000, 5,000, 100,000, 250,000 and 500,000 each. Eyelets of the kinds most commonly used are sold, according to sizes and styles, at prices ranging from $60 to $135 a million. Some of the celluloid-covered eyelets sell for as much as $500 a million.

Eyelets are made for a wide variety of uses, up to the great eyelets that are sewed into the corners of sails, through which the sail is lashed to the end of the boom or yard. Taken them all together the number is enormous; of shoe eyelets alone there are sold in this country some thousands of millions annually.—New York Sun.

A DOG IN A NEW ROLE.

He Seemingly Takes the Same View of a Match as Mistress.

A well-known English actor is passionately fond of dogs, and delights in making them his constant companions. Seldom is he seen unless accompanied by one or more of his pets. A manager about to produce a new piece required the services of this actor in a special part, and therefore despatched his acting-manager to make the engagement. In due course the latter arrived at the histrion's house, which is in the country, and found him resting, after a long walk, in a large comfortable armchair. After a few civilities, the acting-manager proceeded to business. Was the actor at liberty? He was. Could he accept a part of such and such a nature? He could. And now about the salary. Well, the acting-manager thought they could give so-and-so. "What," roared the impulsive actor, starting to his feet—"what?" At the same moment from under a chair a huge bulldog thrust its head between its master's legs and growled and showed its teeth in the most ferocious manner. The startled visitor made for the door, exclaiming as he did so, "All right, name your own terms!" In the end the engagement was concluded. Some time after another manager called on the acting-manager of the actor's address. The acting-manager gasped, "Do you want him?" he asked. "Yes," said the manager. "Then, for goodness' sake" was the reply, "be sure to offer him enough, for he is living in the house that knows his terms."

And the Bill Was Paid.

As the gas bill of a portable theatre showing in a provincial town for a month had not been paid at the week's end (when it became due), a man appeared on the Monday night following to cut off the supply, if the bill were not forthcoming.

The doorkeeper remonstrated with him, pointing out that the manager was on the boards at the time, and could not possibly leave the stage for an hour—the gas man might call then.

"No," said the gas-man, obdurately, "I'm going to cut it off, now."

"Hold hard," said the doorkeeper; "I will go and tell the manager."

Disguising himself in a huge red cloak and great felt hat with a drooping feather, and with a sword at his side, he walked on to the stage with the words: "Behold, my lord, the man stands at the castle gate waiting to be remunerated for the glimmers, and if not seen instantly, darkness threatens us."

The effect (taking in the situation): "God, I follow thee."—Tid-Bits.

Exceedingly Easy to Acquire.

In the studio of one of our leading R. A.'s, who was showing his pictures to the Artful Dodger, a lady of fashion.

"Oh! what a lovely picture! How I wish I could paint like that! You ought to let me into the secret how to do it."

"Nothing can be more simple, madam; you have only to choose the proper colors and stick them on in the right places, and the thing is done."

"A thousand thanks! I will go home and start at once!"

A Unique Order.

An Englishman, with more money than education, recently sent the following order to a book seller: "I have sixty feet of shelving. I want ten feet of history, ten feet of biography, ten feet of science, ten feet of religion, the same of novels, and fill up rest with any kind of books."

GOLF CLUB OFFICERS.

GEORGE A. CHAPMAN SUCCEEDS GEO. P. MELLICK AS PRESIDENT.

The Finances in Good Condition and Seventeen Names on the Waiting List For Membership—Season to Open Saturday.

Very promising are the affairs of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club at the present time. With a good balance in the treasury and a number of names on the waiting list, the prospects of the club for the coming year are very bright. The annual meeting of the club was held last Monday at the club house on Plainfield avenue and it was attended by quite a number of the members. The report of the treasurer showed that there was a balance on hand of $226. The secretary reported that the membership of the club was full and that there were seventeen names on the waiting list.

A hearty vote of thanks was passed to George P. Mellick for his services as president and great regret was expressed at his resignation.

To fill the vacancies on the Board of Trustees, the following were elected:—George A. Chapman, James Stowell Anthony and John Doull Miller.

A meeting of the Board of Trustee was held after the meeting of the club and the following officers were elected:—President, George A. Chapman; vice-president, Albert H. Atterbury; secretary, John Doull Miller; treasurer, Josiah Browne; secretary of golf, James Stowell Anthony.

It was decided to open the golf course on Saturday and that an informal tea should be held on the afternoon of that day. Fourteen new lockers are about to be added to the men's dressing room.

AN APRIL WEDDING.

Miss Lena Weber Becomes the Wife of William Albert Boe.

The marriage of Miss Lena Weber, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Weber, of East Third street, and William Albert Boe, of the borough, was celebrated Monday at 7:30 p. m., at the home of Rev. C. E. Herring, who performed the ceremony. The bridesmaid was Miss Bertha Myers, of Yonkers-on-the-Hudson, and the best man was David M. Boe, of Brooklyn, brother of the groom.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride, which was attended by only the immediate relatives of the bride and groom. Following congratulations supper was served and the evening was passed in a social manner.

Mr. and Mrs. Boe received a great many handsome and useful presents from their relatives and friends. They will reside on Warren street, in the borough.

The groom is a valued employee of Patterson Bros., tobacconists, of West Front street.

SUING FOR LIFE INSURANCE.

Citizens' Mutual Disputes Payment to Mrs. Thomas Martin.

Suit has been started in the Supreme Court of the State of New Jersey by City Judge DeMeza for his client, Mrs. Thomas Martin, of Plainfield avenue, against the Citizens Mutual Life Insurance Company of Atlantic City, for $1,000.

Mrs. Martin's mother, who died at her home in Arlington, N. J., some time ago, was insured with that company to the amount of $1,000. The company refused to pay the amount at once, and stated that their agents were investigating the case. A question was raised regarding her age at the time when she was insured. The company refuses to give any satisfaction as to when the claim is to be settled, and so the suit was brought.

Pleasant Birthday.

A pleasant birthday event was arranged and given by Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Townley, of West Second street, Tuesday, in honor of Miss Theresa McGinley and their daughter, Miss Margaret Townley, both of whom celebrated the anniversary of their birthday. Vocal and instrumental selections, recitations and a phonograph entertainment helped to pass an evening of great pleasure. Those present were: the Misses Doyle, Meaney, Miss Mansfield, Miss Huff, Miss May Townley, Miss Connolly, Miss Theresa McGinley, Miss Margaret Townley, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Townley; Milford Giles, Adolph Giles, E. Townley, Robert Eick, Frank Eick, M. Owens, J. McLean, W. Newman, T. Schaefer and A. C. Townley.

Death of Isaac Jones.

On Monday occurred the death of Isaac Jones, of No. 137 Woodland avenue, of Bright's disease. The deceased had only been ill but a few days and his death was not expected so soon. He was born in Albermarle county, Virginia, thirty-two years ago and has lived in New Jersey eight years. He leaves a wife and four children. The funeral services will be held from the Mount Olive Baptist church, this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Miss Susan Kingman has returned to her home at Trenton, after a three weeks' visit with Mr. and Mrs. Samuel St. J. McCutchen, of Rockview Terrace.

A HOTEL LIKE A HOME.

JOHN H. M'VEY, PLAINFELD'S WELL-KNOWN CATERER, BRANCHES OUT.

Increasing Demands Have Compelled Him to Open an Annex, Which He Has Nicely Furnished, for His Many Boarders.

There is no more well known resort to the wheelmen of the Metropolitan district than McVey's restaurant, and the knowledge has been a pleasant one. McVey's Hotel is a new comer, but it promises to make for itself as enviable a reputation as the restaurant. John H. McVey is at the head of it and his knowledge and enterprise insures its success.

The hotel proper is located on North avenue, over the restaurant, while the annex is only across the street. To many, hotel life is not a pleasant one, but Mr. McVey has prepared to make life as comfortable as possible for his guests, transient and otherwise. The rooms have been fitted up well. Pains have not been spared to make the rooms look well and to equip them with durable furnishings.

In the hotel proper there are ten rooms, two of which are specially devoted to the use of transient guests. The rooms are fitted up with all the conveniences of hotel life. Instead of gazing at bare walls and ceilings, the guest finds the rooms handsomely papered, with the monotony broken by a picture or ornament here and there. The mantel pieces are arranged in a tasteful manner. The beds, equipped with woven wire springs, comfortable mattresses, and snowy linen, tempt the visitor to court Morpheus at once. All the halls, stairways and rooms are carpeted, and altogether the effect is decidedly a pleasant one on the guest.

In the annex, across the street, all three floors, with their eighteen rooms, are devoted to the accommodation of Mr. McVey's boarders, who soon overflowed his old quarters. The rooms are all arranged after the same manner as those in the hotel proper, and look decidedly comfortable. All the rooms are lighted with gas and heated with steam heat as in the other buildings. There are bath and toilet rooms on each floor, located conveniently to all the rooms.

On the first floor above the street, is a wheelmen's parlor and smoking room, and a place where they can wash up after their ride; a veranda is also placed at their convenience.

Of course, the rooms are not all alike, and some are more attractive than others, but then suitable reductions have been made in the rates and the guest can be accommodated in nearly any sort of room that he wants.

PASSING COMMENT.

The "Second New Jersey Brigade," in whose ranks a majority of those enlisting from Plainfield served, was the Brigade assigned to "Hoboken Division," Third Corps, and from this on (changing corps, Division, and Brigade Commanders, but remaining together as regiments) commencing with the "Peninsula Campaign" in the spring of 1862, to Lee's surrender at Appomatox in 1865, their history was that of the Army of the Potomac, and under Generals Hooker, Sickles, Mott, Sewell, McAllister, Ramsay, Price, Bowling and Dickinson, on the battlefields of Virginia, was shed the best blood of New Jersey's sons.

* * * *

"Steeple Jack" is dead. After climbing to giddy heights in nearly every State in the Union and taking chances for his life which frequently caused thousands of spectators to shudder as they watched him, he met the fate of drowning. "Steeple Jack" had a reputation as a daring climber that extended all over the country. He has worked at the tops of towering church spires and tall chimneys in most of the cities of the United States. He had rigged a contrivance of his own by which he anchored a rope at the pinnacle and then hauled himself up hand over hand, while gaping crowds of spectators below watched the tiny speck he resembled and held their breaths in awe. The man seemed to be utterly devoid of fear, for he would move about the loftiest steeples with a coolness that seemed like an invitation to death.

JURORS FOR THE MAY TERM.

Sheriff Kirk's Second Panel Drawn Yesterday Morning.

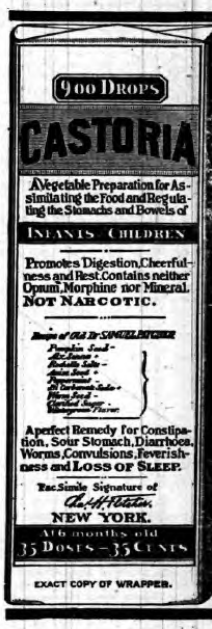
The petit jurors for the October term of court were drawn Tuesday morning at a special session of court, Judge McCormick presided. It is the second panel drawn by Sheriff Kirk. Undersheriff Clark assisted Court Clerks Norman and Higgins in recording the jurors as their names were taken from the box. The men selected are all well known citizens of various sections of the county. The panel numbers 54, and in part is as follows:

Plainfield—John M. Berkaw, Henry B. Paul, Charles H. Herring, John C. Holder, Charles C. Howard, Sylvester H. Peer.

Cranford—Lucius Bradley, James H. Severance.

Fanwood—Norman Dunn, Randolph Drake.

Westfield—Augustus K. Gale, Chas. H. Darsh, Harry N. Taylor.



SEE THAT THE FAC-SIMILE SIGNATURE —OF— Chas. H. Fletcher IS ON THE WRAPPER OF EVERY BOTTLE OF CASTORIA

Castoria is put up in one-size bottles only. It is not sold in bulk. Don't allow anyone to sell you anything else on the plea or promise that it is "just as good" and "will answer every purpose." See that you get C-A-S-T-O-R-I-A. The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

ROME AS IT IS TODAY.

REV. C. E. HERRING'S INTERESTING LECTURE LAST NIGHT.

Illustrated With Views of Notable Buildings in the Historic City—Mr. Herring's Talk Very Entertaining.

The audience that gathered at the First Presbyterian church Tuesday to hear Rev. C. E. Herring lecture on "Christian Rome," was an appreciative one. The lecture was illustrated with a very fine collection of views. The first lecture given by Mr. Herring on the subject of "Pagan Rome," was an interesting one, but the subject last evening was more thoroughly enjoyed, from the fact that it had to do with modern Rome, which has taken hold of Christian ideas and manners.

The views exhibited were chiefly churches and handsome buildings in Rome, which showed a very progressive spirit on the part of the people of that ancient city. The speaker told many interesting and peculiar things about Rome and her buildings, and especially interesting was the description given of the catacombs.

A very beautiful statue of Moses by Michael Angelo was shown and it was a work of art. Regarding the catacombs the speaker said that it had been stated that these catacombs extended underneath the city for a distance of 900 miles. This statement was inclined to be doubted, but upon investigation it was learned that such could be the case.

Regarding the Romans, it was said that they cared very little for charity until Christianity appeared, and this had made a wonderful change in the whole character of the people. This people, Mr. Herring said, were the greatest known for gambling, and they practiced this habit in all its many forms.

Another interesting thing spoken of was the many fountains located about the city. It is estimated that there is about 110 gallons of water for every inhabitant.

In speaking about baptism, Mr. Herring said that the people believed that a child must be baptized within forty-eight hours after birth. The child would be taken to the church in a wagon and if a blue ribbon was displayed it signified the child was a girl, and if it was a red ribbon it evidenced a boy.

Mr. Herring stated that Rome had made rapid progress during the past few years and was becoming more thoroughly Christianized. This fact was evidenced from the advance made along all lines of improvements.

Died at the Hospital.

The death of Louis Dannerella, Italian, aged thirty-six years, occurred at the hospital Tuesday afternoon from Aortic Stenosis. The deceased lived on Lake street until a week ago when he was removed to the hospital. He had been ill for a long time and his condition was serious. His death was very sudden and just a short time before he was feeling much better. Undertaker Casey has taken charge of the body and the city will probably stand the expense of burial as there are no relatives or friends to do it.

—VanBuren Brothers, of North avenue, have purchased a handsome new safe.

THE SQUAWS ENTERTAIN.

Paughcaughnaughsinque Council Gives a Pleasant Sociable.

A well attended sociable and entertainment was given in Salvation Hall, Tuesday evening, by the members of Paughcaughnaughsinque Council, No. 34, Daughters of Pocahontas.

A programme occupied the first part of the evening and was as follows: Overture, by orchestra; recitation, "Yes, I'm Guilty," by Miss Bertha Clum; song, by Miss Retta Nash; recitation, by W. R. Mattox; selection by the orchestra; recitation, "The Seige of Lucknow," by Miss Clum; song, by Miss Nellie Bird; recitation, by W. R. Mattox. Then followed an exhibition of character posing by Miss Clum. Her first was "Rock of Ages," and the hymn by that name was sung by Mrs. Virginia Leland and Mrs. Eliza Radin. For the others an accompaniment was played by Miss Ada Nash. The entertainment closed with the tableau, "America." Miss Clum represented the Goddess of Liberty, Amos Wilson, the sailor, and V. W. Nash, Jr., the soldier.

After the entertainment, the floor was cleared of the chairs, and dancing was enjoyed until an early hour this morning.

Besides the members of the local council and a number of their friends, District Deputy Emily Y. Coleman, of Elizabeth, and a delegation from the Nenemoosha Council of Elizabeth were present.

The affair was arranged by a committee composed of Vincent W. Nash, chairman; Amos Wilson, Miss Sadie Giles, Mrs. Samuel Terry, and Miss Sadie Wilson. The floor committee in charge of the dancing was composed of Amos Wilson, Charles Stevens and Wilbur Pendleton. The refreshment table was under the charge of Miss Sadie Giles and Miss Sadie Wilson.

CHILDREN UP AND DOING.

Juvenile Auxiliaries to Town Improvement Association.

An executive committee meeting of the Children's Aid to the Town Improvement Association of Plainfield was held Tuesday afternoon at the home of N. Pendleton Rogers, Jr., 518 East Front street. The officers are:—Miss L. Patton, President; N. Pendleton Rogers, Jr., Vice-President; Miss Elsie Goddard, Second Vice-President; Miss Leila Howard, Recording Secretary; Miss Marjory Flemming, Corresponding Secretary; Charles Robert, Treasurer.

The earnestness of purpose, and strict attention to the business details of the respective officers, were in every particular adhered to as with the most punctilious regard to Parliamentary rules.

These young people are deserving of the highest respect of the citizens of Plainfield, and it goes without saying that, like all first children, they will be the dearly-beloved of the parent association.

—On Friday of this week there will be a sale on the Elias Allen farm at Washingtonville of farming implements, etc. William N. Pangborn will sell the goods. Mr. Allen exchanged his farm property for a row of flats at Irvington, and the goods will have to be sold so as to give the purchaser of the farm possession at once.

AMOS H. VAN HORN, Ltd.

Real Inducements To Buyers

The Portland Range has nothing but best material in its makeup.

All goods selected NOW held until wanted at following reduced prices:

Parlor Suits

$25.00 Suits	reduced to	$17.50
$35.00 Suits	reduced to	$25.00
$40.00 Suits	reduced to	$30.00
$50.00 Suits	reduced to	$35.00
$75.00 Suits	reduced to	$50.00
$125.00 Suits	reduced to	$75.00

Extension Tables

A $6.00 make	$3.95
A $10.00 make	$7.00
A $12.00 make	$8.00
A $25.00 make	$16.00

Carpets

75c All-wool Ingrain to	55c
60c Ingrain to	39c
75c Brussels to	60c
90c Brussels to	75c
$1.25 Body Brussels to	90c
$1.25 Velvet	90c

$50 Bicycles for $29.

1896 pattern—that's why.

Bedroom Suits

$15.00 Suits	now	$10.95
$25.00 Suits	now	$15.00
$35.00 Suits	now	$25.00
$40.00 Suits	now	$30.00
$50.00 Suits	now	$35.00
$75.00 Suits	now	$60.00

Dining-Room Chairs

A splendid line of patterns in Cane and Leather Seat all at reduced prices.

Couches

Largest line in the City.

Corduroy Couches $5.85

Bedding

Excelsior Mattress for	$2.75
Husk Mattress	$3.25
Hair Mattress	$6.75
Bolsters	85c
Feather Pillows	75c

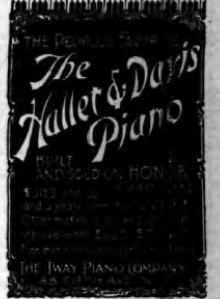
Portland Range

This popular Range can be had only of us—its without an equal—nearly 10,000 in use.

AMOS H. VAN HORN, Ltd.

73 Market St. Near Plane Street NEWARK, N. J.

CASH OR CREDIT. Telephone 580—Goods Delivered Free



A LOCAL Disease A Climatic Affection

Nothing but a local remedy or change of climate will cure it. Get a well-known pharmaceutical remedy.

Ely's Cream Balm

It is quickly Absorbed. Gives Relief at once. Opens and cleanses the Nasal Passages. Allays Inflammation. Heals and Protects the Membrane. Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell. No Mercury, No Injurious drug. Full Size 50c. Trial Size 10c. at Druggists or by mail.

ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren Street, New York.

CATARRH

An Episcopal Convention.

The women of the Episcopal churches of this city and vicinity are already planning for the Diocesional Episcopal Convention which will be held in this city in May. The convention will continue for three days and will be quite an important gathering.

Resigned His Position.

John Mengle, formerly assistant superintendent of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, in this city, and recently manager of the Home Building and Loan Association, has resigned the latter position.

Now is the time to purify your blood, and Hood's Sarsaparilla is the best medicine for the purpose. Thousands of great cures prove that it is the One True Blood Purifier.

Hood's Pills are the favorite family cathartic and liver medicine. Price 25c.

TRINITY COMMANDERY ELECT.

Jacob Kirkner Chosen Commander for a New Year.

Officers for the ensuing year were elected and installed at the meeting of Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., last Monday. The election resulted as follows: Commander, Jacob Kirkner; generalissimo, Nelson T. Dungan; captain general, Walter E. Freeman; prelate, B. F. Corlell; senior warden, Harry W. Marshall; junior warden, C. C. Howard; treasurer, C. H. Bugg; recorder, F. K. VanAuken; standard bearer, Edward H. Clevelay; sword bearer, Clarence Goss; warder, Robert A. Meeker; sentinel, Casper Bolsterli; representative to the grand lodge, John W. Murray, Sr.; trustees, Dr. C. Adams, Asa Collier and Henry Woodland.

Building Boom in the Borough.

Just now there is a healthy building boom evidenced in Washington Park on Myrtle avenue. John Abbett, Jr., of this city, has commenced the erection of a handsome cottage. A. L. C. Marsh is the architect. At an early date Councilman Harold Serrell, of this city, will commence the building of a home for himself, and J. E. Joy, of the Park, recently purchased a lot of the Cadmus estate upon which he will erect a home for himself.

New Open Street Cars.

The new open cars for the Plainfield Street Railway are expected to arrive here about the first of May. There are being made to put a third truck on the car house to accommodate them

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL XXX. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, APRIL 15, 1897. NO. 15

"Support the Constitution, Which is the Cement of the Union, as Well in Its Limitations as in Its Authorities."—Madison.

UNDER ONE TITLE NOW.

MOVING EVENT IN THE CONSOLIDATION OF THE G. A. R. POSTS.

Members of the Late Major Anderson Post Received by Transfer into Winfield Scott Post—Visiting State Officers.

One of the grandest re-unions ever held in this city took place last Tuesday the rooms of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., when the members of the late Major Anderson Post, No. 139, were admitted by transfer card into the membership of the former Post. At this time the hopes of all were fully realized and it marked one of the happiest events in local Grand Army circles. The re-union was accompanied with all the favorable signs one could wish for and there was a gratifying expression of fellowship on the part of everyone. In all there were about forty veterans and members of the late Post who joined Post 73, and with this number the latter Post now numbers among the largest Posts of the State, both as to the membership and influence. The new members were royally received by Commander McVoy, the officers and members of Post 73, and after the usual form attendant upon such ceremonies, the meeting was thrown open and a large delegation of the Woman's Relief Corps and Sons of Veterans were escorted to the rooms where they were cordially received by the members of Post 73. The combined forces made one of the largest gatherings ever witnessed in those rooms and so crowded were the quarters that everyone could not get in.

An unlooked for pleasure was the presence of Prof. Guttman's orchestra which was stationed in the front part of the room. These talented musicians enlivened the occasion by rendering a number of the most popular selections of the day. Commander I. L. McVoy, of Post 73, was the master of ceremonies and he performed his part in a very able manner. The first speaker introduced was Department Commander Abel, of Trenton, who gave the comrades one of the best talks ever listened to. Mr. Stahl is full of Grand Army work and whenever he is called upon words never fail him. He spoke very nicely regarding the union of the two Posts and hoped that the comrades would at combine in one grand work for the object of the order.

He cited some of the things accomplished during the past winter in the interest of the Grand Army. One thing was the establishment of a permanent re ident physician at the Soldiers' Home, at Kearney. Another was the securing through the Legislature of $8,000 for the erection of a home for the physician and the building of a suitable place for the residence of trained nurses. Several other improvements were noted, all of which were along the line of progress. The speaker's remarks were listened to with great pleasure. Mrs. Horse, State President of the Woman's Relief Corps, was the next, and instead of making any remarks she recited a very patriotic selection which was heartily applauded.

The presiding officer then introduced Rev. L. E. Livermore, who gave a very interesting talk. He spoke about it being the celebration of the eve of the assassination of Abraham Lincoln, and he said that the thoughts of it filled him with sadness. He was glad that the soldiers of this city had met and united under one standard and were now prepared to do the work before them. The women of the Relief Corps were grandly complimented by the speaker for many nice things were said concerning them.

The next speaker was Past Department Commander Sands, of Post No. 3, of Jersey City. He also complimented the veterans for the grand work they had accomplished in uniting, and he did not fail to give the women all the credit due them for their earnest efforts in helping the Grand Army.

The last speaker was Department Adjutant General Southwick, of Trenton. This comrade made a most stirring address. He deplored the fact that the children of this State were not learning the true history of the United States, especially regarding the time of the late war. He thought it was the duty of everyone that the children were taught who was wrong or who was right in the great struggle for freedom. He related many touching incidents and mentioned especially about the war flags which are now stationed in the State House at Trenton. His remarks were brought to a close by the reciting of a beautiful selection of poetry about the flags of war.

Commander McVoy then asked all to adjourn to the room below where a good supper was served by Mrs. Walter Walker, Mrs. H. S. Thatcher,

CONTINUED ON PAGE 8.

Y. M. C. A. HALL CHOSEN.

BOROUGH COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES TO BE HELD THERE.

It Was Decided to Follow the Old Custom and Hold the Exercises the Same Night as the High School Event Comes Off.

The North Plainfield Board of Education has finally decided the matter of selecting a place for holding the commencement exercises of the graduating class of the High School, and it is in favor of the Y. M. C. A. assembly hall. The date has been fixed for June 24th, the same night that the city commencement exercises are held in Music Hall. This is in conformity with the custom of previous years. This decision was arrived at, however, after a good deal of difference of opinion on the part of those in authority. Of course, it is well-known that Professor Warde made partial arrangements to have the exercises held in Music Hall, subject to the approval of the Board, on the same night that the city event was to be held. Mr. Warde, however, did not know at the time that he was conflicting with the usual custom of the Plainfield schools and after a time the matter was amicably arranged by Mr. Warde waiving the right for the use of the hall on the night of June 22d.

Then it was suggested to have the Borough exercises held at a later date in Music Hall, but the majority of the members of the Board were in favor of following the custom of former years and holding the exercises the same night as the city school. There were four other places proposed—Grace M. E. church, Warren chapel, Assembly hall in the public school building and the Y. M. C. A. hall. It was understood that the majority of graduates preferred that the exercises be held in the latter place. This was the decision of the Board.

A committee consisting of Messrs. Hallock, Honeyman and McGee were appointed to corporate with Superintendent Warde in making up the programme and to perfect all the arrangements

Fred N. Brown of the borough was engaged as census taker of the district.

It was decided to make umbrella stands for use of the scholars' umbrellas on rainy days.

The committee on teachers was directed to report on the employment of teachers for next year at the next board meeting, and it was voted to make a holiday of April 27th

COST TO RUN A CHURCH.

ANNUAL PARISH MEETING OF FIRST BAPTIST SOCIETY.

E. J. Waring Resigned as Secretary of Board of Trustees—Alex. Gilbert and Harold Serrell Re-elected Trustees.

The annual parish meeting of the First Baptist church was held in the Sunday-school room of the church last Tuesday. R. K. Case was chosen presiding officer, and the first business considered was the receiving of the resignation of E. J. Waring as secretary of the Board of Trustees. Mr. Waring has not served his full time, but he desired to resign his position and the same was accepted.

The report of Treasurer Alex. Gilbert was presented and it showed that through the regular channels of the church $613.91 had been received, while there had been expended $6,253 05. There are at present deferred payments to the amount of $814.52. The assets of the church amount to $1,041.21 and the liabilities are $6,81 1.92. Mr. Gilbert stated that for the year ending March, 1898, there should be raised $7,089.52 to meet all obligations.

The terms of Alex. Gilbert and Harold Serrell, trustees, having expired, they were re-elected, while the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. Waring was filled by the election of C. W. McCutchen.

The subject of making some needed repairs about the church was discussed at some length and it was decided to leave the matter in the hands of the trustees for action. There being no further business the meeting adjourned.

County Road Improvements.

The county road committee of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County, comprising Director J. F. Hubbard and Freeholders J. Martin Roll, William Swain, George Littell, Henry Krouse, James C. Ogden, Benjamin King, Christian Ehrlich, and John A. Farrell, were in Rahway Wednesday of last week to inspect the road between St. George's avenue and the Middlesex county line, with a view of having it widened and macadamized. The prospective improvement received the approval of the committee, and the work will be begun as soon as it receives the sanction of the board.

PRICE OF ETERNAL LIFE.

IT IS BUT TO FOLLOW THE SCRIPTURAL TEACHINGS.

Endeavor Evangelical Meetings again Addressed by Robert R. Galey, Who Enthused All Workers By His Good Words.

Is there anyone who can speak with the earnestness and loving devotion of a young soldier of Christ, consecrated to his work, and soon to enter upon active service in a distant field? Those who heard Robert R. Galey, a Princeton theological student, who will go out to India as a missionary in the fall, as he spoke to the large audience gathered in Trinity Reformed church Tuesday, will not soon forget the experience.

Since the beginning of the union evangelistic services none have been so well attended as this. The preliminary service for prayer, held in the lecture room at 7:30, and led by Ira Winthrop Travell, was also well attended, and was very earnest and helpful. Mr. Travell also presided at the service in the church, which opened with a song service, after which Mr. Galley read the Scripture lesson, and Rev. Cornelius Schenck offered prayer. Then came forward Mr. Galley and three other Princetonians, Messrs. Candee, Dickson and Beattie, of the glee club, and all theological students, and sang, as only college men can sing, "I could do without thee, O Saviour of the lost." After the offering had been received, they sang again, "Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow." Solemn and impressive were both songs, and fitly prepared the way for the burning words which followed, as Mr. Galley brought to his hearers the words of Moses: "I have set before you life and death; therefore choose life." The young man with the fine physique that made one understand his fame as centre rush on the Princeton football team, with his pleasant voice and winning manner, made a most eloquent plea for the choice of the blessed and eternal life. He spoke of the mystery of human life, of the great price which men would pay to prolong it, of that vital something that is within us all and can never die. He spoke of physical death, and of that worse death, the dying of the heart within us. Many men's conception of life, he said, was living to God. And Jesus taught the same, when He said: "I have come that ye might have life." The wages of sin is death, but eternal life is the gift of God. God longs to give to everyone this higher life; the angels and the great company of the redeemed long to see us win it. But the choice lies with you. Some day we shall all acknowledge Jesus as king; every knee shall bow and every tongue confess Him. But we don't want to be compelled to do it. How much better to do it freely, and with love! It seems to me there is only one thing for us to do; to choose life, tonight. It is a life of service and warfare, but it wins for us the incorruptible crown of everlasting life.

A short, but very solemn testimony meeting followed. The quartette sang "Where Will You Spend Eternity?" Mr. Galley urged those who were Christians to become more filled with Christ's life, and those who were without it to seek it at once; and many testimonies were given by those who had felt the power of Christ's life in their lives, or desired to have more of it. The benediction pronounced by Rev. J. O. McKelvey, closed a meeting of unusual interest, solemnity and helpfulness.

Need of a New School.

The needs of Washingtonville as regards a public school of ample quarters to meet the present demands is very apparant to all who live in that vicinity. There are 83 scholars registered and of this number 55 are regular attendants. The present building is entirely too small and inadequate to properly conduct a school. It is certainly to the best interests of the citizens in that locality to give the proper attention to educational matters and the need demands it.

Services for Holy Week.

The following are the services at St. Stephen's church for the rest of this week:—Maundy Thursday, Holy Communion, 7:30 a. m.; evening prayer and benediction 3:00. Good Friday, morning prayer, Litany and Pro-Anaphoral services, 10:30; Passion service, 12 to 3; evening prayer and sermon, 7:45. Easter evening, morning prayer and Pro-Anaphoral service, 10:00. Evening prayer, 5:30.

Donates a Bust of Homer.

Dr. J. Ackerman Coles, of Scotch Plains, has donated to Chicago University a heroic bust of Homer. The bust belonged to Dr. Abraham Coles, father of the donor. Dr. Coles' sister, Emilie Coles, joins her brother in the gift.

NEW PASTORS SELECTED.

AS EXPECTED, REV. W. C. SNODGRASS SUCCEEDS IDR. BARNES.

Conference Also Rejects the Proposition to Permit Women to Act as Delegates—Laymen Not Wanted Either.

The Newark Methodist Episcopal Conference finished its fortieth annual meeting Tuesday, having been in session since Wednesday of last week. One of the most important acts of the meeting was yesterday's vote on the question of the eligibility of women to membership in the General Conference. It resulted in the Newark Conference disapproving of such a course by a vote of 105 to 70. Action had been deferred from last week, and yesterday the subject was opened by Rev. Dr. Daniel Halleron, of Jersey City.

"We are touching upon a constitutional question," said Dr. Halleron, "and in constitutional questions we must go slow. I have no sympathy with the side that says women are incompetent to transact business of the General Conference. They possess legislative ability just as well as the men. I say, in the presence of this intelligent audience, that we cannot consistently and conscientiously vote for a change in this direction.

"Woman's hands are not tied in the blessed work of humanity and Christianity by being excluded from the General Conference. If woman is to enter the General Conference what can she do? There is no reason whatever for changing our constitution and admitting women to the General Conference. Don't impose a duty that the women, in their largest majority, refuse to accept."

The question of equal lay and ministerial representation in the General Conference was taken up after the vote on the women question, and after several short speeches on both sides the proposition for equalization was defeated by a vote of 115 to 55.

In the absence of Bishop Andrews, the meeting was presided over by the Rev. Dr. Henry A. Buttz, and after the various committees had reported, the standing committees for the year, as given in The Press last week, were elected. It was announced in reply to a question that the proposed change from four to five districts in the Conference would not be made. These trustees of the Hackettstown Institute were chosen:—The Revs. Drs. J. M. Buckley, Solomon Parsons and Henry Spellmeyer and Layman J. W. Jackson, of Plainfield, and E. L. Dobbins.

The report of the Committee on Sunday Schools showed 300,000 pupils, 30,000 teachers and 130,000 conversions.

By resolution it was recommended to the Missionary Board to send the Rev. Dr. S. L. Baldwin to China as a delegate to the semi centennial celebration of the establishment of missions, which is to be held there next year.

It was decid to hold the next conference in the Calvary Methodist Episcopal church in East Orange.

These appointments were made by Bishop Andrews of the Elizabeth district:

Presiding Elder, G W. Smith, Plainfield.
Bound Brook, J. W. Dally.
Califon and Fairmount, M. L. Rhodes.
Dover, Alfred Alling.
Dunellen, Joshua Mead.
East Millstone, W. C. Nelson.
Elizabeth, Fulton, J. H. Howard; Park church, F. S. Simmons; St. James', J. A. Owen.
Flemington, Wesley Martin.
High Bridge, R. B. D. Prickett.
Lebanon, J. B. Rhodes.
Linden Aldene, Supply.
Mutchen, C. W. Deanings.
Mount Horeb, (Postoffice, Martinsville), H. D. Opdyke
Perth Amboy, W. M. Trumbower.
Plainfield, First church, W. C. Snodgrass and C. H. Wehner; Grace church, H. J. Johnston; Monroe Avenue, W. C. O'Donnell.
Rahway, First church, W. T. Helms; Trinity G. C. Mouledoin.
Roselle, J. H. Timbrell.
Roselle, B. W. Elliott.
Scotch Plains, G. H. Winans.
Somerville, J. O. Winner.
Westfield, W. H. Bath.
White House, E. E. Roberson.
Woodbridge, F. G. Blight.

The Rev. Dr. Barnes, presiding secretary of the Sunday-school Union and Tract Society of the Methodist Episcopal church and member of Plainfield Quarterly Conference.

Rev. C. R. Barnes, who has been pastor of the First M. E. church in this city for the past five years, was appointed to Lafayette church in Jersey City, one of the most progressive churches in the conference. Dr. Barnes will move his family from this city to his new charge on Friday and occupy the pulpit Sunday morning for the first time. In conversation with a Press representative this morning, Dr. Barnes said that the report published in The News that he was a candidate for the appointment of Presiding Elder was entirely erroneous. He had no thought of such a thing. He thought the statement must have been a pure conjecture on the part of The News.

Rev. Mr. Snodgrass will move his family to this city from Newark in a few days and occupy the new parsonage on Central avenue, near West Seventh street. He will preach his first sermon Sunday morning.

AN OLD CITIZEN GONE.

PASSED AWAY IN THE HOUSE WHERE HE LIVED FOR 25 YEARS.

Dr. Stephenson, the Veterinary Surgeon, Died Tuesday Evening from "the Result of a Stroke of Paralysis—A Great Man.

Dr. Henry G. Stephenson, one of the oldest citizens of Plainfield, passed away last Tuesday in the same house that he has lived in for the last quarter of a century, after a long and eventful life. With his increasing years his health declined until he was stricken with paralysis six months ago. Since that time he has slowly grown weaker until the end came.

Dr. Stephenson was a native of England and was born in that country on March 8, 1806. His father held the responsible position of organist in the large Winchester cathedral, in the neighborhood in which the family lived. He studied for a veterinary surgeon and soon became an expert in that line. He married an English girl and they lived happily in that country until 1856, when they came to this country and the Doctor established himself in Jersey City where he soon made a reputation in his profession. He later moved to Newark and continued in business there.

Twenty-five years ago he moved into Union county and took up his residence in a house at 417 West Fourth street, corner of New street, which was then almost the boundary of the city. He became popular with the residents of early Plainfield, and was looked upon as the leading veterinary surgeon of the town. He was a staunch supporter of the First Baptist church and was among the oldest of its members. He attended regularly until ill health prevented him from leaving the house.

He was highly educated and had travelled much during his early life. He had passed through many strange experiences during his travels and often related some of the more unusual incidents of his life. He was an unassuming man, modest and of sterling up-right character. When in good health, he was full of humor and enjoyed being among the young folks. During his days of suffering, he never complained but bore all silently and as a true Christian should. He was well-known as a fine conversationalist, was well read and able to speak on several different languages.

His wife, who was his loving companion in all his joys and sorrows, died in 1889, and was interred in Evergreen cemetery, Plainfield avenue. After her death he continued to live in the same house. He had no children and no relatives living in this country.

Although never very rich, he had amassed sufficient property to support him when his health gave out and he retired from his professional duties. Six months ago he was stricken with paralysis and has been unable to leave his room since. His death came quietly and without apparent pain. It was merely a passing away from one world to another.

HORSES FRIGHTENED BY A TRAIN.

Two Lively Runaways on Liberty Street Tuesday Afternoon

There were two runaways on Liberty street Tuesday afternoon, and in both cases the horse was frightened by a passing train.

Thomas Emery, of Scotch Plains, son of William Emery, proprietor of Emery's Hotel in that place, was just climbing into the sulky attached to his horse at the corner of Third and Liberty streets, when the horse became frightened at a passing train. The horse ran down Liberty street to West Front street and thence to Scotch Plains. While passing Love Brothers grocery store on West Front street, the sulky came in collision with one of the delivery wagons belonging to that firm. The harness broke and the sulky remained behind while the horse ran right through town and home. No one was injured, although there were several narrow escapes.

The horse attached to Eugene Hoerter's truck became frightened at a train while tied in front of Claassen's barber shop on Liberty street, yesterday afternoon, and jumped forward, breaking the halter by which he was tied. He ran up the embankment and then started to run down the street when he was caught by John Sullivan and John Goff. No damage was done.

Royal Arcanum Anniversary.

Plainfield Council, Royal Arcanum, will celebrate the 20th anniversary of the establishing of the order in this state on Thursday, May 20th. A. E. Crone, Murray Burtis and J. H. Rogers compose the committee in charge. It is also the fifteenth anniversary of the Plainfield Council.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Bennett, of Lincoln place and Duer street, have moved to 127 Grove street.

MARKS A BATTLE GROUND

A SHAFT UNVEILED ON THE SCENE OF REVOLUTIONARY DEEDS.

The Boulder Taken From the Raritan and is a Memorial Dedicated to the 120th Anniversary of Cornwallis' Attack.

The unveiling and dedication of the Bound Brook Battle Monument took place Tuesday which was the 120th anniversary of the Battle of Bound Brook.

The monument is made from a boulder dug up in 1832 from the bed of the Raritan canal, on the borders of the Raritan river. It weighs 6,220 pounds and is 5½ feet high. It bears this inscription:

"This stone marks the site of the Battle of Bound Brook, fought April 13th, 1777, between 500 American soldiers under General Benjamin Lincoln and 1,000 British troops under Lord Cornwallis."

The erection of the monument is due to the efforts of Rev. Dr. T. E. Davis and several other patriotic residents to awaken the village to a sense of its historical importance. To this end the Washington Camp Ground Association was formed. There are now 80 members in the association, of which Geo. LaMonte is president.

The association derives its name from the old camp ground, where Washington spent the winter of 1778-'79, called the Camp on the Middlebrook. The association has in its possession copies of sixty letters which Washington penned there.

The dedicatory exercises were held in Monument square. There was an entertainment, with musical features, in Bound Brook Hall in the evening. Rev. Dr. Davis delivered an address on the battle of Bound Brook; Rev. Dr. J. W. Dally followed with one on "General Benjamin Lincoln." An address was also delivered by Austin S. Ott, president of Rutgers College.

Rev. Dr. Davis, who is the historian of the association, has expended much labor in gathering the historical reminiscences of the battle of Bound Brook. He gathered most of his information from the old newspaper library in Worcester, Mass., and spent a week in Boston to collect all attainable data in the library there on the early history of Bound Brook, which is one of the oldest towns in New Jersey, and was quite a centre of stirring events during the Revolutionary War. Boulders are being erected on most of the battle grounds throughout the country, and the association at Bound Brook resolved to follow suit.

When New Jersey became the battlefield of the Revolution, the Year of Independence, 1776, was closing with dark prospects for the young American republic. Somerset county, N. J., suffered severely during this winter from the depredations of the British foraging parties.

To shield the residents along the Raritan valley from these marauders Washington ordered General Benjamin Lincoln, with a force of five hundred American soldiers, to guard the Raritan River. Lincoln was stationed at Bound Brook, his headquarters being in the house of Peter Williamson, stationed in the eastern part of the village. This house is still standing, and is known as the Battery House.

The British commander, knowing the importance of Bound Brook as a military station, and the small American force defending it, planned for its attack and capture. A British force of about four thousand soldiers started from New Brunswick for Bound Brook on Saturday night, April 12, 1777, between eight and nine o'clock. General Lord Cornwallis was in command. The troops consisted of one battalion of Grenadiers, one battalion of Light Infantry, a detachment of Light Infantry, a detachment of the Guards, the light horse, two battalions of Hessians and the Yagers.

Evidently the plan of Cornwallis was to surround the Americans with two detachments of his army, thus preventing their escape to the mountains, and with the third detachment, on the south side of the river, to capture or destroy those who might attempt to cross. Each detachment reached its destination without delay, and the soldiers rested on their arms until morning.

The British waited until the American sentries' cry "All's well" was heard and the morning gun had been fired, and then the two detachments simultaneously rushed upon them. The guards were quickly overpowered. General Lincoln and his soldiers were startled by the fierce cry of his sentries, "To arms!"

Hastily arising, without taking time to dress, they rapidly retreated, passing through the fast closing lines of the two detachments of the enemy, firing a few shots as they ran.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 8.

KLEPTOMANIACS.

MANY IN ROYAL FAMILIES AND A FEW IN NEW YORK SOCIETY.

An English Duchess, a Half-Dozen Russian Princesses and a Number of Other Titled Women Among the List, Also the Earl of Derby.

Rumors that there is a kleptomaniac in fashionable New York society appear to have received some confirmation because at a recent noted wedding one of the guests was robbed of a valuable diamond tiara which was taken from her head. She did not know of her loss until she was about to take her departure. Both the host and the hostess are positive that no strangers were present at the function, nor any person not on their visiting list. The consequence is that suspicion points once more at that wealthy individual to whose society has for some time past ascribed a sort of diseased inability to distinguish between meum and tuum.

This person, who is, perhaps, more to be pitied than blamed, because his dishonesty is the result of a mental malady rather than of mere vice, can console himself or herself with the knowledge that there are in Europe many distinguished personages afflicted in the same way.

According to the annual police reports published by the French Government sheets were arrested in Paris not long ago as shoplifters and kleptomaniacs an English Duchess, the daughter of a reigning sovereign, and at least half a dozen Russian Princesses, as well as a number of other titled women.

None of these ladies was driven to dishonesty by want, for in every instance either they or their relatives were able to show that they had ample means wherewith to pay for the objects stolen. The consequence was that none of them was prosecuted criminally. They were released after the payment of heavy fines, which went to the Society for the Relief of the Poor.

The English Duchess, for instance, was compelled to pay a fine of $10,000. Her identity is as well known in Paris as in London, although the Parisian police were gallant in abstain from mentioning the name of Her Grace in their report.

One of the strangest instances of kleptomania was that of the late Earl of Derby, who repeatedly held office in the Tory Cabinet, and on several occasions as Minister of Foreign Affairs. He possessed from land alone a rent roll of $3,000,000 per annum, yet he was expelled from Eton for the theft of a watch, although his father was Prime Minister of England. In after life whenever he stayed at any country house there was almost invariably the disappearance of some piece of jewelry or of plate to deplore.—New York World.

The Gaelic Day.

One fine Sunday morning a tourist arrived at a kirk in Argyleshire, intending to enter for the English service as soon as the Gaelic day was over. "What is the Gaelic service over?" he inquired of the beadle.

"No, but it will not be fery long."

So the tourist strolled on into the churchyard, where the tombstones lay deep in the long grass. By and by he was recalled by the shouts of the beadle, who stood at the door, waving to him.

"But is the Gaelic service over?" he asked once more.

"Oh, ay! It will be over."

"But I have not seen the congregation; which way did it go?"

The beadle directed his attention to a solitary figure, slowly wending his way up the hill, and said, "That's him."—New York Telegram.

Bike Girls Can't Dance.

The bicycle girl has been forced to confess that the wheel is an injury to her. The young woman who during the summer and fall has had a daily spin finds that the dance has lost fascination and that it is almost impossible for her to make her limbs perform the graceful movements required by the waltz.

It has been demonstrated that wheeling causes the muscular portion of the calf of the leg to grow out considerably beyond its natural line, and any bicyclist will admit that after a ride of ten or fifteen miles walking is irksome. He hasn't good walking legs. His muscles have slipped a cog.—New York Journal.

The Fastest Woman Bicyclist.

Seventeen thousand miles of wheeling in a year! The remarkable feat accomplished by Mrs. A. E. Reinhart, of Denver, "the champion lady century rider of the country," gives her not only the satisfaction of knowing that she has outdone all her sister bicyclists, but also that she has accomplished a record few men could do. She closed her year's riding with no less than 116 centuries and three double centuries to her credit, a total of 17,000 miles.

A Good Story of Whittier.

The following good story is told of Whittier: He was once riding in a buggy with Lucy Larcom, deeply engaged in brilliant conversation on immortality. The horse became unmanageable, and, after Whittier had struggled with him for a time, he exclaimed: "Lucy, if thee does not stop talking till I get this horse in hand, thee will be in Heaven before thee wants to be."

An Australian Law.

Australia has no orphan asylums. Every child who is not supported by parents becomes a ward of the State, and is paid a pension for support and placed in a private family, where board and clothes are provided until the 14th birthday.

THE BICYCLE LEG.

Wheeling Is Not Conducive to Graceful Dancing and Is Commended by Some.

Expert wheelwomen as well as beginners are furnishing their wheels preparatory for the summer. The bicycle dealers are as busy as bees in honey-making time, and, although they do not expect to do such a vast business as they did last year, they look for a handsome increase from this time on. These are merely straws showing that the bicycle season is on.

The wheelwomen seem delighted to turn once more to their favorite pastime. For two weeks little knots of them have gathered and discussed wheels and wheeling. A rest seems to have whetted their appetites for bicycle talks as well as runs.

"Bicycling beats dancing, and I for one am glad to return to my second love," announced a dainty looking girl in an imported suit.

"Of course it beats dancing; but why do you say second love?" asked a plump brunette.

"Oh, because I danced before I wheeled," she answered.

Count that day lost whose low descending sun
Hath not beheld at least a tan-like tint.

"For my part, I've learned one thing this winter," said an athletic girl in a short skirt and a red sweater. "I've got to give up either dancing or wheeling. It's impossible for me to do both."

"The same here," put in three other girls.

"What on earth has bicycling got to do with dancing?" queried the brunette. "You dance in winter; you wheel in summer. Why they should interfere with one another I can't see. Of course, I didn't learn to ride until last fall, and——"

"That's the very reason you don't understand why we must stop dancing," interrupted the athletic girl. "You see, we've developed the bicycle leg."

"The bicycle leg," repeated the brunette, aghast. "What is it? I've heard of the bicycle face, the bicycle back, the bicycle brain and the bicycle voice, but the bicycle leg is new to me. Tell us about it."

"We've got it," put in three others.

"And you'll get it if you ride much," said the athletic girl with a malicious laugh. "It attacks women riders a great deal oftener than it does wheelmen," she continued, "probably because their muscles are more vulnerable than those of a man. I never rode much until last summer, and didn't notice that my legs had been affected by it at all until the dancing season opened. The muscles of my legs seemed to tremble at all the evening the first dance I attended, and I was really uneasy, for I thought I'd contracted rheumatism. My legs wouldn't act right, and I couldn't manipulate my feet or make them go. My partner noticed it, and some of them came forward for a second turn, so I pleaded a headache and went home. I was puzzled, but I didn't say anything to anybody, for I'd always had the reputation of being a fine dancer. I was the same thing at the next dance, and the next and the next, and at last it dawned upon me that I had the bicycle leg."

"I had the very same experience," testified another enthusiast. "I, too, used to be considered a pretty good dancer, but since I've been riding a bicycle I'm no longer a desirable partner."

"Why, how does wheeling affect the legs so as to make it impossible to dance?" asked a novice.

"Well, it seems we have two sets of muscles in our legs," explained the athletic girl. "One we use in all kinds of graceful exercise such as dancing and Delsarte movements, and the other we need in bicycle riding. Pushing the pedals develops these working muscles, and the others are overcome, and when you attempt to do the graceful act you are about as graceful as a row would be. The preachers who oppose dancing would find a good argument in favor of the wheel as a moral agency right along this line. Dancing is unquestionably a form of dissipation; if bicycling does away with that pastime, it will certainly do more than moralists have ever been able to accomplish, and I believe in time that it will. If wheelwomen find out that they have to give up one or the other, I predict the abandonment of dancing."

"And I predict the abandonment of the wheel," put in a man who came up in time to hear the last remark. "Wheeling is a fad with women. They won't stick to it, especially if it interferes with their dancing. In another twelve months they will have forgotten that they ever rode a bicycle."

A Valuable Man.

"We pay our minister $2,500 a year."
"Ours gets $4,000."
"Has he ever been star eyethee and nytthe?"—New York World.

KIN WIFE IN THE WORK E.

...Ending to the Life of a Once Lovely Woman.

A lady visiting one of the poor houses of London was struck by the evident refinement of an elderly woman in the infirmary, who was a Norwegian by birth, but who spoke English and other languages fluently. She had all the beaux artes of a very lovely woman, which years of poverty and ill health could not destroy. She was very reticent as regarded her past, but was so entirely a gentlewoman that the sympathetic visitor exerted herself to obtain admission for the invalid into a home for the dying, in which she might pass her last days in peace and amid congenial surroundings. Before her death the stranger told her story, and a strange and romantic one it proved to be. At seventeen she was informed by her parents that she was to be married, and, although she had no voice in the matter, nothing could have been more satisfactory. Her husband was handsome, cultured and devoted. They lived in a charming country house, surrounded by every luxury, and four children were born to the couple. The only drawback to the perfect happiness of the young wife was the long and frequent absences of her husband, which he attributed to business, but would explain no further. At last there came a day when the man returned no more from his accustomed journey, but sent his lawyer instead, from whom the bewildered and heartbroken woman learned that her supposed husband was the King of ——, and that, owing to the pressing reasons, the liaison should terminate. An adequate sum was settled on her and the children, and, wishing to break entirely with the past, she came to live in London. Many years after she married an Englishman, and shortly after the King died, leaving a lump sum to her. This money the husband got from her to invest, and ran off with the entire amount, leaving his unfortunate wife penniless. She had never been trained to any sort of work, and things went from bad to worse until, utterly destitute and dying, she became an inmate of the workhouse.—St. James Gazette.

Satisfactory Proof.

In county Sligo, among the hills, there is a small lake renowned in that region for its fabulous depth. The professor happened to be in that part of Ireland, and started out one fine day for a ramble among the mountains, accompanied by a native guide. As they climbed, Pat asked him if he would like to see this lake, "for it's no bottom at all, sorr."

"But how do you know that, Pat?" asked the professor.

"Well, sorr, I'll tell ye; me own cousin was showing the pond to the gentleman one day, sorr, and he looked incredulous like, just as you do, and me cousin couldn't stand it for him to doubt his word, sorr, and so he off with his clothes and in he jumped."

The professor's face wore an amused and quizzical expression.

"Yes, sorr, in he jumped, and didn't come up again at all, at all."

"But," said the professor, "I don't see that your cousin proved his point by recklessly drowning himself."

"Sure, sorr, it wasn't drowned at all he was; the next day comes a cable from him in Australia, askin' to send on his clothes."—Harper's Bazaar.

Centenarian Birds.

A contributor informs us that he has just received intelligence of the death of a raven, which bird had been in the writer's family for the last hundred years. The bird was a pet when his father was a child, in 1798, and had then been in the possession of his grandfather for some years. It is well known that the eagle, raven, swan and crow are centenarians. An eagle kept in Vienna died after a confinement of 114 years, and at Shelbourne is an oak, known as the raven tree, in which the same pair of ravens are believed to have nested for more than ninety years. Pennant tells us that "Taken about 100 years ago there can be but little chance of mistake, since they are annually "nicked," have been known to survive 150 years and more. —London Echo.

To Drive Away Rats.

A writer in the Scientific American says he has cleared his premises of vermin by making whitewash yellow with copperas, and covering the stones and timbers in the cellar with it. In every crevice in which a rat might go, he put the copperas, and scattered it in the corners of the floor. The result was the complete disappearance of rats and mice. Since that time not a rat or mouse has been near the house. Every spring the cellar is coated with the yellow wash as a purifier and as a rat exterminator, and no typhoid, dysentery or fever attacks the family.

A Fireproof Pocketbook.

An asbestos fireproof wallet to keep valuable papers in in the latest offer of fire insurance companies to clients, and in cases of fire certainly would prove to be very useful. The entire envelope, pockets and flap, also encircling strap and loop are of asbestos.

Smaller envelopes are also made by the stationers for single papers or cherished souvenirs of our sentimental age.—Chicago Tribune.

Couldn't Tell Which.

"Did he marry for money?"
She shook her head doubtfully.
"Really, I can't say," she replied. "I've seen them both, and —"
"Well?"
"Well, it's a toss-up as to which married for money. When you see him you think she did, and when you see her you think he did."—Chicago Post.

CURRENT COMMENT.

The President has found a refuge from the office-seekers, but it is only available on Sunday. They will follow him to the church door, but not inside.

A prominent citizen of Boston reports that he went to the inauguration and did not see a single intoxicated person during all the time he was in Washington. But, to speak Bostonese, the absence of such vision may be due to position, condition, omission or indisposition.

It is evident that strong pressure will be brought to bear upon President McKinley to alter the rules governing the classified civil service so as to throw open to the spoils-seekers certain offices brought within the provisions of the merit system during the term of President Cleveland.

Important movements are in progress in New York and Chicago for the regulation of the height of buildings. An ordinance has been passed by the Chicago Council, and now awaits the Mayor's action, limiting the height of buildings in that city to 90 feet. The limit under the present ordinance is 155 feet.

Yellow journalism is having rather a hard run at present, being thrown out of clubs and libraries right and left, with scant ceremony or politeness, in fact, with none at all. The directors of these institutions unite with an immense and growing number of the people in considering its conduct as contrary to morals and public policy. It is apparent that it must mend its ways or its swaggering rhetoricians will soon be barking to empty benches.

So seldom does a man live up to his ideal, or a commonwealth to its moral professions, that the congratulations of the country are due to the State of Nevada. Consistency has there set up its center of gravity, anchored to the utmost limit of public debasement. Having legalized prize fighting and thus defied the public sentiment and the laws of every other state on this subject, Nevada proposes now by additional legislation to confer a most flattering testimonial of its regard upon the successful brute in the Corbett-Fitzsimmons combat.

Secretary Sherman. It is reported, has been laying down the law about American rights in Cuba in a style that chagrins Minister De Lome. He is said to have told the Spanish Minister that Americans arrested in Cuba must have a fair trial, according to the terms of our treaty with Spain, and that Spain must abandon the distinction she now makes between American and English suspects, whereupon De Lome is reported to have said that he might as well go home. His home government assures him for yielding too much to the American demands, and the American Administration demands still more.

According to the statement of Professor Felix Adler, Miss Frances Willard wants to vote "for the sake of promoting the nationalization of business, the abolition of representative government, the enactment of prohibitory laws and the free coinage of silver," a declaration of principles calculated to invite the union of persons who in general are in violent opposition to each other. If she were endowed with the ballot and empowered to work up a crusade on the lines indicated, she would soon find herself at the head of a political sect more curious than useful, pulling all ways, like a newly-yoked pair of Accomack steers.

"Each season," the old hymn tells us, "hath its own disease." But one of the worst complaints of which the modern social and industrial organization is a victim is common, in one form or another, to all seasons. Bad roads are a perpetual evil. At some times they are worse than at other times, but they are always bad. And the curious feature of the case is that those who are neglectfully or wilfully responsible for their badness use them and have to use them when they are at their worst, while those others, out of foolish and injurious spite against whom the responsible people persist in maintaining the badness of the roads, have to use them for only a short time when they are in the least bad state.

Alabama displayed wisdom in exempting from taxation for ten years any new cotton factories established within her borders, and the first fruits of it are apparent in the preparations for the institution there of a million-dollar plant by Eastern capitalists, who have recently paid the state a visit to look over the ground and lay out their plan of action. The intention is to make finer fabrics than have hitherto been made in the South, which is an important industrial departure for that section, promising to help toward the solution of some of its most difficult economic and social problems. Alabama legislation, so hospitable to capital, stands in rather marked contrast with our own, which in many cases seems devised with the intention of driving it away.

A SOURCE OF WEALTH.

Gen. Stone Says Good Roads Would Prove Such to Farmers.

Cyclists are taking a livelier interest in the subject of good roads at present than ever before. President Potter of the League of American Wheelmen is one of the most earnest workers in the cause, and he is laying plans for an active campaign. President Potter and General Roy Stone, the head of the Good Roads Bureau of the Department of Agriculture, hold frequent consultations on highway improvement matters. Herewith is a report of a speech made at the good roads congress at Albany recently by General Stone:

"You are fighting and working, not for glory or scalps, but for practical results in the line of good legislation and good roads. Your endeavor should be to conciliate the farmers, while you keep the cities right for reform. You don't want to lose interest or to make enemies. You might succeed in passing good road laws in spite of the farmers, but you would have to depend upon the farmers at last for the execution of those laws. You must remember, moreover, that while you have the active support of the farmers in improvement, and have swayed public sentiment in this direction, the farmers have, in some cases, taken up the practical work of road-building and carried it out with marked success. It was the farmers who originated the system of New Jersey and who have carried it into execution, with its vastly beneficial results, not only in that State, but as an example to many other States. And it was the farmers who built the Canandaigua roads in this State, at their own cost, by direct taxation, and who followed the Legislature for the right to increase the legal limit of their taxation. Your effort then should be to keep the farmers with you, or, if possible, put them in the lead and yourselves in their support.

"In your discussion with the farmers and their representatives you can bring to bear this powerful argument: That it is time to do away with the cruel injustice which places upon them and upon the small fraction of the property in the State which they hold, the entire cost of building highways for the whole people. In the State of New York this burden is borne by one-fourteenth of the property of the State, and every measure which the wheelmen are advocating is in the direction of actually taking this burden off the farmers, instead of adding a heavier one upon them.

"It is enforced idleness that makes farmers poor, and no farmer need be idle a day on account of bad weather or wet fields if only his roads are good. On a good road there is always paying work at all seasons, and no farmer is just the time to go on the road. The French farmer never loses a good day in his fields, for he can do all his marketing and hauling of fertilizers in rainy times.

"What prosperity would burst upon this country if every farmer and farmer's boy, not at school, and every farmhand and team could earn a full day's wages every day in the year, rain or shine!

"When you have convinced your neighbors in the cities, and especially your candidates for public office, that the interests of the city population demand that they shall come to the relief of the farmers, you can go to the farmers with this assurance of help and ask them to take into careful consideration the practical measures by which this relief can be brought about and especially the measure for providing State aid and for the use of convict labor. It is only through State and county aid that the cities and villages can help. If you find the farmers aiding of the old ways, say to them that these ways are mainly an unfortunate inheritance from the mother country, which we brought away with us and failed to shake off when the system was abandoned there; and that to-day in Great Britain not only are the roads maintained at the general cost of the people, but Government loans are made for any specially heavy improvements that are desired. Two hundred years ago the great highways of that country were kept up, as they were kept up at last, just as they are in this State to-day, by local taxation, while they actually served the people of the whole Kingdom.

"Upon the convict labor question, let them understand that a thousand idle convicts in the prisons of this State and Sing Sing Prison to-day for exercise, whose labor, if properly directed, could provide the material for thousands of miles of good roads every year, and that the honest industry of the country finds the maintaining these criminals in idleness. These things will be incredible if told in England to-day. They would be a bitter reproach to our Republican institutions. And they would add another argument, and a most powerful one, for those who claim that our system of government cannot care for the economic interests of the people as well as a monarchy, it would be a fatal indictment against our institutions if it must be truly said, that a free people, in a rich country, could not get themselves the blessing of good roads.

Bernhardt's Teetotalism.

The actress, Madame Sarah Bernhardt, is a total abstainer. She does not use, and never has used, wine or and other intoxicants, and to this she largely attributes the remarkable preservation of her mental vigor and mental power. She drinks but little tea or coffee, confining her beverage mostly to milk and water. She is liberal with her baths and takes abundant exercise.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

Ten years after the United States of America came into existence, the Congressional library had its beginning. Congress was about to move from Philadelphia. The seat of government was to be transferred in two sloops to the District of Columbia. There was a fine collection of town but not much else in Washington. So they remained in Philadelphia, the Senators and Representatives made free of the Loganian library. When they came to consider the needs of the new location they appropriated $5,000 for books, and ordered a room set apart for them in the Capitol. The grandfather of the present Ambassador Bayard was one of the committee which carried out the provision. Two years later Congress employed a librarian at $2 a day to take care of the books, but stipulated that the pay was for only such time as he was actually at work. The early appropriations for the library were $5,000 a year. It took fourteen years to get together 3,000 books. Then came the British under Gen. Ross, entering Washington in 1814. They burned the Capitol and the library went up in flames. The next year Congress made another start by purchasing the 6,700 books of Thomas Jefferson for $23,950. In 1851 the Library of Congress, as it is officially known, had grown to about 55,000 volumes. A fire on Christmas Day destroyed 35,000 books and part of the Capitol. Congress made another start in 1865 and the library has reached its present collection of 800,000, and now takes possession of the finest library building in the world, which cost $6,000,000, and was nine years in course of construction.

A public building covering a block of ground and without a dark corner is something novel in architecture. Yet that is what the new library is. Such a result is made possible by 1,800 windows and by an arrangement of courts within the exterior walls of the building. The reading room is in the very center, on a flood of light pours in on the cheek-test day. It is under the golden dome. It is an eight-sided room, with the elevated desk of the librarian in the centre, and all of the apparatus for communication with assistants above and beneath. The desks for readers are in circles facing the librarian. The distance across this octagonal room is 100 feet. Rotunds is a better description of the room, for the ceiling is the vaulted interior of the dome.

Opening into the rotunda on the eight sides are alcoves, where encyclopædias, books of reference, dictionaries, and works for which there are almost continuous use will be kept. These alcoves are on the first and third floor. Readers will be allowed to go into these alcoves and consult such books as they may need. Sitting on his high perch in the centre of the rotunda, the librarian or his assistants respond to the calls of readers written on slips. The lookout's is a modern penitentiary. He not only has every occupant of the reading room under his eyes, but he can see into every one of the alcoves, which are open to the public. These reference alcoves will be the only parts of the building containing books to which readers will have direct access.

From the eight corners of the rotunda, between the pairs of alcoves, rise the massive marble columns which support the golden dome. Of these deep and richer colored marble than that which forms the walls. Forty feet above the floor a spacious gallery encircles the rotunda. From this visitors will come on sightseeing. It will look down upon the reading section of the library. Only those persons who wish to read or to consult books will make use of the main floor of the rotunda. All others must go to the gallery. In this way the librarian expects to keep the reading room a place for study without interruption, although he will have from 200 to 300 readers under his supervision when the room is full. On the edge of the gallery are stretched bronze lattice screens. On one side of the rotunda, between the floor and the gallery, is a marble clock, six feet across the face. From the vantage of the gallery the visitor will gain a comprehensive view of the workings of the library. Looking down, he will see the attendants call for a book to be sent up, be rotunda by way of a curtained aisle, and make known his requests on a slip of paper at the great central desk. He will follow the movements of the attendant to a telephone so quickly adjusted that a whisper will carry 1,000 miles. Turning about and looking through the large plate glass into the book stack, he will find the attendants on one of the floors receiving the messages sent to them over the telephone. He will see the attendant go to one of the book cells, take down the volume wanted, and drop it in a little iron box on the endless chain. Returning his attention to the centre of the rotunda, the visitor will presently have the satisfaction of seeing the book come up from beneath the floor in the rear of the librarian's desk, and deposit the book there for the intending reader.

Between the utilities and the artistic magnificence of the scene the visitor may be lost in admiration. Below will be the busy scene of the library in full. Around above are the richly tinted marble columns and walls extending upward to the interior of the dome.

"The present capacity of the parts of the library finished off," said Mr. Spofford, "is about 1,800,000 volumes. If all of the space of each floor not at present used was to be fitted up for the storage of books, the building would hold 3,000,000 volumes. Moreover, possibly may build book stacks in the spacious courts to contain 2,000,000 more without any violence to the uses or architectural symmetry of the present edifice."—SENATOR.

ADVICE.

Don't go chillun, an' mock yoh feet!
Don't nok glum to-de folks you meet,
Kaze yoh ears sho' ent sticks,
An' yoh no mo' wukk foh ter laugh dan cry.
Dat is step wif de hurryin' throng
Sich o' mopin' erlong.

When de bother comes an' yoh chance seems
Fur make it wuss of yoh face gets sad,
Grin it an' make it run! Dat's de tale
It comes ter winnin' yer friends will tell
Ter wunk yoh grahments an' hum er song,
Sich o' mopin' erlong.
—Washington Star.

THE PASTOR'S STORY.

The clergyman was a very prudent man, and feared to tell anything which might bring him trouble; then he had all a sense of honor that he was not willing to say anything that could be construed into a violation of confidence. As however, a certain wedding had been the talk of the parties themselves, and the particulars were known in the town where he formerly resided, he thought he might without impropriety tell a party of other clergymen the story of old Doctor Benjamin Tillotson, who, burying three wives, engaged himself to the only daughter of a rich farmer living some three miles from a certain village.

Miss Maria Cutting had arrived at the age of maturity, and as far as years were concerned was a fitting companion for the man who had been obliged to bury three wives in as many years before, he had married his first wife, Doctor Benjamin Tillotson, as he was named in the papers—but "old Doc Ben" in the stores, behind his back—was a man who was careful to have his speech, deportment, dress and characteristics in general, as straight as an arrow—six feet and two inches in height—and when he moved along the street his walk was as measured as his language.

He desired to be strictly obedient to all the proprieties. He always lifted his hat to the ladies whom he met. At a dinner party he sat erect, and told his two or three stories in great detail and in true Johnsonian style. He had the greatest admiration for the learned Doctor Johnson, and regretted the short, brief, one-way address of the day, and was as furious as his calm exterior would permit when any preacher bordered on pleasantry.

Notwithstanding his adherence to old customs and manners he was a keen and lively physician. He travelled far and wide, and whether seen by night or by day sat erect, holding his reins tightly, and was never taken at a disadvantage by even the most spirited of his horses.

Once he was thrown out of his sleigh in passing through a snowdrift; his body even then was not thrown into hopeless confusion, but maintained its accustomed posture, and as his horses were well trained, he never was obliged to lose his dignity.

He arrived every morning at break of day, and smoothed his hair so carefully and mysteriously that it was never seen in disorder. His black broadcloth suit never had a particle of dust on it as he was seen in the porch, or when, after a long trip, he entered the house of a patient. He was immaculate in dress, ceremonious in manner, measured in speech, and attentive to the sick.

Miss Cutting's father was an old gentleman somewhere between eighty and ninety years of age, and was in constant need of medical assistance, so that Doctor Tillotson was a frequent visitor at the "Lodge," the home of the Cuttings. Maria was a very particular housekeeper, and a great manager of the large estate. Since the death of her mother and the infirmity of her father, not only did she attend to the running of the house, but to the affairs of the dairy and the livestock, all of which were well managed.

She was a pronounced lady in waiting—an "unappropriated blessing," as she loved to call herself. She once said that as Doctor Tillotson was a frequent visitor at the "Lodge," the home of the Cuttings,

The Constitutionalist.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

PRAISE FOR SENATOR REED.

Somerset's representatives in the Legislature acquitted themselves well during the session just closed. Senator Reed was very successful with his bills. But aside from these measures in which he was personally interested he took a very creditable part in all legislation. His speeches were effective, and listened to carefully. As chairman of the Committee on Borough, he did most of the work in assisting ex-Assemblyman Skinner in framing the general borough act, which was regarded as one of the most important measures of the session. That it was the work done that even when the bill finally came to a vote, there was no opposition to it. Senator Reed did not vote for the Jersey City so-called equal taxation bill, nor did he sanction any extravagant appropriation measures. In fact, the Senator looked well after the interests of the county, and helped to defeat a number of bad bills.—Unionist-Gazette.

THE AVENUE OPENING.

We are glad to observe that the city officials are at last making an energetic effort to push to a consummation the opening of Watchung avenue to Green brook and there be joined to the borough improvement by a bridge which the Union and Somerset county Freeholders have signified their willingness to erect during the coming year. Thousands of dollars have been spent in the preliminary work thus far and thousands more are involved in land values for which the property owners have paid dearly to acquire the right to. In a few days Collector Bird will send notices to all property owners who are included in the benefits and damages, that if their assessment is paid within forty days after April 4th it will not bear interest; if paid within six months the assessment will bear six per cent., and after that period eight per cent. will be charged. However, those who do not pay their assessments within thirty days will be proceeded against by the sale of real estate or other manner as prescribed by the Corporation Counsel, the interest being charged and added to the assessment at the above rates. It is probable that the Common Council will call a special meeting very soon to take up the matter of opening and endeavor to have it in shape so as to have the Board of Freeholders make the appropriation for the bridge this year.

UNIFORM STUDY.

A uniform course of study in the public schools is a need that every parent recognizes who has had occasion to move from one locality to another with children of school age. At the State Council of Education, Oliver C. Mordorf said in reference to the subject:

Although the New Jersey school law implies that subjects such as reading, spelling, writing, arithmetic, grammar, geography and American history shall constitute the minimum for the State, yet much indefiniteness often exists. Usually each district or city has a course of its own. There is, under existing conditions, no just proportion of time or effort given to the same studies in different districts. Pupils moving from one section of the State to another would be more easily adjusted to the new environnement. It is manifest that under the former system the "transient pupil" has lost at least a year consequent upon diversity in course of study. This "transient pupil" is for the most part the child of poverty, and needs more than any other the fostering care of the State that he may be advanced educationally to the position of intelligent citizenship. To tolerate or to produce illiteracy is suicidal to the State.

A DAMPER TO WELCOMING.

Of course, it is only Plainfield's misfortune that it rains every time a public celebration or event is arranged to be held here, but to say the least it is rather discouraging for those who exert themselves that the city as a whole may do its share at entertaining. While the reunion of the Second New Jersey Brigade Friday was all the success that could be expected with such a display of the elements, yet how much better it would have been to both visitor and citizen had the day been a fair one.

THE MARTIN ACT.

The invoking of the provisions of the Martin Act to collect the delinquent taxes of Plainfield will be far reaching in their effects on many property owners. An idea of what is to be done by the city officials was given in The Press yesterday; the article commends itself to every taxpayer that he may know how to act if he is of the unlucky ones who are in arrears.

John W. Murray, Jr., of West Fourth street, has recovered from a recent injury to his foot.

THE HANCOCK BOOM.

On top of Senator Voorhees' apparently wild break for liberty comes the quiet launching of the Hancock boom for Governor, says a Trenton correspondent. It is no new boom any more. The controller is as strong a man as there is in the party, from a personal popularity standpoint, at least, and if the battle for delegates were a simple stand-up encounter he could probably win with one hand tied behind him. By the same token that other boom for Congressman Loundenslager, of the First district, probably means more than appears in cold type. To all his constituents the Congressman is the same jovial "Harry" who humbly presided over the County Clerk's office at Woodbury six or seven years ago, and the fact that he broke all established rules in his district by going back to Congress for a third term has not changed him one whit. He is likewise strong with the party managers, and if these men, joined by Congressman Mahlon Pitney, of the Fourth district, were to lock arms to capture the Executive chair for one of them a mighty strong triumvirate they would make. Some of the present leaders are growing old. They will soon be stepping aside to give way to more vigorous and younger men and the Republicans might go a long way before finding three more worthy to take up the burdens.

NEW JERSEY'S LIBEL LAWS.

The libel laws of the State have been changed in one proper particular. The new law provides that "any person who wilfully states, delivers or transmits by any means whatever to the manager, editor, publisher or reporter of any newspaper, magazine, publication, periodical or serial, for publication therein, any libelous statements, untrue in fact, concerning any person or corporation, and thereby secures the actual publication of the same, is hereby declared guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $500, or by imprisonment at hard labor not exceeding two years, or both. In every action for libel the defendant may give proof of intention, and unless the plaintiff shall prove either malice in fact or that the defendant, after having been requested by him in writing to retract the libelous charge in as public a manner as that in which it was made, failed to do so within a reasonable time, he shall recover only his actual damage proved and specially alleged in the declaration." This lays the damage for libel upon the author of the libellous article, as well as upon the editor who publishes it, especially when the latter acts in good faith.—Elizabeth Journal.

A PRETENSE.

The decision of the Common Council to increase the salary of the Street Commissioner from $1,000 to $1,200, after it had been reduced to $1,000 from $1,750, proves that what The Press maintained at the time the reduction was proposed is now realized by the Councilmen themselves—that it was unfair and poor policy for the local government to expect a competent man to perform the duties and assume the responsibilities required of a Street Commissioner for the salary of $1,000 per annum. There is a feeling, however, that the Council has not acted in an entirely straightforward manner in this respect, for after having made a pretentious effort at economy in this one particular case they follow it up with an increase that was not hinted at the time Mr. Gavett was selected. So far as Mr. Gavett's services are concerned, we feel that the increase is only deserving. But the Council might have acted at first as it really intended to do at last.

RESULT OF ELECTIONS.

The elections in several New Jersey places yesterday were about evenly divided in victories for Democrats and Republicans. In Jersey City the Democrats redeemed the control of most of the offices from the Republicans. In Hoboken they also carried the day, and at Newark made great gains. Orange showed up well in the Democratic column. Of the large cities, Trenton was the only one to go Republican. Mayor Williamson was re-elected in New Brunswick by a majority of 400 over Robert L. Hoagland, the Democratic candidate. The Democrats, however, elected the majority of the members in the Common Council and the Board of Freeholders in the six wards, and will retain control of both bodies.

Two years ago R. J. Warren, a druggist at Pleasant Brook N. Y., bought a small supply of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He sums up the result as follows: "At that time the goods were unknown in this section; to-day Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is a household word." It is the same in hundreds of communities. Wherever the good qualities of Chamberlains Cough Remedy become known the people will have nothing else. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

ADIEU TO SOCIAL SEASON

LAST MEETING OF THE SATURDAY NIGHT EUCHRE CLUB.

Entertained by Mr. and Mrs. DeLong, of Sandford Avenue—Mr. DeLong's Review of the Club War Humorous.

The last meeting of the Saturday Night Euchre Club for the season was an unusually pleasant one. Mr. and Mrs. DeLong, of Sandford avenue, were the host and hostess and the members of the club all declared that they had never enjoyed themselves better. This being the last of a series of pleasant gatherings the event was made even more suspicious than the previous ones. Those who were fortunate in securing prizes were Mrs. W. R. Codington, first lady's, a half-dozen solid silver spoons; Mrs. Robt. Dryden, second lady's, a Limoges salad dish. Nicholas Terhune was awarded the first prize for the men, a sterling silver clothes brush, while a china tobacco jar was presented to Mr. Salkeld as second prize.

After this part of the programme Mr. DeLong gave his guests a rich treat by addressing them in a humorous manner. His remarks took the shape of a review of the work of the club and he introduced a quality of humor that was really enjoyable. Nearly all of the members were called to account in some way to complete the history. The members and officers of the club were thanked for their faithfulness in making the season a success. Mr. Terhune reponded to the remarks made by Mr. DeLong, and he, like the former, was very original in his remarks.

Mr. DeLong, during the evening, favored his guests with several selections on a symphony, which added not a little to the evening's enjoyment. The closing feature was the sumptuous supper, which was all to be desired.

On Tuesday evening, April 20th, the members will enjoy a theatre party to New York. This will close the season, which has been so pleasant and successful.

Those who were guests of the club Saturday evening were Mr. and Mrs. Wilson G. Terry, of New York, and Mr. Terriberry, of this city.

WITNESSES FOR CHRIST.

Subject of E. E. Anthony's Evangelical Talk Saturday Night.

Those who attended the union evangelistic service held in Trinity Reformed church, Saturday night, heard a short but solemn and impressive talk from E. E. Anthony, and two solos by Wm. N. Runyon. The Scripture reading and prayer were by Rev. J. O. Mc Kelvey, after which Mr. Runyon sang "My Saviour First of All," in a manner which carried the message straight to his hearers' hearts. Mr. Anthony's talk had for its subject "Witnesses for Christ." He drew a vivid picture of the trial of Jesus, when not one of all those whom he had helped came forward to speak a word for Him; and then urged all Christians of the present day to be ready to witness for their Lord. An opportunity for witnessing was then given and a number of those present told what Christ had been to them. The solemn impression was heightened by Mr. Runyon's singing of "Saved by Grace," and the service was closed by the tender words of the benediction, pronounced by Mr. McKelvey.

It is not a remedy put up by any Tom, Dick or Harry; it is compounded by expert pharmacists. Ely Bros. offer a 10 cent trial size. Ask your druggist. Full size Cream Balm 50 cents. We mail it. ELY BROS., 56 Warren St., N. Y. City. Since 1861 I have been a great sufferer from catarrh. I tried Ely's Cream Balm and to all appearances am cured. Terrible headaches from which I had long suffered are gone.—W. J. Hitchcock, late Major U. S. Vol. and A. A. Gen., Buffalo, N. Y.

Eight Baptized.

The Filmore Baptist church baptized eight converts in the Mount Olive Baptist church Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The services were very impressive. The sermon was preached by Rev. P. S. Gibson, pastor of the latter church, on "The Doctrine of Baptism." In the evening at the Filmore church the pastor received sixteen persons into membership by the right hand of fellowship.

Record of the Civil War.

Major Anderson Post, No. 109, of the Grand Army, has presented to the Free Public Library the valuable official "Record of officers and men of New Jersey in the civil war." The work is in two folio volumes, and contain the name of every Jerseyman enlisted in the war of the rebellion. It will be placed in the reference department.

Spring medicine is a necessity which Hood's Sarsaparilla grandly supplies. It purifies and vitalizes the blood and thus gives tone and strength to the whole system.

Hood's Pills are the only pills to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla. Cure all liver ills.

PARKS MET THEIR MATCH

THE BIG FOUR LOSE AT WHIST WITH THE HAMILTONS.

The Luck Seemed to be With the Quaker City Players, for They Beat the Plainfield Players at Every Turn in the Game.

The famous whist team of the Park Club, of this city, proved an easy prey to the Hamilton Club, of Philadelphia, in their match for the National trophy Saturday afternoon and evening.

The Parks were fairly outplayed, but the large score by which they were defeated is partially accounted for by the strange hoodoo that seemed to hang over their heads. The luck lay entirely with the Hamiltons, so that even the players on that side remarked upon it.

The Parks challenged for the National trophy sometime ago, but their turn to play did not come until last Saturday. While by no means certain of victory, the Parks looked forward with eagerness to the chance of meeting with such worthy opponents as the Hamiltons, one of the best, if not the best, of the whist teams of the country.

The match was played in the clubhouse of the Hamiltons at Fourty-first and Spruce streets, Philadelphia. One section of twenty-four boards was played in the afternoon, and another section of the same size in the evening. Between the two the visitors were entertained right royally at dinner by their opponents. The Hamiltons won the first section by twelve points, and then after the rest returned to the game with renewed interest. The second section was won by the Philadelphia team by an even higher score, sixteen points, making a total of twenty-eight points by which the Parks were defeated.

The Hamilton team was composed of Messrs. Remak, Work, Ballard and Mogridge. The regular Park Club team was present, Messrs. Rogers, McCutchen, Howell and Townsend. Senator Charles A. Reed accompanied the Parks and acted as referee.

The game that the Parks played was not up to its usual standard, while the Hamiltons were playing in winning form. And then the luck was always in favor of the home club. There is no doubt but that the Hamiltons would have won in any event, but the remarkable luck they they had helped them materially to swell the score to twenty-eight points. Mr. Remak, captain of the Hamiltons, one of the oldest players in the country, told Senator Reed, who is a personal friend of his, that in all his career in whist matches he had never seen a game in which the luck was so absolutely in favor of one team and against the other as in this match.

In comparing the past record of the two clubs it will be seen that they are classed very close together, and that there must have been some prevailing favor to make the score so uneven. Both clubs were dealed by the American Whist Club, of Boston, the Hamiltons by five tricks and the Parks by one trick.

NEW LOCAL INDUSTRY.

A Company Organized to Manufacture Robert Jahn's Composition.

Papers have been filed with the County Clerk at Elizabeth and Secretary of State at Trenton, for a company, capitalized at $50,000, to manufacture the "Jahn perfect patented roof valley," and to be known as "The Perfect Roof Valley Manufacturing Company." This valley is the only one of its kind in this country or Europe, and with its use on any building it is said to be a positive preventitive of a leak in any kind of storm. It has the indorsement of over two hundred of New York's architects; and where it has been used in this locality it has never had its equal. The company proposes to build a large factory in this city on the line of the railroad. The officers are:—DeWitt C. Ivins, President; Geo. J. Tobin, Vice President; Chas. S. Foote, Secretary and Treasurer, and the Board of Directors are DeWitt C. Ivins, Geo. J. Tobin, Chas. S. Foote, Robert Jahn, Walter H. Freeman.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, 75c. Hall's Family Pills are the best.

E. H. Waring, of the Lehing University, is spending the Easter vacation with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Waring, of Washington Park.

You Can't Do It

It isn't possible to boil any oatmeal long enough to break the starch cells, and so render it digestible. Starch is not converted into digestible material until 250 degrees is reached, and 212 degrees is the maximum boiling temperature. Oatmeal can only be made digestible by dry heat, and is the only oatmeal in which the starch is rendered soluble by bursting the starch granules. This makes it the only safe oatmeal for infants, children, and those of weak digestion.

H-O

Be sure and get the package with the big H-O on the end.

Subscriptions Free to

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly
Illustrated American (Weekly)
Truth (Weekly)
New England Magazine
Cheerbox (Monthly)
The American Kitchen Magazine
Home Magazine (Monthly)
of Binghamton, N. Y.

WITH COUPONS FROM THE

H.O. Co.'s Goods

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS

For all Bilious and Nervous Diseases. They purify the Blood and give Healthy action to the Liver.

Cure DYSPEPSIA, HEADACHE, CONSTIPATION and PIMPLES.

SALESMEN WANTED

To sell our Stock of Fruits, Evergreens, Roses, Shrubs, Vines, Bulbs, Seeds, etc. Liberal terms. Pay weekly. Outfit free. Write at once for first time, as we shall not employ more than one salesman in a county. Mention this paper. Address, Rochester Nurseries, Rochester, N. Y.

MARRIED.

CARRELL—KOG—In Plainfield, April 19 h. 1890, by the Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph. D., Mr. James Harwood Carrell and Miss Ida L. King, both of this city.

Dissolution of Partnership.

Notice is hereby given that the partnership heretofore existing under the name and firm of Terril & Cole, as Undertakers and Funeral Directors in the city of Plainfield, is this day dissolved by mutual consent, and all debts due and owing to said firm are to be paid by George W. Cole, and all claims against said firm are payable to George W. Cole, who will continue the business at the old stand, No. 19 West Second street, in the city of Plainfield.

ROSES N. TERRILL,
GEO. W. COLE.

4 18 6

ASKS $5,000 FOR A FALSE CHARGE.

Allen J. Frank Wrongly Accused of Stealing a Pair of Trousers.

Allen J. Frank was arrested Saturday on the charge of larceny. Now he has cleared himself from the charge and instituted a suit of $5,000 for false imprisonment against the man that caused his arrest.

An officer came from Nagark on Saturday with a warrant for L. Roe, who was said to be employed in a clothing store on Park avenue. The warrant was indorsed by Justice Nash and a young man arrested by Sergeant Kieley, whom the Newarker declared was the one he wanted. It was Allen J. Frank. He declared his innocence of the charge, which was for stealing a pair of trousers from the clothing store of Louis Lesser in Newark.

Frank was taken to Newark where he secured bail. He had a hearing Sunday morning, and it proved to be a case of mistaken identity. Frank consulted his lawyer, Michael T. Brady, of New York, and has now brought suit against Lesser for $5,000 for false imprisonment.

Granted Possession of Premises.

The case of Beerbower against Coddington, demand for premises, was tried before Justice Newcorn and a jury of twelve men, Monday afternoon, and the jury brought in a verdict for the plaintiff and granted him possession of the premises.

Central Railroad of New Jersey.

Anthracite Coal Used Exclusively, Insuring Cleanliness and Comfort.

Trains leave New York foot of Liberty Street, as follows: In Effect JANUARY 26th, 1890.

PLAINFIELD AND WESTWARD.

Leave New York, From Liberty Street: 9.00 a. m. Daily (Sundays 9.01) Local for Plainfield and Somerville. 11.00 a. m. Daily except Sunday. Local for Plainfield and Somerville. 12.00 noon. Daily except Sunday. Local for Plainfield and Somerville. 4.00 p. m. Daily except Sunday. Local for Plainfield and Somerville. 5.00 p. m. Daily except Sunday. Local for Plainfield and Somerville. 6.00 p. m. Daily except Sunday. Local for Plainfield and Somerville. 7.00 p. m. Daily except Sunday. Local for Plainfield and Somerville. 8.00 p. m. Daily except Sunday. Local for Plainfield and Somerville. 9.00 p. m. Daily except Sunday. Local for Plainfield and Somerville. 10.00 p. m. Daily except Sunday. Local for Plainfield and Somerville. 11.00 p. m. Daily except Sunday. Local for Plainfield and Somerville. 12.00 midnight. Daily except Sunday. Local for Plainfield and Somerville.

PLAINFIELD AND SOMERVILLE.

Leave Plainfield at 5.45, 7.30, 8.15, 9.30, 10.30, 11.30 a. m., 12.30, 1.30, 2.30, 3.30, 4.30, 5.30, 6.30, 7.30, 8.30, 9.30, 10.30, 11.30 p. m., 12.30 night. Arrive at Somerville at 5.58, 7.43, 8.28, 9.43, 10.43, 11.43 a. m., 12.43, 1.43, 2.43, 3.43, 4.43, 5.43, 6.43, 7.43, 8.43, 9.43, 10.43, 11.43 p. m., 12.43 night.

PLAINFIELD AND BOUND BROOK.

Leave Plainfield at 5.45, 7.30, 8.15, 9.30, 10.30, 11.30 a. m., 12.30, 1.30, 2.30, 3.30, 4.30, 5.30, 6.30, 7.30, 8.30, 9.30, 10.30, 11.30 p. m., 12.30 night. Arrive at Bound Brook at 6.05, 7.50, 8.35, 9.50, 10.50, 11.50 a. m., 12.50, 1.50, 2.50, 3.50, 4.50, 5.50, 6.50, 7.50, 8.50, 9.50, 10.50, 11.50 p. m., 12.50 night.

PLAINFIELD AND LAKE HOPATCONG.

Leave Plainfield at 9.30 a. m. Arrive at Hackettstown at 11.30 a. m., Hopatcong, 12.05 p. m.

Leave Plainfield at 4.00 p. m. Arrive at Hackettstown at 6.00 p. m., Hopatcong, 6.35 p. m.

Leave Plainfield at 5.45 p. m. Arrive at Hackettstown at 7.45 p. m., Hopatcong, 8.20 p. m.

Leave Plainfield at 9.30 p. m. Arrive at Hackettstown at 11.30 p. m., Hopatcong, 12.05 night.

Leave Plainfield at 11.30 p. m. Arrive at Hackettstown at 1.30 night, Hopatcong, 2.05 a. m.

Leave Plainfield at 12.30 night. Arrive at Hackettstown at 2.30 a. m., Hopatcong, 3.05 a. m.

Leave Plainfield at 1.30 a. m. Arrive at Hackettstown at 3.30 a. m., Hopatcong, 4.05 a. m.

Leave Plainfield at 2.30 a. m. Arrive at Hackettstown at 4.30 a. m., Hopatcong, 5.05 a. m.

Leave Plainfield at 3.30 a. m. Arrive at Hackettstown at 5.30 a. m., Hopatcong, 6.05 a. m.

Leave Plainfield at 4.30 a. m. Arrive at Hackettstown at 6.30 a. m., Hopatcong, 7.05 a. m.

Leave Plainfield at 5.30 a. m. Arrive at Hackettstown at 7.30 a. m., Hopatcong, 8.05 a. m.

Leave Plainfield at 6.30 a. m. Arrive at Hackettstown at 8.30 a. m., Hopatcong, 9.05 a. m.

Leave Plainfield at 7.30 a. m. Arrive at Hackettstown at 9.30 a. m., Hopatcong, 10.05 a. m.

Leave Plainfield at 8.30 a. m. Arrive at Hackettstown at 10.30 a. m., Hopatcong, 11.05 a. m.

Leave Plainfield at 9.30 a. m. Arrive at Hackettstown at 11.30 a. m., Hopatcong, 12.05 p. m.

Leave Plainfield at 10.30 a. m. Arrive at Hackettstown at 12.30 p. m., Hopatcong, 1.05 p. m.

Leave Plainfield at 11.30 a. m. Arrive at Hackettstown at 1.30 p. m., Hopatcong, 2.05 p. m.

Leave Plainfield at 12.30 p. m. Arrive at Hackettstown at 2.30 p. m., Hopatcong, 3.05 p. m.

Leave Plainfield at 1.30 p. m. Arrive at Hackettstown at 3.30 p. m., Hopatcong, 4.05 p. m.

Leave Plainfield at 2.30 p. m. Arrive at Hackettstown at 4.30 p. m., Hopatcong, 5.05 p. m.

Leave Plainfield at 3.30 p. m. Arrive at Hackettstown at 5.30 p. m., Hopatcong, 6.05 p. m.

Leave Plainfield at 4.30 p. m. Arrive at Hackettstown at 6.30 p. m., Hopatcong, 7.05 p. m.

Leave Plainfield at 5.30 p. m. Arrive at Hackettstown at 7.30 p. m., Hopatcong, 8.05 p. m.

Leave Plainfield at 6.30 p. m. Arrive at Hackettstown at 8.30 p. m., Hopatcong, 9.05 p. m.

Leave Plainfield at 7.30 p. m. Arrive at Hackettstown at 9.30 p. m., Hopatcong, 10.05 p. m.

Leave Plainfield at 8.30 p. m. Arrive at Hackettstown at 10.30 p. m., Hopatcong, 11.05 p. m.

Leave Plainfield at 9.30 p. m. Arrive at Hackettstown at 11.30 p. m., Hopatcong, 12.05 night.

Leave Plainfield at 10.30 p. m. Arrive at Hackettstown at 12.30 night, Hopatcong, 1.05 a. m

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

Celebrated for its great leavening strength and healthfulness. Assures the food against alum and all forms of adulteration common to the cheap Royal Baking Powder Co., New York.

FOR CARE OF CHILDREN.

IT IS THE DUTY OF THE STATE TO REAR THE YOUNG Pproperly.

Ex. Williamson, General Secretary of the State Charities Aid, Delivered an Address Before the C. A. A. of This City.

The last of the public meetings for the year of the Charity Organized Aid was held in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church last Monday and the attendance was remarkably good, President Mason W. Tyler was in the chair. Previous to the regular order of business a very pleasing piano duet was rendered by Miss Dumont and Miss Ginna.

After the reading of the minutes of the last meeting, H. P. Reynolds, treasurer, stated that the receipts had been $369.42 and the expenditures $269, leaving a balance of $137 in the treasury. The executive committee reported an increase in the dental work, and the report of the district committee stated that the establishment of the City Industrial Home would afford much-needed relief. The feature of the evening was the address by Mrs. Williamson, general secretary of the State Charities Aid, of Elizabeth. The president said that it gave him great pleasure to introduce this talented woman. Mrs. Williamson's subject was "The Dependent and Delinquent Children of the State," and she at once secured the attention of everyone present. She is an exceedingly bright speaker and the interesting manner in which she talked won for her and her object many supporters. She said that Plainfield had taken a step in the right direction by establishing an Industrial Home. It not only helped the State work, but her own work as well. She considered Plainfield to be among the leading cities in education and this she held to be an important factor in the work of looking after the children. She said that there ought not to be such a word as "pauper," but people who would come under that head should be designated as the "poor." Continuing, Mrs. Williamson said:

"We now come to the subject of the children. I believe that we should have started with them years ago. In this work it is an absolute necessity that we have co-operation. Last year we secured the drafting of a bill which would not allow children to be kept in an alms-house over one month. The bill passed to its third reading but in some way while it was on its way to the Governor it was lost and for this reason it failed to become a law. The Catholics objected to the bill for they were afraid that it would institutionize the State. In consequence it was suggested by them that the Governor appoint a commission, and Governor Griggs is now about to appoint such a commission and there is to be one woman on that commission. The work of this body is going to be stupendous. Here in Plainfield you have an excellent home for the children but it is not so in all parts of the State. There are some parts of Hudson county where the children are brought up in the gutters. The condition of the children in New York can be compared to that of Jersey City, Newark, Camden and Paterson. The question is, shall we have alms house education for the children? From these institutions hundreds are graduated each year only to fill our jails. There is nothing so degrading as to be brought up on the tax-payer's money. This problem of what to do with the children is indeed a perplexing one and we shall devise means and methods for looking after the children. I say we, for I understand that the Governor intends to appoint me on the commission. I sometimes think that the founding of a State Industrial School would solve the problem. My wish is that a body of educated people look into this great subject and determine the best plan to pursue. The best work is the slow work and we need to go slow, if have been engaged in this work for the past ten years and I know it is. We can do nothing without the aid of the churches and the Divine Spirit. Our hope is to arouse the Christians of the State to do something for the children."

The latter part of Mrs. Williamson's address was devoted to the relating of personal incidents in connection with her work about the State. She told many heartrending stories of the condition of things to be found in certain parts of this State, and she urged the hearty co operation of all.

After the above address Mrs. Wm. A. Saunders sang a beautiful solo, accompanied by Miss Dumont on the piano. Following this the rest of the reports were presented, which included that of the finance committee, which was practically the same as presented by Treasurer Reynolds. The committee on co-operation stated that good work was being done in this department, and the committee on printing and publication reported that a ledger had been purchased and the name of every case was now kept on the book. Mr. Reynolds reported for the committee on rooms and he stated that needed repairs had been made at the rooms on West Front street, and during this coming month a telephone would be placed in the house. In connection with the latter Mr. Reynolds stated that the telephone company had offered to put an instrument in the house for 50 per cent. below the regular rates, and he thought it was very generous on the part of the company.

The above reports were received and filed and as a closing number Miss Hardenberg, contralto, sang a pretty solo accompanied by Miss Dumont. The meeting then adjourned.

NAVAL RESERVE TO STAY

GOVERNOR GRIGGS WILL SIGN THE APPROPRIATION.

Charges Against Capt. Jaques Were Not Sustained and Have Been Dismissed—Many Changes of Opinion Lately.

Gov. Griggs has announced that he will sign the bill making a $10,000 appropriation for the New Jersey Naval Reserve, and has said that the complaint against Capt. Jaques did not emanate from the Governor's office. He has also made public the fact that he has received from several officers of the Naval reserve a request that their signatures be stricken from the petition sent him some days ago.

The Governor's declaration that he would authorize the appropriation for the Reserve has put an end to the rumors that he would either cause Captain Jaques to be court-martialed or would cut off the appropriation with the intent and effect of disbanding the reserve because of its dissensions. His action is the settlement of the paltry disputes in the organization, the quarrels between the two divisions and the complaints against Captain Jaeques, which culminated in the petition sent to the Governor some time ago and made public on April 5. The petition inscanced in support of its charges of partiality and arbitrariness certain actions of the commanding officer in refusing, as was alleged, to approve appropriations, neglecting to visit the petitioning battalion of the West, declining to countenance the use of a National Guard rifle range offered to the reserve, and assuming the duties of paymaster without justification. The petition further alleges that the Commander was forced upon the reserve, and that his appointment was believed to be illegal.

After the charges were published and Captain Jaques had got an opportunity to vindicate himself, he wanted inquiry into the matters complained of in the petition. He showed that he had not exceeded his authority under the laws as Commander, either in the matter of the approval of appropriations or the refusal to allow the use of a National Guard Rifle Range. As to the matter of the rifle range, indeed, he has proved that its use by the Reserves would be a contravention of the State law, beside violating the provisions of the Naval Reserve act making it imperative that the summer shooting practice of the organization be performed afloat.

Capt. Jaques' services from the date of his appointment have won him the respect of all who knew the difficulties he had to overcome in organizing his department of the State militia. Capt. Jaques was cohsidered eminently fitted for the place, having graduated in the line and been active service until 1887. Then he resigned to superintend the manufacture of heavy ordnance and armor. He is recognized as an expert in that department of naval warfare, and has often been called to Washington as a consulting adviser. Under his supervision the State reserve made such a good showing at the inaugural parade on March 4th, that both Gov. Griggs and Assistant Secretary McAdoo wrote him personal letters of congratulation.

The Rev. W. H. Weaver, pastor of the U. B. Church, Dillsburg, Pa., recognizes the value of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and does not hesitate to tell others about it. "I have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," he says, "and find it an excellent medicine for colds, cough's and hoarseness." So does everyone who gives it a trial. Sold by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

Mrs. S. A. Gribbon, of Belfast, Ireland, is visiting her mother, Mrs. Thomas Fawcett, of Washington avenue. Mrs. Gribbon expects to remain all summer.

VICTORY AFTER DEFEAT.

PARK CLUB WHISTERS WON FROM RUTHERFORD UNION CLUB.

Fieldfielders Played in Their Usual Good Form and Had Victory Well in Their Grasp in the Early Part of the Game.

The grasp of the Park Club on the State challenge whist trophy grows tighter and another victory was added to the present long list, last Monday. The team from the Union Club of Rutherford came to Plainfield, last evening, in their turn to play for the trophy and although they did not win, they had the consolation that the strongest whist team in the State defeated them by only five tricks. The Parks played in their usual good form and had the game well in their grasp from the start but the visitors were not discouraged and played a careful game to the end.

The Parks won the first round by a score of six tricks to two. The second round was also won by them by a score of six to three. The Rutherford players came up in the last round, however, and won in five tricks to three.

The visiting team was composed of Messrs. Thomson, Fogel, Edwards and Watson. The regular Park Club team, composed of Messrs. Rogers, McCutchen, Howell and Townsend, was at its accustomed place. The visitors were treated to a light collation after the game.

The next match for the trophy will be played on next Monday evening when the team from the Montclair Club will come to this city to play the Parks.

REVERENCE.

Subject of the Lesson Taught at the Primary Teachers' Union.

Miss Shinn taught the lesson at the meeting of the Primary Teachers' Union, held Monday afternoon, after which Rev. C. L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational Church, gave a talk on the subject of "Reverence." Next to the mother, the speaker thought that the teacher of the primary class was the one to teach reverence. Mr. Goodrich said that reverence was most important, and yet the American people as a people have have very little of it. At a recent meeting of the local ministers one of the ministers startled the others by stating that "Protestantism was the only religion whose sacred symbols are made sport of," and if this is so it might be well for the heathen to send missionaries to us instead of vice versa. It is important to learn a child reverence so early that the child does not remember when it was learned. The speaker's definition of reverence was being polite to God, and not doing anything that is impolite.

Following the talk an informal discussion on the subject was enjoyed, and the meeting closed with the benediction by Rev. Mr. Goodrich.

MIZPAH LODGE SOCIABILITY.

A Varied Programme Given by the Odd Fellows.

An entertainment, social and dance was given last Monday by the members of Mizpah Lodge, No. 1, U. O. of I. O. L, and the affair was successful. The following programme was rendered with satisfaction:

Overture, Messrs. Naylor and Blake; recitation, Mamie Richards; piano solo, Miss Angleman; selection, Messrs. Naylor and Blake; dialogue, "The Pull-Back;" vocal solo, Miss Bellis; selection, Messrs. Naylor and Blake. The last number on the programme was the appearance of the "Sweet Family," composed of members of the lodge. They gave recitations, vocal and instrumental music.

Following the above, a social and dance was enjoyed by all, and at midnight refreshments were served. The committee in charge of the affair consisted of Mrs. Cox, Mrs. Radin, Mrs. Page, Mrs. Mattox and Miss Snyder.

Devoted Mother Dead.

Mrs. Mary B. Vreeland VanAlstyne, wife of Louis Irving VanAlstyne, of Manison avenue, passed away at her home last Sunday. She was a devoted mother and a loving wife and leaves many friends to mourn her loss. A little baby boy arrived at her home only a short time ago. While she was recovering from her illness she was stricken with pneumonia and has laid at the point of death for several days. She leaves three sons and a daughter. The funeral will be held on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at her late residence, 430 Madison avenue.

Theft From the Station House.

A silver match box was taken from the station house Sunday afternoon. The police have the name of the man who took it and he will be arrested for larceny at once unless the box is returned immediately. It was the property of one of the prisoners captured in the raid Sunday morning.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The fac simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

Spring

Is the season for new life in nature, new vigor in our physical systems. As the fresh sap carries life into the trees, so our blood should give us renewed strength and vigor. In its impure state it cannot do this, and the aid of Hood's Sarsaparilla is imperatively needed.

It will purify, vitalize and enrich the blood, and with this solid, correct foundation, it will build up good health, create a good appetite, tone your stomach and digestive organs, strengthen your nerves and overcome or prevent that tired feeling. This has been the experience of thousands. It will be yours if you take Hood's Sarsaparilla The Best Spring Medicine and Blood Purifier. Sold by all druggists. $1.

Hood's Pills cure nausea, indigestion, biliousness. 25 cents.

Sweet Peas.

Do not delay planting them, our own mixture contains only the choicest and latest varieties.

LAWN & GARDEN SEEDS and FERTILIZERS.

HARDWARE and HOUSEFURNISHINGS.

A. M. GRIFFEN,

119 East Front st.

Telephone Call, 6.

W. R. CODINGTON,

Counsellor-at-Law.

Commissioner of Deeds, Master-in chancery, Notary Public. Offices Corner of Park avenue and Second street.

SEEDS ... FOR THE ... Garden and Farm

Vegetable and Flower Seeds. All the newest and best varieties—quality unsurpassed. Illustrated Catalogue free.

WEEBER & DON, Seed Merchants 114 Chambers St., New York City.

1 28 3m

What a Lot of Eggs the hens lay when fed on Green Cut Bone. With a Bone Mann's Green Bone Cutter

will pay for itself in a short time in the increase of eggs. $5 BUYS ONE. Sent on trial. 180 highest awards received. Catalogue free if you name this paper. F.W. MANN CO., Milford, Mass.

2 25 4 9 10 11 12—7 mos.

SAVED

After years of suffering. It has at last been proved beyond a doubt that

NASALENE

Is a positive remedy for local diseases which are the result of cold and climatic changes. Cold in the Head. Hay Fever.

CATARRH,

Deafness, (caused by catarrh), are instantly relieved.

It is pleasant to use, convenient to carry. Price 50c. and $1.00, at all druggists.

O. V. BAGG, Warden of Sing Sing prison, says: "Nasalene is very beneficial."

HUNTER MEDICAL CO., 84 E. 31st Street, N. Y.

WANTS AND OFFERS.

BY women, each with an infant or young child, situations in the country (general housework, plain cooking, etc.). Small wages expected. Railroad fare paid by Association. Apply State Charities Aid Association, 105 East Twenty Second street, New York City. 3 18 1mo

DIED.

VAN ALSTYNE—Sunday, April 17, 1897, Mary Vreeland, wife of Louis Irving Van Alstyne aged 30 years.

CORTRIGHT—In this city, Thursday, April 8, 1897, Susan, daughter of William Cortright, aged 79 years, 3 months, and 14 days.

DRAKE—In North Plainfield, Friday, April 9, 1897, Mary E., wife of T. B. Drake.

JONES—In this city, Monday, April 5, 1897, Isaac Jones, aged 78 years and 4 months.

HEDGES—Suddenly, at the Presbyterian Hospital, New York city, on Tuesday, April 6, Jenny English Hedges, only daughter of Ann E. Hedges and the late Smith English Hedges, M. D.

HUMPSTON—At Dunellen, N. J., April 7, 1897, Robert Humpston, aged 74 years and 4 months.

PEASE—At Phoenixville, Pa., April 6, 1897, Mary Ann Pease, widow of the late Charles Pea, aged 76 years.

POULTRY

We keep everything in the POULTRY LINE. Fencing, Feed, Incubators, Live Stock, Brooders—anything—it's our business. Call or let us send you our illustrated catalogue; it's free for the asking—it's worth having.

Excelsior Wire & Poultry Supply Co. 26 Vesey Street, New York City.

2 25 3m

JAS. M. DUNN,

Dealer in

GROCERIES, PROVISIONS, VEGETABLES, FRUITS &c

GARDEN SEEDS

fresh and carefully selected.

224 PARK AVENUE,

OPPOSITE NORTH AVENUE.

Everything usually found in a first-class grocery.

Goods delivered free of charge.

Lewis B. Coddington,

[Successor to T. J. Carey.]

Furniture & Freight Express

Office—24 W. FRONT ST.

Large Covered Vans or Trucks. Goods delivered to any part of the U. S. Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges reasonable. P. O. Box 1. Piano moving a specialty

PATENTS

CAVEATS, TRADE MARKS & COPYRIGHTS.

CAN I OBTAIN A PATENT? For a prompt answer and an honest opinion, write to MUNN & CO., who have had nearly fifty years' experience in the patent business. Communications strictly confidential. A Handbook of Information concerning Patents and how to obtain them sent free. Also a catalogue of mechanical and scientific books sent free.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice in the Scientific American, and thus are brought widely before the public without cost to the inventor. This splendid paper, issued weekly, elegantly illustrated, has by far the largest circulation of any scientific work in the world. $3 a year. Sample copies sent free. Building Edition, monthly, $2.50 a year. Single copies, 25 cents. Every number contains beautiful plates, in colors, and photographs of new houses, with plans, enabling builders to show the latest designs and secure contracts. Address MUNN & CO., PUBLISHERS, 361 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

DIME

Savings Institution,

of Plainfield, N. J.,

Is now receiving deposits payable on demand, with interest, allowed on all sums from $5 to $3,000.

JOHN W. MURRAY, President.
J. FRANK HUBBARD, Vice-President
J. C. CLARK, Treasurer.

Money deposited on or before January tenth will draw interest from the first.

GEORGE W. DAY,

General Auctioneer.

Sales of Personal Property solicited. P. O. Box 132, Dunellen, N. J., or address Bazaar of Constitutionalist. Terms reasonable

Townsend's

Marble and Granite Works,

30

Somerset st., North Plainfield.

If you have not engraved your work I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy on the first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell inferior stock, that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and you. Prices reasonable.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to sell to the public at the price I sell my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid agents.

I have but very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, which will enable me to the settling of all work, and look upon business as a pleasure, that I may sell cheap. Material, as fair Prices, is a standing advertise for my work, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can give you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

J. E. TOWNSEND, Manager.

Branch yard, Westfield, N. J.

NEW JERSEY SUPREME COURT

To Richard Garretson, defendant, or whom it may concern:

Please take notice that the following writ of Seire Facias has been issued out of the Supreme Court of the State of New Jersey, to wit:

NEW JERSEY, ss.

The State of NEW JERSEY to our Sheriff of the County of Somerset, GREETING:—

WHEREAS, lately in our Supreme Court of Judicature, holden at Trenton, before the Justices of the Supreme Court, in and for our County JOHN D. BARTINE recovered against RICHARD GARRETSON, the sum of two hundred and thirty dollars and eighty-three cents, which said sum was ascertained by reason of certain promises and assumptions to him made by the said RICHARD GARRETSON, defendant, and also thirty-one dollars and twenty-three cents for his costs and charges about which he has of late sued him, as by the judgment thereof, when, of the said RICHARD GARRETSON is convicted, as by the record thereof remaining in the office of the said JOHN D. BARTINE we have been informed, which said judgment has been upon execution for the said debt and damages, and costs still remains to be made to the said JOHN D. BARTINE, as he, the said BARTINE hath diligently sought us to provide him remedy in that behalf, and forasmuch as we desire that what is right and just should be done on the premises aforesaid, and that by default of you, the said men of your County, no cause to be made known to the said RICHARD GARRETSON why the said JOHN D. BARTINE should not have his execution against him for the damages and costs aforesaid, and that he, the said RICHARD GARRETSON, may be barred from having any benefit of the said recovery, if it shall seem expedient for him so to do.

We command you, that you call Court, before the Justices aforesaid, shall then and there on the return hereof, cause to be made known to the said RICHARD GARRETSON, defendant, that he be and appear before the Justices aforesaid, at the Court aforesaid, then and there to show cause why the said JOHN D. BARTINE should not have his execution against him for the damages and costs aforesaid, and that he, the said RICHARD GARRETSON, may be barred from having any benefit of the said recovery, if it shall seem expedient for him so to do.

We command you, that you call Court, before the Justices aforesaid, shall then and there on the return hereof, cause to be made known to the said RICHARD GARRETSON, defendant, that he be and appear before the Justices aforesaid, at the Court aforesaid, then and there to show cause why the said JOHN D. BARTINE should not have his execution against him for the damages and costs aforesaid, and that he, the said RICHARD GARRETSON, may be barred from having any benefit of the said recovery, if it shall seem expedient for him so to do.

WITNESS, THOMAS F. BEARLEY, Esquire, Chief Justice, at Trenton, aforesaid, the seventeenth day of February, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-seven.

BENJ. F. LEE, Clerk.

PERLE & MEEKAR, Attys.

2 25 6w

CARNEY BROS.,

MADISON AVENUE,

Between Front and Second streets.

Tinners,

Plumbers

Gas Fitters,

Grates and bricks for all kinds of stoves can be found here at Jobbers' prices. Bring your tinware mending to us. The best tinners, the best plumbers, and the best gas-fitters in this section. We use none but the very best of materials, and our work always gives satisfaction. Keys of all kinds are made here. Tinware made to order. Ranges, brick and portable furnaces. Sanitary plumbing.

Wm. A. Woodruff,

Fire and Life

INSURANCE AGENT,

OFFICE,

corner Front St. and Park Avenue,

Plainfield, N. J.

Real Estate for Sale and Exchange. Money to Loan on Approve Security.

Sanitary Plumbing,

Brick and Portable Furnace

Gas Fitting, Tin Roofing,

Etc., Etc., Etc.

I am prepared to do any of the above branches in strictly first-class sanitary and workmanship manner.

Having associated myself with the Master Members Association of New York city, I employ none but first-class mechanics and non-union men. I believe in every man running his own business at all times and in all cases.

D. W. LITTELL,

No. 119 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J.

ALBERT HEDDEN

Livery & Boarding Stables

FOURTH ST.,

between Watchung and Park avenues.

First-class Livery. Horses boarded by week or month. Telephone call, No. 114.

A. WOLFF.

Manufacturer of

CIGARS.

And dealer in all kinds of Smoking and Chewing Tobacco, and smokers' articles, has removed from 23½ W. Front street, to 261 West Front street, one door east of Madison avenue, and solicits the patronage of his friends and the public generally.

P. P. VanArsdale,

PIANO TUNER.

Instruments put in thorough order. Terms reasonable. Pianos and organs for sale and to let. Orders by postal, P. O. box 109, or left at Willett's shoe store, 107 East Front street will receive prompt attention. Residence 301 E. Front street, corner Elm street. 2[7y1

WANTED—AN IDEA Who can think of some simple thing to patent? Protect your ideas; they may bring you wealth. Write JOHN WEDDERBURN & CO., Patent Attorneys, Washington, D. C., for their $1,800 prize offer.

FRAZER

AXLE GREASE Best in the World

Is manufactured from the finest Petroleum Oils and Tallow, and is the only Grease that will not gum. Ask your dealer for it. Take no substitute. Manufactured only by FRAZER AXLE GREASE CO., BOSTON.

FOR SALE BY ALL DEALERS.

E. B. MAYNARD,

PRACTICAL

BARBER AND

HAIR DRESSER,

204 PARK AVE.

Ladies' and Children's Hair Cutting done at their residence. Shaving, Shampooing, etc., satisfactorily performed. 2[7y1

Woolston & Buckle,

PAINTERS.

Wall Papers, Painters' Supplies

141-145 North avenue.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE.

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS, DESIGN PATENTS COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN.

Beautifully illustrated, largest circulation of any scientific journal. Weekly, $3.00 a year; $1.50 six months. Specimen copies and HAND BOOK ON PATENTS sent free. Address MUNN & CO., 361 Broadway, New York.

YALE CLUB PATRONESSES

THOSE WHO LEND THEIR NAMES AND SUPPORT TO THE CONCERT.

The Appearance of the Musical Clubs of Old Eli's Institution is Always a Big Event in Plainfield's Leading Society.

The appearance of the Yale Glee and Banjo Clubs in Plainfield every year has come to be looked upon as an important event. The Yale boys are the best of their kind in the country and they are always given a cordial reception in this city where Yale men predominate over the graduates of all other colleges. This year the Yale clubs are to give their concert in the Casino on the evening of April 20th. The list of patronesses for the concert has been announced as follows: Mesdames Frederic H. Andrews, Albert H. Atterbury, Charles Brooks, John T. Baker, Martin I. Cooley, J. Edgar Corlies, Edward B. Clarke, George A. Chapman, Rowland Cox, John B. Dumont, Howard Fleming, George H. Frost, Charles S. Foote, Charles J. Fisk, Stephen A. Ginna, B. Arrowsmith Hegeman, Jr., A. W. Haviland, John I. Holly, Frank O. Herring, Samuel Huntington, Charles Hyde, J. W. Jackson, James B. Joy, William T. Kaufman, John Leal, Leander N. Lovell, William E. Lowe, Charles W. McCutchen, Samuel St. J. McCutchen, Henry A. McGee, Walter M. McGee, H. L. Mosley, John W. Murray, Jr., William D. Murray, J. Kirtland Myers, J. Parker Mason, James C. Peck, Joseph W. Reinhart, Charles A. Reed, E. Dean Ryder, Charles Ryder, Nelson Runyon, William J. Roome, William R. Richards, Lucius C. Ryce, James T. Scott, George A. Strong, William L. Saunders, Walter E. Stewart, S. L. Schoonmaker, Augustus D Shepard, Lewis G. Timpson, Mason W. Tyler, H. P. Talmadge, J. Evarts Tracy, Howard C. Tracy, Daniel T. Van Buren, Edward M. Van Buren, George H. Van Boskerck, Orville T. Waring, Charles S. West, H. R. Wells, Ernest L. Walz, Clifton Wharton, Jr., Frederick W. Yates.

PUBLIC LIBRARY.

The Librarian's Report for March, 1897.

Vols. on accession-book Feb. 28th, 1897	14,551
" added by purchase	42
" gift	7
Vols now in library	14,587
Vols now in Babcock Library	1,000
Number of card-holders	4,477
Cash received from subscriptions of non-residents	$4.50
Cash received from rent of newspapers	$1.00

HOME CIRCULATION.

Fiction	1,804
Juvenile	725
Biography, correspondence, etc	197
Travel, description, geography, etc	204
Philosophy	6
Religion, mythology etc	61
Sociology	3
Philology	2
Natural Science	73
Useful Arts, including medicine	74
Fine Arts	74
Literature	74
History	266
General books, periodicals, etc	32
	3,927
Circulation March, 1896	3,081
" 1897	3,927
Increase	844
Circulation at Y. M. C. A. Delivery Station	64
" Hope Chapel	54

Gifts during the month:
March 4th, Statute of New Jersey, vol. 29 of Supreme Court cases.
March 8th, from Leroy Radford, one vol.
March 11th, from Mrs. H. Kimball, five vols.
March 18th, from U. S. Gov., Statistics of Railways, 1896.

EMMA L. ADAMS, Librarian.

Funeral of Benny Denise.

The funeral services of the late Benjamin Denise, the four-year-old son of Mrs. Denise, who lost his life in the race-way near French's mill, was held Thursday afternoon from the house on West Front street. There was a very large attendance of relatives and friends, including the members of the Woman's Relief Corps, of which Mrs. Denise is a member. The services were conducted by Rev. H. Kennedy Newell, pastor of Hope chapel. Mr. Newell spoke very tenderly concerning the sudden death of the little fellow. There were a great many floral tributes, included among which was a beautiful wreath of white roses from the members of the Woman's Relief Corps. Interment was in Hillside where Mr. Newell offered prayer and the benediction.

Church Services.

Services appropriate to Palm Sunday were observed Sunday in St. Mary's and St. Joseph's churches. As is customary, palms were blessed and distributed to the large congregations present, after which the Passion of our Lord was read. In the evening at the vesper service in St. Joseph's church, Rev. Father Miller, the pastor, preached to a large congregation, the subject of his sermon being "The Justice of God."

The Church of the Holy Cross was prettily decorated with palms in honor of the day. The large vested choir of men and boys rendered appropriate music. Master Edward Grannatt sang a soprano solo very sweetly. Rev. T. Logan Murphy preached an interesting sermon upon the subject of Christ's entry into Jerusalem.

Bicyclist Collided.

A colored cyclist accidentally collided with Miss Fritts, of Park avenue, who was riding on East Front street, Friday afternoon. The dusky rider was looking behind him and did not see the other wheel. He was thrown heavily to the ground and was somewhat bruised, but Miss Fritts escaped all injury.

CAN'T EVADE MARTIN ACT

ALL DELINQUENT TAXES MUST BE SATISFIED UNDER ITS PROVISIONS.

Its Workings are of Much Importance to the Taxpayers of Plainfield, as There is Liability of Losing Property Ownership.

The resolutions passed by the Common Council on Monday of last week regarding delinquent taxes could not be made so full as to be entirely clear to the parties directly interested.

The Martin Act is as perfect a machine for collecting delinquent taxes as was ever invented and put in operation.

When the commissioners appointed by the Court secure the delinquent tax books the Council will have no further control over the matter. They will be powerless to make any adjustment or concessions, and when the commissioners make their report, and the same is confirmed by the court the collector must proceed to make collections, and if after a stated time the same are not paid, then they must sell the property. Which sale will be very different from those heretofore made, as the purchaser, whether same be the city or an individual, will have full possession, and will have the the right to enjoy all the benefits, including rents, until the said tax is paid.

The commissioners have the right in determining the amount of tax to take into consideration the time the same has been delinquent, and add what they deem proper for interest and penalties.

There are several good reasons why the council should permit those who now own property on which taxes remain unpaid for the year 1881 and years prior thereto, to petition for an adjustment of same.

The city authorities did not order property sold for taxes until 1883, and therefore 1881 taxes, which list was in perfect, and for that reason 1881 was included on the resolution.

The law under which sales have been made was passed in 1846 but until 1881 sales for taxes were not a first lien on property.

For this reason parties searching titles did not go back of 1881 and so far as can be ascertained the Collector did not call attention to unpaid taxes previous to that date.

The city authorities are to some extent responsible for failure to collect taxes by collection through neglect, and they should not now insist on payment of interest.

A very considerable portion of the property on which taxes are unpaid for that period have been conveyed to present owners since 1881 and they are probably ignorant of the city's claim, yet these taxes are due the city and in justice to those who have paid, the authorities should compel pay ment if possible.

The interest and penalties on un paid taxes of say 1875 will now be nearly double the amount of the tax.

FINE MUSIC HELD SWAY.

VARIED PROGRAMME RENDERED AT A CHURCH AFFAIR.

The Congregational Woman's Association Arrange an Event That Included the Best Musical Talent in the City

A very enjoyable musicale was given last week by the Woman's Association of the Congregational church, and, in spite of the rain, it was very well attended. The pleasant parlors of the church were charming ly decorated, pretty little tables with handsome lamps and palms standing about, and many thoroughly artistic water-color sketches upon the walls.

The programme opened with a piano duet, "Auf Wiederschen," by Bailey, excellently rendered by Mrs. B. T. Barnes and Walter Raynolds. A cunning little acted song, or musical recitation, "Who Was It?" was then given by Miss Agnes LaBoyteaux and Harold Nomer, and much enjoyed. P. Ludwig Condo, always a favorite with Plainfield audiences, followed with two violin selections, "Air Varie," by De Beriot, and "Cradle Song," by Hauser, given in his usual superb style. C. A. Jones, of Bayonne, a bar-itone soloist, was a stranger to his audience, but gave great pleasure by his artistic and sympathetic rendering of "A Heart's Whisper" by Piccolomini, and "Hour of Sweet Repose," by Rowe. Also by a very tiny pianist was the next number, Master Arthur VanArsdale, eight years old, playing a simple theme by Matthews very prettily, and with unusual musical taste for so young a performer. De-Beriot's 7th Concerto, magnificently played by Mr. Conde, and two more songs, "The Friar of Orders Gray," by Shield, and "A Dream," by Bartlett, by Mr. Jones, concluded a very successful programme. Refreshments were now served, and a social hour enjoyed by all.

The committees in charge of the affair were as follows: Entertainment, Mrs. A. C. LaBoyteaux; decoration, Miss Ellis; refreshments, Mrs George Rockfellow, Mrs. L. B. Morgan, Mrs. Fuller, Mrs. Millard.

—The Union Good Friday service of the Plainfield churches will be held next Friday evening in the Crescent Avenue church.

AT THE END OF LENT DAYS

A PRETTY HOME WEDDING CELEBRATED LAST WEEK.

Miss Jennie L. Blackford Becomes the Wife of John L. Brokaw—Ceremony Performed at the Bride's Home, Etc.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Stelle Blackford, in Piscataway Township, was the scene Wednesday, April 7, of one of the prettiest weddings of the season, when their daughter, Miss Jennie L. Blackford, and John I. Brokaw, of the same place, were united in marriage by Rev. Bergen D. Stelle, of South Jersey, cousin of the bride. The ceremony was performed at 4 o'clock in the presence of a large assemblage of relatives and friends of both bride and groom.

The parlor, where the marriage was celebrated, was very prettily decorated with choice flowers and potted plants, and the bridal party stood beneath a large and handsome floral bell during the ceremony.

The bride was gowned in white brocaded silk with white trimmings, and she carried a bridal bouquet of white roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Stella Blackford, of Brooklyn, niece of the bride, wore a gown of white organdie with pink trimmings and carried a bouquet of pink roses. The best man was J. Miller, of Westfield, nephew of the groom.

Following the ceremony the happy couple were showered with congratulations and the best wishes of all for a prosperous and happy journey through life. A wedding supper was served at 5:30, and was complete in every detail. There were about two hundred guests seated at the table.

Mr. and Mrs. Brokaw were the recipients of a very large collection of handsome and useful presents. It required a long table to hold the many gifts. One gift attracted a great deal of admiration, and that was a beautiful palm in full bloom. It came from Mobile, Ala., and was the gift of a friend.

The bride and groom left for New Brunswick at 8 o'clock where they went by train to Washington to enjoy a wedding trip. While they are away they will visit Wilmington and Philadelphia as well as Washington. On their departure they were showered with rice and old shoes, and with this auspicious send-off they carried with them the best wishes of all. On their return they will reside at the home of the bride's parents.

The guests present at the wedding were from Brooklyn, Newark, Springfield, Westfield, New Brunswick, Trenton and Philadelphia. Those present from the city were Edward S. Brokaw and family, Mrs. Isaac R. Giles, Miss Laura J. Runyon, Mr. and Mrs. James Dunn, daughter and granddaughter, Mr. and Mrs. Stelle Randolph, Mrs. Van Ness, Mrs. Dayton.

LITTLE HOPE FOR LIFE.

Somerset Murderers Will Undoubtedly Die on the Gallows.

Nothing now can save Clawson and Johnson, the two condemned murderers in Somerville, unless the cases are reopened by the Court of Pardons, which is hardly probable. Sheriff Wyckoff is making preparations for the executions. Clawson will be hanged on May 5th, and Clawson one week later. The statutes provide that twelve persons appointed by the court, besides the deputies of, a limited number of representatives of the press, ministers and some others, making in all nearly forty, may witness the execution. The Sheriff is not allowed, under penalty, to let anyone else in, except as provided by law. The list is about completed already.

A Popular Young Man.

A Sabine Pass (Texas) paper has the following to say of Charles Stillman, who recently left for that place: "Chas. Stillman, of Plainfield, N. J., is a late acquisition to the young folks' crowd at the Pass. Mr. Stillman is attached to the manager Osgood's engineer staff upon the new wharves and in the drawing department. He is much pleased with the country and the prospects of Sabine Pass, all of which is heartily reciprocated by everyone here who has come to know the genial and pleasant young gentleman from New Jersey."

To Open a New Street.

Work has been started to open up a street on the Wooden property near Johnston's drive. The tract of land has been surveyed from the drive to the brook near Hudson's lane, and as soon as the weather will permit, the work of opening and laying out the street will be pushed rapidly. The work is being done under the supervision of William Stillman, who has charge of the estate. After the opening, houses will be erected along the street.

General Sickles Unable to be Here.

A pleasant act on the part of the city in connection with the re-union of the Second N. J. Brigade, held in this city Friday, was their gift to the members and their friends of the very handsome souvenir badge bearing the picture of the Brigade's commander, General Sickles. It was to be regretted that the latter could not be present. He was unavoidably detained in New York with a law suit.

HARD TIMES IN CHURCHES

THE NEWARK CONFERENCE REPORTS SHOW DEFICITS.

Some Districts Were Prosperous Though—The Women's Home Missionary Society Has Trained 10,000 Girls in 10 Years

In the presentation of reports by the presiding elders of the four districts of the Newark Conference, it was agreed by that body Thursday that the stringency of the times had been felt seriously by the churches.

A large deficit was shown to exist in the Episcopal fund. The receipts for the year were $80,216.95, the expenditures $93,738.54, leaving a deficit of $13,521.59. This sum is to be made up by the various conferences, the Newark body to contribute $3,486.

Presiding Elder G. W. Smith, of Plainfield, reported that eighteen charges had fallen behind in their contributions to the missionary fund in the Elizabeth district. He expressed his sympathy because of the death of Rev. A. C. Covey.

Rev. Dr. S. P. Hammond, presiding elder of the Newark district, referred to the seven clusters of church communities in Newark and suburban towns as prospering. In forty charges there had been 1,200 converts and 427 probationers in the year. The stronger churches helped the weaker ones to the extent of $3,640 in gifts. Property worth $32,574 had been purchased, on which a debt of $9,000 existed.

Dr. Hammond said that the Drew Seminary at Madison never had had a more prosperous year, having been well sustained by the churches. He had found that the Sunday-schools within the district numbered 13,000 scholars, with an average attendance of 8,700. There were fifty-two chapters of Christian Endeavor societies, having a membership of 1,875.

Rev. J. A. Gutteridge, secretary of the Preachers' Aid Society, reported that in forty years the fund had grown from $2,300 to $54,900, of which $7,000 had been paid in the last year.

From the Women's Home Missionary Society came a report, presented by Rev. Dr. Wilding, showing that 2,000 girls were being trained in industrial work in twenty-three educational institutions, and 8,000 for service. In fifteen years $1,700,000 had been collected, and in that time $47,439.80 had been paid to the widows and children of dead members.

An incident of Thursday's session was the announcement that Rev Chas. S. Coit and Rev. Charles Larew each had completed fifty years in the ministry.

ASSURED OF A BRIDGE.

Board of Freeholders Willing to Do Their Share in Watchung Avenue Matter.

A member of the Union County Board of Chosen Freeholders told a Daily Press reporter last week that just as soon as the City Council accepted the proposed extension of Watchung avenue and asked for a bridge the Board would grant the same. The Union County official stated further that he would like to see a bridge across Watchung avenue as Plainfield had not received her proportionate share of expenditure, as she was entitled to more than she has received.

In connection with the opening of the above avenue, it is rumored that Mr. Durlach, who secured an injunction against the same, has heard of the proposed immediate action on the part of the city, and has taken steps to have the work stopped. The time limit for the last injunction has expired, and Mr. Durlach cannot proceed under that rule.

Another Competitive Drill.

The members of Somerset Council, J. O. U. A. M., held a meeting last week and decided to meet Monroe Council, of Newark, at Elizabeth Monday night, May 10th, at which the competitive drill will take place as planned recently. It will be remembered that recently the above two councils held a competitive drill in this city, and it resulted in an unsatisfactory manner to both, hence the second drill on neutral ground as stated above.

Easter Music.

The members of the choir of St. Mary's church are now making extensive preparations for Easter. Weber's full mass, with orchestral accompaniment, will be rendered by the choir on Easter morning. The choir is composed of a special quartette and a large chorus, besides the complete orchestra will assist. Rehearsals are being held twice every week and everything points to a grand service.

Change in Superintendents.

Henry Norman, formerly superintendent of the lathe department of the Walter Scott Printing Machine Works, has been made Superintendent of the Works in place of Alonzo Weseman, who has been obliged to resign his position owing to ill health. Mr. Weseman will leave in a short time for Denver, where he hopes to regain his health.

—The work of grading, flagging and curbing about the new Lincoln School building is progressing most favorably. The recent bad weather retarded the work considerably.

BOSS OF THE ALLEY FELL.

DAVID KILLOREN HAS PUNISHMENT METED OUT TO HIM IN CITY COURT.

By His Overbearing Manner and Vindictive Mood He Formed the Soubriquet of "Boss of Paradise Alley"—Fined $8, Etc.

"The boss of Paradise Alley has fallen," remarked City Judge DeMeza Saturday, as he sentenced David Killoren, aged 20 years, to pay a fine of $8 or go to the county jail for forty days. There had been trouble in the alley and the police had laid the blame on Killoren and his chum, William Drake. They appeared in the city tribunal with evidence enough, and to spare, to prove that they were the persecuted parties, but the witnesses forgot some of the most salient points and the Judge decided that they had arranged everything beforehand. He decided that David Levine and wife, who keep a little store on the alley, were innocent, and that the "Boss" had started all the trouble.

Killoren had to answer to two charges. One was that he persecuted Levine at the freight house on April 1st. Levine and his witnesses said that Killoren had come up to the unoffending shopkeeper and pulled his whiskers in a malicious and revengeful manner. Levine had protested against such indignity, whereupon Killoren is alleged to have punched the Jew in the nose.

The other bracket occurred April 3d, and resulted almost in a riot in the alley. David Rarissen is a Jewish junk dealer and a powerful man. He is a friend of Levine and saw the affair at the freight house. He was collecting some junk in Paradise alley, last Saturday morning, when he met Killoren. Words followed the meeting and then blows which each side claimed the other started. Killoren fled and the junkman pursued. They clinched again and then Killoren alleged that Levine threw a stone and cut a deep gash in his skull. Killoren witnesses were a trifle mixed up in regard to the facts of the stone throwing.

Meantime all the denizens of the alley turned out and excitement was rampant. Afterwards it is alleged that Killoren struck Mrs. Levine and scratched her hands and face while her husband fled to Chief Grant for protection. The Chief found himself in the alley and the crowd scattered like dead leaves before an October gale. The participants were arrested and the Czar of the alley, Dennis Carney, mourned that again the reputation of the alley was to be blotted.

The trial was a lively one Saturday and a great crowd assembled outside of the jail to hear the result. The store-keepers of the alley were represented by Lawyer Harry C. Runyon. The Judge found both Killoren and Drake guilty and sentenced Killoren to pay a fine of $8 or forty days in jail. Drake was sentenced to pay $3 fine or ten days in jail. Both paid their fines.

AVENUE WORK STARTED

THE GREAT IMPROVEMENT NOW UNDER HEADWAY.

Work Started So That the Extension Can Be Accepted by the City and the Assessments Collected Without Trouble.

A welcome sight greeted the eyes of those in the vicinity of Watchung avenue last Saturday afternoon when the work of opening the avenue from the brook was commenced. Through the instrumentality of The Daily Press the City Council was led to act quickly in this matter, and there seems to be no doubt now but what the avenue will be opened in a short time. Notices have been issued by Counsel directing the payment of assessments on that part of the avenue which has been accepted by the city. The haste in opening the avenue from Front street to the brook is occasioned so that the city may accept that portion of the avenue and thus make it legal for the city to collect assessments from the property owners along that thoroughfare. Work was resumed again this morning with ploughs and teams and the dirt is being carried to the corner of Berckman and East Second streets where it is being used to fill in.

In a short time a special meeting of the City Council will be held to accept the street, and then a petition will be presented to the Union County Board of Freeholders asking them to erect a county bridge across the brook. This the board will do because they are anxious to see the improvement made.

On the borough side of the avenue the contractor, David Bowden, is finishing his part of the contract on the avenue. When the entire avenue is opened and a bridge is erected across the brook, Plainfield and the borough will have one of the finest avenues to be found in either county.

An Approaching Wedding.

Mrs. Isaac W. Pangborn, of 59 Jackson avenue, has issued invitations for the marriage of her daughter, Miss Jennie Louise Pangborn, and William Hull Western, of Washington Park. The wedding will take place Thursday evening, April 22d, at 7:30, at the home of the bride.

SUPPORTER, NOT RULER.

THE MEN'S IDEA OF WOMAN IN A CHURCH BODY.

Question of Admitting Women Delegates to General Methodist Conference Considered, But Not Favorably

Two questions of more than passing importance came up at the third day's session of the Newark Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, in Newark, Friday. One was as to the rights of women to go to the general conference as delegates, and the other was in regard to limiting the number of candidates on trial for the ministry.

The woman question, which is by far the most important one to come before the Conference, was brought up by Rev. J. L. Baldwin, recording secretary of the Missionary Society of New York. He detailed the history of the question and contended that it was always intended that women should be delegates. The question was formally brought before the Conference by the presentation of the following proposed section of the constitution:

The General Conference shall not allow of more than one ministerial representative for every four ministerial members of an annual conference, nor of a less number than one for every fifty-five or more than two lay delegates for an annual conference; provided that no person shall be chosen as a delegate to the General Conference, or to an electoral conference, who shall be under twenty-five years of age, nor shall any have been a member of the church in full connection for four consecutive years preceding the election; and, provided, also, that no conference shall be denied the privilege of electing a reserve delegate; provided, nevertheless, that no conference shall be entitled to an additional delegate for any fraction.

The word "person" in this section includes women, and if it is adopted the Newark Conference goes on record as favoring women for delegates. It was this point that was brought on the discussion yesterday.

Rev. D. S. Jones, of Rockaway, was not in favor of having women admitted, and in the course of his remarks in opposition said:

"Woman is the strong arm of the Church, and while we cannot carry on the work without women, I believe that when it comes to a legislative matter of the Church the matter is different. It is better to leave it to the men, to the husbands, to the fathers, in the making of the laws. It is contrary to the very laws of nature and to the laws of God to do otherwise."

Rev. J. J. Boswell, of Englewood, championed the cause of the women, and Henry J. Hayes, of Bradley Beach, said it was about time women came to the defence of the men. Rev. C. S. Kemble, of Bergen Point, spoke also in favor of admitting women, but owing to the lateness of the hour a vote on the question was not taken. It will come up today.

In the afternoon the anniversary of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society was held. Mrs. J. H. Knowles presided. In her opening address she said that since the organization of the society, twenty seven years ago, over 300 missionaries had been sent out and over $4,000,000 spent in saving souls. At the present time, she said, 152 missionaries are being supported and the society has forty-nine hearing and ten training schools under its care. Other reports were presented, showing in detail how the money received had been expended.

GOLFING SEASON OPENED.

Informal Exercises and Playing at the Plainfield Grounds.

An informal opening of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club grounds was held Saturday afternoon. The weather being a little cool did not tend to bring out as many of the lovers of this sport as was hoped for. In all there were about twenty members on the grounds who made several tours on the links and they reported the grounds to be in very good condition. During the afternoon tea was served in the club house by Miss Ginna, who was assisted by Miss Thompkins, of Thompkins Cove, N. Y., Miss Wood and Mrs. Delaney, of this city. The attendance of the first day was excellent and the opening may be called a success.

The game of golf bids fair to be very popular this year with Plainfield people and as soon as the weather becomes more seasonable the grounds will no doubt be crowded with the lovers of this game.

Many improvements have been made about the grounds, including a very handsome flower bed which has been located near the club house. With the advance of warm weather the flowers already planted will present a very attractive appearance.

Shot a Mad Dog.

Patrolman McCue was called to the home of Mrs. Radin, of North avenue, Monday for the purpose of shooting a pug dog which was acting madly. The officer performed his duty and quiet was restored.

Commissioner of Deeds.

U. B. Crane has received his commission from Governor Griggs as Commissioner of Deeds for the First ward. He will look after his duties as commissioner in connection with his duties as justice of the peace.

VETERANS MET IN RAIN.

STORMY WEATHER FOR THE SECOND BRIGADE REUNION.

Annual Business Meeting Held in the Casino This Morning—Public Services in Reform Hall—Officers Chosen For a New Year.

Friday Plainfield is the scene of a reunion of a body of men who have made historical record such as will never be forgotten. They are a mere handful compared to the 4,000 who, in response to the call of the Martyred President, Abraham Lincoln, laid aside all love for home and friends and went to the front to fight for that which was so near and dear to them—their country. They were brave and gallant men, everyone of them, and today the people of Plainfield extend to the surviving members of the Second New Jersey Brigade Society a cordial and hearty welcome. This is the tenth annual reunion of the brigade, and one has but to look to see that their ranks are thinning out and but a few more years remain for those who stood the thickest of the fight.

The rain which came today was the means of putting a damper on the reunion of the Brigade survivors. Notwithstanding this, however, there are about one hundred members of the Brigade in this city. They began to arrive on the early morning trains and they were escorted to the Casino by a delegation from the Sons of Veterans.

At 11:30 a business meeting was held at the Casino. President U. B. Titus, of Trenton, called the meeting to order, after which Chaplain Kline offered prayer. In the absence of the secretary, Hiram Anderson, of Philadelphia, A. Sebring, of Bound Brook, was chosen secretary pro tem. Secretary Anderson's report was read, in which a sketch of the Brigade was given.

The president appointed T. O. Doane, Plainfield; Edward Stewart, Philadelphia; Thomas Blackwood, Trenton; a committee to extend to Hugh C. Irish Camp, of Paterson, a vote of thanks for their kindness in having the minutes of the last meeting printed. The committee drafted resolutions which will be presented to the Camp.

Treasurer J. B. Clugston, of Trenton, reported that during the year $64.68 had been received, and $59.85 expended.

In response to a wish the president appointed Gen. J. F. Rusling historian of the Brigade, and the latter will prepare a history.

Chaplain Kline presented his report which showed that ten members had died during the year. There may have been more, but the above number includes all that were reported by the different regiments.

Plainfield secured an honorable distinction in the election of officers, for the members selected as their new president, W. W. Coriell, of this city, also was Sergeant of Co. B, 6th N. J. Vols.

The vice-presidents elected were as follows: Capt. Daily, Jersey City; Col. Williams, Plainfield; Gen. H. Kent, Philadelphia; Col. Manderville, Newark; T. O. Doane, Plainfield. The vice-presidents were chosen from the regiments represented and those not represented were left the same as last year. Ex-President U. B. Titus was elected secretary, while J. B. Clugston, treasurer, and Chaplain Kline were re-elected for another year.

The following members compose the memorial and monument committees, which were selected by the different regiments:

Gen. Rusling, Trenton; A. Eagen, Jersey City; Albert Runyon, Plainfield; A. L. Sparks, Camden; F. Borton, Bayonne; L. P. Ayres, Trenton; E. J. Garrison, Paterson; A. Hunt, Newark; F. Tronson, Newark; George B. Senior, Paterson; Captain Murphy, Jersey City; C. H. Rugg, Plainfield; J. Schoonover, Trenton; J. A. Goodwin, Plainfield; Thomas Blackwood, Trenton; Robert Smith, Paterson.

The monument committee is selected for the purpose of having the State of New Jersey erect a monument for the dead heroes from this State.

The business meeting was adjourned about 1 o'clock when the members prepared to march to Reform Hall for a banquet was served. The members of the local G. A. R., Sons of Veterans, escorted by a squad of patrolmen under the charge of Sergeant Kiely, and the Plainfield Cornet Band, acted as an escort to the members of the Brigade. At Reform Hall the visitors were given a hearty welcome by the committees in charge and the members of the Woman's Relief Corps.

The banquet was very elaborate and the menu was complete in every particular. Over two hundred people were served and all expressed great satisfaction over this part of the programme. After the banquet an adjournment was made to the upper part of Reform Hall where the exercises are now being held. The exercises were opened with prayer by Chaplain Kline of the Brigade, after which C. A. Marsh made an address of welcome on behalf of the city. The genuine hospitality of the city was extended in the broadest sense, and everyone was made to feel that the welcome was most cordial.

This was followed with the soldiers' welcome by Comrade Rev. L. E. Livermore, of this city. This speaker welcomed the visitors to this city in the name of the G. A. R. and kindred organizations. His words were very timely and thoroughly enjoyed. Interspersing the different addresses there was excellent music by the corps band, and other exercises of an interesting nature.

The main room at Reform Hall presented an attractive scene, and it stirred the heart of every veteran who was there. There was a profusion of bunting arranged about the hall, also several large American flags. On each side of the gallery was to be seen the names of the famous generals who were and are at present members of the Brigade. One of the most soul-stirring scenes was on the platform, where an ideal camp-fire is displayed.

There is the tent, in front of which is placed a camp-fire scene with the pots and kettles so familiar to every veteran. Over the platform is hung a large flag, while at one side is a list of the battles in which the members of the Brigade were engaged. There were other decorations, all of which added to the general patriotic picture.

This brigade was composed of the 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th and 11th New Jersey Regiments, the 2d and 150th New York, the 26th and 115th Pennsylvania, 1st and 11th Massachusetts, 1st Maine Heavy Artillery and Clark's Battery, and they were under the command of General Joseph Hooker, better known as "Fighting Joe." The men who composed this Brigade enlisted for three years, and they formed one of the most important in the army. They started out in the fall of 1861, with about four thousand men, and when the Brigade was mustered out at Washington, in 1863, there was about three hundred survivors.

The first commander of the Brigade was General Starr, who was selected owing to the fact that he was the senior officer and ranked as colonel. He remained with the Brigade until Yorktown was reached, and there he was killed. General Frank Paterson, of the Regular Army, was then put in command, and he led the Brigade into every engagement until the close of the second battle of Malvern Hill, where he was killed. General Carr was then made commander. During the rest of the war Generals Mott, Sewell and MacAllister were at different times in command. This Brigade was one of three that formed Hooker's Division of the Third Army Corps. The other two were Excelsior Brigade and Hooker's original Brigade. The Second Brigade was engaged in every battle, with the exception of the one at Antietam, and in each battle they played an important part. General Hooker relied principally on the Second Brigade, and after the war he loved to call it his "Old Guard."

Gen. Sickles commanded the Second Division of the Third Army Corps and it was at the battle of Gettysburg that he lost his leg. When Gen. Hooker was made commander of the Army of the Potomac, Gen. Sickles took his place as commander of the Second Brigade. There were none that fought more gloriously than the members of the Brigade from New Jersey and under the lead of this loyal commander they were always right for the right. It is doubtful if there is a Brigade that has a better record and the surviving members naturally feel great pride.

Among the Plainfield members of this Brigade are Calvin H. Rugg, William Hand, T. O. Doane, W. H. Williams, W. W. Coriell, J. W. Van Horn, W. S. Brown and John Goodwin.

This event today marks the thirty-third anniversary of the surrender of Gen. Lee to Gen. Grant at Appomattox, April 9th, 1865. After that the Brigade went to Washington where they mustered out after the grand review by President Lincoln. History has recorded many valiant deeds of the men who fought in the Second Brigade and the members as they are assembled here today are once more privileged to greet each other and recall the many incidents, both happy and sad, which formed such a history. These men are honored because they did so much to save this beautiful country and to preserve for the present generation the freedom which we all have inherited.

Former Plainfielders Married.

The marriage of Miss Anna Adelaide Borst, of Highlands, L. I., and Clarence Judson Rice, both formerly of this city, was celebrated in the Highlands M. E. church, Wednesday evening, April 7th. Rev. John R. Johnson, pastor of the church, officiated.

Easter Music.

Elaborate preparations are being made for the Easter music by the choir at the Grace P. E. church. In addition to the regular choir, there will be Mr. Cree, tenor soloist from Elizabeth. Those who have him say that he is one of the finest vocalists ever heard in this city.

FINAL ANTE TO THE CADI.

THE POLICE RAIDED A PARTY OF SEVEN POKER PLAYERS.

They Were Seated in a Room in the City Hotel, Which Was Flanked on All Sides by Police, When the Raid Was Made.

Seven gamblers, right in the midst of their game, were surprised by the police in a front room of the City Hotel, early Sunday morning, and all lodged in jail over night to be paroled at noon for trial Monday morning. All pleaded guilty and a substantial fine was collected from each. The raid was an exciting one and will furnish material for talk in all the local resorts for several days.

It was one o'clock Sunday morning and the city lay in peace and quietness, when Sergeant Kiely noticed two young men wandering down East Second street in a suspicious manner. They were William Watt and Cornelius B. Loughlin. They were watched and finally seen to meet several other young men at a neighboring corner until the party numbered seven. Then they went to the City Hotel; some entered by the front door and others slipped through the rear entrance. The police, suspecting that a quiet game was in progress, or was to be soon, kept watch.

John E. Beerbower, proprietor of the City Hotel, retired to his room Saturday evening at 10:30 o'clock, turning the latter to look after such guests as might arrive after that time. At one o'clock, a man came into the hotel, giving his name as J. J. Carleton, of Newark, and said that he wanted a room. It was Loughlin. He was given the corner room on the second floor that overlooks Second street and the alley that runs to the rear of the hotel. After showing him the room, the porter went to sleep.

At 4 o'clock, Patrolman McCarty, who was patroling that beat, heard distinctly the rattle of money and cards in the corner room. There was a light in the room, and the subdued murmur of voices sounded quite distinct in the midnight air.

The raiding party consisted of Sergeant Kiely, Boundsman Frederickson and Patrolmen McCarty and Post. Equipped with a ladder, they sallied forth after their victims. Quietly one of the officers climbed upon the balcony, but the window was locked and the officer climbed back again. Then the ladder was taken around into the yard at the side of the hotel and rested against the building just below the window. Up the ladder climbed Patrolman McCarty, while Patrolman Post steadied it from the bottom. McCarty reached the top in safety and crouched at the end and listened to the unseen speakers inside. There were remarks about the "jack-pot," one of the players spoke of having four aces, another had a flush, and then there was a shuffle of cards and the rattle of chips on the table. One remarked about the "ante," another "raised," and so the conversation continued in a line that told very plainly that the police had made no mistake.

Kiely and Frederickson hastened around to the front of the hotel and went upstairs to the second floor hall where they stood guard at the door, which was locked on the inside. Then McCarty quietly opened the window and slipped in while the players, intent on the game, neither heard nor saw the entrance of the officer.

An exclamation of dismay burst from the group. One man sprang from his seat, opened the door and started to make his escape down the hall when he was suddenly confronted by the two officers there. Another of the players started for the window and was about to leave as McCarty had arrived when Patrolman Post shouted to him from below, and the gambler reluctantly returned to the room. There was no other attempt at escape, and no resistance was made to arrest. All seven were locked up in the city jail.

Sunday they were all paroled until next morning, when all, except William Watt, appeared before the City Judge. They were James McCann, Thomas Kerren, Jos. Gavin, M. J. Cox, William McCann and Cornelius B. Loughlin. William McCann explained that he had been asleep in the room and was not playing; all the others pleaded guilty. Ex-Judge William A. Coddington appeared for Mr. Beerbower and explained that the latter had no knowledge of the fact that gambling was carried on in his hotel as has already been explained.

Loughlin had been arrested before on the same charge and the Judge fined him $20. The others were fined $10 each. Judge DeMeza ordered that Watt be arrested at once for breaking his parole.

There was other excitement at the City Hotel, Saturday, when John E. Beerbower, proprietor, was arrested on complaint of Chief Grant on the charge of illegal liquor selling. It is alleged in the complaint that Mr. Beerbower sold whiskey on Sunday, March 14th, on Sunday, March 21st, and on Sunday, March 28th. According to the city ordinances, no liquor dealer or anyone else for that matter is allowed to sell liquor on Sunday, and it is for violating this portion of the ordinance that Mr. Beerbower is charged. They police claim that they have sufficient proof to convict him.

Mr. Beerbower was arrested on Saturday morning by Roundsman Flynn on a warrant sworn out before City Judge DeMeza and he was taken before the Judge. He pleaded not guilty and was released on $800 bail for trial.

Mr. Beerbower believes that he can clear himself of the charges preferred by Chief Grant, if they ever come to trial. The evidence of alleged illegal traffic was furnished by Hammon Bowser, a colored porter once in Mr. Beerbower's employ, who claims to have bought the liquor on the dates mentioned. Mr. Beerbower says that he discharged Bowser April 3d. As the charge of selling liquor illegally to him was made for the first time on April 14th, Mr. Beerbower says that it does not stand to reason that even if he was going to sell liquor to any one on Sunday, it would not be to a colored porter whom he had discharged but a short time before.

TEN YEARS GOOD WORK.

ANNIVERSARY OF A CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR SOCIETY.

Rev. J. Clement French, President of State Association, Delivered an Address Full of Good Points and Advice for Members.

The tenth anniversary of the Christian Endeavor society of the First Presbyterian church was celebrated Sunday evening in the church with appropriate exercises. Several members of the society assisted the regular choir in the rendition of the music, under the direction of Organist William E. MacClymont. Over the organ was arranged a large American flag in the centre of which was a C. E. monogram.

The services were in charge of E. L. Gifford, president of the society, and after a short song service, he called on Secretary Harry Manning, of the Y. M. C. A., to offer prayer. The president introduced Mr. Manning as the first president of the society. The latter also read the Scripture selection. With a few appropriate words Mr. Gifford introduced Rev. Dr. J. Clement French, of Newark, State president of the Christian Endeavor society, who made the address of the evening. In the first place Mr. French offered congratulations to the society on the celebration of its tenth anniversary and for the blessings of God. He said that he supposed it had had times of fluctuations as well as prosperity, but there was no supreme cure for that state, and that was to ascend to the mountain top and get a view of what has and is being done. The Christian Endeavor society, he said, started with small numbers, but today there are 50,000 societies representing as many churches and a membership of about 3,000,000 composed of the pink and flower of our young people.

This society recognizes the unity of the body of Christ and is not attempting to erect another Church of Christ as some people imagine. With the banner of the society "For Christ and His Church," maintained at a high standard, a large congregation of Christians are moving forward against the enemy. Dr. French held that the saving of souls was the business which Christians should be engaged in. They should not try to drive men for that won't win them, but don't talk of converting men, for that work is done by Christ. The work of the society, he said, was purely a rescue work, and the members must not only be saved but they must be saving also. He urged all to draw more on God for help and strength and to realize the obtaining power from that source. He said it was a great thing to have good men in the pulpit, but it was just as important to have the pews filled with good men. He thought it was within the power of the laity to pull down the strongholds of sin and there should be a unison of effort in this work.

The speaker deplored the worldliness of the church of today and said that what was needed was consecrated earnestness on the part of the members, for with God's help all things can be accomplished.

He impressed the fact that until there was a willingness to lay all on the altar there would not be very much accomplished for God. In closing Dr. French asked the question, "Are you willing to face eternity with life work only half done?"

The singing of a hymn, the Mizpah benediction and a short prayer by Dr. French brought the service to a close. A large number of those present remained and personally met Dr. French.

A Salamagundi Party.

Miss Elsie Horne entertained the members of the social committee of the Epworth League at the First M. E. church, of which she is chairman, at her home on Willow avenue Friday evening with a salamagundi party. The first prizes were won by Miss Sarah Douglass and J. Vincent Ritten-house and the booby prizes by Miss Lucie Palmer Davis and Arthur Crone. A very pleasant evening was spent.

VOLUNTEER'S LEADER.

COMMANDER BALLINGTON BOOTH ADDRESSES PLAINFIELDERS.

The Head of the Movement Tells Why the Volunteers Were Organized and How They Are Prospering in Growth and Good.

'Twas a rousing welcome that was given by the people of Plainfield to Ballington Booth, organizer and commander of the American Volunteers, Sunday. Two meetings were held, one in the afternoon in Reform Hall and one in the evening at the First Baptist church, and in both cases the audience was so large that it could not be accommodated in the buildings and many were turned from the doors unable to find seats or even standing room. With Commander Booth came a party of the officers of the Volunteers, whose singing was one of the delightful features of the meetings.

Long before the time appointed for the opening of the meeting at Reform Hall, the seats were all filled and the hall crowded. There was a stirring address by Commander Booth on the work of the Volunteers and an appeal to the audience for financial aid for the local post. A collection was taken that amounted to over $25.

The officers accompanying the Commander were Captain A. C. Macomber, Captain Harper Smythe, Captain Lucy Kelly, Lieutenant M. Langen, Brother Will Hetsell, and Brother Will Skidmore. They sang several selections, one of which had been arranged specially for them. The most effective of all, however, was the singing of "America" by them. At the crowning point in the song each officer drew forth an American flag and waved it. The audience burst into tumultuous applause.

While the meeting in the afternoon was considered a large one, that in the evening in the First Baptist church far exceeded it. Although the church has the largest auditorium of any church or hall in the city, every seat was occupied a half hour before the service opened. Every inch of available standing room was also used ere the time of opening had arrived. Commander Booth and the corps of officers with him occupied the platform with Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes and the members of the local post were seated in the front seats and the choir loft.

After the opening hymn, prayer was offered by Captain Macomber, and then the Commander stepped to the pulpit and began his address.

There were two words, he said in opening, that would describe the cause of the onward march and success of the Volunteers, and they were "living faith." Faith that was dead, but faith that was very much alive and going forward. He then remarked that a search of the Bible would show how much importance is attached there to the presence of the living faith. He told with stirring words of the different characters in the Bible who had accomplished great things and how it had all been done through faith. Faith, he said, looks to God alone and laughs at impossibilities.

"May not Mrs. Booth and I," he exclaimed, "claim a little of that faith when we left the old organization in which we had worked so long and faithfully, and taken a little room after pledging the people of the United States to start another organization on the same lines as the old. With the flag wrest from our grasp, with no financial backing and only the promise of a few to stand by us, by faith we were enabled to take that stand with but two posts and five officers. Now there are 136 posts in 130 towns and over five hundred salaried commanding officers."

The question that I am going to put to you this evening, he continued, is are you connected with any church, but are you in touch with the church of the living God. Do you belong to God? He then went on to say that it was not the Christianity that existed in creeds that was wanted but that which is to be found in the human heart. Christ is in the streets of Plainfield and New York in the shape of the consecrated flesh and blood.

There is a call, he went on, from the people of the slums, from the rich and poor alike for a Christianity that will satisfy and can be put with effect in every day experiences. The Christian ought to not be Methodist, Baptist or Quaker, but the one in touch with God. The difference between the American Volunteer and the Quaker was, he said, that the Volunteer quake and the others do not.

He spoke of the dark guilt that his father had upon and how he and his wife saw it now and were ready to do their work of taking Christ to the vast Christless army.

His next reference was to the work among the convicts and of the great success that Mrs. Booth has accomplished in that line of work. He told some incidents of his own efforts among the convicts and how today nearly thirteen hundred of them had joined the convicts' league which he had organized. At that very time, he said, Mrs. Booth was working among the convicts at the Trenton State Prison.

What reaches their hearts, he said, is divine sympathy and love. The world wants the Christian that does not lift his skirt as he passes by but stretches out both hands to welcome him. There is a tender spot in every man's heart, if it is only known, and where it is God knows. This must not be left for the ministers of the country to do, all must lend a hand in the work. It is not merely those that lie in the gutters of society that need love and sympathy; there are many here that need it badly but hide it under a smiling face.

After "Jesus is with the Volunteers" was sung by the musical corps, Commander Booth made an earnest plea for assistance for the local Volunteers and a large collection was taken while several other impressive selections were sung by the chorus and Captain Smythe, the tenor soloist of the corps. The benediction was pronounced by Rev. Dr. Yerkes; and the meeting was dismissed.

A MONTH OF LIFE YET.

UNTIMELY END THAT AWAITS THE TWO SOMERSET MURDERERS.

Nearly all Arrangements Completed for the Hanging of Johnson and Clawson—John VanNise to do the Killing Job.

Sheriff Wyckoff, of Somerset county, has but few details left to arrange for the double hanging that is to be enacted in the county jail yard at Somerville on the 5th and 12th of May next, when Jacob S. Johnson, the colored preacher and slayer of Annie Rogers for a paltry of $50, and Elmer Clawson, the nineteen year old boy who killed farmer Harry Hodges because the latter did not pay him for wages as soon as desired, will expiate their crimes on the gallows. John VanNise, of Newark, who did the survivor and sent most all of New Jersey's murderers of recent years into the hereafter, has been employed by Sheriff Wyckoff to do the job on the two dates above. VanNise will not erect the scaffold and other apparatus used in execution until the night of May 4th. After Johnson has been put out of the world, the paraphernalia will remain standing until the following week when Clawson's untimely end will come. The statute provide that twelve persons appointed by the court, besides the deputies of, a limited number of representatives of the press, ministers and a few others, in all nearly forty, may witness the execution. The list of those who will be present has already been completed. The demand for tickets of admission has been something very great on Sheriff Wyckoff, many of them being accompanied by political claims.

As Johnson and Clawson were condemned to death penalty, Sheriff Wyckoff had them removed from the main portion of the jail to a second story annex, where they are confined under a guard of four deputies, two at night and two at day. Their cells are comfortable and they are allowed better food than the rest of the prisoners. Once during the day they are allowed the freedom of a corridor to exercise in. When young Clawson was first incarcerated he was rather unruly and caused the jail officials a good deal of trouble and worry, but of late he has become more submissive and seems to live with the idea that "what can't be cured must be endured." He is an inveterate user of tobacco. He spends a good deal of time reading books of fiction. Of his fate he never seems to give a serious thought. Boy like, he takes great delight in tantalizing Johnson, who is serious, thoughtful and religious, by trying to get him from his cell about what is to become of him in the hereafter. A few days ago he laughingly said to Johnson:

"Hey, Johnson, you'll be in Hades just seven days before I will; tell the devil I'm coming."

Johnson spends a good deal of time reading the Bible and seems to take great consolation in its passages. He is what is called a model prisoner.

No visitors are allowed to see the condemned men except as permitted by the court. A number have called upon to see Johnson now and then is Rev. John Hart, of Neshanic. Once in a while some of Clawson's relatives visit him, but the boy murderer don't seem to care much whether they come or stay away. Sheriff Wyckoff sees the murderers every day or so. He never refers to the gruesome event of next month, but a few days ago Johnson told the sheriff that when he (Sheriff Wyckoff) was at liberty he would like to have a quiet talk with him. Though there is but little hope that either man will escape the death penalty now, Johnson seems to have a hope that something will intervene to save him. Clawson apparently never gives it a thought.

Dislocated His Shoulder.

While playing games on the field adjoining Dr. Johnstone's school on Prospect place, Saturday morning, Everett J. Peck, of Myrtle avenue, dislocated his shoulder. He was carried into the school and Dr. Mattison summoned. He was afterwards removed to his home.

CHURCHES NEED MONEY.

GREAT SHRINKING OF REVENUES IN THE PATERSON DISTRICT.

In Some Cases Thirty Per Cent of Salary of Pastors Remain Unpaid—Dr. Eaton Denies Reports About the Book Concern

Such has been the volume of work before the M. E. Conference at Centenary church, Newark, that an extra session was held Monday.

Rev. Alexander J. Craig, presiding elder of the Paterson district, reported a great shrinkage in the revenues of the church, and in some cases 30 per cent. of the salaries of pastors still remains unpaid. Despite the times $30,000 has been collected for church extension purposes, and $10,000 for missions, this being larger than in any other year.

During the year, 1,100 probationers have been enrolled. There are 113 Sunday-schools, 1,045 officers and teachers and 13,733 pupils. There are seven chapters of the Epworth League, with a membership of 50,000.

Rev. Solomon Parsons said the subject of weak churches in rural districts was a grave one, and on a resolution offered by Rev. J. B. Wright, Bishop Andrews appointed Revs. W. H. Ruth, A. B. Richardson, L. C. Muller and Wm. Eakins a committee to look after the weak societies.

Rev. Dr. Homer Eaton, of the Methodist Book Concern, branded as a falsehood a statement made in a Boston paper that the concern had discharged Methodist employes and filled their places with Catholics.

Memoirs of departed pastors were presented, as follows: Rev. Dr. S. Van Benschoten, elder of the Paterson district, by Rev. Dr. Henry A. Buttz; Rev. Jeremiah Cowins, prepared by Rev. Nicholas Van Sant and read by Rev. J. W. Dally; Rev. S. F. Custard, by Rev. John McMurray; Rev. Daniel E. Frambes, by Rev. A. M. Harris; Rev. John W. Seran, prepared by Rev. Dr. A. H. Tuttle and read by Rev. Dr. Richard Vanhorne; Rev. George Miller, by Rev. E. V. King. The memoirs of Mrs. C. A. Lippincott, Mrs. D. Hiram and Mrs. A. C. Covey, wives of pastors, were ordered printed.

MINUS HIS BIG TOE.

Agent Trying to Steal a Ride on the Cars Had to Go to Hospital.

C. B. Bowe, aged thirty-seven years, of Gloucester, Mass., who said that his occupation was that of a traveling salesman, was brought to Muhlenberg Hospital Tuesday afternoon between 3 and 4 o'clock, minus the big toe on his right foot. The accident happened between Dunellen and Clinton avenue, and the man was trying to steal a ride when he fell off and one wheel passed over the foot causing the loss of the toe. The man was brought to Grant avenue on a freight train and from there he was carried to the hospital in a chair. He will be confined to the hospital for some time.

Don't Support His Wife.

John Frey, of Somerset street, was arrested last Tuesday on a complaint issued by his wife who charged him with non-support. She says that during the past few months he has not contributed anything to speak of toward her support. Frey does not like work and in consequence has very little with which to support either himself or wife. This morning he was arraigned before Justice Thomas and the latter thought that five days in the lockup would do Frey good. A little latter Mrs. Frey withdrew the charge of non-support and the husband was held for five days on a charge of being insolent and abusive.

$5 More For Not Being on Time.

Wm. Watt, one of the young men who was captured Sunday morning in the raid on the gamblers in the City Hotel, did not appear with the rest Monday morning. Instead he came up to the Judge's office in the afternoon, when he pleaded guilty to the charge of gambling. The Judge severely reprimanded him for not appearing in the morning when ordered to and fined him $15 for the offence, $5 more than the rest for failing to appear at the time set down for trial.

Mr. Beerbower Entirely Blameless.

The police officials state that John Beerbower, proprietor of the City Hotel, is entirely blameless in the matter of the poker party who were raided in one of his rooms Sunday morning. In fact, the police say that not even Mr. Beerbower's employes could be blamed, for so far as the hotel proprietor or attaches were concerned, they were acting in entire good faith. The story in this paper yesterday fully explained the situation.

A Quiet Marriage.

The marriage of Miss Ida L. King and James Melwood Carrell, both of this city, was celebrated on Saturday at the home of R v. Cornelius Schenck, who performed the ceremony.

—The ladies of Plainfield are famous for their pretty hands. Peck has the kid gloves to fit those hands.

—The street railway company made some needed repairs on the switch on West Front street near Somerset street.

AN INCREASED TAX RATE.

CITY EXPENSES GOING DANGEROUSLY NEAR THE LIMIT.

It is Estimated and Conceded That the Tax Rate Will be Between $2.50 and $2.60 on the $100 for the Present Year.

There is not a person in this city who would not like to know what the new tax rate for the coming year will be. It is a very vital question in view of the increased appropriations made by the council at the last meeting. It is acknowledged by all that the present council is an expensive one in many respects and especially so when it is announced at the commencing of the year that expenses were to be curtailed. A slight review will be interesting to show how the expenses have been cut down.

In the first place the salary of the street commissioner was placed at $1,000. This remained at that figure until the last meeting of the council when it was raised to $1,200. It was stated at the time it was raised that Mr. Gavett was worth it and hence the jump. Granting this, it does not seem to be economy, for the assistant is hired to help Mr. Gavett, and not only that but the council has secured the services of County Road Inspector Fink to come to Plainfield and macadamize a stretch of road which everyone knows could be done by Mr. Gavett. The men who built the famous county roads are F. A. Dunham, A. J. Gavett, H. C. Van Emburgh and David Bowden, all of whom are Plainfield men. The question is being asked, why not secure anyone of these to do the work? Of course, the expense of this work comes out of the street appropriation. So far as can be learned the only attempt to cut was in the above department, and, on the contrary, it has been increased.

In addition to the above, the Council removed the $11,000 appropriation for lights from the general fund to a special fund and the money will be collected under a special State law. This change does not make it any lighter for the tax payers for they have to pay it just the same. Again, $7,000 was appropriated for the Public Library, and of course, this is an additional expense on the taxpayers. It was remarked yesterday by a city official that in his opinion the Council had exceeded the limit of appropriation by $18,000, namely, $11,000 for lights and $7,000 for the library. The former appropriation made it possible for the Council to raise more money in the general fund, by taking it out of that fund. In addition to all this there is the sewer tax, interest on the sewer bonds, etc., that will have to be paid. It cannot be ascertained what the tax rate will be at the present time. The Council will have to wait and see how much they will receive from the State and county, and it will be July before the rate will be made known. It is conceded by certain city officials that the rate will be close to $2.50, and some have said that they thought it would be $2 60. This every one will concede to be very high, and in view of the fact that the city is really not getting very much more than it has been receiving, is causing people to wonder a great deal. Last year it was about $2.30 on the $100.

Under a State law a municipality cannot exceed $3 on the $100 in a tax rate, and the present prospect for Plainfield is that the tax rate for the present year will crowd uncomfortably near the limit.

Residential Changes.

E. C. Mulford, the well-known real estate broker of North avenue, has arranged the following transfers:—D. W. Shives, of Ohio, to No. 168 Grove street; Mrs. Joseph Minor, of New York, to No. 14 Norwood avenue; W. E. Dunham, of New York, will take the house on Watchung avenue owned by W. C. Smith, Jr., May 1st; Mrs. Clara G. Durrant, of Crescent avenue, to Nicholas Messerschmith's house on East Fifth street; S. S. Squires, of Brooklyn, to John Ross's house on Fairview avenue; Charles N. Slocum, assistant manager of the Aachen Munich Fire Insurance Co., New York, to No. 61 Sanford avenue; H. D. Gwynette, of Fanwood, to No. 1030 Prospect avenue; T. B. Woolsey, of New York, to No. 183 Martine avenue.

A Poor Thoroughfare.

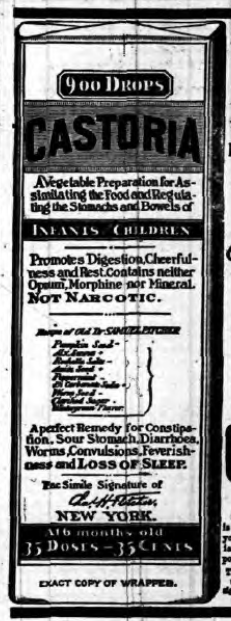
Property owners on West Second street are very much dissatisfied with the condition of that thoroughfare. During the early spring it was a perfect sea of mud and many of the residents of neighborhood dumped ashes and rubbish into the street to make it passable. When the mud dried, the ruts remaining were many and deep, making it hard for vehicles to pass through. Then the ashes, broken bricks and other rubbish gave the street anything but a pretty appearance.

Fitzsimmons on a Blue Liner.

Fitzsimmons, the pugilist, passed through Plainfield Tuesday afternoon 2:20 o'clock on his way to New York. There was a large crowd of people at the station, but the fighter could not be seen.

Letter Carrier to Meet in Elizabeth.

The annual State convention of the New Jersey letter carriers will be held in Elizabeth on Memorial Day.



EXACT COPY OF WRAPPER.

SEE THAT THE FAC-SIMILE SIGNATURE —OF— Chas. H. Fletcher IS ON THE WRAPPER OF EVERY BOTTLE OF CASTORIA

Castoria is put up in one-size bottles only. It is not sold in bulk. Don't allow anyone to sell you anything else on the plea or promise that it is "just as good" and "will answer every purpose." See that you get C-A-S-T-O-R-I-A.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

MARKS A BATTLEGROUND

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1.

Had the alarm of the sentries come only a few moments later, or had Cornwallis' plan for surrounding the Americans been more speedily effected, the entire body of the Americans would surely have been captured.

The accounts of the engagement are conflicting. Gen. Lincoln reported that, on looking from the house where he was quartered, he saw the enemy within 200 yards. Springing to his horse, he, with one of his aids, rallied his troops and led them between the closing columns of the British, and escaped to the mountains with the loss of sixty men killed and wounded.

SCOTT'S MUTUAL AID SOCIETY.

Annual Meeting Held and Officers Elected For a Year.

The Scott Press Works Mutual Aid Society held its annual meeting last Tuesday when the treasurer stated that there is $493.12 in the treasury and during the past year $555 had been paid out for the sick and death benefits. This is considered remarkable good when it is known that the dues are only 25 cents a month.

The officers elected were as follows: President, H. G. Adams; vice president, Ben. Wainwright; secretary, D. C. Allen; treasurer, H. C. Newman; board of directors, Edward Soden; Bert Sutphen, Augustus Sergeant, Frank Soden, H. McLeah, W. Newmiller, J. Bennett and Fred V. Van-Horn.

WELL-KNOWN GERMAN DEAD.

Henry Wedemeyer Passes Away After a Serious Illness.

The death of Henry Wedemeyer, proprietor of the Arlington Hotel on Somerset street, occurred last Tuesday after a serious illness from pneumonia. The deceased came to Plainfield several years ago and was bartender for J. A. Blatz and Rudolph Spiegel. Later he secured the Arlington Hotel and has conducted that place ever since. He leaves a widow. He was a member of the Saengerbund and the society has draped their building and hung the flag at half mast. Mr. Wedemeyer was well known in this locality and had many friends who will learn with deep sorrow of his death.

Mrs. A. Inveen, residing at 720 Henry street, Alton, Ill, suffered with sciatic rheumatism for over eight months. She doctored for it nearly the whole of this time, using various remedies recommended by friends, and was treated by the physicians, but received no relief. She then used one and a half bottles of Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which effected a complete cure. This is published at her request, as she wants others similarly afflicted to know what cured her. The 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, cor. Park and and North avenues.

—"Snappy" 2 and 3 $ shoes. Doane & Edsall's 4 and 5 $ goods.

—We have received a copy of the catalogue of the Excelsior Wire and Poultry Supply Company, 28 Vesey street, New York city. It is the most complete catalogue of its kind ever issued and any one interested in poultry should have a copy. It will be mailed free for the asking.

UNDER ONE TITLE NOW.

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1.

Mrs. Harry Baglin, Mrs. Sargent, Mrs. Leland, Miss Nash and Miss May Doud, all members of the Woman's Relief Corps. The above mentioned compose the young women of the Corps and it was by special agreement that they should have charge of the affair, while the older members were allowed to enjoy their supper with the veterans. The supper was all to be desired and consisted of the best things to be found in the market. This was the finishing touch to the very complete programme arranged and it was not the least enjoyable. After all had been well supplied a general hand-shake was indulged in and the company dispersed, all feeling much better that all were one under one flag.

AN OLD VETERAN KILLED.

Was on His Way to This City to Attend a G. A. R. Meeting.

George W. Brady, sixty nine years old, of Flagtown, was struck and instantly killed at noon Tuesday by a fast express on the Lehigh Valley Railroad, near Flagtown. The old man was deaf and had been warned not to go on the tracks. He was hurled a long distance and his body was terribly mangled. The engineer did not see Brady until it was too late to stop his train.

Mr. Brady was formerly a resident of this city and lived here many years. He was a member of Post No. 73, G. A. R., of this city, and it is supposed that he was on his way to Plainfield to attend the meeting of his Post, held last evening.

Only a short time ago Mr. Brady received an injury to his eye and was treated at the hospital. He was obliged to lose his eye, which was removed by Dr. Ard. For some time past he had been living with friends at Boycefield, not far from where he was killed.

Soon after the sad affair the members of the Post in this city were notified and they at once prepared to take charge of the body. The funeral will be held from the late home and members of the Post will attend in a body.

Americans are the most inventive people on earth. To them have been issued nearly 800,000 patents, or more than one-third of all the patents issued in the world. No discovery of modern years has been of greater benefit to mankind than Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, or has done more to relieve pain and suffering. J. W. Vaugn, of Oakton, Ky., says: "I have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrœa Remedy in my family for several years, and find it to be the best medicine I ever used for cramps in the stomah and bowels. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

—Randolph's pepsin sherbit soda relieves light cases of indigestion and dyspepsia.

—Invitations are out for the dance at the Casino which is to follow the concert of the Yale Clubs there on Tuesday evening of Easter week. The dance will be specially for the college boys and only members of the Yale Club of the city and their sons will be invited.

AMOS H. VAN HORN, Ltd.

Always Busy

—we KNOW why we are. Really small prices for the BEST there is in furniture and carpets, sold on EASY PAYMENT PLAN make us so. We deliver free ANYWHERE in New Jersey—note this fact.

"Insurance" Gasoline Stove—does not explode. Prices, from $5.45 up.

Baby Carriages—finest line ever shown in city. Above carriage $4.85. Other prices up to $40.

White Enamel Beds—from $3.00 to $50.00. Large stock.

Couches—50 different patterns, all the new coverings, like above cut, $5.75.

Bureaus—white enamel and maple, to match beds.

FOLDING BEDS—Chiffonier style Folding Bed, only $8.75. Others at $12, $15, $20, up to $60.

CARPETS.

Axminster, $1.25 yard
Moquettes, 75c yard
Body Brussels, 90c yard
Tapestry, 50c yard
All-wool Ingrains, 55c yard
Heavy Ingrain, 29c yard

MADE AND LAID FREE.

AMOS H. VAN HORN, Ltd.
73 Market St. Near Plane Street NEWARK, N. J.

CASH OR CREDIT. Telephone 880—Goods Delivered Free

ROAD TO BE EXAMINED.

The Residents of Piscataway Township Want Work of Surveyors Reviewed.

A caveat has been filed in the Middlesex county court, at New Brunswick, against the recording of the returns of the Surveyors of the Highway appointed by the court to lay out the road from East Bound Brook to Dunellen, through Piscataway Township.

The caveat was filed by Catherine Manning and fifty other property owners of Piscataway Township.

Judge Strong appointed to view and certify to the road Freeholders Calvin Drake, of Piscataway; Alfred Mundy, of Raritan; Furman H. Gise, of Dunellen; Abraham Feihle and Michae McFadden, of New Brunswick. They will go over the road on April 29th. The road in question runs parallel with the tracks of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, and through land owned by Dr. Ray V. Pierce.

Entertained a Euchre Club.

Miss Mabelle Force entertained the Thursday Night Euchre Club last Tuesday at the home of her sister, Mrs. Will F. Williams, of Central avenue. The first and second prizes for the women were secured by Miss Etta Krymer and Mrs. Will F. Williams, while William Tier and Edward Clark were presented with the first and second prizes for the men. Sociability interspersed with refreshments afforded an evening of pleasure to all.

Miss Edith Darby has returned home from the State Normal School to spend the Easter vacation.

ELY'S CREAM BALM is a positive cure. Apply into the nostrils. It is quickly absorbed. 50 cents at Druggists or by mail; Trial Size, 10 cents. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren St., New York City.

A Small Borough Fire.

About 11:15 Saturday night an alarm of fire was sent from Box 142, corner of Manning avenue and Somerset street, by William Van Winkle. In some way the corner of the old borough lock-up building on Linden place was set on fire and was burning pretty lively when discovered. Chief Marshal Wilson was coming out of the station house at the time and he saw the blaze. He hastily ran back and secured a pail of water, but the alarm was sent in before he reached the fire. The quick response on the part of the borough firemen was the means of saving some valuable property adjoining. The fire was speedily extinguished and the damage was very small.

—Why go to New York for your golf sticks, golf balls and everything necessary to play the game, when you can get the finest things in this line of the Plainfield Cycle Company on North avenue.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL XXX. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, APRIL 22, 1897. NO. 16

"Support the Constitution, Which is the Cement of the Union, as Well in Its Limitations as in Its Authorities."—Madison.

THE HANGING OF A YOUTH

SENTIMENT OF SOMERSET COUNTY TURNED AGAINST CLAWSON.

At First, People Felt Sorry For Him on Account of His Youth, But His Actions Caused a Reversal of Feeling.

All hope for a commutation of the sentence of death, that hangs over Elmer Clawson, the young murderer of the Somerset county jail, has been abandoned by his counsel and the matter will not again be brought up before the Court of Pardons. He will be hanged on May 12th.

Clawson's crime was peculiarly brutal and inexcusable and the only hope ever had of a commutation of his sentence lay in his possible moral irresponsibility at the end of his first trial last September, when the verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree was brought in by the jury, so great was the doubt on this point that many influential persons seriously thought of making a plea for mercy in his behalf before the Court of Pardons, but certain things that developed after the trial convinced them that the verdict was just and they made no recommendation to the Court of Pardons. In spite of this, from time to time reports have come of the probable commutation of his sentence, but they have all proved erroneous.

The case of Clawson and the sentiment of the people of Somerset county toward him are interesting. Clawson is a boy of twenty of a type frequently found in the inland counties of New Jersey. He has had practically no up-bringing. Three months was sufficient for all his educational needs, and since he was ten years old he has supported himself, chiefly by doing hard work. He not only managed to earn by doing this, but he saved up money to buy a bicycle.

Among the farmers who employed him at times was Harry Hodgett, a young Englishman, who several years ago bought a little farm in Pluckamin township in Somerset county. Last spring Hodgett had his wife and three small daughters come from England to rejoin him. He was well liked and respected. On August 29th last Clawson took his bicycle and rode over to Hodgett's farm to get work. Hodgett told him he had none. Then Clawson asked him how many cows he milked each morning. Hodgett said he milked four. Then Clawson, without any more words, drew a revolver, and, in the presence of Hodgett's wife and children, shot the young Englishman four times. Hodgett fell dead. Clawson jumped on his wheel and rode away, but was caught later in the day by a posse of farmers.

Absolutely no motive for the crime was ever found. The murderer's history revealed no characteristics that would tend to the belief that he would do such a deed. The sentiment of the community was against him, but it is possible that if certain other circumstances had not arisen he would have had its support in an appeal for mercy.

Since 1789 there has not been an execution in Somerset county. There have been murders, but in no other case except one has the evidence led to a sentence of death. The execution in the case of a negro named Johnson, who will be hanged on May 5 for the murder of a woman named Annie Rogers in 1895. He was convicted upon circumstantial evidence, but it was of such a nature that when the appeal was carried to the Supreme Court that body unanimously affirmed the sentence.

When the verdict against Clawson was brought in there was considerable sympathy for him. He was young and his moral responsibility had not been fully established. His counsel, who had been assigned to his case by Judge Magie, did everything in their power to foster this sentiment in order that when they went to the Court of Pardons they might take with them a substantial petition for mercy from the county people.

The case was taken to the Court of Errors, but a failure was made to get a new trial. Then the case was taken to the Court of Pardons. This was a few weeks ago, and there had happened in that time certain things that had banished any sympathy that might have existed for the man. In the first place certain few things had developed in his case that made it look blacker, and he had made an attempt to kill one of his jailers. Moreover, there had swept over Somerset county a wave of crime. Since the first of the year there have been two murders and two attempted murders there.

These crimes made the people think that heroic measures must be taken, and a sentiment against Clawson set in very strongly. The belief that he was justly sentenced became universal, and the desire to have him pay

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 8.

WILLIE'S PERILOUS SLIP.

A NEW MARKET LAD'S NARROW ESCAPE FROM A WATERY GRAVE.

Was Fishing in the New Market Pond when an Eel Got onto His Hook and Excited Him so that He Fell Into the Deep Water.

This is a story about a small boy and a large eel, and though fish stories are usually viewed with a good deal of susceptibility as to their truth, this one is certainly correct in all its details.

Willie Pennington is an eight-year-old boy who lives with his parents near the New Market pond. Now it seems that last Monday Willie, who is a sort of a second edition of Izaak Walton, resurrected a pole, a line and a hook which he had used last season in his efforts to inveigle the finny tribe from their native home down in the clear, cooling water that fills the above named pond. After he had got his angling tackle in good shape, Willie went out in the garden and filled a large tomato can full of worms that squirmed and tied themselves into a thousand different knots.

Thus prepared, Willie hied himself to the bank of the pond and dexterously fixed a worm on the hook, spat on it for luck, and then threw the line far out into the depths of the water where the fisherman's intuition told him he might get a bite.

Right here it may be well to say that Willie sat in a perilous position on the brink of the pond, where it slanted to such a degree that a slip would be likely to end in a spill in the water. But Willie kicked the heel of his shoe into the ground and braced himself. It was some time before Willie got a nibble, and then it was such a strong one that the youngster thought there must be a whale in the pond. Pretty soon another nibble came like the first. Suddenly, Willie realized that he had caught something, and he started to pull in the line. The catch, however, wiggled and squirmed so much that Willie lost his head for a moment and rose up not thinking of the slippery place that he was occupying.

That is where he made his mistake, for as quick as a flash Willie went splash into the pond. Willie yelled and pawed the water in the effort to get a good deeper and deeper. He went down twice and was just on the point of going down a third and last time when Clarence Sofield, who had heard the unfortunate lad's cries, appeared on the scene and plunged into the water and brought Willie to dry land again. He was finally revived and after the excitement of the episode passed off, thought was given to the eel which he had been dropped when Willie took his plunge.

It was picked up and the hook and line carefully hauled in. There on the end was a large eel, still squirming to get loose.

THE BOYS WENT ASTRAY.

STOLE TURTLES INSTEAD OF GOING TO SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

They Were Detected However, and Finally Brought Back the Pets After Being Interviewed by Mrs. Boice and Frightened.

Two little lads did not go to Sabbath-school, last Sunday, but visited the backyard of Eden A. Boice, 20 Central avenue and West Third street, instead. Now two little lads wish they had gone to Sunday-school and left Mrs. Boice's turtles alone.

Mrs. Boice likes pets, and having been presented with several little water turtles, she arranged a small pond in the rear of home and there kept the wiggling visitors. Sunday afternoon, all was quiet in the neighborhood of the Boice residence until two youthful invaders wandered around. They discovered the turtles and thereupon they coveted these same turtles. They did not consult Mrs. Boice about the matter, however, but appropriated the pets and fled. Walls have ears, it is said, and somebody, perhaps it was a fence post, told Mrs. Boice that her pets were fast disappearing in the pockets of two naughty boys.

Mrs. Boice went after the intruders to recover possession of her property. The lads fled with guilty consciences. One of the lads, who led commanded the invasion and subsequent capture, persuaded his companion to take the turtles home. Mrs. Boice found out the commander of the expidition and interviewed him soon after. The lad wept large and salty tears, and finally promised to secure the turtles and return them. And so it was that the turtles returned to their resting place after a strange tour, and the two boys wished that they had gone to Sunday-school.

—Special Marshal Whitely, of the borough, is acting chief today in the absence of Chief Wilson.

HUMANITY TO ANIMALS.

THE TOPIC DISCUSSED BY THE WOMAN'S BRANCH ALLIANCE.

A Difference of Opinion as to Whether or Not Vivisection Was Cruel—Papers Read on Both Sides—Other Matters.

The last meeting for the season of the Plainfield Branch Alliance of Unitarian and other Liberal Christian Women was held Tuesday afternoon in All Souls church. The president, Mrs. David P. Hall, was in the chair, and the subject under consideration was "Humanity toward Animals," and under this head many different issues were discussed, the first of which was vivisection. There were several papers read by the members showing both sides of the question. Some of the women thought that the practice was not harmful while others were of the opposite opinion. One woman remarked that she had a son in college who had told her that there was nothing cruel about vivisection as the animals were physically out of the reach of pain. Mrs. Krom read several articles by well known authors which showed that the practice was cruel and inhuman. Some of the women seemed inclined to doubt the statements made and were very anxious to learn whether they were true. Another member said that in her opinion she thought that the physicians as a class are tender hearted and sympathetic, and they lead a most Christ like life.

The president said that if all was true that they had heard she thought that the members ought to join the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and that a committee ought to be appointed to investigate the matter. Others thought that it was the duty of the Town Improvement Association to look after the matter.

The docking of horses' and dogs' tails was next discussed and nearly everyone thought that it was a cruel practice. One member stated that there was a law against it and that it ought to be enforced. The next subject was an important one and brought out a lively discussion. It was the wearing of birds, feathers and fur as ornaments. In connection with this Mrs. Krom read a long article which protested against such a practice. In this one everyone seemed to be of the same opinion as expressed in the article. Regarding the method as to how children should be taught humanity there seemed to be many opinions. Some were in favor of giving children more liberty, while others were of the opinion that they should not have so much. Several instances were cited where children had been taught to sacrificing to the extreme, and to this there were many adverse criticisms. One woman said that she thought there was a tendency on the part of boys to be cruel to animals, while girls were inclined to shrink when they saw animals being treated in a cruel manner. This part of the programme brought out a great many opinions which proved to be very helpful.

This was the last meeting of the Alliance for the season and the members will not meet again until next fall.

When another programme will be arranged for the winter months.

LIFE OF A SAILOR.

Rev. W. C. Crampton Relates Some Thrilling Experiences.

Rev. W. E. Crampton, of this city, gave the third part of his thrilling experiences in the Y. M. C. A. Hall, last Tuesday, before a small but appreciative audience. Those who have heard this speaker before know that he is an interesting talker and his experiences both on land and sea have been wonderful. The previous talks have been in regard to Mr. Crampton's life in the navy, but the talk last evening had to do with life on a sailing vessel. Mr. Crampton gave a chapter of the most thrilling experience, and he held his audience spell-bound for over an hour. He related his narrow escapes from water spouts in the Indian Ocean, and his experience with hard-hearted officers on board ship was perhaps the most enjoyable, although everyone present had the feeling that some people have no part at all.

Mr. Crampton is a very plain speaker, and for this reason his talks are listened to with great pleasure. It was to be regretted that the audience was so small, for the talk was a most instructive one.

Had His Lantern Stolen.

Some one helped himself to the bicycle lantern belonging to Fred P. Taylor, of Washington Park, one night last week while his wheel was standing in the rear of the Park clubhouse on Washington avenue. Another member lost a lantern the same week.

MUSIC BY YALE BOYS.

SOCIETY TURNED OUT TO ATTEND THE CONCERT IN THE CASINO.

Their Selections, Both Vocal and Instrumental, Were Artistically Rendered and Very Enthusiastically Received.

It is rare that Plainfield gives herself up so completely to an invading host as she did to the sons of old Eli Tuesday, when they came as members of the Glee, Banjo and Madolin Clubs of Yale University to give their annual concert in this city. All social functions were suspended for the time being and other entertainments were postponed so as not to conflict with the college boys. Although the sale of tickets before the concert was not unusually large, the people of Plainfield turned out when the time came and the Casino was crowded to its utmost capacity.

The Yale Clubs were on their Eastern tour and came to this city yesterday afternoon, after giving their concert in Old Point Comfort and Washington. Tonight they appear in Jersey City. Plainfield can feel highly honored that the most famous of all the college clubs should select this out of all of Jersey's many beautiful and attractive cities Aristocratic Orange did not have the privilege of listening to the Yale boys while Elizabeth had to bend to the inevitable and send a delegation of her best people to this city to hear the concert.

The concert was excellent and the audience appreciated it. There is no doubt but that the Yale boys, particularly those of the glee club, are equal *to any club of collegians in the coun*try. The programme was divided into three parts in which selections by the three clubs were arranged in delightful order Of course, there were selections that found more favor with the audience than others, but taken as a whole the concert was a creditable one and thoroughly enjoyable.

The banjo club played with a snap and vigor that made it a favorite at once. The opening selection, "The Handicap March," was rendered in a way that made that familiar two-step seem doubly inspiring. Of course, everything was encored and they had an extensive reportoire of equally attractive numbers. The club played a medley which found particular favor with the audience. The mandolin club, which is really composed of the same members as the banjo club, appeared on the programme but once. Their success with the mandolin was as great as with the banjo.

The glee club was the chief entertainer. There were some powerful voices included in the club and it was plain to be seen that the chorus was well trained. W. J. Lapman, the leader, was worthy of his position and made the bit of the evening in his solos and in the quartette. Although so ill that he was scarcely able to go through his part, he made a lasting impression, his actions and expression greatly assisting in his rendition of the selections.

A quartette, of which he was one, the others being Messrs. Schreiber, Wadsworth, and Taylor, sang negro melodies that were extremely up-to-date and fairly convulsed the audience with laughter. Lapham's song of the stuttering maid, "Babette," and the modern version of "Jonah," were greatly enjoyed. He was called back five times ere the audience was satisfied.

"Tutti Fruitt" by the glee and banjo clubs was a medley of popular airs with the accompaniment by the banjo. In the other selections, the glee club hummed an accompaniment. Everything they did, in fact, was worthy of note if space permitted.

The hall was decorated with "Yale" shields and Chinese lanterns. After the concert, the chairs were cleared away and the rest of the evening spent in dancing. The dance was an invitation affair for the benefit of the Yale boys.

Appointments for Jerseymen.

The entire New Jersey delegation in the House, and Senator Sewell have endorsed Isaac Moffett, of Glasboro, N. J., for Collector of Internal Revenue of the First District, and the papers have been filed at the Treasury Department. Mr. Moffett will, it is confidently expected, be appointed within a short time. Walter S. Brown, of Vineland, has applied for the position of Chief Clerk of the Internal Revenue Bureau. Congressman Fowler has indorsed E. W. Woolly for postmaster at Union, Union county. There is no doubt of Mr. Woolly's appointment.

New Market Postmaster.

The following New Jersey Postmasters were appointed yesterday: Deerfield Street, Cumberland county, W. G. Brooks, vice J. G. Lewellen, removed; Newmarket, Middlesex county, C. S. Day, vice W. J. Nelson, removed.

A PENETRATING LIGHT.

THE X-RAY MACHINE INSTALLED AT MUHLENBERG HOSPITAL.

It is the Gift of Miss Elizabeth C. Morris and is Highly Appreciated by Staff of Physicians—Already Used.

The Edison X-ray apparatus was Tuesday completely installed at Muhlenberg Hospital, and proved to be a very powerful and perfect machine. Already it has been brought into service in the examination of the broken arm of a little girl, showing a perfect union of the fractured bone.

This most useful addition to the hospital equipment was the gift of Miss Elizabeth C. Morris, of Central avenue, through her physician, Dr. George W. Endicott, to whom she entrusted the selection and purchase of the apparatus. The machine was made and installed by the Edison Manufacturing Company, of No. 110 East Twenty-third street, New York. It is the most powerful X-ray apparatus that has been made, and has been designed entirely by Thos. A. Edison. A handsome brass plate, beautifully engraved by Robert H. Radford, will be placed by the hospital upon the machine, bearing the name of the donor and the date, April 20th, 1897.

Among the numerous scientific achievements of the last half century perhaps none is destined to take precedence of Prof. Roentgen's discovery of the X rays.

It is impossible to estimate at the present time the far-reaching influence that this latest product of modern science may exert, in opening up *fresh field to the scientific investi*gator, and in ameliorating the lot of suffering humanity. When a few months ago Prof. Roentgen electrified the whole world by the announcement of the marvelous results that had attended his experiments in this new matter, Mr. Edison immediately gave his attention to the question of producing apparatus by which this discovery could be used practically to the requirements of the medical and scientific professions.

By means of this weird, penetrating light, it is now possible to localize the exact position of bullets and other foreign substances in the human body, to minutely examine all fractures and dislocations of the bones, and to observe the actual motions of the heart.

TO RHYME AND ORATORY

RAN THE MIND OF A DRUNKEN MAN TUESDAY AFTERNOON.

John Mellen Recited Poetry and Other Literary Gems While Under the Influence of Jersey Lightning—Arrested.

The poet laureate of Union county arrived in Plainfield Tuesday afternoon and entertained a portion of the population of this staid city with some of his choice compositions. John Mellen is the classical name of this wonderful man. Mellen has a peculiarity which makes him an interesting character. He is well educated, but his mind does not take its poetical turn until the fumes of "Jersey lightning" begin to penetrate the cells in the grey matter of his brain. Then poems, original and otherwise, magnificent orations and declamations flow forth.

Mellen is a resident of Summit and a carpenter by trade, but that does not affect his wonderful ability. For late the necessary drive, used to confert his mind into a well from which poems of the latest up-to-date style may be drawn, has drawn forth the contents of his pocketbook until it now presents the appearance of having been stepped on by a native from Piscataway. So he decided to wend to Somerville where he was offered a job.

On the way the poet laureate stopped in Plainfield to rest his weary limbs and quench his thirst. The fluency lightning was tempting, and also the coldness of West Third street were treated to a few well selected recitations. As the spell grew stronger his eloquence waxed louder until Patrolman Flanagan was attracted by the noise. The officer placed the man under arrest for disturbing the peace and started to lead his prisoner to the lockup. But this lack of appreciation of talent, the poet thundered forth Marc Antony's address to the Romans. That didn't phase the policeman, so he dealt out Shakespeare and tried the effects of Patrick Henry. Flanagan still pressed forward and Byron, Thackeray, Holmes and Longfellow were successively quoted to the delight of the small army of followers that the poet laureate had attracted. Then he tried something original and with a flourish, prating with wonderful generalizations on political economy, French history, and various other subjects. Finally he was in the rookery where he spent the night and was arraigned before the City Judge n xt morning, penitent and quiet. He was sixty years old and a veteran of the Civil War. He pleaded for mercy and the Judge suspended sentence if he would leave for Somerville at once. Mellen left and is now probably entertaining a select audience in the Somerset county seat.

WAS ARSON INTENDED?

A SMALL FIRE WAS DISCOVERED IN IVINS & CO.'S LUMBER YARD.

Detective Blackford Saw the Light From the Railroad Embankment and Extinguished the Flames—Lumber Nearby.

If Detective John L. Blackford had not happened to be walking down the railroad track, last Tuesday, at about 8 p. m., the large lumber yard, owned by DeWitt C. Ivins & Co., would probably be a heap of smoking ruins at the present time. There seems no doubt but that an attempt was made to set fire to the lumber yard, and that the only reason that the attempt was unsuccessful was that Blackford happened to see the blaze before it gained any headway. The fire was not visible from the street or rear of the yard, while it was partially hidden from the railroad embankment by the fence.

The lumber yard above mentioned is located on Watchung avenue, next to the railroad, on the eastern side of the street. It is a large one and well stocked with lumber, lathing, and has commodious coal sheds.

It was a few minutes after eight o'clock when Detective Blackford and his father-in-law were walking down the track in the direction of Washington street, with the intention of going home. When they reached a point on the embankment opposite the yard, Blackford noticed a small light in the yard behind the fence. At first he thought it was a lantern, but closer inspection showed that a small fire was burning close to one of the tall piles of lumber.

He entered the yard at once and found a heap of torn papers covered by pieces of broken lath blazing away quite lively. It evidently had not been started ten minutes before. It was directly under the projecting sides of one of the piles of lumber and not five feet from another huge pile of lathing.

Blackford extinguished the flames by kicking dirt over the fire and then reported the matter to the police.

This morning Chief Grant and Assistant Chief Martin, of the fire department, investigated. There was no odor or signs of kerosene, but the sticks seemed to be laid on in too regular order to be the result of chance and a spark from a passing locomotive. There is a theory that the papers may have been blown there by the wind and set fire by a spark, but appearances point toward a different theory for the cause.

SPORTING GOODS.

Complete Stock Carried by the Plainfield Cycle and Sporting Goods Company.

Plainfield has a thoroughly up-to-date cycling and sporting goods house, and the days have passed when a person is obliged to go to New York to secure such things. The Plainfield Cycle and Sporting Goods Company, of North avenue, have taken particular pains to see that a complete stock of everything needed in the sporting goods line is kept in their store. At this place you can purchase anything and everything you want to make a happy and enjoyable summer. They have one of the best stock of wheels to be found in this State, and they are all guaranteed. They also have golf and base-ball goods, of the very best make, and the pleasing part of it is that you don't have to pay fancy prices at this place. Their stock of sundries is unsurpassed and if you are in need of anything in this line you can depend on securing it at this store. Charles Lister is the efficient manager and he has a number of obliging clerks under him that are always ready to give you any information that you may want. A partial list of the wheels recently sold by the above company is as follows:

Thomas Sheppard, H. VanNess, W. Whitehead, J. Clifton, have purchased Marvel wheels; L. E. Linderman, J. Arden and Frank Cullen have purchased Cutting wheels, C. B. Purdy, Keating; A. Hoffman and M. Cashin, Apollo.

Miss Savage, of Rahway, is the guest of Miss Lula Cruikshank, of Belvidere avenue.

Miss Florence Robinson, of Paterson, has returned to her home after a visit with her friend, Miss Charlotte DeMeza, of West Second street.

Miss Fannie Western will entertain a number of her friends at her home on Washington avenue, Saturday evening, with a progressive euchre party.

The condition of Fred W. Leland, of West Second street and Central avenue, who has been seriously ill for the past week with pneumonia, is reported as being much improved today.

Rev. W. E. Honeyman, secretary of the Board of Health, who has been at the bedside of Mrs. Honeyman's sick mother, is confined to the house himself now with an attack of illness.

MAKING THIN GOWNS.

SUCCESS OF TWO SOUTHERN GIRLS IN A NOVEL ENTERPRISE.

They Have a Better Idea of Making Summer Dresses Than Northern Women, and, Putting Their Skill to the Test, Have Been Amply Rewarded.

Some years ago it became necessary for a Southern young woman to earn her own living. She came to New York, and after a course of study for a profession was forced by circumstances to change her plans. Her money was getting low and she was beginning to feel desperate, when she received a visit from a girl friend. This visit proved the turning point in the lives of both girls, and in speaking of it the one who had come here to earn a living said:

"It was merely a social call. My friend had come on to New York to act as bridesmaid at a wedding which occurred in the season at Hastings. We were discussing, after the wedding and several of the social affairs, she had attended when she remarked that New York ladies looked so much better on the streets than at an evening entertainment. This, you know, is quite the reverse of things at the South. We are both Southerners. There the ladies look so much better in their evening gowns than on the street and so much better in summer than in winter clothes.

"We fell to discussing this point of difference between Northern and Southern women, and the cause of it. We knew it was no fault of the Northern complexion or physique, for in both the Northern women surpass the Southerners.

"My friend said it was because they didn't know how to make light gowns. They tried to make them too much after the fashions intended for heavy goods, and in that way lost the dainty airy effect.

"The remark set me to thinking, and I remembered that I had always been successful with my summer and evening gowns, and had always been in demand among my girl friends in planning and designing theirs. I couldn't sew myself well, I knew, but I also knew I could plan and, as I was always thinking of some way I might earn money, this appealed to me at once. So I suggested that we form a partnership to design summer and ball gowns. My friend took to the idea at once, and we began on the spot to consider how we should start in.

"Neither of us could command a dollar's worth of capital and so we had to feel sure of things before we began. We drew and colored quite roughly about two dozen designs. These we carried to our acquaintances among the society people of New York and asked their opinion, telling our plans. In almost every instance we received certain one or more gowns. When these orders became sufficient to warrant it we began work by hiring the best French dressmakers and fitters, and turned out well finished gowns in every respect. America makes the daintiest muslins in the world, and why shouldn't they be made into gowns to the greatest perfection by an American firm. At to the increase in our business I have told you how it began, and now you can see for yourself," motioning to the adjoining rooms of busy workers. We have a large patronage in and around New York. We have engaged to furnish a magazine with several designs each month, and one of the large dry goods houses, which has a large ready-made dress goods department, has applied to us for some designs."—New York Sun.

Saved Again.

Mrs. Bimley met her husband in the hall and gave him a good hug and kiss.

"Oh, George," she said, "I'm so glad you've come. Your slippers are by the fire, and I have a nice hot supper for you, and some of that quince marmalade you like so well. When you are weary I'm at home. I don't know what to do, and I thought I would ask you if—"

"Here," said Bimley, hurriedly drawing from his pocket a twenty-dollar bill, "this is for a spring bonnet, and I'll run down to the diamond earrings sent up first thing in the morning. Don't say a word; you are perfectly welcome."

Later on Bimley wiped the perspiration from his brow and muttered to himself:

"Got that visit from her mother headed off once more, but it comes high."—Detroit Free Press.

Trouble Ahead.

"Mr. McKinley is likely to see some pretty lively times," said the passenger with the silk skull cap.

"You bet your boots," said the passenger with the hay-colored neck-whiskers. "The Baptists have nominated one man for postmaster down our way an' the Methodists another, an' they both sent dillygations to Washington this week, an' I calculate that they will both swoop down on 'im at the same time. I wouldn't be in that man's shoes for all the money they is in his job."

"Which faction do you belong to, may I ask?"

"Me? Oh, I'm a Bobingersoll man; only one in the township, but she has a hundred an' fifty voters."—Indianapolis Journal.

Origin of the Polka.

Sixty years ago an Austrian cook, finding herself dull in the kitchen, sang and danced in there for her own amusement. The cook's mistress, having surprised her during her impromptu dance, ordered her to dance and sing in the presence of a dancing-master, who took notes of the performance. That was the origin of the polka.—Answers.

CUSTOMS OF THE MIKADO.

His Majesty's Methods of Dealing With Ministers and Peoples.

His Majesty's daily customs are very peculiar. He always goes to his study at 9 a. m., and remains at work there until 4 p. m. He reads and signs all parliamentary laws and decrees.

When a Cabinet minister addresses his Majesty concerning any public matter he inquires about the subject, the purpose and condition, and decides it. He is firm and not changeable. When he decides a matter once he can not after that be moved.

At the beginning of Matsukata's Cabinet, Parliament decided to reduce the salaries of the Cabinet ministers and other government officers. The Prime Minister, Count Matsukata, addressed his Majesty about it. His Majesty borrowed money, all Cabinet ministers therefore can not do so. Therefore, I can not consent to the reduction of salaries."

Count Matsukata retired from his Majesty. However, the Cabinet once more debated the question with the Count, and Matsukata went again to consult the Emperor.

His Majesty was not inclined to see him again, and sent an attendant to say to him: "I have already consented about the reduction of salaries. I can not see you any more."

The salaries were, therefore, not reduced.

His Majesty dislikes all pretense and hypocrisy.

When it has been reported to His Majesty that some of his subjects have given their lives in times of flood or earthquake to preserve his Majesty's picture, he has been much touched; but he is anxious to discourage his subject from such Quixotism, and to preserve them from any but necessary danger.

Withal, the Emperor's life is a very happy and peaceful one, blessed by the love and respect of grateful subjects; and when his Majesty makes a tour anywhere in Japan without his guards he is in no danger, but is received everywhere with reverence and joy.—Japanese American Voice.

A Novel Invention.

A Russian philanthropist has just completed an invention which should bring comfort to the minds of those who have the fear of premature burial always before them. It is a coffin devised with a tube, the lower end of which is placed a little above the chest of the presumed corpse, while the upper end rises above the surface of the ground. The slightest respiration leads to the loud peal of an electric bell arranged at the top of the tube, while at the same moment a small flag is shot out for the purpose of indicating to any one who may be on the watch the precise grave at which the phenomenon has occurred. Simultaneously air and light penetrate into the coffin, the tenant of which can converse without the least effort or difficulty with the persons who have hastened to his rescue.

Mixed As To Dates.

A gentleman was riding on the outside of a coach in the West, when the driver said to him:

"I've had a coin guv' me to-day 200 years old. Did you ever see a coin 200 years old?"

"Oh, yes; I have one myself 2,000 years old."

"Ah!" said the driver, "have ye?" and spoke no more during the rest of the journey.

When the coach arrived at its destination the driver turned to the other with an intensely self-satisfied air and said:

"I told you as we drav' along I had a coin 200 years old."

"Yes, so I have."

"That's not true."

"What do you mean by that?"

"What do I mean? Why, it's only 1897 now!"

Paternal Shortsightedness.

Old Gotrox (indignantly)—"I am surprised, sir, that you should be so destitute of all reason as to ask for my daughter's hand in marriage!" Young Hardupp—"Well, you needn't be; that girl has some really fine points about her; you don't know her as well as I do, or you would think the world of her."—Puck.

Cause for Complaint.

Weller—What's the matter, old man? Seems to me better enough! I ordered a plaster cast of some famous sculpture to be used as a sign for my glove store, and they sent me the Venus of Milo.—New York Journal.

To Train the Voice.

Trainer—'SS-st, Jim! I hev me eye on wun ov de greates' trainin' groun's fer yer on de map.

Jim Tawk—Where?

Trainer—S-hi! it's de mammoth cave.

Jim Tawk— W'ot good is a cave fer trainin'?

Trainer—Look at de great practice yer'll get wid yer echo.—Judge.

Extent of His Privileges.

"Who is that slovenly looking man over there by the piano?"

"Eh! That Mr. Vlimmerdown, the famous musician."

"Well, I've no objection to his tangled hair, if he's a musician, but he has no right to wear those dirty cuffs, by George! He's not a literary man."—Chicago Tribune.

TAXING CHURCH PROPERTY.

Rev. Madison C. Peters Takes an Unusual Position Against Taxation.

The pastor of the Bloomingdale Reformed Church of New York, Rev. Madison C. Peters, argues on the taxation of church property in this wise: "The American people would rise up in rebellion against direct taxation for church support, but what is exemption from taxation but an indirect State support of the church, a virtual subsidy for its support, and at the expense of the general public? Taxes have to be paid, and the property that is exempt or relieved from the payment of the tax roll, is simply spread upon the other property. Everybody's tax goes up at least one-tenth in New York city because of the exemption of church property."

"The churches enjoy no immunity from the operations of the laws of God. They place roofs upon their buildings to keep out the rain, and put up lightning rods to prevent the lightning from striking them. If God does not vary his laws for the benefit of the churches, why should the State be expected to do so?"

"It is argued that many churches are not self-sustaining at present, and that to tax them would render them still less so. Thousands are less able to provide for their children because of the tax collector. Why should the laborer pay taxes upon his humble home and the religious corporation be exempted?"

"The saloon keeper by force of law is compelled to help pay the taxes on my church, in the use of which I denounce his infernal traffic. If the saloon keeper is taxed to support my church, in all fairness he ought to have something to say in its management. No taxation without representation."

"Churches are undoubtedly a public benefit, but if the doctrine of benefits be furnished as a reason for exemption on behalf of religious corporations, it refutes itself by proving more than the State can admit without bankruptcy. It proves that all other institutions which are public benefits. It costs the community something to enjoy property, and if the Church paid taxes, it would pay only its honest share to secure its enjoyment of the use of property."

"Taxation of church property is to the interest of American principles, and in harmony with the experience of nations. Taxing one man for the propagation of another man's religion is admittedly unjust, and however, it is a relic of the principle of Church and State alliance, inherited from the Old World, and not yet eliminated from our political system."

PEOPLE OF P-OMINENCE.

Mrs. John Sherman, wife of the Secretary of State, is an elderly woman, well read and fully interested in current events. Next year she and Secretary Sherman will be able to celebrate their golden wedding.

Mrs. Miles, the wife of General Miles, and Mrs. Cameron, the wife of Senator Cameron, are two very well-known and distinguished women in Washington society. They are sisters, and are nieces of Secretary Sherman, their father being Judge Sherman, of Cleveland, Ohio.

Mrs. McKinley is extremely fond of children, and has many loyal little friends and admirers in different parts of the country. The loss of her two little daughters more than twenty years ago has been a ceaseless grief to both Mrs. McKinley and her husband. Mrs. McKinley's health has never been entirely restored since the affliction came upon her. Her little nieces and nephews are great pets with her, and the White House will still echo with the patter of little feet and the music of childish voices.

Mr. Stratton, the Cripple Creek millionaire, who used to be a day laborer, refuses to go into any money-making schemes on the ground that he wants to keep his income down and not increase it. He doesn't seem yet to have learned that many so-called money-making schemes urged on millionaires are admirably calculated to reduce incomes to zero.

General "Joe" Shelby left a most interesting collection of relics of the Confederacy. One of his prized possessions was a daguerreotype of three boys—Shelby himself, Frank Blair and B. Gratz Brown. It is recalled that Shelby's mother was both rich and generous, and when she sent her son to school in Philadelphia she sent the other boys, who were poor, with him.

THE WAY OF THE WORLD.

Party with Basket (to left)—Ah, that's the way of the world! Yesterday I had chicking in my basket an' he was my willin' slave; to-day she's got turkey and cold puddin's in her basket an' he don't reckernize me!—Truth.

OUR INDIAN POLICE.

The Change on the Reservations that Has Been Made in the Last Few Years.

The past few years have witnessed wonderful changes on the Indian reservations of the Northwest, which have in all cases been for the better; and, where formerly all was disorder and turmoil now none is so systematized that the Indian agencies present the appearance of well regulated cities. The present discipline of the Indians is the result, to a great extent, of the excellence of the police force, which is now a recognized fixture at all Indian agencies.

These peace officers are always Indians and compose a force that for efficiency and bravery cannot be surpassed. The ordinary Indian, who would naturally be disposed to create trouble whenever he had an opportunity, is not now so anxious to do so out of fear of a visit from a squad of police. The wrong-doer, no matter if he lives on the very outskirts of the reservation, sixty or eighty miles from the agency, knows that a visit from the police will be paid him in the sun rise and set, and he knows also that he will receive prompt punishment for whatever crime he has committed.

He may attempt to elude the policemen, but they are veritable bloodhounds and never fail to find their man, no matter to what part of the reservation he may go.

Indian policemen are appointed by the United States Indian agent in charge of the reservation, subject to the approval of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs. Captains and lieutenants receive a salary of $15 per month, and privates $10. There is considerable rivalry for the positions, and many individuals serve for years without carring to take advantage of their right to resign at any time.

Great Men as Lovers.

Byron was foolishly jealous of every woman he ever loved. His loves ran well into two figures, and he managed sooner or later to make every one miserable.

Heinrich Heine, the poet, was also terribly jealous. One day he poisoned a parrot belonging to his lady-love for fear it should claim too much of her attention.

"The Rivals" is a true story of Sheridan's courtship, the character of Lydia Languish in the life play being taken by Miss Linley, who became the author's wife.

Thomas Moore was always in love. If you look through his poems one may find the names of some sixteen different ladies to whom he swore eternal fidelity.

When Burns was courting Highland Mary, they went to a stream, and, standing one on each side, clasped hands and swore to be true to each other on a Bible.

It is said that when the great Goethe was first in love, he carved upon a tree in a neighboring forest a number of hearts, united by a scroll, and a little later received a sound thrashing from the forester for damaging the tree!—Tid-Bits.

Hard or Soft Boiled Eggs.

Bishop Paret of Baltimore was guest of a family in West Virginia. Learning from the bishop that he was fond of hard-boiled eggs for breakfast, his hostess went to the kitchen to boil them herself.

Whilst so engaged she began to sing the first stanza of a hymn. Then she sang the second verse, the bishop, who was in the dining-room, joining in.

When it was finished, there was a silence, and the bishop remarked:

"Why not sing the third verse?"

Then the verse was answered the lady, as she came into the room, carrying the steaming eggs; "oh, that is not necessary!"

"I don't understand," said Bishop Paret.

"Did you see," she said, "when I am cooking eggs I always sing one verse for soft-boiled eggs and two for hard-boiled!"

Bicycle Comment.

If you want to get a cement that really sticks, you may try twenty kinds before you hit the right one. A German formula is here given which has stood the test of time, and which any one can make. Take of bisulphide of carbon, 100 drachms; gutta percha 20 drachms; caoutchouc, 40 drachms; isinglass, 10 drachms. Bottle and shake frequently until a pasty mixture is formed. This cement is dropped into the crevices after they have been properly cleaned. If the rent is very big, apply the cement in layers. Bind up the tire lightly with thread, let dry for twenty-four to thirty-six hours, cut off the thread, and remove the protruding cement with a sharp knife, which must previously have been dipped in water.

Butler's Flags.

On February 21, 1806, Gen. Benjamin F. Butler presented to congress the first genuine American flag, made of American materials and by American labor, ever constructed in this country.

Prior to that time all American government flags had been made of English bunting. Since then all our official flags have been the product exclusively of American material and labor. There were twenty-six stars in the flag at that time.—New York Press.

Incredulous Sam Jones.

At one of Sam Jones' meetings he called on all the men who could assert they were sure to go to heaven if they would rise to stand. Up got two. "Now," he said, "all the women who never spoke an unkind word to their husbands may rise." Up got six. "Sit down," Sam cried. "Now, I want the audience to pray for these liars!"—Time and The House.

WILSON BARRETT IN DUBLIN.

He Wasn't So Flattered When He Learned the Reason of His Ovation.

Here is a good story of Wilson Barrett. Shortly after he had joined the theatrical profession, he became a member of a company performing at the Theatrical Royal, Dublin. Barrett naturally, was a small one, as Mrs. Barrett had no expectation whatever of receiving any signs of approval from the audience.

Greatly to his surprise, however, his first small speech was greeted with a round of applause. This unlooked for triumph quite elated the young actor, and he exerted himself to the utmost in the endeavor to sustain the good impression he appeared to have made. He succeeded even beyond his hopes. Everything he said or did was rapturously applauded, and the principal performers were thrown completely in the shade.

The "stars" were, of course, disgusted, and the rest of the company were in amazement, none more so than young Barrett himself. He ceased to wonder at the cause of his unexpected ovation, but with the natural vanity of youth, he considered that these Dublin folk showed a rare appreciation of budding merit. However, he was shortly to be undeceived.

Just as he was leaving the theatre one of the scene-shifters grimingly accosted him.

"Sure, ye wor cock o' the walk last night, sir."

"Well, yes, Micky," returned the actor, with pardonable pride; "I think I knocked 'em a bit—eh?"

"Och, sir," said Micky, "sure it wasn't that at all; but it's got about among the boys that ye're a brother of the man that was hung!"

A Fenian, named Barrett, had that morning paid the extreme penalty of the law.

It was very long afterward," said Mr. Barrett, in telling the story, "ere I again ventured to pride myself on my acting."

Scrupulously Exact.

The following anecdote has an "Arabian Nights" flavor: The beggars of Constantinople, who form a regular business of begging, and own a large amount of property. A poor English governess, attached to one of the ambassadors' families, was very charitable, and to a certain particular beggar she was accustomed to give a piastre (four cents) twice a week. One day she missed a sovereign (five dollars) from her purse, and thought she must have given it to the beggar by mistake. After making inquiries, she followed him to his home. She found him arrayed in a magnificent robe, like a pasha. He listened to her graciously, and sent a servant for the bag containing the day's collection from the credulous. "I never like to lose a good client," said he; "and as you are a Christian you shall have it here enough the lira was there, said the girl, having received it, thanked him, and was hurrying away, when he said, "Wait a minute; you haven't given me the piastre."

Asking a Favor.

It having been the custom in a certain establishment in the North to pay the workers fortnightly, and the workers having found it the custom to ask for what inconvenient, it was decided to send a delegate to the head of the firm to state their grievance. An Irishman, named Dan D——, famed for his eloquently and persuasive powers, was selected for the task. He duly waited on the master, who addressed him thus:

"Well, Daniel, what can we do for you this morning?"

"If ye plase, sur, I've been sint as a delgate by the workers to ask a favor, or rigardin' the paymint of our wages."

"Yes; and what do they desire?" queried the master.

"Well, sur, it is the desire of meself and it is also the desire of ivery man in the establishment that we might have our fornight's pay ivery week."—Tid-Bits.

Ingenious Misapplication.

In some cases it seems impossible to find a defective memory. A teacher of American history had a great deal of trouble with one of her scholars in making him remember dates, especially the date of the discovery of America by Columbus, which he declared was in 1493. Thinking to aid him in remembering the correct date, she gave him the following rhyme to memorize:

"Fourteen hundred and ninety-two Columbus sailed the ocean blue."

The next day she asked him to repeat the verse to her. He arose to his feet with a confident air, and said:

"In fourteen hundred and ninety-three Columbus sailed the ocean blue."

After that, the teacher abandoned her efforts to strengthen that particular pupil's memory.

Greasing the Elephants.

Twice a year the elephants and the rhinoceros in the Central Park menagerie of New York get a coating of neatsfoot oil, which is thoroughly rubbed in with the palm of the hand. The filling and the manipulation cleanse the skin, remove the dead skin, and open the pores, freshen the animals up, and improve their health, and they seem to like the process. The oiling is done in the spring and summer, for if done in the winter the animals would be likely to take cold from it.—New York Sun.

Not a Material Difference.

"After all," said the Cummilyfax sage, "there's not so great a difference between me and a fool."

"No?" said the grocery loafer.

"No. He wears his clothes wore, and my clothes are well worn."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

AN HISTORIC DIFFICULTY.

Kindly Requested to Invent in Line of Unknown Facts.

Madame Novikoff was at a Sunday party at Holland House in the days of its mistress, and was seated between Lord Houghton and Mr. Kinglake. The latter observed, in answer to a remark of the Russian lady, that historians were sometimes very badly trusted.

"What do you mean?" asked Madame Novikoff, rather puzzled.

"Well," answered Kinglake, quoting from discussing some grave topic, "just take my case for example. As you know I am supposed to be an historian. The other day I got a letter which really touched me. It was signed by two people, husband and wife, and came from one of our Colonies. They described their grief. Their only child, it seemed, had been killed in the Crimea. For some incomprehensible reason they were most anxious to have their beloved darling mentioned in the history of the Crimean War. Surprised, but flattered, I replied by return of post—a thing I have not done for many many years—that I would be happy to do my best for their comfort, provided they sent me the necessary particulars. Again a letter, written and signed by both father and mother, arrived, but with the following cruel addition: 'We have no particulars whatever. He was killed on the spot, like many others, and anything you may kindly invent will be welcome; we leave it entirely to your judgment.'"

THE HINT WAS TAKEN.

Aggressive Youth More Effacious Than Gentle Old Age.

A dear old clergyman once exchanged pulpits with a younger brother minister well known for his aggressiveness. Before the service the reluctant pastor told his substitute that the window behind the pulpit was broken, but requested the latter to say nothing about it, as he had spoken several times without effect. He added that the hymn books were badly torn; and finished by saying in an apologetic tone that he didn't suppose the people could afford new ones.

The younger minister promised to refrain from making any remarks upon these matters. After beginning the service he found a draught from the window unendurable, and quietly took his overcoat and stuffed it through the broken glass. The deacons became very uneasy, inwardly resolving to remedy this at the earliest possible moment. When the preacher announced the second hymn he found the last two stanzas missing. He read what he had, then said to the congregation,—

"These are all the verses in my book; if there any more in yours you may dispense with them."

Needless to say the window was mended and new hymnals provided before the next Sunday.

Getting Rid of the Chinese.

A board school teacher tells the following tale with much gusto:

"I was giving a geography lesson on China the other day, and mentioned its vast population—over 400 millions. To present some idea of what such a tremendous number implied, I explained that if we calculated what must be the corresponding number of deaths among the Chinese, there must be at least two persons die every time we take a breath. The illustration somewhat startled the boys, and I was pleased to see I had grasped that it had been appreciated. During the morning I noticed a little fellow who appeared very uncomfortable. His face was flushed with exertion, and he was pulling and wheezing like an asthmatic steam engine.

"'What is the matter, Tommy?' I inquired, with alarm; 'what are you doing?'

"'Killing Chinamen,' he answered, ecstatically. 'I don't like them foreigners at all, and I'm a-getting rid of just as many as I can.'—Tid-Bits.

The Rats and the Missing Check.

A remarkable incident is brought to our notice by the Bristol post-office, and, what is more, it is a story with a happy ending. Some days ago a letter containing a check for upwards of £300 was posted to a gentleman's business address in the city, and although there was proof that it was delivered during the evening, the addressee declared that the important missive had not reached him. Subsequently, however, it occurred to him that as the business premises were infested with rats, and as everything put through the aperture in the door, in the absence of a letter box, dropped on the floor, the postal authorities might not after all, be responsible for the strange disappearance of the letter. A search which he instituted was completely successful. On looking behind a cupboard in the basement, he discovered two huge rats actually fighting for the possession of a dust-besmeared envelope, which on being opened was found to be none other than the one that contained the check.—Bristol Mercury.

Improved Two Fast.

Mrs. Smith (thoughtfully)—I'm afraid I shall have to stop giving Bobby that tonic the doctor left for him.

Mr. Smith (anxiously)—Why, isn't he any better?

Mrs. Smith—Oh, yes! But he has slid down the banisters six times this morning, broken the hall lamp, two vases, a pitcher and a looking-glass, and I don't feel as if I could stand much more.—Harper's Bazar.

Couldn't be Finisher.

Perdita—My duty toward him, then, is plain, you think?

Penelope (emphatically, but thoughtfully)—P'ain as your face, my dear.

EASTER SUNSHINE.

"Yes, it is going to rain," Miss Torrance said, with a sigh, as she turned from the window. There were already premonitory drops on the doorstep.

It was the afternoon of the day before Easter, and this little woman had set her hopes upon sunshine for the morrow.

Miss Torrance, looking down upon her tidy little flower-border, heaved a deeper sigh; yet she smiled, too, through a mist of tears, as her eyes rested on the array of dazzling white chalices in bloom under her sitting-room window.

"The rain would certainly ruin them, so I may as well go out and gather them while it is light," she said, resignedly.

These lilies had a history. They were blooming this Easter for the first time since the lonely little maiden lady had planted them in the prim flower-border beside the porch, when she came to Weston a stranger, three years before. She had brought the bulbs from the graves of her kindred, in a far distant place, and very precious they were to her.

Miss Torrance was alone in the world; and though a measure of good fortune had fallen to her lot in these latter days, she had known many bitter sorrows and privations in her nearly fifty years of life. She had once made one of a large, happy and prosperous family, who kept all festivals with cheer and interchange of gifts. But her boy was her nearest and dearest, and died, and she was left to grow old alone, without resources, among strangers.

She was shy, and though she won kindness always, she had not the gift of making those close friends with whom joys and sorrows are to be shared. Moreover, in the struggle to maintain herself, she was forced to drift from place to place, so that old acquaintances lost sight of her.

She had not been content in this unsettled life, but had accepted her lot cheerfully. She had never even wished her loved ones back, thinking of the hardships they had escaped, until that day when it was made known to her that old Anthony Wales, a distant kinsman, whom she had some difficulty in recalling to mind, had bequeathed her the little house and lot in Weston, with a sum which yielded a modest competence.

To Miss Torrance, so long inured to a round of poorly-paid toil, this inheritance seemed like great wealth; but when the idea first presented itself that she might live once more in a home of her own, she realized her isolation as never before.

"I shall be all alone!" she said, shudderingly. "Oh, if they could but come to life!"

Miss Torrance was at that time a governess in a young ladies' boarding-school in Kentucky. She packed her trunk and set forth upon a pilgrimage to the place of her old home in Southern Georgia, which she had not seen for twenty years.

In this time, her father's beautiful house, her childhood's home, had passed into the hands of strangers, and was no longer the same. But it was not this old roof-tree she had come to visit; it was the nook in the quiet cemetery where lay her father and mother, her four sisters and an only brother.

On a drear November day, with a gray sky and a dim sun, Miss Torrance stood once more beside these beloved graves. An anguish of homesickness, such as she had never known in all the days of her drifting homelessness, took possession of her, as she laid her hand with reverent love, now upon one lichen-stained headstone, now upon another.

Miss Torrance looked up and saw coming along the nearest pathway a bent old man; and as he drew nearer she recognized Michael Stewart, the keeper of the cemetery.

She had not the heart to make herself known to him, and leaned in silence upon her mother's tombstone, while he rested on his staff and peered at her.

"The Torrance burial lot," he said at last. "Know the fam'ly?"

"Yes," Miss Torrance answered, faintly.

"It's a dolesome pastime," the old keeper commented, "sittin' here, with the dead leaves a rustlin', an' the broom-sedge everlastin'ly whisperin' whisperin'; y' oughter see the place in the springtime, all a-bloomin' with lilies."

"Lilies?" echoed Miss Torrance, with sudden recollection. "Lilies!" she repeated softly; and a strange, new joy, born of that recollection, stirred in her heart. She remembered well the lilies that her mother had loved.

"Aye," the old man responded. "It was Madam Torrance set 'em here. There was always lilies an' lilies about the old Torrance home on Cherokee avenue, but they 'peared to all die out when the Torrances left it. There aint no more of 'em about, exceptin' right here among these Torrance graves."

Miss Torrance smiled. It made her glad to hear this.

"There was one daughter," the old man babbled on, "the last of 'em. She went away, an' maybe now is dead, too."

"I wonder," said Miss Torrance, "if it could dig some of the roots?"

"What?" cried the keeper, sharply. "You would rob these graves?"

"But I am Agatha Torrance, you know," said she, gently. "And I may never come again."

"Miss Agatha, be you?" quavered the old man. "Well-a-day! Surely you're a right to them lilies," and the old man took out his clumsy knife in order to dig for the lily bulbs.

"There!" he sighed at last, as he pulled himself up with effort. "I've took you some from each blessed sleeper; that's your'n, aint it?"

"Oh, yes! Thank you!" Miss Torrance replied with fervor, spreading out her handkerchief to receive the roots; and as she tied them up Michael Stewart talked on.

"I'll mind me of another time, once before, I'd gave some o' these same lilies," he said; "but I took 'em all from your sister Rose's bed, over there."

Miss Torrance looked up with quivering lids at the white cross inscribed "Rose Torrance, aged twenty-seven."

"It was when the Austins an' the Monroes were a-movin' away, an' you was already gone; little Mary Austin she come a-skippin' after me, an' would save some o' the lilies from Miss Rose's grave, for Miss Rose had been her Sunday school teacher. 'An' these white lilies of hers keep me in mind of the resurrection,' says the child; so what could I do, Miss Agatha, but dig 'em for her?

"She was just about thirteen that time, and a lovin'-hearted child was little Mary Austin. Well, if she's livin', God bless her, say I; an' if she's dead, God rest her. Miss Rose was four twin, wasn't she, Miss Agatha?"

Miss Torrance nodded; for the moment she could not speak.

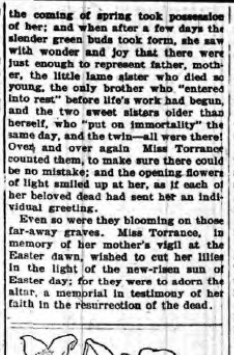
"We all do fade as a leaf," murmured the old man.

Miss Torrance's first and chief concern, when she took up her abode in the small cottage she had inherited on the outskirts of Weston, was to plant the lily bulbs in the flower-border under the sitting room window, where she could have them well in view.

Twice the spring returned and the lilies did not bloom; but no one in Weston knew the secret of that flower-border, where only the delaying lilies were allowed to grow.

When, upon the approach of the third Easter she came to live in Weston, she beheld at last the promising flower-stalks shoot up, something of the long-forgotten joy of childhood in the coming of spring took possession of her; and when after a few days the slender green buds took form, she saw with wonder and joy that there were just enough to represent father, mother, the little lame sister who died so young, the only brother who "entered into rest" before life's work had begun, and the two sweet sisters older than herself, who "put on immortality" the same day, and the twin—all were there! Over and over again Miss Torrance counted them, to make sure there could be no mistake; and the opening flowers of light smiled up at her, as if each of her beloved dead had sent her an individual greeting.

Even so were they blooming on those far-away graves. Miss Torrance, in memory of her mother's vigil at the Easter dawn, wished to cut her lilies in the light of the new-risen sun of Easter day; for they were to adorn the altar, a memorial in testimony of her faith in the resurrection of the dead.



But it was going to rain, and that pretty sentiment about gathering the lilies in the light of the rising sun must be denied. "However, it makes no real difference," Miss Torrance said to herself cheerfully, as with a shawl over her head and a pair of scissors in her hands she went out to cut her flowers.

On her knees, her back to the street, she was severing the last stalk, when she heard a childish voice say, pleadingly:

"Lady, may I have one lily? Please, lady, just one?"

Miss Torrance turned with a start. Who could have the heartlessness to demand one of these sacred lilies, she wondered, forgetting that no one else knew what they were to her.

Her eyes fell upon a little girl wrapped in a shabby red shawl, and shivering in the mist. If she had asked for bread Miss Torrance would have gladly given her food; but these Easter lilies! No! Her looks refused even before her lips uttered the word.

"Just one!" pleaded the child, piteously.

"Impossible, child," said Miss Torrance. "You don't know what you ask. I haven't one to spare, not one."

The child turned away, and passed swiftly out of sight. Miss Torrance went into the house with her precious freight.

On the table beside the window was a cut glass bowl—one of the few relics of her early home that she had been able to retain in her unsettled life. She had put it there, ready filled with water, and she began to arrange her lilies in it.

She was smiling, but she became suddenly grave, remembering the child with the wistful eyes.

"I might have given her one," she sighed in her keen regret, and all at once her pleasure in the lilies underwent a slight.

"Oh, dear! I wish it had not happened," she lamented. "But perhaps tomorrow the sun will shine, and that child's face will come to haunt me."

She carried the bowl of lilies into the passage to remove them from the heat and glare of the lamp, for it was now dark, and old Hannah, her only servant, was making ready to set the table for tea.

"Is you gwan lay dem lilies on ole Mr. Wales's grave?" Hannah inquired.

"Why, no, Hannah," Miss Torrance answered. "He was buried in South Carolina, beside his father and mother."

"Well, sho'ly!" assented Hannah, with approval. "Did you know there was a po' lady died o' Friday, up to Mis' Perrine's?"

Miss Torrance did not know; Mrs. Perrine lived some distance away and was still a stranger to this newcomer in Weston; but Hannah heard all the news of the town.

"Dey tell how she came here o' purpose ter die, Miss Torrance, so's ter be laid 'side o' her own people. An' dis po' lady, her money all give out, an' her kin was all on 'em dead, so dee buried her wid charity. But I reckon she gwine rise, all de same."

"She will rise, all the same, Hannah!" Miss Torrance responded, in a sort of ecstasy. She was thinking of her own dead, however, not of the forlorn stranger.

At half-past nine, before she took herself to bed, Miss Torrance looked out and rejoiced to see the clouds breaking in drifts, and the moon shining the more glorious for the shrouded sky; but when she awoke in the middle of the night a sobbing rain was falling, and she remembered again to her sorrow the child who begged for a lily.

"She haunts me," Miss Torrance moaned, tossing on her pillow. "I must find her to-morrow."

Soothed with this resolve, she slept again, and slept late; for no sun illumined that Easter dawn in Weston, and the rain was falling still, though with a mist-like gentleness.

Miss Torrance wished to have her lilies on the altar before the early service began; and as the church was some distance, and the town clock was striking seven when she put on her overshoes and waterproof, she knew that she had no time to lose. Therefore she took the shortest route; and thrilled through an old cemetery around which the town had grown, shutting it in every side.

At a turn in the walk she descried a few yards away, a new-made grave and then she perceived that what she saw was not a bank of clay, but a dingy red shawl, covering a little figure prone across the grave.

With a sob in her throat, Miss Torrance went near.

"Child," said she, pityingly, "what are you doing here in the rain?" Though, indeed, she saw plainly that the little moaning creature was grieving for her heart out.

The child sat up, showing a haggard face and Miss Torrance with a pang of remorse and a thrill of joy recognized the little girl who had asked for a lily.

"It is my mother," said the child. "They buried her yesterday in the morning," she began to sob piteously.

"Was it for this you wanted the lily?" Miss Torrance asked, her own tears falling as she detached a lily from the bunch she carried.

"There is nobody but me—only me to love her and remember her." sobbed the child in response.

"Will you have the lily now?" said Miss Torrance, with penitent entreaty.

The child put out a little meagre hand and took the flower, a smile flickering about her mouth that still quivered with sobs.

"But it is bad for you, sitting here in the rain," Miss Torrance remonstrated. "Where do you live?"

"I don't live anywhere now," came the heartbroken answer. "I stay at old Mrs. Perrine's, but she is going to send me to the orphan asylum."

"What is you name?" Miss Torrance asked.

The child, with her eyes on the questioner's face, answered between sobs:

"Rose—Torrance—Maxwell."

Miss Torrance uttered a cry, and the lilies fell from her hands upon the newmade grave.

"Your mother was Mary Austin?" she gasped.

The child nodded; she could not speak for tears.

Miss Torrance dropped upon her knees and clasped the little girl in a close embrace. "O child, dear child," "I know your mother well; and Rose Torrance was my own beloved sister."

"She was my mother's friend," whispered the child, half-frightened; "and my mother told me she was good."

"Yes, she was good—so good," sobbed Miss Torrance; "but—she died."

"She will live again," said the child, serenely. "My mother told me that the dead shall rise. All her people are waiting here."

Then Miss Torrance, obeying the gesture of the child's hand, read on the nearest gravestones the long-unspoken names of friends departed—Mary Austin's parents and sisters and brothers.

"Only my father," the child prattled on, "was buried in the deep ocean. But he, too, shall rise again."

"Oh, believe it well!" cried Miss Torrance. "Dear child, now I know why your little pale face haunted me so; Mary, your mother, was looking at me through your brown eyes. God has surely given you to me this blessed Easter day. No angels shall have you! Let us put the lilies here, my little Rose; it is the right place for them; and God will understand."

The little Rose looked up with a smile unclogged by tears; she was beginning to take consolation. "My mother loved lilies," she said.

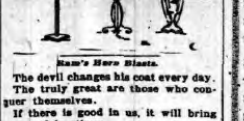
"Yes, I know! I know, dear. Let us give God thanks and come away. The dead need us not; but you and I, we need each other."

So, hand in hand, the child bereft and the lonely woman went out of the cemetery, a blessing each to the other.

In the afternoon the clouds cleared away. "See the sunshine," cried the child.

"Ah, little one!" Miss Torrance answered, devoutly. "There has been sunshine all this day."—Youth's Companion.

Easter Shades.



Sam's Horn Blasts.

The devil changes his coat every day. The truly great are those who conquer themselves.

If there is good in us, it will bring out good in others.

Every saloonkeeper has the devil for his business partner.

The man who controls himself may hope to reform other men.

CHRIST IS RISEN.

Christ the Lord is risen to-day,
Sons of men and angels say;
Raise your joys and triumphs high,
Sing, ye heaven, and earth reply.

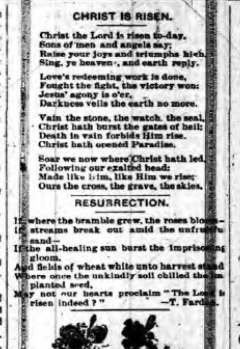
Love's redeeming work is done,
Fought the fight, the victory won:
Jesus' agony is o'er,
Darkness veils the earth no more.

Vain the stone, the watch, the seal,
Christ hath burst the gates of hell;
Death in vain forbids him rise,
Christ hath opened Paradise.

Soar we now where Christ hath led,
Following our exalted head;
Made like him, like Him we rise;
Ours the cross, the grave, the skies.

RESURRECTION.

Where the bramble grew, the roses bloom,
Streams break out amid the unfruitful sand—
The all-healing sun burst the imprisoning gloom,
And fields of wheat white unto harvest stand
Where once the unkindly soil chilled them in planted seed.
May not our hearts proclaim "The Lord is risen indeed?"
—T. Fardon.



ON THE AVENUE.

Green, one by one, like roses, they
Bloom on the paven highway,
Until it looks as bright and gay
As any garden by the way.
New gowns of every shade and hue,
And hats of every feather,
Like blossoms, along the avenue,
Come flocking out together.

They come by pairs, they come by swarms—
What charm the day possesses!
Some have their hearts upon their arms,
Some have them on their dresses;
And such a gladness lights each face
One cannot help discover
It must be caused by inner grace,
Or outer grace of lover.

—F. D. Sherman.

WHEN EASTER COMES.

"Thirty days hath September,"
Every grown man remembers;
But to know when Eastern some,
Puzzles even scholars, some.

When March the twenty-first is past
And hath the silver moon,
And when you see it full and round,
Know Easter'll be here soon.

After the moon has reached its full,
Then Easter will be here,
The very Sunday after,
In each and every year.

And if it hap on Sunday
The shield reaches its height,
The Sunday following this event
Will be the Easter Bright.
—Boston Transcript.

BABY'S LOGIC.

She was ironing her dolly's new gown,
Wild Marion, four years old,
With her brows puckered down
In a painstaking frown
Under her curls of gold.

'Twas Sunday, and the nurse coming
Exclaimed in a tone of surprise:
"Don't you know it's a sin
Any work to begin
On the day that the Lord sanctifies
Then, lifting her face like a rose,
This answered this wise little tot:
"Now, don't you suppose
The good Lord knows
This iron ain't hot?"

CHILD AND MOTHER.

O Mother-My-Love, if you'll give me your hand
And go where I ask you to wander,
I will lead you away to a beautiful land—
The dreamland that's waiting out yonder.
We'll walk in the silvery paths of the garden at night there,
Where the moonlight and starlight are always a-song,
And the flowers and the birds are filling the air
With the fragrance and music of dreaming.

There'll be no little, tired feet girl to undress,
No questions and answers for you;
There'll be no little bruises or bumps to caress,
Nor patching of stockings to vex you.
For I'll rock you away on the silvery dew
And sing you to sleep when you're weary,
And no one shall know of our beautiful view
But you and your own little dearie.

And when I'm tired I'll nestle my head
In the bosom that soothed me so often,
And the wide-awake stars shall sing in my stead
A song which my dreaming shall soften.
Mother Love, let me have your hand
And away through the starlight we'll wander—
Away through the mist to the beautiful land—
The dreamland that's waiting out yonder.
—Eugene Field.

FAITH.

I cannot tell how the lilies
From their beds creep up so far;
I can only guess there are seeds
And think how fair they are.
I do not know how the planets
Swing out into space even free,
But I know that One controls them,
And that is enough for me.

I may not whence comes music
From the wood's unwilling throat,
But I feel the heavenly sweetness
That floats in every note.
I cannot read His purpose
Nor solve each mystery;
But all things work for righteous,
And that is solace to me.

I know that the flowers must wither
And the stars be dimmed some day;
The sun must cease shining,
And all things pass away;
But I also know of a Saviour,
Whose face I shall sometime see,
He rules with a love eternal,
And that is enough for me.
—Anna Lewis Tuley.

Joy is like restless day; but peace divine like quiet night;
Lead me, O Lord, till perfect day shall shine through Peace to Light.

THE LENTEN GIRL.

With downcast eyes and air devout,
She kneels in Lenten pew;
And wrestles with her plans about
Her Easter garments new.

Perchance she figures as a bride,
Beyond these Lenten days;
How sweet to swell with maiden pride,
And feel the envious gaze.

Thus penitential still, she kneels,
And makes a contrite tone;
While an unlucky sinner feels,
"Good Lord, deliver us."

SEASON'S FRIVOLITIES.

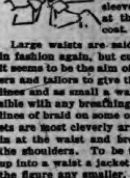
Facts That Will Please Feminine Taste and Fancies.

The summer girl's petticoats are marvels of fluffiness. Their price ranges from 50 cents to almost as many dollars. The least expensive ones are of daintily colored linens, such as pink, blue or yellow.

That Easter day is now a time of present-giving is shown by the number of pretty fancy trifles that are to be used to carry Easter greetings, replacing the threadbare cards and little books once called into service to convey the season's sentiment from friend to friend.

Big plaids in the most vivid hues are to be the vogue for made-over skirts, and these, when worn with the severely plain tailor gown, give just the needed touch of color and brightness.

Last Easter the photograph frame, in all its variations of embroidery, painting, silk, leather, and jewels, held the face of the Madonna, the Saviour or a saint. This season finds the sofa pillow the popular messenger. One sofa-pillow is made of dull green upholstery satin, on which is embroidered a bunch of Easter lilies held with a bowknot of Japanese gold. The under side has "Easter Greetings" solidly embroidered in white outlined in gold. Around the edge of the pillow is a heavy cord of green silk and gold.



For outside wear there are many pretty jackets—short ones—in covert cloth, or in blue, sage, green or red, made with small sleeves and to flare at the back of the coat.

Large waists are said to be coming in fashion again, but curiously enough it seems to be the aim of fall dressmakers and tailors to give the long, slender effect to every waist that is possible with any breathing power, and the lines of braid on some of the new jackets are most cleverly arranged to taper in at the waist and broaden out over the shoulders. To be tightly screwed up into a waist a jacket does not make the figure any smaller, a fact it would be well for all women to know, and a good fit, which makes one look smart, always gives plenty of room above the bust and is only tight at and below the true waist line.

The summer hats are flower gardens, with stiff velvet ribbon bows, and in every conceivable style of the so-called picturesque shapes. One can go into any sort of a crazy combination and not go amiss.

Sleeves are the all-absorbing topic. The revival of the flounce is no longer in doubt.

Handkerchiefs have borders to match one's gown.

Narrow velvet ribbon strings are worn with the newest bonnets.

Be of Some Account.

Have a mission in life. Be of some account. Do not court responsibility, neither shirk it when it is laid upon you. See God's hand in every movement, and note its bearing upon you personally. He has use for you somewhere, and often where you least expect. Fall in line with His will from time to time. He may not have a conspicuous place for you to labor, but He will bring out, as you follow His gracious and sure faithful, your talents in the sphere where you can do the best for Him and for others.—Presbyterian.

The Constitutionalist.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force. Editor and Proprietor

MISTAKES.

The present attitude of Editor Runyon in referring frequently, prominently and sarcastically to the unimportant grammatical mistakes that creep into the columns of The Press—something that no daily paper, unless it is the News, pretends to be free from—suggests that his animus in such conduct is like the sneakthief who in plying his occupation, is detected and then runs wildly, crying "stop thief" in the vain endeavor to attract attention to someone other than himself. If we cared to be so boyish in conduct, we could every day print a long list of errors to be found in the columns presided over by the man who prides himself on being a college graduate; but we are not printing a newspaper for that purpose. As a matter of fact, people are constantly showing us mistakes in grammar and spelling in the News with the admonition that "there is a chance to get even with Runyon." Their interest is a kindly one, we know, but it is never taken advantage of.

NEW JEREY'S HEALTH STATSITICS

According to the twentieth annual report of the State Board of Health, which has lately been submitted to the Governor, New Jersey has a lower death rate than has been recorded during the last eight years. The total number of deaths exceeds that of any previous year, yet the rate of increase of the population has advanced and the death rate diminished. The report shows that 21 per cent of the children within school age are unvaccinated. This should be looked after, as a child should not be allowed to enter school without showing a vaccination certificate. Another point strongly emphasized is the cremation of garbage as the only sanitary method for its disposal, especially in thickly settled portions of the State. The report is an excellent one, and calls attention to existing wrongs and suggests remedies for most of the cases.—Hackensack Record.

A SOCIALISTIC COLLAPSE.

The collapse of the Socialistic experiment on the Ward farm near Campgaw, in Bergen county, surprised no one who had paid any attention to the first outlines of the scheme. About the only definite plan that that the projectors had ready to announce when they disclosed their amiable design, was that of publishing papers in four or five different languages. A colony of Socialistic workers with competent farmers and gardeners at its head might make a success on a New Jersey farm. But a colony which places polyglot literateurs and orators first and farm labor last in the list of its ambitions, was not likely to prosper in the service of acting, though bountiful, Mother Earth.—Newark News.

POLICE PENSIONS.

Gov. Griggs at a hearing Tuesday on the police-pension bill passed by the last Legislature informed the policemen's representatives that he disapproved of the bill because it provides for the retirment on half pay of policemen 60 years old who have done twenty years service, even if such officers are not incapacitated for police duty. The Governor said that he informed a committee of the policemen last summer that a bill to meet his approval must have a proviso that patrolman could only be retired where they were incapacitated.

THE GOUT HIS TROUBLE.

Of the sixty-two men who have served as mayors of New York since 1665, William L. Strong is the only one to celebrate his seventieth birthday in office. He looks ten years younger, and but for his gout would be one of the most active men in the city.

MARITAL WOES.

Down in Kentucky a woman had a man arrested on Monday last for kissing her. On Wednesday an Ohio woman sued for a divorce because her husband never kissed her. An that's how about one-half of the world keeps the other half guessing.

—The VanZandt & Voorhees building, on Park avenue, is being painted.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The fac simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

THEIR SILVER WEDDING.

MR. AND MRS. EUGENE A. GROSS MARRIED TWENTY-FIVE YEARS.

The Event Celebrated at their Home on West Seventh Street, Which Was Attractive With Floral Decorations, Etc.

A charming event of last Monday was the twenty-fifth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene A. Gross, of West Seventh street.

The decorations were superb and the prevailing color was pink. A profusion of roses and potted plants were arranged about the rooms in a pleasing manner. Especially attractive was the table in the dining room which was a feast of loveliness.

Mr. and Mrs. Gross received in the parlor and they were assisted by Miss Annie Sieven, Miss Grace Langdon, Miss Edith Ahrens, of this city; Miss Florence Bennett, of Brooklyn, and Miss Ada Smock, of New York. The host and hostess were showered with congratulations and the many beautiful and costly gifts received from friends was evidence of the highest regard and personal esteem.

After congratulations several vocal selections were given by Miss Mira Marisona, a talented opera singer of New York. This was followed by progressive euchre which was one of the pleasant features of the evening. Silver prizes were presented to the winners who were Mrs. James Mc Elroy, Mrs. Dr. Grant, Mr. Cullinam and James Slevin. The booby prize, Li Hung Chang in minature, was presented to Charles Langdon, Jr.

Dancing by the younger set was indulged in after the supper, and this was interspersed with vocal selections by Miss Marisona, and thus a happy event closed.

Those present were: Dr. and Mrs. Grant, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Brady, Mr. and Mrs. James Keane, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gross, Mrs. William Conway, John Conway, David Mahny, Miss Ella Mahny, Mr. Cullinam, Mr. Rosch, David Mahny, Jr., of New York; Dr. and Mrs. Adelberg, of Elizabeth; Mr. and Mrs. Otto Ahrens, Mr. and Mrs. James Slevin, Mr. and Charles Langdon, Charles Langdon, Jr., F. C. Kirchhoff, A. L. C. Marsh, Miss Emily Schipper, Carl Schipper, Mrs. Andrew Slevin, Mrs. McElroy, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur and Seigfried Ahrens, of Plainfield.

AN HISTURICAL PROPERTY.

Wallace House to Be Formally Opened on June 17th.

The Board of Trustees of the Revolutionary Memorial Society have decided to formally open the Wallace House, Somerville, on Thursday, June 17, that date being the anniversary of the battles of Bunker Hill an Millstone.

The exercises will include the presentation of a flag and flagstaff by the Jr. O. U. A. M., an address by William H. Weeks, of Newark, on the History of the Wallace House, an address by Rev. Dr. Mott, formerly of Fleming ton, on the History of the American Flag.

An elegant luncheon will be provided and served on the grounds by the ladies of Somerville, under the direction of a committee consisting of Mrs. Sanborn, Mrs. Clark, Mrs. Berren, Mrs. Bateman, Mrs. Hardwicke, Mrs. Annie Beed, Mrs. Griggs, Mrs. J. Fred Voorhees, Miss Messler, Miss Chambers, Miss Anderson and Miss Otis.

Any old residents who happen to have any information about the Wallace House given to them by their parents or in any form, will confer a favor by sending it to W. H. Taylor, James J. Berger or A. P. Sutphen.

Shot One of His Tormentors.

Thomas Markey and his brother, Frank, well-known characters in Metuchen, went to the saloon kept by John Welsh, at Menlo Park, about 9 o'clock Sunday evening. Welsh had trouble with the men once, and when he saw them coming he bolted the door. The Markeys were angry at being shut out, and began to clamor for admission in such a way that Welsh expected that they whould smash in the door, so he drew his pistol and shot twice through the door at the men. One bullet struck in the frame of the door, the other went through the panel and was deflected in its course, so that it struck Thomas Markey's foot. No arrests were made.

Mrs. A. Inveen, residing at 720 Henry street, Alton, Ill, suffered with sciatic rheumatism for over eight months. She doctored for it nearly the whole of this time, using various remedies recommended by friends, and was treated by the physicians, but received no relief. She then used one and a half bottles of Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which effected a complete cure. This is published at her request, as she wants others similarly afflicted to know what cured her. The 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, cor. Park and and North avenues.

Organized a New Council.

Past Chief Raden took the trail for Penta Amboy last Thursday evening and attended a preliminary meeting there for the purpose of forming a new council of Degree of Pocohontas. As a result thirty-six names were added to the charter.

THE WHEELS OF JUSTICE

JUDGE MAGIE'S CHARGE TO THE SOMERSET GRAND JURY.

Advised the People to Be Patient and All Violators of Law Would Receive Just Deserts—Licenses Granted.

The spring term of the Supreme Court for Somerset county convened in the court house in Somerville Tuesday, with Judge Magie presiding. The grand jury was called together and taken into court where the Judge made his charge to them, referring principally to the matter of the several murders in the county and the feeling of discontent dominant among some of the taxpayers because the wheels of justice seemed to move slowly and with extraordinary expense.

He judge referred particularly to the murders—Jo Chalbi, of Bound Brook, who killed his wife, and Francesco Dilucci, who ended the life of a countryman at Bernardsville in a fight—and the manner in which their cases would be considered by the jurors assembled beore him.

He instructed them as to the point of the law in dealing with the murderers and urged that they proceed with as little loss of time as the serious consideration of the crimes warranted. The people who had a feeling of discontent should curb such a spirit as it was the intention of the authorities not to permit any laxity in punishing those culprits who deserved to be punished by the enormity of their crime. He said he trusted that at no time would the reputation of the country be injured by a display of mob rule in dealing with those who had committed crimes.

Beside the cases of the two murderers the jury has also to consider the charge of Antonio Macaelo, who attempted to kill Ralph Bruno, and that of Pivoretto, who came near hacking his wife to death in Raritan.

Jacob Voehl and William E Brock are the North Plainfield members of the Grand Jury.

The following licenses were granted by Judge Bartine: Lena Wedemeyer, retail, for Arlington Hotel; Gustav Sutterline, wholesale, Greenbrook road; Henry Pedeltous, hotel, North Plainfield; Mt. Bethel Hotel.

Red Men Celebrate.

A regular meeting of the Miantonomoh Tribe, Red Men, was held on Friday evening. It was the 400th hundredth meeting of the Tribe. The resignation of Florence McCarty, as junior sagamore, was accepted with regret, and Joseph Johnson was elected to fill the vacancy. The entertainment committee made its report stating that the dance of the Tribe had been postponed from Thursday until Friday evening. The dance is to be held in Red Men's Hall. The brethren then sat down to the collation which had been prepared in honor of the occasion by the good and welfare committee, after which they were entertained by a programme arranged by the same committee. The entertainment consisted of humorous stories by Joseph Johnson, vocal solos by Joseph Newman, a baritone solo by Chief of Records Holdstein, singing by Messrs. Stiglitz, Mague, Drier and Siorah, short talks by Messrs. Krog, Staats and Allen, and jokes by Prophet Leahy.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, 75c. Hall's Family Pills are the best.

A Fine Concert Pianist.

Lovers of beautiful music will be given a chance next week to hear one of the finest concert pianists of the country, Wm. H. Barber, who will give a concert at the Casino on the evening of Saturday, May 1st. Mr. Barber spent many years abroad studying, and there met Miss Anna Marsh, of this city, while she was studying there. Last Saturday evening Mr. Barber gave an informal recital at the home of Miss Marsh on Franklin place, and those who were privileged to hear him on that occasion urged him to give a concert in this city Mr. Barber is a thoroughly American artist and was born in Orange.

Not exactly right is the way thousands of people feel. It is because their blood is poor. Hood's Sarsaparilla, the One True Blood Purifier, will promptly set them right.

Hood's Pills are purely vegetable and do not purge, pain or gripe. All druggists.

TRAINMEN'S VIGILANCE.

PROBABLY PREVENTED TWO FAMILIES FROM BEING CREMATED.

Crew of a Lehigh Valley Coal Train Saw a House on Fire at the Tanks and Stopped and Aroused the Sleeping Inmates.

Had it not been for the vigilance of a coal train crew on the Lehigh Valley Railroad Tuesday at 4 a. m., it is probable that two families would either have perished or had a very narrow escape from death by burning up in a house owned by the Jersey Central at the Greenbrook tanks, four miles from this city. The house is situated between the two railroads at that point, and is occupied by the families of Michael Reagly and John Weber, who are employed by the Central Railroad to look after the sandhouse at the tanks.

At four o'clock in the morning a Lehigh Valley coal train was moving along at a slow rate of speed near that point when the fireman noticed a flickering flame coming from the top of the house occupied by the two families. The engineer brought the train to a stop as soon as possible and the train crew hurried to the point of the conflagration. The family were not aware that the house was afire and the trainmen pounded on the doors and aroused them. By that time the whole roof was a mass of flames and the occupants dressed hurriedly and rushed out.

Word was sent to the Dunellen Fire Department and they responded but by the time they arrived at the house it was beyond saving.

Weber succeeded in saving part of his household goods, but all of Ready's furniture was destroyed. Ready carried an insurance on his property, but Weber did not.

It is thought that the house was set on fire by a spark from a passing locomotive.

A GIFT TO HARVARD.

Dr. J. Ackerman Coles Presents a Bronze Bust of Socrates to the University.

Dr J. Ackerman Coles, of Newark, whose gifts of valuable art objects to educational and public bodies have been generous and who lately gave to the Chicago University a heroic bronze bust of Homer, has just presented to Harvard University a life-size bronze bust of Socrates, which President Eliot, of Harvard, has accepted in an appreciative letter. The bronze is part of the estate of the late Dr. Abraham Coles, of Newark, father of Dr. J. Ackerman Coles and a well-known classical scholar and author. It was made by Barbedienne in France, for Tiffany & Co. The donor, in giving the bronze to Harvard, said that he desired it to be a reminder of the friendly relations existing between his father and the officers, professors and graduates of Harvard, especially President Thomas Hill, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, James Russell Lowell, Oliver Wendell Holmes and Phillips Brooks.

The Newark Free Library, which is soon to occupy a new and handsome building, to be erected this year on a site selected facing Washington Park in Newark, has begun to receive gifts from citizens of wealth and cluture. Monday the Library trustees received and placed in the Library two beautiful life-size medallions in Carrara marble by Richard Hamilton Park, the gift of Dr. J. Ackerman Coles, of Scotch Plains.

Americans are the most inventive people on earth. To them have been issued nearly 600,000 patents, or more than one-third of all the patents issued in the world. No discovery of modern years has been of greater benefit to mankind than Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, or has done more to relieve pain and suffering. J. W. Vaugn, of Oakton, Ky., says: "I have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrœa Remedy in my family for several years, and find it to be the best medicine I ever used for cramps in the stomah and bowels. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

Two Ex-Mayors Work Together.

The special committee of the Park Club which is arranging for the entertainment to be given at the Casino on May 8th, consists of two Ex-Mayors of North Plainfield who are of opposite political faith but are for once of the same opinion, viz. that the entertainment to be given by Eugene Field's daughter will be a success. Miss Mary French Field is not only assured of a cordial welcome on her father's account but her individual merit and ability as a reader and reciter and be sure to win appreciation. Mr. Edwin T. Douglass and Elston W. French are also members of the committee which hopes to give Plainfield a literary and musical entertainment that will be sure of appreciation.

A Beautiful Christening.

A beautiful christening ceremony took place in St. Joseph's church in North Plainfield on Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, when the twelve-days' old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Windham, of East Front street, was Christened Marguerite Windham. Mr. and Mrs. Godfrey Herold, of Brooklyn, stood as godparents for the child.

The Difference

"I see no difference between H-O and any other oatmeal!" We know it. The difference is not to be seen. You taste, and smell, and feel the difference, though!

H-O

is different from all others, in that it is more sweet, smooth, delicate, digestible. Its preparation begins where the others leave off. It is twice cooked, once by steam, once by super-heated air. Thus half the work of digestion is done, and the system is never over-taxed or over-heated.

Be sure to get the package with the big H-O on the end.

Subscriptions Free to

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly Illustrated American (Weekly)
Truth (Weekly)
New England Magazine
Cosmopolitan (Monthly)
The American Kitchen Magazine
Home Magazine (Monthly)
of Binghamton, N. Y.

WITH COUPONS FROM THE

H.O.Co.'s Goods

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS

For all Diseases and Humors arising from Impure Blood. They purify the blood and give HEALTHY action to the entire system.

Cure DYSPEPSIA, HEADACHE, CONSTIPATION and PIMPLES.

SALESMEN WANTED

To sell our high grade Nursery Stock. Permanent position and good wages to the right men. Write for terms and territory. Mention this paper. Address, R. G. CHASE & CO., Nurserymen, West Chester, Pa.

Dissolution of Partnership.

Notice is hereby given that the partnership heretofore existing under the name and firm of Terrill & Cole, as Undertakers and Funeral Directors in the city of Plainfield, is this day by mutual consent dissolved, and all persons indebted to said firm are to be paid to George W. Cole, and all claims and demands of said firm are payable to George W. Cole, who will continue the business at his place of business, No. 320 West Second street, in the city of Plainfield.

MOSES N. TERRILL,
GEO. W. COLE.

Plainfield, N. J., April 1st, 1896. 5t 6

PAINT

Deal direct with the manufacturer and use only the

"FERINITE" COTTAGE COLORS.

Save money and get the best. Send for card of beautiful shades to

THE TAYLOR PAINT & OIL CO.
NO. 32 BURLING SLIP, N. Y. IT WILL PAY YOU.

$7,200 FOR EDITH BEHR.

Verdict in Her Damage Suit Against Trolley Company Is Affirmed.

The Court of Errors and Appeals Monday affirmed the verdict of the Essex County Circuit Court, which gave a verdict of $7,300 to Edith Behr of Elizabeth. Last fall while riding upon a load of garden truck near Newark the wagon was struck by a car of the Consolidated Traction Company and Edith was thrown out and injured. Miss Behr is now serving a three months' term in jail at Elizabeth for assault and battery, and her case occupied considerable time of the Court of Pardons this month. Her term expires the latter part of next month.

The Rev. W. H. Weaver, pastor of the U. B. Church, Dillsburg, Pa., recognizes the value of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and does not hesitate to tell others about it. "I have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," he says, "and find it an excellent medicine for colds, cough's and hoarseness." So does everyone who gives it a trial. Sold by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

Central Railroad of New Jersey.

Anthracite Coal Used Exclusively. Insuring Comfort and Cleanliness.

Time Table in Effect JANUARY 5th, 1896.

TRAINS LEAVE PLAINFIELD AND SOUTH PLAINFIELD:

Leave Plainfield at 5 45, 6 30, 7 30, 8 30, 9 30, 10 30, 11 30 a. m., 12 30, 1 30, 2 30, 3 30, 4 30, 5 30, 6 30, 7 30, 8 30, 9 30, 10 30, 11 30 p. m. Sundays at 5 45, 7 30, 9 30, 11 30 a. m., 1 30, 3 30, 5 30, 7 30, 9 30, 11 30 p. m.

TRAINS LEAVE PLAINFIELD AND STEWART:

Leave Plainfield at 6 30, 7 30, 8 30, 9 30, 10 30, 11 30 a. m., 12 30, 1 30, 2 30, 3 30, 4 30, 5 30, 6 30, 7 30, 8 30, 9 30, 10 30, 11 30 p. m. Sunday at 8 30, 9 30, 10 30 a. m., 12 30, 1 30, 2 30, 3 30, 4 30, 5 30, 6 30, 7 30, 8 30, 9 30, 10 30, 11 30 p. m.

Leave Stewart at 6 30, 7 30, 8 30, 9 30, 10 30, 11 30 a. m., 12 30, 1 30, 2 30, 3 30, 4 30, 5 30, 6 30, 7 30, 8 30, 9 30, 10 30, 11 30 p. m. Sunday at 8 30, 9 30, 10 30 a. m., 12 30, 1 30, 2 30, 3 30, 4 30, 5 30, 6 30, 7 30, 8 30, 9 30, 10 30, 11 30 p. m.

TRAINS LEAVE NEW YORK, FOOT LIBERTY ST.:

Leave New York at 8 35, 9 35, 10 35, 11 35 a. m., 12 35, 1 35, 2 35, 3 35, 4 35, 5 35, 6 35, 7 35, 8 35, 9 35, 10 35, 11 35 p. m. Sunday at 8 35, 9 35, 10 35, 11 35 a. m., 12 35, 1 35, 2 35, 3 35, 4 35, 5 35, 6 35, 7 35, 8 35, 9 35, 10 35, 11 35 p. m.

TRAINS LEAVE PLAINFIELD AND STEWART:

Leave Plainfield at 5 45, 6 30, 7 30, 8 30, 9 30, 10 30, 11 30 a. m., 12 30, 1 30, 2 30, 3 30, 4 30, 5 30, 6 30, 7 30, 8 30, 9 30, 10 30, 11 30 p. m. Sunday at 8 30, 9 30, 10 30 a. m., 12 30, 1 30, 2 30, 3 30, 4 30, 5 30, 6 30, 7 30, 8 30, 9 30, 10 30, 11 30 p. m.

Leave Stewart at 6 30, 7 30, 8 30, 9 30, 10 30, 11 30 a. m., 12 30, 1 30, 2 30, 3 30, 4 30, 5 30, 6 30, 7 30, 8 30, 9 30, 10 30, 11 30 p. m. Sunday at 8 30, 9 30, 10 30 a. m., 12 30, 1 30, 2 30, 3 30, 4 30, 5 30, 6 30, 7 30, 8 30, 9 30, 10 30, 11 30 p. m.

TRAINS LEAVE PLAINFIELD AND LAKE HOPATCONG:

Leave Plainfield at 8 45 a. m., 2 00 p. m.

5 45 a. m.—For Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Bethlehem, Manch Chunk, Wilkesbarre and Scranton.

7 30 a. m.—For Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Bethlehem, Manch Chunk, Wilkesbarre, Harrisburg, Mauch Chunk, Shamokin, Mt. Carmel, Shenandoah, Pottsville, Tamaqua, Hazleton, Mahanoy City, Shamokin, Sunbury, Williamsport, Erie, Buffalo, Rochester and Niagara Falls.

8 30 a. m.—For Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Bethlehem, Manch Chunk, Wilkesbarre and Scranton.

9 30 a. m.—For Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Bethlehem, Manch Chunk, Wilkesbarre and Scranton.

10 30 a. m.—For Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Bethlehem, Manch Chunk, Wilkesbarre and Scranton.

11 30 a. m.—For Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Bethlehem, Manch Chunk, Wilkesbarre and Scranton.

12 30 p. m.—For Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Bethlehem, Manch Chunk, Wilkesbarre and Scranton.

1 30 p. m.—For Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Bethlehem, Manch Chunk, Wilkesbarre and Scranton.

2 30 p. m.—For Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Bethlehem, Manch Chunk, Wilkesbarre and Scranton.

3 30 p. m.—For Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Bethlehem, Manch Chunk, Wilkesbarre and Scranton.

4 30 p. m.—For Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Bethlehem, Manch Chunk, Wilkesbarre and Scranton.

5 30 p. m.—For Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Bethlehem, Manch Chunk, Wilkesbarre and Scranton.

6 30 p. m.—For Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Bethlehem, Manch Chunk, Wilkesbarre and Scranton.

7 30 p. m.—For Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Bethlehem, Manch Chunk, Wilkesbarre and Scranton.

8 30 p. m.—For Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Bethlehem, Manch Chunk, Wilkesbarre and Scranton.

9 30 p. m.—For Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Bethlehem, Manch Chunk, Wilkesbarre and Scranton.

10 30 p. m.—For Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Bethlehem, Manch Chunk, Wilkesbarre and Scranton.

11 30 p

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

Celebrated for its great leavening strength and healthfulness. Assures the food against alumn and all forms of adulteration common to the cheap brands. Royal Baking Powder Co., New York.

A PATRIOTIC PURPOSE.

DAUGHTERS OF AMERICAN REVOLUTION GIVE AN AFFAIR.

Arranged to Raise Funds for the Purpose of Preserving the Wallace House Where Gen. Washington's Headquarters Were.

The home of Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen, of Washington Park, was the scene last Monday of a social event of the highest charm. This palatial residence was graced with Plainfield's best people for a patriotic purpose. The affair was given by the Plainfield members of the Continental Chapter, Daughters American Revolution, of New Jersey, and the object was to raise funds toward the purchase of the Wallace House at Somerville. This home has a history and during the Revolutionary War Gen. Washington made this place his home for some time. Recently the structure has been threatened by certain people who want to destroy it. A feeling of patriotism on the part of the members of the above-named organization was evidenced and they determined if possible to save the building if only for the sake of history and the associations connected with it. In consequence a reception and entertainment was planned for last evening and Mrs. McCutchen very kindly offered her home. Flowers in profusion from Mr. McCutchen's conservatory were used in the decorations while the American flag occupied a very prominent position.

During the early part of the evening a programme of rare excellence was presented as follows:

Violin solo, "Spanish Dance," Miss Bertha Bucklin; soprano solo, "Les Filles De Cadix," Mrs. Josephine Jennings-Percy; recitals, "Now and Then," "The Minuet," Mrs. F. J. Smith; Minuet, danced by Mrs. W. A. Saunders, Mrs. C. E. Brooks, Mrs. S. A. Hegeman, Jr., Mrs. W. J. Boome, W. L. Saunders, Charles Faber, Peter Matthews, Harry Patton; violin solos, "Adagio Pathetique," "Tarantella," Miss Bertha Bucklin; soprano solo, Mrs. Josephine Jennings-Percy; fairy scenes from "Midsummer Night's Dream." This last number was given by Mrs. F. J. Smith, and she assumed the parts of "Titania," "Oberon," "Puck," "A Fairy," and the music by Mendelssohn was rendered by F. J. Smith on the piano. During the last portion of the recital a quartette, Mrs. J. K. Myers, Mrs. Frank Clawson, Mrs. Robert H. Lowry and Miss Hardenbergh, sang a very pretty lullaby.

Miss Bucklin, Mrs. Josephine Jennings-Percy, and Mrs. F. J. Smith, men of New York, while Mrs. F. J. Smith, who was the accompanist, is the organist of the Crescent Avenue church. Every number on the programme was given perfectly and those present enjoyed a rare treat. The minuet dance was so cordially received that those participating were obliged to repeat it.

A pleasing feature of the event was the appearance of the members of the Chapter and their male friends in colonial dress. This added not a little to the splendor of the occasion.

The table in the dining room was decorated in blue and buff, the colors of the Chapter, and these colors were richly blended with the choicest of flowers. Mrs. Henry McGee and Mrs. Alexander Gilbert presided at the table, while Mrs. J. K. Myers, Mrs. McCutchen and Mrs. C. E. Brooks received. The supper served was delightful and the genuine sociability on the part of all was proverbial.

In addition to the two hundred Plainfield guests present there were delegations from Jersey Blue Chapter, New Brunswick; Gen. Frelinghuysen Chapter, Somerville, and Camp Middlebrook, Bound Brook.

There is no doubt but what the object for which the reception was held have been fully realized and that the Wallace Home at Somerville will remain as it is. It is the purpose of the Chapter to not only secure the home but to put it in such a condition that it will be worthy the name and history it now bears. Plainfield is to be congratulated on having such a truly patriotic organization and such an object deserves the hearty support of all who can give it.

A KILLING FROST CAME.

THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS DAMAGE TO VEGETABLE LIFE.

Peach Crop is Thought to Have Been Entirely Ruined, as Well as Early Fruits and Vegetables in This Section.

Jack Frost came on an unexpected visit to this section of the country Monday night and wrought ruin to early vegetation wherever his chilling presence found it unprotected. While it is impossible to estimate anywhere correctly what the damage will amount to in dollars and cents, it is conceded that it approximates a sum of a good many thousand dollars.

Those who have eye an to the weather realized Monday that the heavy gale that blew stronger and colder every hour as the sun neared the meridian portended serious effect to the early vegetables, blossoms and flowers. Those who had interests at stake—principally farmers and fruit-growers—watched the thermometer anxiously and with many misgivings, as it gradually dropped from 40 degrees at noon to 18 degrees after the pall of nighttime had arrived. Old-timers who had experienced weather changes of this kind before realized that without a doubt all vegetable life of a delicate nature would be withered and blasted by morning. Their worst fears were found to be true this morning when they arose early and found that in many places frost almost an inch in thickness covered unprotected spots.

In the Passaic valley peach buds were totally ruined. Currants, gooseberries and early strawberries, which had advanced remarkably in the last few days owing to the warm weather, looked as though they had been singed with a red hot iron.

Besides the damage done to farm products, house plants that had been transplanted into door yard beds within the last week were also sorry looking sights and caused many wails of anguish from the women who had nurtured them with every care through the winter that they might bloom and add beauty and fragrance to their homes this summer. Many experienced housewives, however, had carefully covered the plants with old newspapers when they saw the approach of the killing frost. In some instances this method was a preventive of fatal effect.

Water left in receptacles out-of-doors during the night was found this morning with a coating of ice an inch thick.

Shade trees suffered also from the biting effect of the frost and where they were on point of bursting forth in all their summer azure, this morning they presented a scene of withered and drooping buds.

WELCOMED HOME.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. McGee Given a Pleasant Reception.

A reception in honor of the return of Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. McGee, after their trip abroad, and the return of Rev. W. C. O'Donnell to his charge at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church for another year, was held in the Epworth House, near the Monroe avenue M. E church, last Monday. Mr. McGee is the superintendent of the Sunday-school of that church and the reception was gotten up by the teachers in the Sunday school. It was a very pleasant affair and largely attended.

Epworth House had been prepared for the occasion. The rooms were charmingly decorated with potted plants and cut flowers while the many Japanese fans and the cheerful hum of voices completed the effect. Music was furnished during the evening by Prof. Carpenter.

When Mr. and Mrs. McGee arrived, they were ushered into the room by Edward Beekman while all present united in singing a stanza of "Home Again from a Foreign Shore." Refreshments were served during the evening and the remainder of the time was spent in social converse.

The committee, by which the reception was arranged, consisted of Miss Georgia Beekman, chairman, Miss Emily Haff, and Miss Hattie Wenzel.

Two years ago R. J. Warren, a druggist at Pleasant Brook N. Y., bought a small supply of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He sums up the result as follows: "At that time the goods were unknown in this section; to-day Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is a household word." It is the same in hundreds of communities. Wherever the good qualities of Chamberlains Cough Remedy become known the people will have nothing else. For sale by T. S Armstrong, apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

Sang in the Graphophone.

Councilman William N. Runyon went to Elizabeth last week and sang several selections into the graphophone. He rendered his famous solo, "Romeo," before the machine.

Pastor's Salary Increased.

It was announced at Grace M. E. church last Sunday that the official board had increased the pastor's salary $100.

PROSPEROUS CHURCHES

ANNUAL PARISH MEETINGS HELD LAST MONDAY.

S. A. Cruikshank Retires From the Vestry of Grace P. E. Church—Finances of Each of the Societies Found on a Solid Basis.

The last year has been a prosperous one, indeed, for the Grace P. E. church and the annual parish meeting of that church, held last Monday brought out that fact quite strongly.

After a short service of evening prayer, the meeting was held in the church, Rev. E. M. Rodman, acting as chairman, and Charles Lawson, as secretary. The treasurer's report was read by S. A. Cruikshank, the retiring treasurer. Last year, there was a deficit in the church accounts to the amount of $800, which was made up at the Easter collection. This year, the report showed the church to be on a firm basis with a small balance in the treasury, and the Easter collection amounting to over $550 was devoted to the mortgage debt of the church.

The election of wardens and vestrymen was the principal business of the meeting. George M. Randall was re-elected warden and George S. Clay was elected warden in the place of S. A. Cruikshank. John Drayton and William A. Freeman acted as tellers in the election. Seven vestrymen were elected. Thomas Mimford, De-Witt C. Ivins, R. H. Depew and Pendleton Rodgers were re elected and the new members of the vestry were C. C. Howard, Charles Lawson and August Kleinecke. It took several ballots to finally decide as to the complete list of vestrymen.

The delegates elected to the General Convention were C. P. Bull, J. B. Dumont and W. E. Lowe. The alternates were George M. Randall, George S. Clay and R. H. Depew.

Among those nominated for the vestry was S. A. Cruikshank, but he positively refused to allow his name to be used. At the close of the meeting a vote of thanks was extended to him by the parish for his faithful and very efficient services as treasurer of the church. W. B. Cock was prominently spoken of for the vestry, but he declared that he would not accept the office if elected. A meeting of the vestry will be held on Wednesday evening for organization.

The annual parish meeting of the Church of the Redeemer was held last Monday after evening prayer. The rector, Rev. Jocelyn Johnstone, presided, and A. E. Faber, Jr., was chosen secretary.

The report of H. R. Phillips, treasurer, was presented. The total receipts were $2,265.43, and the disbursements $2,201.34. Mr. Phillips stated that there is a deficit of $311.98, which amount it would be necessary to raise. At additional Easter offering of $50 was also reported. The Easter collection amounted to $365.19. There are at present unpaid subscriptions to the amount of $261.26, and Mr. Phillips stated that $70 of this sum he felt sure would not be paid. The balance in the Rector's Poor Fund was reported to be $22.76, and $1,115 in the contingent fund. In the Church Society Building Fund there is $250.35, with certificates of deposit bearing interest. A balance of $66 was reported in the treasury of the Woman's Guild. On a motion the above reports were received and will be audited before approval by a committee to be appointed later.

The question of increasing the number of vestrymen from five to seven was introduced and finally laid on the table. E. C. Perkins and G. T. Rhodes were appointed as a nominating committee, and as a result G. P. Dupee was elected senior warden and J. Alexander junior warden. The election of vestrymen resulted as follows: H. B Phillips, A. E. Faber, Jr., Thomas Lloyd, E. C. Perkins, G. T. Rhodes.

A motion was made that the secretary cast the ballot for the above-named candidates but Mr. Phillips objected and stated that if the motion prevailed he would not allow his name to stand. The motion was lost and a formal ballot was taken with the above results.

G. P. Dupee, J. A. Alexander and E. C. Perkins were elected delegates as the general diocesan convention, and A. E. Faber, Jr., F. S. Brown and H. R. Phillips were chosen as alternates.

After a motion was adopted giving the power to vote from the contingent fund such money as will be needed, the meeting adjourned.

The annual parish meeting for the election of wardens and vestrymen and delegates to attend the Diocesan Convention was held in the Church of the Holy Cross last evening at 8 p. m. The following were elected: Wardens, John H. Carman, Benjamin R. Western; vestrymen, William L. Saunders, Robert S. Miller, Horsley Barker, Arthur T. Gallup and William A. Westphal; delegates to convention, Benjamin R. Western, Horsley Barker and Clarence L. Murphy; alternates, William A. Westphal, Arthur T. Gallup and John D. James.

—Plainfield Council, R. A., will celebrate the twentieth anniversary of the founding of the order in this State on May 20th. Arrangements are now being perfected for the event, which will probably be held in the Y. M. C. A. building.

Keep Well

Easy to say, but how shall I do it?

In the only common sense way—Keep your head cool, your feet warm and your blood rich and pure by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

In the Spring Then all your nerves, muscles, tissues and organs will be properly nourished. Hood's Sarsaparilla builds up the system, creates an appetite, tones the stomach and gives strength. It is the people's Spring Medicine, has a larger sale and effects more cures than all others.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Is the One True Blood Purifier. C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Hood's Pills assist Digestion and cure Constipation. 25 cents.

Sweet Peas.

Do not delay planting them, our own mixture contains only the choicest and latest varieties.

LAWN & GARDEN SEEDS and FERTILIZERS. HARDWARE and HOUSEFURNISHINGS.

A. M. GRIFFEN,

119 East Front st.

Telephone Call, 6.

W. R. CODINGTON,

Counsellor-at-Law,

Commissioner of Deeds, Master-in Chancery, Notary Public. Offices Corner of Park avenue and Second street.

SEEDS ...FOR THE... Garden and Farm

Vegetable and Flower Seeds. All the leading and best varieties. Quality unsurpassed. Illustrated Catalogue FREE.

WEBER & DOE, Seed Growers, 114 Chambers St., New York City.

1 28 28m

What a Lot of Eggs the hens lay when fed on Green Cut Bone. With a dozen hens

Mann's Green Bone Cutter

will pay for itself in a short time in the increase of eggs. $5 BUYS ONE. Sent on trial. 100 highest awards received. Catalogue free if you name this paper. F. W. MANN CO., Milford, Mass.

2 3 4 9 10 11 12—7 mos.

SAVED

After years of suffering. It has at last been proved a cure that

NASALENE

Is a positive remedy for local diseases which are the result of Catarrh. Also climatic changes. Cold in the Head. Hay Fever.

CATARRH,

Deafness, (caused by catarrh), are instantly relieved.

It is pleasant to use, convenient to carry. Price (no nasty 50 cent druggists)

G. V. Fielding, Warden Grace Cathedral, Sing, says: Nasalene is very beneficial.

HUNTER MEDICAL CO.

44 E. 31st Street, N. Y.

WANTS AND OFFERS.

BY women, each with an infant or young child, situations in the country (general housework, plain cooking, etc.). Small wages expected. Railroad fare paid by Association. Apply State Charities Aid Association. 105 East Twenty Second street, New York City. 3 18 1mo

DIED.

HUFF—In North Plainfield, Monday, April 19, 1897, Wilbur, aged 2 years, 4 months and 15 days.

STANBERY—Eliza Ann, wife of Wil liam C. Stanbery, in North Plains, N. J., died on Sunday, April 18 1897.

STEPHENSON—In this city, Wednesday, April 14, 1897, Henry C. Stephenson, aged 9 years, 1 month and 6 days.

WEDEMEYER—In this city, Plainfield, April 15, 1897, Henry Wedemeyer, in 58th year.

POULTRY We keep everything in the POULTRY LINE, Feeding, Fattening, Incubators, Live Stock, Brooders—anything—it's our business. Send 2c. stamp for our illustrated catalogue—it's free for the asking. Reliable Incubator & Brooder Co. Excelsior Wire & Poultry Supply Co. 29 Vesey Street, New York City.

JAS. M. DUNN

Dealer in

GROCERIES, PROVISIONS, VEGETABLES FRUITS &c

GARDEN SEEDS

fresh and carefully selected.

224 PARK AVENUE,

OPPOSITE NORTH AVENUE.

Everything usually found in a first class grocery.

Goods delivered free of charge.

Lewis B. Coddington,

[Successor to T. J. Carey.]

Furniture & Freight Express

Office—24 W. FRONT ST.

Large Covered Vans or Trucks Goods delivered to any part of the U. S. Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges reasonable. P. O. Box 1. Piano moving a specialty

PATENTS CAVEATS, TRADE MARKS COPYRIGHTS.

CAN I OBTAIN A PATENT? For a prompt answer and an honest opinion, write to MUNN & CO., who have had nearly fifty years' experience in the patent business. Communications strictly confidential. A Hand-Book of Information concerning Patents and how to obtain them sent free. Also a catalogue of mechanical and scientific books sent free.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice in the Scientific American, and thus are brought widely before the public without cost to the inventor. This splendid paper, issued weekly, elegantly illustrated, has by far the largest circulation of any scientific work in the world. $3 a year. Sample copies sent free. Building Edition, monthly, $2.50 a year. Single copies, 25 cents. Every number contains beautiful plates, in colors, and photographs of new houses, with plans, enabling builders to show the latest designs and secure contracts. Address MUNN & CO., NEW YORK, 361 BROADWAY

DIME

Savings Institution

Of Plainfield, N. J.,

Is now receiving deposits payable on demand, with interest, allowed on all sums from $5 to $3,000.

JOHN W. MURRAY, President,
J. FRANK HUBBARD, Vice-President
J. C. POPE, Treasurer.

Money deposited on or before January tenth will draw interest from the first.

GEORGE W. DAY,

General Auctioneer.

Sales of Personal Property solicited. P. O. Box 123, Dunellen, N. J., or address in care of Constitutionalist. Terms reasonable

Townsend's

Marble and Granite Works,

30

Somerset st., North Plainfield.

If you have not engaged your work I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and sell small unlisted prices. I will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself, relative to the quality of material used.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, and can pay cash for the stock I use in the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon the quality of the work as the first thing. Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which I feel safe in saying is the best. Work and material guaranteed. Call and see me before purchasing elsewhere, as I can save you money and please you.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

J. E. TOWNSEND, Manager.

Branch yard, Westfield, N. J.

NEW JERSEY SUPREME COURT

To Richard Garretson, defendant, or whom it may concern:

Please take notice that the following writ of Scire Facias has been issued out of the Supreme Court of the State of New Jersey, to wit:

STATE OF NEW JERSEY, SS.

The State of NEW JERSEY to our Sheriff of the County of Middlesex, Greeting:

WHEREAS lately in our Supreme Court of Judicature, holden at Trenton, before the Justices thereof, on the first Monday of the present term, JOHN D. HARDING recovered against RICHARD GARRETSON, late of Piscataway, deceased, for the sum of two hundred and eighty-three dollars and eighty-three cents, damages which he had sustained by occasion of certain promises and assumptions by the said JOHN D. HARDING to the said RICHARD GARRETSON, deceased, as the lately made by the said RICHARD GARRETSON, deceased, and also thirty-one dollars and fifty cents for his costs and charges by him about his suit in that behalf expended, whereof the said RICHARD GARRETSON is convicted, as appears of record. And whereas, since the said JOHN D. HARDING, we have been informed, has died, and the said JOHN D. HARDING hath brought to us to provide him remedy in that behalf, and we being willing that what is right and just should be done in this behalf, do command you, that by good and lawful men of your County, you cause to be made known to the said RICHARD GARRETSON that he be and appear before the Justices of our said Supreme Court at Trenton, aforesaid, on the thirtieth day of April next, to show if any he have or know for himself why the said JOHN D. HARDING ought not to have execution against him for the damages and costs aforesaid, according to the form, force and effect of the said recovery, if it shall seem expedient for him so to do. And further to do and receive what the said Court, before the Justices aforesaid, shall then and there consider of him in this behalf, and have you then and there the names of those by whom you shall so cause it to be made known to him and this writ.

WITNESS, JOSEPH D. BEARLEY, Esquire, Chief Justice, at Trenton, aforesaid, the seventeenth day of February, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven.

SPEER & MERSHON, Attys.

REED, J. F. LEE, Clerk. 12 fs

CARNEY BROS.,

MADISON AVENUE,

Between Front and Second streets.

Tinners,
Plumbers
Gas Fitters,

Grates and bricks for all kinds of stoves can be found here at Jobbers' prices. Bring your tinware mending to us. The best tinners, the best plumbers, and the best gas-fitters in this section. We use none but the very best of materials, and our work always gives satisfaction. Keys of all kinds are made here. Tinware made to order. Ranges, brick and portable furnaces. Sanitary plumbing.

Wm. A. Woodruff,

Fire and Life

INSURANCE AGENT,

OFFICE,

corner Front St. and Park Avenue,

Plainfield, N. J.

Real Estate for Sale and Exchange. Money to Loan on Approve Security.

Sanitary Plumbing,

Brick and Portable Furnace

Gas Fitting, Tin Roofing,

Etc., Etc., Etc.

I am prepared to do any of above branches in strictly first-class sanitary and workmanship manner.

Having associated myself with the Master Mechanics Association of New York City, I employ none but first class mechanics and non-union men. I believe in every man running his own business, at all times and in cases.

D. W. LITTELL,

No. 112 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J.

ALBERT HEDDEN

Livery & Boarding Stables

FOURTH ST.,

between Watchung and Park avenues, First-class Livery. Horses boarded by week or month. Telephone call, No. 114.

A. WOLFF,

Manufacturer of

CIGARS.

And dealer in all kinds of Smoking and Chewing Tobacco, and smokers' articles, has removed from 215 W. Front street, to 201 W. Front street, one door east of Madison avenue and solicits the patronage of his friends and the public generally.

P. P. VanArsdale,

PIANO TUNER.

Instruments put in thorough order. Terms reasonable. Pianos and organs for sale and to let. Orders by postal, P. O. box 160, or left at Willetti's shoe store, No. 107 Park avenue, will receive prompt attention. Residence 301 E. Front street, corner Elm street. 2fly7

WANTED—AN IDEA Who can think of some simple thing to patent? Protect your ideas; they may bring you wealth. Write JOHN WEDDERBURN & CO., Patent Attorneys, Washington, D. C., for their $1,800 prize offer.

FRAZER AXLE GREASE Best in the World

The wonderful improvement in recent years in the manufacture of lubricants has been largely due to the Frazer Axle Grease. Ask for the Frazer. FOR SALE BY ALL DEALERS

E. B. MAYNARD,

PRACTICAL

BARBER AND

HAIR DRESSER,

204 PARK AVE.

Ladies' and Children's Hair Cutting done at their residence. Shaving, Shampooing, etc., satisfactorily performed. 21fy1

Woolston & Buckle,

PAINTERS.

Wall Papers, Painters' Supplies

141-145 North avenue.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE.

PATENTS TRADE MARKS, DESIGNS, COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice in the beautifully illustrated, largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN,

MUNN & CO., 361 Broadway, New York.

DOWN A FLIGHT OF STEPS.

ALBERT MALM SERIOUSLY INJURED BY A FALL SATURDAY NIGHT.

It Is Said That He Was Somewhat Intoxicated and Lost His Balance—In a Critical Condition at the Hospital.

Albert Malm, a Swede, aged 35 years, met with a serious accident at the North Avenue station last Saturday night. He was waiting for a train to take him to his home at Bound Brook where he is employed as a machinist. Those who saw him say that he was slightly under the influence of liquor. While attempting to reach the toilet rooms, which are located in the basement beneath the smoking room, he stumbled and fell the entire distance to the room below. He fell head first, and when he reached the bottom his head struck the stone floor with sufficient force to inflict a deep scalp wound from which the blood flowed profusely. The man also lost a great quantity of blood from both ears, and it was first thought that he would die before he could be helped.

As soon as possible assistance was secured and Malm was picked up in in an unconscious condition and taken to the hospital where he was treated by Dr. Probasco. An examination developed no broken bones, and the only injury discovered was the scalp wound. While the man is in a critical condition it is thought that he will recover.

Malm is unmarried and at one time was employed at the Pond Tool Works.

He was taken to the hospital in the ambulance in charge of Sergeant Kiely and Roundsman Frederickson.

DEATH OF MRS. STANBERY

PASSING AWAY OF A WOMAN WELL-KNOWN IN THIS SECTION.

The Wife of William C. Stanbery and a Sister of the Late Theodore Runyon —Funeral to be Held Wednesday.

At her home in Scotch Plains at 7:10 o'clock, Sunday morning, there passed away Mrs. Eliza Ann Stanbery, the wife of William C. Stanbery. Her illness was of long duration, and the direct cause of death assigned was pneumonia. Besides the husband, one son, William B. Stanbery, survives her. Mrs. Stanbery had been ailing more or less for the past four or five years, but it was not until about three weeks ago that she was taken to her bed, and since last Wednesday she lingered along in a semi-conscious state. The end was peaceful.

Mrs Stanbery was a daughter of the late Abram Runyon and the only sister of the late Theodore Runyon, embassador from the United States to Berlin. She was born in New York in 1824, and had she lived until the 10th of the coming July would have been seventy-three years old. In early life she attended Mme. Pheilo's boarding school for young ladies near Baltimore and later she attended a young ladies' seminary in Rahway. At the age of twenty years she completed her education at Mrs. Spalding's private school in Elizabeth. She was a thoroughly educated woman and was high up in the German language.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanbery were married in a house opposite the First Baptist church, in Plainfield, in 1864, by Rev. William Whitaker, and they have since resided in their comfortable home at the Plains. She was found of society in early life and was perhaps the best posted woman in New Jersey on the Royal Family of England.

The last sad funeral rites will be enacted at the house of the decedent, as it was one of her last requests, on Wednesday afternoon at 2:45 o'clock. Rev. Dr. Tuttle, of the Episcopal church, of which she was a faithful and consistent member, will officiate, and interment will be in Evergreen Cemetery, Plainfield.

IN HONOR OF VISITORS.

Miss Mary Collier Entertained Her Young Friends.

Miss Mary Collier entertained a number of friends informally at the Olympia, Saturday evening, in honor of her guests, the Misses Ketcham, of Brooklyn. The evening was spent in dancing and playing games while refreshments were served toward the close of the evening.

Among those present were the Misses Ketcham, Lucie Palmer Davis, Clara Long, Evelyn M. Lewis, Elsie Smith, Katheryn Glen, Lillian Glen, Katheryn Nevius, Helen Pfender and Bertha Thorne, Mrs. F. T. Ketcham and Mrs. Asa Collier, Alvah Davis, Guernsey Nevius, Lester Baldwin, Carl D. Pfender, George Proctor Smith, Herbert Schutt, Wilburn F. Cornwell, Fred Ormes, of New York, Wyatt E. Barnes, and Charles Hazeltine.

Rumored Police Resignment.

It is rumored that Patrolman Post has resigned his position on the police force but The Press is unable to deny or verify the statement as those police officials to whom the resignation is known are out-of-town or unable to be interviewed.

MAYOR MAD AN ARREST

COL. WILSOL ENFORCES LAW AND ORDER BY PERSONAL ACTION.

Arrested John Barry for Fast Driving—Barry Protested But His Honor Was Adamante—Barry Did Not K-ep His Promise

Mayor Wilson, of the borough, appeared in a new role, Sunday afternoon, but it was all in the cause of law and order. He arrested his first prisoner, and when the prisoner suggested that he, the Mayor, did not have the authority to do so, Mayor Wilson soon convinced him to the contrary.

The Sunday quiet in the neighborhood of Greenbrook road and "Tunlaw," the residence of the Mayor, was disturbed Sunday afternoon by John Barry, who was lashing his horse at a furious rate as he ran along that thoroughfare. The Mayor saw Barry dashing down the street and ordered him to stop. After a time, Barry regained control of his horse and brought him to a standstill to see what the Mayor wanted. Mayor Wilson promptly placed the man under arrest for disturbing the peace. Barry did not see how the Mayor could arrest him and then, he explained, the horse had been running away, and he could not help himself.

Mayor Wilson did not agree with him in either particular and impressed it on Barry's mind that he had a perfect right to ar est any offender in the borough. He also blamed Barry for whipping his horse and said that it was the too frequent use of the whip that had caused the horse to run.

Mayor Wilson marched his prisoner up to his home and was preparing to have him locked up, when the latter pleaded to be allowed to go and promised to appear last Monday for trial. This morning came but no Barry, and the Mayor was very much wrought up over the fact that his prisoner had broken his parole. The borough marshals are now looking for Barry and he may find that he did more than he bargained for when he defied the the Mayor.

CUPID'S FASTER EVENT.

MISS ALICIA M'INTYRE MARRIED UNBEKNOWN TO HER FATHER.

Accepted William Chamberlain, of Westfield, For Her Husband—Ceremony Performed by Father Smith in Cranford.

The quiet marriage of Miss Alicia McIntyre, of this city, and William H. Chamberlain, of Westfield, in Cranford, Monday, came as a complete surprise to the circles in which both of the young couple move. Even the father of the bride did not learn of the nuptial step which his daughter had taken until some time after the ceremony had been performed. The bride is a Catholic and the groom a Protestant.

Miss MacIntyre is the daughter of John F. MacIntyre, of North avenue, the well known real estate owner. She is a beautiful and prepossessing young woman, about twenty years, very popular among her many friends in this city. The groom is a popular young man in Westfield, and holds the important position of superintendent of the Suburban Electric Light Company in Westfield. He is also assistant chief of the fire department of Westfield.

The couple went to Cranford, yesterday afternoon, where the nuptuals were performed by Father Smith of that place. They were accompanied by Lt. Picker, a shoe dealer of Westfield, who acted as one of the witnesses. The bride's mother knew that the ceremony was to take place but Mr. MacIntyre was kept in ignorance of the marriage until after it was performed. He made no objection, however, and bestowed his parental blessing on the young people. From Cranford they went to the home of the groom's mother on Westfield avenue, Westfield, where they are staying at present.

In Favor of Meserole.

In the landlord and tenant case of of Reiss against Meserole which was tried at New Brunswick recently, the counsel for Reiss has served notice that he will ask the court tomorrow to vacate the judgement previously recovered. This would seem to indicate that Meserole has won his case. As soon as the order is secured from the court new proceedings will be instituted. Lawyer Irving L. Brady, of this city represents Meserole.

In Justice Newcorn's Court.

Summons were issued in Justice Newcorn's court Monday in the contract case of Sharkey against Clark, returnable on the 26th. The contract of Edmins against Tobin was tried and judgment rendered for the plaintiff in full. The case of Ivins against Cramer, on contract, was adjourned for a week.

The X-Ray Machine Arrives.

The X-ray machine for the Muhlenberg Hospital arrived there several days ago. An expert to set the machine up and put it in working order is expected to arrive at the hospital Monday or Tuesday.

Membership, April 16th, League of American Wheelmen: New, 1,377; total, 71,332; N. J. Division: new, 77; total, 4,644.

BOROUGH BACK TAXES.

MAYOR WILSON URGES THAT DELINQUENTS BE MADE TO PAY.

He Advocates that the Borough Take Possession of Property Sold for Back Taxes—$10,000 Owed by the Delinquents.

Notwithstanding the fact that the adjourned meeting of the Borough Council held last Friday was a short one, there was much important business transacted. Mr. Lounsbury was the only member absent.

The first business of importance was the presentation of a paper by the Mayor in regard to the collection of taxes in the borough. The contents of the paper are as follows:

"Gentlemen:—Upon the collection of our taxes depends the stability of our municipal government, therefore it is of the most vital importance that to this matter we should give our strict and constant attention.

"It appears that there are yet due to the borough for delinquent taxes covering a period of several years in the neighborhood of ten thousand dollars.

"This means not only that certain persons have failed to bear their just proportion of the public burden, but that the rest of us who pay our taxes are being compelled to bear more than our share, and thereby an injustice is being done which should not be tolerated if it can be avoided.

"Without intending to reflect upon any officer or department of the borough, for I am not sufficiently conversant with the procedure in such matters to venture an opinion as to where the fault lies, permit me to say that this large amount of uncollected taxes must result either from defects in the law covering the subject or else from a failure to enforce the law.

"I am informed that there are numerous cases where large amounts of taxes are due to the borough from improved property which has been sold for the taxes and purchased by the borough which thereby became entitled to take possession of the property and rent it for the public benefit, and yet the owners are allowed to continue in possession and enjoy the same use as if they had paid their dues.

"Such a case, I am informed, is the Fritts property on Somerset street, which owes the borough upwards of five hundred dollars.

"Another is the Warman property on Grove street and which also owes several hundred dollars.

"These properties could easily be rented for enough to pay all the taxes and leave abundant revenue besides, and there are other instances of a similar character which it is unnecessary to mention at this time.

"As a business man I am impressed with the idea that all taxes should be promptly collected and all delinquents pressed to the full extent of our power under the law. No favors should be shown to one man at the expense of the public.

"We are but public servants and should be swerved neither by friend nor foe from the strict performance of our duty. It may be unpleasant to seize the property of our neighbor but it is his duty to pay his taxes and our duty to collect them.

"If this large delinquent tax list results from defects in the law, let us endeavor to have the law corrected. If it results from a failure to enforce the law, let us correct that.

"I would suggest that some action be taken by your body to ascertain wherein the difficulty lies and to recommend such measures as may be proper and advisable under the circumstances."

Following the reading of the above the Mayor appointed G. W. Kilner and Thomas Butledge as special marshals and the appointments were confirmed by the Council.

Mr. Woolston, as chairman of the committee on streets and public health, presented a report of the expenditures upon the opening and laying out of Watchung avenue. The total cost, less the benefits derived from the sale of houses along the line of the avenue, was $34,436 25, which was divided as follows: Damages for land taken, $30,350; surveys, engineering, etc., $588.12; auctioneer's fees, $34.48 money due Contractor Bowden, $2,411.75; laying of drain pipes and erection of catch basins, $125; searching titles, $172.35; printing, $92.25; commissioners' fees for the assessment of damages, $225, same for the assessment of benefits, $300; interest on money borrowed in anticipation of assessment for benefits, $1,650; total, $36 160.35, less amount received from the sale of buildings, $1,724.10, leaving a net total of $34,436 25.

At this time the Mayor appointed J. H. Cooley, J. P. Emmons, W. J. Roome as commissioners to assess benefits in connection with the opening and laying out of Watchung avenue. In relation to the above Mr. Woolston offered a resolution to the effect that benefits just and equitable in proportion to the benefits received be assessed those affected by the opening and laying out of the above avenue, and that in case of excess the same be placed on the borough at large and that it be paid out of the general road tax. The resolution was adopted.

Mr. McLoughlin stated that he questioned the necessity of the Mayor to re appoint the above commissioners, but Corporation Counsel Reed said that it was necessary and Mr. McLoughlin was satisfied.

An ordinance was introduced designating the streets in the borough upon which the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company can erect their poles. The ordinance was adopted on its first and second reading and laid over for one month for the final reading.

The object of the ordinance is to prevent the above company from placing their poles wherever they please. Mr. McLoughlin thought it would be well for the council to order that the wires be placed under ground. Mr. Reed stated that the company was desirous of placing their wires under ground as soon as possible and the matter was left for further consideration.

In accordance with a resolution of Mr. Carey the dog license fee was placed at $2. Mr. Woolston reported the bids received for furnishing crushed stone to the borough for the balance of the year. A. I. and N. B. Smalley bid 95 cents a ton for all sizes, while J. H. Wilson & Co. bid 90 cents for the same. The bid of the latter was accepted.

Mr. Woolston reported on a storm sewer to carry off the surface water on that portion of Watchung avenue which is intersected by Pearl street, and stated that D. A. Dunham had furnished plans for the construction of the work. Mr. Woolston also submitted a bid by David Bowden offering to do the work complete for $135. Street Commissioner Conover bid $146 for the same work. The Mayor stated that inasmuch as Mr. Bowden had lost money on the Watchung avenue work he was in favor of giving this work to him. Mr. McLaughlin objected on the grounds that he thought Mr. Conover should be given the preference because Mr. Bowden had through adverse circumstances been unable to pay all of the men who had worked for him on Watchung avenue. Mr. Bowden was given the contract and McLoughlin voted no.

The Mayor brought up the question of bad sidewalks in the borough and at the same time he presented a long list of the names of property owners who have such walks in front of their property. In accordance with a suggestion the matter was left in the hands of the counsel, clerk and street commissioner, with the understanding that Mr. Woolston is to look after the work of securing proper walks where the same should be laid.

Mr. Burtis offered a resolution that the Auditing and Finance Committee be authorized to ascertain the amount of delinquent taxes and report at the next meeting. This concluded the business and the meeting adjourned adjourned.

Resolutions of Condolence.

At a meeting of the Plainfield Gesang and Turn Verein, held April 13th, 1897, the following resolutions of condolence were unanimously adopted on the death of Henry Wedemeyer:

Whereas, It has pleased our Heavenly Father in His all-wise providence to remove by death, one of our beloved members, brother and friend, Henry Wademeyer, one who always took a deep interest in the welfare and prosperity of our association; one who was always ready with valuable aid, and who did all this most willingly and cheerfully. Therefore we desire here to place on record a full expression of our great loss, and for our lasting regard for him and his memory; and be it.

Resolved, That we hereby tender to his bereaved family our sincere sympathy, the assurance of our warmest regards and tender sympathy in their bereavement, under a blow so sudden, that our faith in the Divine love can say: "Thy will be done."

Resolved, That this preamble and resolutions be placed in full upon the minutes of our association, and that a copy be forwarded to the family and to the papers for publication.

Mark Schoettlin.
Charles Duvier.
M. Mentrenbach.

A Bicycle Party.

A bicycle party was given on Saturday evening by Miss Bessie E. Titsworth in honor of her friend, Miss Santee, of Smith College. The guests gathered at the home of Miss Titsworth on West Seventh street, and rode aroudd the Fanwood-Scotch Plains course. There were fourteen in the party. They then retured to Miss Titsworth's house where the floors had been cleared and a number of their friends had gathered. The rest of the evening was spent in dancing.

Ammonia in Her Eye.

Miss Maggie Campbell, of West Fourth street, met with a very severe accident recently. She had occasion to use some ammonia and in pulling the cork out of the bottle some of the fluid went into her left eye causing her very much pain. Dr. Ard was hastily summoned and under his care Miss Campbell was made as comfortable as possible.

Bridge Contract Given Out.

The Somerset County Board of Freeholders met at Two Bridges on Saturday and gave the contract for the bridge to be erected across the Raritan river to the Berlin Bridge Bridge Company, of New York. The price bid was $4,100. The work will be commenced at once.

END OF EARTHLY CAREERS

FUNERAL SERVICES OVER REMAINS OF WELL-KNOWN CITIZENS.

Henry G. Stephenson Laid to Rest After Services Conducted by Dr. Yerkes—Odd Fellows Escorted a Brother's Remains.

The pilgrimage of Henry G. Stephenson in this world is ended and, Friday, all that was mortal was laid to rest in the Evergreen cemetery in Plainfield avenue. In the afternoon, his friends gathered in the First Baptist church for a last look at his calm face and to listen to the funeral discourse preached by Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes. The service was a short but impressive one and the words of the pastor of the deceased one were well chosen.

After the reading of a portion of the Psalms, Dr. Yerkes told of the answer of Jacob as to his age and how his days had been short and full of evil. He told of Jacob's troubles and how his life had not been a happy one. Lives today are full of evil, not taking evil as sin, but as the misfortunes that are occurring through life. But there is much more good in life than evil, immeasurably much more, but man is inclined to look on the unpleasant side.

Dr. Yerkes went on to say that the people on this earth are only pilgrims and sojourners. But the pilgrimage ends somewhere and the children of God are journeying home. They find the evils that surround them, but they have the hope of the future with them constantly.

He then told of the deceased, how his years had been many in comparison with the usual run of life, but very short in comparison with the countless ages. He spoke of how Dr. Stephenson had often taken of his experiences and how he had wonderfully served God, but had returned to the fold when rather advanced in age. He spoke of the beautiful life that the missing one had lived during his connection with the First Baptist church and how rich and heartfelt has been his many testimonies.

"He was a faithful servant," said the Doctor, "of God according to the circumstances that came to him and his abilities. He loved God and sought to walk in His ways. His light did shine. We cannot question as to his future for we know that he is now enjoying eternal life up yonder."

After an earnest prayer, the lid of the casket was raised and the friends were permitted to take a last look at the countenance of the deceased.

The funeral services of the late Henry Wedemeyer, proprietor of the Arlington Hotel, were held Friday afternoon at 2:30 from the German Reformed church. It was one of the largest funerals ever held in the church. There was a great many floral offerings including a target and cross from the Independent Shooting Corps, a harp from the singing section of the Gesang and Turn Verein, and several wreaths and a bunch of lilies.

The services were conducted by Rev. George Hauser, pastor of the church, and he spoke with comfort to the bereaved ones. An impressive part of the service was the singing by the singing section of the Gesang and Turn Verein, under the direction of Prof. Eichorn, of Elizabeth.

Mrs. Rosenthell presided at the organ and played while the funeral cortege was entering and leaving the church.

There were representatives present from the various organizations of which Mr. Wedemeyer belonged and the following served as pall bearers: C. G. Coogler, Moralier, Jr., Deane, Charles Flohr, G. H. Keller and J. R. Phillips. Interment was in Hillside cemeteey.

City Court

There was a large batch of offenders before City Judge DeMeza, this Monday. John Peterson and Charles Wyatt, colored, were charged with quarreling and fighting by Patrolman Totten. Peterson paid $10 fine and Wyatt went down to jail for thirty days. John Lynch, Peter Seader and Morris Barre were charged by Boundsman Flynn with violating the hack ordinance. Their trial was set down for next Saturday morning. Michael Gleason, drunk and disorderly, was fined $5.

The motion of the counsel for the defendant for non-suit in the case of Kelly against Bonnell, in tort, was granted. The lawyer was Thimothy Kelly of Elizabeth. The case of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company against Woolston, on contract, was adjourned until the 26th.

Sentence was suspended on Foster Sprague and Robert Wyekoff, for riding a wheel at night without a light. Louis Frank, a native of sunny Italy, was sent to the county jail for twenty days for being drunk and disorderly last night. He was arrested by Patrolman Cash.

Ann Sullivan was arrested on complaint of her landlady, Mrs. Jane L. Tobin, charged with being drunk and disorderly. She will appear for trial Saturday morning.

Sergeant Kiely appeared against Robert Wallace and charged him with being drunk and disorderly on Park avenue. His trial was set down for Saturday morning.

TWO DARING BURGLARIES

THE MARAUDERS OPERATED IN SLEEPING APARTMENTS.

In One Instance a Woman Was Terrified to Make an Outcry Until the Thieves Escaped—Another Not Aroused.

A series of daring burglaries were committed in Fanwood at an early hour last Friday that have greatly alarmed residents of that neighborhood. In two cases the marauders were successful and escaped with some valuable booty. Once they were the target for the revolver of an excited resident but they escaped the flying bullets.

Charles Hamilton resides in a house on the road to Fanwood, only a few doors from the station. One of the kitchen windows was left up during the night. At about two o'clock this morning the burglars, their exact number is not known, made their entrance into the house by the window. Mrs. Hamilton was awakened from her slumbers by the sound of someone in the room. She opened her eyes to see by the faint light a man leaning over the bureau. Too frightened to scream, she lay still until the stranger passed out of the room. Then she aroused her husband. He started to investigate and the uninvited guests departed in a hurry.

George Hall lives opposite the Hamilton residence. He was aroused by the noise and shouting, and looked out of the window in time to see three figures slinking away from the house across the street. He fired several shots from his revolver at the fast retreating figures, but as they continued without delay it is likely that none of the shots took effect.

When Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton looked about they found that the burglars had made a rich haul from their house. A valuable gold watch was missing and also nine diamonds, set in rings and pins, valued at $200. The visitors had also helped themselves to a pocket-book containing some small cash and bills.

When Frank West, who lives on North avenue just west of the Fanwood station, rose from his bed this morning, he noticed that his clothes which had been carefully placed on the chair near the bed the night before, were now heaped up on the chair and floor. He examined the contents of his pockets and found that his pocket-book had been emptied of its contents, about $20 in cash, and that his silver watch was also missing. When the family went downstairs they found that one of the windows in the sitting room had been pried open and that it was evident that the visitor or visitors who had helped themselves to West's property, had made their entrance into the house in that way.

No one in the house had been awakened but it was evident that the burglars had visited West's own room. So far nothing but his money and watch has been missed.

A FRIGHTFUL ACCIDENT.

WILLIAM HUFF DISEMBOWELED IN A RUNAWAY THIS NOON.

Street Commissioner Conover's Team Became Frightened and There Was a Collision at the Engine House on Park Avenue.

William Huff, of Somerset street, who is employed by Borough Street Commissioner George Conover, met with what is supposed to be a fatal accident Monday. While driving along Manning avenue with Mr. Conover's team on the way to the stable, the horses became frightened and ran at a break neck speed toward the barn. Walter Conover was on the wagon but was thrown off before the team had gone very far.

Huff managed to stay on the wagon until the barn was reached. Here he was thrown between the building and the wheels of the wagon. Before the team could be stopped Huff was horribly mangled about the face and he was disemboweled frightfully.

He was picked up by a workman and Dr. Carman, who happened to be near, responded at once and gave valuable assistance. Huff was taken to his home and is now in a very critical condition. Dr. Carman called Dr. Davis in consultation and the two physicians are now endeavoring to bring Huff to consciousness. They are slight hopes of his recovery.

Huff died in the afternoon 3:55 from the result of his injuries. He suffered great pain up to the time the end came.

Mrs. Hubbard's Afternoon Tea.

A charming afternoon tea was given by Mrs. William C. Hubbard, Friday afternoon, at the residence of Charles Potter on West Seventh street, in honor of her friend, Miss Santee, of Smith College. The guests were received by Mrs. Hubbard and Miss Bessie E. Titsworth. Mrs. Henry M. Maxson poured tea and Mrs. D. E. Titsworth the chocolate, which was served to the guests by the Misses Ruth Maxson and Ethel Titsworth.

Miss Edith L. Burt, of West Seventh street, was the guest of Miss Florence L. Spaulding, of Bound Brook, on Friday night.

THE PASSING OF THOMAS

NOVEL ENTERTAINMENT IN THE FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

The Trials and Tribulations That Ensued in an Effort to Bury a Stage. Cat. Caused Hours of Genuine Laughter.

These days it is rather difficult to secure something novel in the way of entertainment, but the members of the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Presbyterian church gave their friends an exceedingly novel one last Thursday, and the large number of people present were thoroughly pleased with the affair. The programme opened with a contralto solo by Miss Charlotte Messerschmith, accompanied by Miss Remsen. Following this, the feature of the evening was presented. It was a series of tableaux entitled "The Passing of Thomas." The title is rather dense, but the story is that of a poor cat, not unlike the one which came back. It was owned by a kind and loving man and wife, but the cat had lived as long as the law would allow, and was about to be buried. At this time there was a great struggle as to where the feline should be interred. Any number of places were selected but one seemed to please those interested in the burial. The cat was finally taken from one place to another, but it always happened that the cat reached the point of starting. After much trouble, accompanied with many amusing incidents, the cat was buried and thus the story ended. Those who took the several parts in the story were: Mrs. Harver, Miss Grace Overton; Mr. Harver, Mr. Jones; Hutchinson Port, Harry Williams; conductor, Augustus Searing; stoker, Mr. Remsen; passengers, Miss Williams, Miss Agnes Blair, Miss Vandeventer, William Corieli, Percy Overton, Edward Petrie, Fred Overton, Guy Radford.

Every part was well taken and the story was made especially interesting from the fact that it was read by Miss Mary Luckey. As she read the story it was interspersed with the tableaux which represented the amusing sketch. During this part of the programme the audience was kept in a continual roar of laughter and it was not until the last tableau was shown that the fun ended. The last number on the programme was a piano solo by Miss Potter.

A feature was the novel programme which was distributed to those present. The outside cover contained a very pretty sketch of "Tabby" in many different styles, while on the inside was printed the characters and the names of those who took the parts. The members of the Christian Endeavor Society have full charge of the affair, for the members of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the church had considerable to do with it. Those who served on the refreshment committee were: Mrs. Haynes, Mrs. Lounsbury, Mrs. Shotwell, Mrs. Ross, Mrs. Bliah, Mrs. Dayton. The reception committee was composed of Mrs. Cave, Mrs. Radford, Miss Pansy Jane Herring, Miss Bliah.

After the rendition of the programme those in charge served all with refreshments and this part of the programme was interspersed with genuine socialbility.

MOON'S TERRIFYING CRY!

THE "HI KI YI" FRIGHTENED LOTS OF WESTFIELD PEOPLE.

To Give More Force to His Words He Added a Few Pistol Shots and There Was a Scampering of Mischievous Boys.

About midnight Friday the residents along Broad street, Westfield, were startled by several pistol shots. They were so frightened to examine into the cause of the disturbance and a few moments later there was a rattle of boxes, a slamming of doors, the clatter of retreating feet and a yell, which sounded like "Hi Ki Yi," and five more shots rang out. Then all was quiet. The brave citizens in the vicinity covered up their heads, stuck their fingers in their ears and lay near and trembling until dawn. Then it was discovered that some small bad boys were responsible for the nocturnal disturbance. They had pounced upon a pile of cracker boxes, which had been left in front of Walker's grocery and piled them up so in front of Charlie Moon, the Chinese laundryman's door. Charlie rushed out and shot a revolver to scare the boys away and then retired. Before he had gotten into sweet slumber the boys returned to the attack, hurling boxes against the laundry. Then it was, that Charlie Moon, rushed out crying "Hi Ki Yi," and shot at the boys again. The boys were frightened more at the language than the revolver. The latter was harmless. The language struck terror to their hearts. Charlie could not translate it, but he laughed when told that the boys were frightened at what he said, not at what he did. He said it meant something terrible. "Mellie boys make me mad tired," said Charlie, "Me shoot to scare boys: next timen me shoot kill."

Thomas D. Blair, of East Second street, was home from Princeton University for over Easter.

FINAL REVIVAL MEETING

FRED H. ANDREWS MADE AN IMPRESSIVE LEADER.

Told of the Struggle in the Garden of Gethsemane and How Christ Finally Triumphed Over All the Temptations.

Very impressive was the last service of the series of evangelistic meetings which have been held in the Trinity Reformed church for the last two weeks under the auspices of the Local Christian Endeavor Union. The last of the meetings was held last Thursday under the leadership of Fred H. Andrews. It was in remembrance of the scene in the Garden of Gethsemane, and the thought of that solemn occasion with the earnestness that prevaded the meeting served to make it doubly impressive. The preliminary meeting was held in the basement, before the regular service opened, with an enthusiastic song service led by L. H. Bigelow, Jr. Mr. Andrews then took charge of the meeting, and after a hymn, an earnest prayer was made by Ira W. Travell. Councilman William N. Runyon then sung a solo, "In the Hour of Trial." The Scripture reading was by Mr. Andrews and was from the twenty-sixth chapter of Matthew, telling of the scene in the garden. After the collection, "'Tis Midnight" was sung by Miss Hardenburg in a very impressive manner.

Mr. Andrews began his short address by telling how many like to recall their last talk with some dear one, now passed away, and the words of admonition and advice that were given by them. The nature of this meeting, he said, is something like that. Jesus Christ, one who we all know, has gone above and we like to think over the circumstances of his last night on earth and his sayings on that night.

He then went on to relate briefly the history of the last week that Christ spent on earth, how the upper room was selected and how Christ and the twelve disciples gathered there. He told how Christ tried to draw Judas back to him but how satan accomplished his work and Judas finally withdrew from the room. Mr. Andrews described the first Lord's Supper and then read the beautiful words of consolation and advice that Christ gave to his disciples as they gathered round him. Mr. Andrews spoke very feelingly of that last meeting and explained to his hearers that they should take the words to themselves. He repeated the messages tenderly and drew many thoughts from them. From a prayer offered by Jesus, Mr. Andrews showed how it was that eternal life began on this earth, or soon as Christ was taken fully into the heart.

He told of the terrible struggles in the Garden and how Christ finally triumphed over all his temptations and how the same God that helped him in that hour of need is willing to help us all at our Gethsemane.

A number of brief but earnest testimonies followed and the meeting closed with prayer and another hymn.

FOLLOWED THE DRINK.

CONSTABLE MARSH'S SCHEME TO IMPRISON A DRUNKEN WOMAN.

Kate Corcoran Refused to Badge 'Till the Officer Borrowed Her Bottle of Whiskey and Then She Went Along.

Kate Corcoran, a Westfield maiden, about fifty years old, started out to celebrate Saturday afternoon and landed in the "parrot cage" till she sobered up. She started on the war path on Lawrence avenue. Now this was a grievous thing for Kate to do, for it is written in the township minutes that thou shalt not celebrate nor go on the warpath too openly, lest the constables get thee and the Squire sendeth thee up for thirty days. But Kate was full of joy and Jersey tanglefoot and remembered not these things. She abused the Theis children and others on Lawrence avenue, until John Marsh was sent for. Kate refused to walk to the cage, and John was about to get a carriage and take her there, when a happy thought struck him. "Have you got any whiskey Kate? I want a drink." "Sure," she said, and she passed out a pint bottle. John walked toward the lockup and Kate followed him. When he searched another pint of whiskey and $1.21 were found on her person. Mr. Theis refused to make any charges against her. When she had sobered up she was let go, so she could attend Easter services. Kate said she got a man to go into a drugstore and buy the whiskey for her. It is known of a certainty that she tried to get it in the various saloons and failed to do so. Who the man was, or which drugstore Kate refused to disclose. An effort will be made to find the guilty party, and if found will be prosecuted.

G. A. Bowman, of this city, has returned from a trip abroad.

—Mrs. H. W. Marshall, has kindly thrown open her home on East Fifth street to the Ladies Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed church, for a tea on Thursday evening, April 22. An offering of 25 cents will be received at the door and the amount realized will go toward purchasing a new carpet for the church.

NEW BANK APARTMENTS

CITY NATIONAL BANK OPENS ITS DOORS FOR INSPECTION.

Complete in Every Detail and a Credit to the City—How the Improvements are Arranged Up-to-Date.

It speaks well for the substantial standing of the business men of Plainfield that there are two banking houses in their midst such as there are. Further than that it is the city's good fortune that they are officered by men who are so thoroughly progressive and uptodate that they have provided their respective institutions with banking apartments that in point of beauty, convenience and safety are not excelled in any city in this vast country.

A year ago the City National Bank officials decided to provide more commodious and handsome quarters for their patrons and in looking about for a desirable site the building at the corner of Park avenue and East Front street was selected. The location was a particularly pretentious one for the changes that were contemplated by the bank officials; and, to say the least, the structure has been remodeled in the most advantageous way to suit the elaborate ideas followed out in the removal from the old location a few doors east on the same thoroughfare.

The whole interior of the building from cellar to roof has been rebuilt and finished up in a most attractive manner. The upper floors are devoted to business offices, but what interests people most is the equipment of the banking house itself.

From the time the plans were first submitted for the improvements till the time the work was completed a few days ago the personal interest of each officer of the institution was engaged in the changes, but to Cashier William F. Arnold is due especial credit for many valuable suggestions and a constant supervision over the work while it was in progress.

The entire first floor of the building, with a frontage of 44 feet on Front street and a depth of 66 feet on Park avenue, is occupied by the banking room, while the second and third floors are devoted to business offices.

The entrance to the bank is at the corner of the building, making it equally accessible from either Front street or Park avenue.

As you enter the room, the first door on the right opens into the cashier's office, and immediately adjoining it is the ladies' banking department, a small room complete in every detail, where ladies may communicate directly with either the cashier or teller, and thus be spared the annoyance and fatigue of standing in line at the teller's window. Continuing past the ladies' department, you come to the paying teller, the receiving teller, the bookkeepers, and finally the discount clerk.

The desks are arranged on the Park avenue side of the room where, even on the darkest days, there is an abundance of light; a feature which will be appreciated by the customers as well as the employes of the bank.

The different departments are connected by an improved telephone system, permitting instant intercommunication.

Opposite the banking department, at the front, is the directors' room; next comes a room most appropriately furnished for the use of depositors, where conferences may be held and letters written in comparative quiet and privacy. Just beyond, we find an attractive ladies' reception and writing room, fitted with every convenience for the use of the lady customers of the bank. In looking over the arrangement of this unique banking room, it is apparent that exceptional facilities have been prepared for its depositors, of which the ladies have a larger share than has heretofore been allotted them.

Perhaps the most interesting object in the room is the vault which is located at the rear, where it may be plainly seen from the street at all hours of the night, the bank officers evidently appreciating the fact that a vault is not likely to be molested when it is in plain view of every passer-by. This vault was built by the Herring Safe Co. in the same manner as those of the New York Clearing House Association, so justly celebrated, and it is safe to say that it is not excelled by any similar structure in this country.

The floor in front of the vault is arranged to lower before the door is opened, and then raise so that one may walk into the vault on a level and there are no sills to step over.

About sixty tons of metal were used in the construction of the vault, the outer door alone weighing 8 tons, but hung on ball bearing hinges and so nicely balanced that it can be moved with surprising ease. On the right as you enter the vault are the safe deposit boxes in various sizes, conveniently arranged and distinctly modern. These little safes can only be opened by the use of two keys, one of which is always in possession of the Bank official; so that if the owner of a box loses his key, it will be impossible for the finder to profit by it. The boxes will be found to be of very convenient size for the reception of bonds, stocks and papers of value. At the rear of the vault, behind a steel grille, may be seen the safes containing the funds and securities of the bank.

An examination of the doors shows remarkably fine bolt and lock work, with modern time locks, making it impossible to open the doors during the night and holding the doors rigidly, until the time appointed for commencing business the next day. A new system of electrical protection is in use here, so that any tampering with the vault would result in an immediate alarm being given. We are informed that the bank, in connection with its safe deposit system has arranged for the deposit of wills, and hereafter any person who wishes to leave their will in a safe place, can deposit it here, and, for a nominal charge, make sure that it will be guarded and finally delivered strictly in accordance with his or her instructions.

Persons leaving town for the summer, or for a trip abroad, may send their silver here in a trunk or chest, and rest assured that no spoons nor forks will be missing when they return.

The vault has been constructed under the supervision of Mr. J. M. Mossman, the well-known safe expert of New York, and the builder, Mr. F. O. Herring, being a resident of Plainfield, has given his personal attention to the work and is justly proud of the result. In describing the fixtures of the bank, we may say that the wood work is all of mahogany, with screens of oxidized copper and chipped glass, making a very handsome interior.

It is well-known in this community that this bank does a strictly conservative business, and it has also recently arranged for the issue of drafts and letters of credit available for travelers in all parts of the world.

Mr. A. L. C. Marsh was the architect of the building. The interior fittings were furnished by the Andrew Manufacturing Company of New York, the mason work by J. F. Emmons, carpenter work by John Abbott, electric wiring by H. W. Tomlinson, painting by Woolston & Buckle, iron work by W. T. Kirk, plumbing by George J. Tobin and heating by A. M. Griffin

Thursday is general inspection day, and Friday afternoon from three to five o'clock the rooms will be thrown open to the inspection of the ladies. The bank will commence business in its new quarters on Monday morning, April 19th, 1897.

The officers and directors of the bank are:—Charles Hyde, president; J. P. Hubbard, vice-president; W. F. Arnold, cashier; H G Runkle, J K Myers, J. F. MacDonald, Walter Scott, J. T. Closson and J. B. Coward directors

CITY NATIONAL BANK.

CONDUCTORS LAID OFF.

No Reason Given for the Action by the Railway Company.

Recently three conductors on the Central Railroad were laid off. When they arrived in Jersey City they were told that letters awaited them, and when they opened the same they learned that their services were not required any longer. No reason was given for the action. The conductors are McBirth, who had charge of a Long Branch train; Charles Powell, who was in charge of the Royal Blue Line train, which met with a serious accident at Skillman not long ago, and J. Yeoty, who ran a local train between New York and Roselle.

Trolley Contract Signed.

Vice President McAfee, of the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company, signed the contract for the building of the trolley road from Bound Brook to New Brunswick, last week. Work will be commenced about May 1, and is to be completed by July 1. This road runs on the south side of the Raritan.

Wilbur F. Corawell, of the New York Homeopathic College, returned to Plainfield, Saturday to spend a few days at his home on Waynewood place. His college chum, Fred Garmes, accompanied him.

HOME NUPTIAL EVENTS.

ONE IS IN PLAINFIELD AND ONE IN WESTFIELD

Miss Laura Essie Smith Becomes Mrs. George W. Taylor of Dunellen—Brief Articles of Both Weddings—Decorations.

A very pretty wedding was celebrated Wednesday when Miss Laura Essie Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Smith, of West Front street, and George W. Taylor, of Dunellen, were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents by Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel.

The bride was attended by her sister Miss Minnie Smith, as maid of honor, while A. D. Honeyman acted as best man. The bridal party stood beneath a bower of flowers in the centre of which was a floral bell, and surrounding all was a profusion of evergreens.

The ceremony was performed at 8 o'clock in the presence of about fifty guests from Brooklyn, New York, Paterson, Montclair, Bayonne, Boonton, Dunellen and Plainfield.

The bride was richly gowned in pearl gray with pearl trimmings and white chiffon, and she carried a bouquet of bridal roses. The gown of the maid of honor was also gray with green silk trimmings and she carried pink roses.

After the ceremony the happy couple were showered with the best wishes and congratulations of all present. They then led the way to the dining room where supper was served.

The presents received by the bride and groom evidenced their popularity and they were all exceedingly useful and handsome. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor will at once go to housekeeping on Coddington avenue where the groom has just completed a new house which is furnished throughout. They have the best wishes of a host of friends for their success and a prosperous journey through life. On their departure for their new home they were showered with rice and old shoes by their friends and relatives.

There was a pretty home wedding celebrated last Wednesday in Westfield at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. French, of North avenue. The contracting parties were Miss Annie Swam Lambert and Edward Franklin Gilby, both of Westfield. The house was decorated with palms, Easter lillies and potted plants. Four little boys, nephews of the bride and groom, acted as pages, and Lillian Lambert was the flower girl. Preceding the bride and groom into the parlors to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, she strewed their path with roses. The bride's costume was of white silk and chiffon and she carried a bouquet of bride's roses. The ceremony was performed by the Rev N. W. Cadwell, of the Presbyterian church. Boland Randolph played the wedding march. Mr. and Mrs. Gilby were the recipients of many handsome and costly presents

After the ceremony an elaborate wedding dinner was served and with the hearty congratulations of their friends and amid a shower of rice and old shoes the newly wedded couple departed for Washington, D. C. On their return they will reside on North avenue.

New Market Postmistress.

Congressman Howell has recommended the establishment of a new postoffice in Monmouth county, to be called Hobart. He recommends Emma S. Baird as postmistress. Mr. Howell also recommends the appointment of Charles S. Day as postmaster at New Market.

Miss Florence Williams, of West Seventh street, has gone to Philadelphia to spend several days with relatives.

Harry Jenkins, of Bethlehem, has been spending a few days with his mother, Mrs. J. M. Jenkins, of East Sixth street.

LAWN FETE TO BE HELD.

MAGNIFICENT GROUND OF JOHN TAYLOR JOHNSON TO BE UTILIZED.

The Fete for the Benefit of the Town Improvement Association and Given by Mrs. P. Mall, Daughter of Late Mr. Johnson.

Plans are now being made for a lawn fete which promises to be one of the social events of the coming summer. It will be a grand affair and will be conducted on a larger scale than that of any previous attempt. This fete is to be for the benefit of the Town Improvement Association and will be held on the large grounds that surround the John Taylor Johnson residence on East Front street, where Mrs Pierre Mall, daughter of the late Mr. Johnson, spends her summer months.

Mrs. Mall is president of the Town Improvement Association and was the suggestor of this delightful way of aiding the association in increasing the funds in its treasury. While all the details for the fete have not been arranged, the general idea of the affair has been laid out and more details are being completed every day. It will be in charge of prominent society people of the city while many of the young people in costume will assist.

The date for the affair has been selected, June 8th, when all the flowers will be at their best. While the grounds are always beautiful in summer, they will be converted into a paradise for the occasion and the best artistic talent will be called upon to prepare them. Everything will be done to make the affair a magnificent success, and when it is remembered that the energetic members of the Town Improvement Association are the moving spirits in the affair, there can be no doubt as to its success.

AN AFTERNOON WEDDING.

Marriage of Miss Minnie L. Stiglitz to Frank G. Wickoff.

A quiet home wedding was celebrated last Wednesday when Miss Minnie L. Stiglitz, daughter of the late John Stiglitz, of 22 Chatham street, and Frank G. Wickoff, of Park avenue, were married by Rev. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church. The home was prettily decorated with green and roses and presented an attractive appearance.

Miss Hannah Stiglitz, of Brooklyn, aunt of the bride, was the maid of honor, while the groom was John Stocker, of Manning avenue.

Following the ceremony congratulations were offered and supper was served. Mr. and Mrs. Wickoff will leave town for Elizabeth on the 5:56 train and from there they will take a train on the Pennsylvania railroad for the south. They will return to Plainfield the latter part of next week and will reside at No. 117 Park avenue.

The bride was formerly a saleswoman at White's dry goods store, and she has a host of friends who extend their best wishes. The groom is one of Plainfield's well known young men and is engaged in upholstering business. A large collection of useful and pretty gifts were received by the bride and groom.

MONUMENT TO RUNYON.

Being Erected Over the Grave in Mt. Pleasant Cemetery, Newark.

A magnificent monument is being built in Mt. Pleasant cemetery, Newark, over the grave of Theodore Runyon, Minister to Germany at the time of his death. It is of pure Grecian style and of the Ionic order of architecture. It is surmounted with a carved scroll finial, the design being taken from the famous sarcophagus of Scipio Africanus, in Rome.

Building an Addition.

Peter Finger, proprietor of Demler's Hotel, at Washingtonville, is having a large addition built to the hotel. Contractor Caine, of North Plainfield, is doing the work.

A CHRISTIAN AID DEAD.

MRS. MARTHA GARDNER PASSED INTO ETERNITY LAST TUESDAY.

Her Demise Was Unexpected, As it Was Thought That She Would Live Through the Summer—Was a Religious Worker

The large circle of friends and acquaintances of Mrs Martha Gardner, widow of the late Frank H. Gardner, formerly cashier of the City National Bank, will learn with deep sorrow of her death which occurred last Tuesday about 7 o'clock at Ocean Grove, where she went March 29th, for the summer.

Mrs. Gardner had been ill with a cancer for a year past, and her death was not wholly unexpected, although her most intimate friends felt confident that she would live through the summer. It has always been her custom to go to Ocean Grove every summer, but this year she planned to go earlier. Previous to her departure she resided on East Fifth street with her three daughters and one son, who survive her. The best medical aid was given in the hope that her life might be saved, but it was all in vain. Mrs. Gardner was a resident of this city and the borough for twenty-six years. She lived in the borough the largest part of that time. Previous to her marriage she was a Miss Clark, of Brooklyn, and one sister, Mrs. Dibrow, of Brooklyn, is the only member of the family now living.

During her life in this city, Mrs. Gardner was a very active woman until her health prevented. She was at one time a member of the Board of Managers of the Children's Home, superintendent of the Sewing School of Warren chapel, and also a Sunday school teacher and a faithful member of the First Baptist church. While able she was always doing for others, and when she could do no longer her many friends were very careful to see that everything possible was done for her. She was a Christian woman and her many acts of kindness and charity will long be remembered by those with whom she was acquainted.

Mrs. Gardner's husband passed away at Ocean Grove four years ago this coming August, after a long illness.

The remains of Mrs. Gardner will be brought to this city where the funeral services will be held. Announcement of the funeral will be made later.

ANOTHER ROMANTIC WEDDING.

Miss Sadie Hand Married Secretly in New York on Easter Day.

Cupid played pranks rather romantically with the two young ladies of Plainfield on Easter day, for now it becomes known that another secret marriage was solemnized Sunday afternoon without the knowledge of either parent in this case.

Miss Sadie Hand, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Hand, of East Fifth street, left this city Saturday afternoon ostensibly for a visit, but in reality to join in marriage with a young man from Connecticut.

When Miss Hand arrived in the Communipaw station of the Central Railroad she was met by John Paul Dorst, of Millbrook, Conn.

The following afternoon they went to the church of Rev. Madison C. Peters, Sixty-Eighth street and the Boulevard, and were joined in wedlock.

Miss Hand is well known in this city, being of a petite blonde type and very vivacious. For some time she has been in charge of her father's real estate office on Watchung avenue.

Her husband is said to be employed in a bank and is very worthy young man in all respects.

SOCIAL SEASON RESUMED.

Easter Week Opens With a Delightful Affair for the Young People.

A delightful little dance was given in the Scribner and Newton school building last Monday. It was arranged by the Misses Mary Anderson Reinhart and Elsa Pfeiffer. The rooms were prettily decorated for the occasion with rugs, hangings and cushions. The evening was spent in dancing, while refreshments were served shortly before midnight. The party broke up at an early hour this morning.

Among the guests were the Misses Martin, the Misses Bowen, the Misses Hattie Goddard, Margaret Goddard, Lela Cruikshank, Eleanor Williams, Eleanor T. Van Deventer, Grace E. Overton, Sallye Swayze, Lucille Rockwell, Josephine Lapsley, Constance Patton, Sadie Howell, Miss Savage, Frank Reinhart, Frank Schoonmaker, Charles J. Fisk, Jr., A. Willis West, Carroll L. Runyon, William M. McClure, Mr. McCready, Mr. Timson, of Elizabeth, Ernest Swayze, Raymond A. McGee, Charles Dupee, Stanley Hunter, Van B. Schuyler, Lindley M. Hillman, Welles Taylor, E. Maxwell Honeyman, Arthur Murphy, Howard Bushnell, Allan Wilson, J. B. Dumont, Jr.

William Brokaw, of Greenwich, Conn., who has been ill at the home of his sister, Mrs. Charles Willis, of Johnston's Drive, is slowly recovering and hopes to return to his home in a short time.

THE HANGING OF A YOUTH

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1.

the full penalty of his crime became stronger and stronger. When the case reached the Court of Pardons there were no petitioners for mercy except Clawson's counsel, and on the other hand a great deal of wild talk was indulged in as to what would be done if his sentence should be commuted to life imprisonment. The Court of Pardons refused to grant the petition, it is said on good authority, unanimously.

The execution will undoubtedly be a a great event in the county. Johnson, the first person to be hanged since 1789, will die on May 5, a week before Clawson, but no such interest is attached to him as to the latter, and May 12 will probably see the greater part of the county gathered in Somerville.

COTILLON CLUB DANCED.

Entertained as the Guests of the Misses Holly at the Casino.

The members of the Cotillon Club and their friends were entertained last Monday at the Casino by the Misses Holly. Mrs. John I. Holly received and she was assisted by Mrs J. W. Reinhart, Mrs O. T. Waring and Mrs. John B. Dumont.

The decorations were exceedingly pretty and consisted chiefly of Japanese lanterns, while the arrangement of the rugs was very attractive.

Thomas Van Boskerck and Miss Holly led the first half of the dance, while Mr. Van Boskerck and Miss Margaret Holly led the second half. The favors were unusually pretty and occasioned much favorable comment.

The guests out of town included Miss Weller, of Newburg; Miss Lefferts, Miss Macy, Miss Thomas, the Misses Holly, Miss Blackey, of New York; Miss Stamford, of Wilkesbarre, Pa.; Miss Bosher, of Richmond, Va.; Mr. Neeser, J. Holbrook, Messrs Clark, Mr. Dominick, of New York; Goodlow Linsey, of Nashville, Tenn.

The Plainfielders present were chiefly members of the club and there were about two hundred in attendance. The supper was served by Max Wiertz.

A WEDDING RECEPTION.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wickoff Surprised by Their Friends.

A wedding reception was tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wiskoff, of Park avenue, last Tuesday, on their return from a wedding trip. The affair was a surprise and was arranged by Miss Olive Wickoff. The bride and groom were completely surprised and it required several minutes for them to regain their composure. About midnight the guests departed for their homes, at the same time wishing Mr. and Mrs. Wickoff a pleasant and prosperous journey through life. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Runyon, Miss Emma Wikoff, Miss Olive Wikoff, Miss Wyman, John Stocker, Thomas Wikoff, Howard Wikoff, Frank Van Pelt, Mr Wyman, George Eckhardt, Andrew Stiglitz.

IN HONOR OF MISS WHITELAW.

Mrs. Charles L. Case Tendered a Reception to Her Guest.

Mrs. Charles L. Case, of 945 Central avenue, arranged a very pleasant reception and tea Monday afternoon in honor of her guest, Miss Margaret Whitelaw, of St. Louis, which took place between the hours of 4 and 6 o'clock. During that time about seventy-five guests called to pay their respects to the guest of the honor. Mrs. Case received the visitors. The floral decorations were pink carnations. Those assisted at the tea table were Mrs. John Bushnell, Mrs. Lapsley, Mrs. John Gray Foster, Mrs. Irving Brown and Mrs. Charles Lawson.

MIDNIGHT BLAZE IN ELIZABETH.

New York and Brooklyn Railroad Car Works Suffers $100,000 Loss.

Fire started at 11 o'clock Tuesday in the New York and Brooklyn Railroad Supply and Car Company's mammoth shops in Elizabeth.

Several dwellings adjoining were also destroyed. The entire Elizabeth fire department was called out and made a gallant fight. At 11:40 o'clock a terrific explosion took place, shattering windows for blocks around. It is believed several firemen were buried under falling walls. The loss will probably reach $100,000.

The open cars for the Plainfield Street Railway were there, but escaped all injury. They will be shipped Saturday.

Elizabeth, N. J., Oct. 19, 1896.—Ely Bros., Dear Sirs:—Please accept my thanks for your favor in the gift of a bottle of Cream Balm. Let me say I have used it for years and can thoroughly recommend it for what it claims, if directions are followed. Yours truly, Rev. H. W. Hathaway. No clergyman should be without it. Cream Balm is kept by all druggists. Full size 50c. Trial size 10 cents. We mail it. ELY BROS., 56 Warren St., N. Y. City.

—The Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue church will hold an Easter service on Friday evening.

EXACT COPY OF WRAPPER.

SEE THAT THE FAC-SIMILE SIGNATURE —OF— IS ON THE WRAPPER OF EVERY BOTTLE OF CASTORIA

Castoria is put up in one-size bottles only. It is not sold in bulk. Don't allow anyone to sell you anything else on the plea or promise that it is "just as good" and "will answer every purpose." See that you get C-A-S-T-O-R-I-A.

The fac-simile signature of is on every wrapper.

THEATRICAL.

"All the world loves a lover" is an oft repeated axiom, and there are in everyone's life moments here and there when he would fain follow his imagination and become the hero of story and legend. "The Prisoner of Zenda" is not only the ideal romantic play for which everyone has been looking, but it is a play that is full of action, animation and life, and its incidents are so exciting and so beautifully woven together that the spectator loses all thoughts of his real environment and becomes to a certain extent hypnotized by its fascinating delightful unrealities. The play, which is produced by arrangement with Mr. Daniel Frohman, Manager of the Lyceum Theatre, New York, will be presented by a sterling company of artists, and elaborate scenic effects and costumes, ensuring a thoroughly metropolitan production. At Music Hall next Monday night.

"The Wizard of the Nile" returned to the Broadway Theatre, New York, last night. Frank Daniels, a popular comedian, who not only tries to be but really is funny, repeated his former success as Kibosh, the charlatan magician, who finds himself playing in luck one moment and in peril of his life the next. Adele Ritchie, made her first appearance in New York as Cleopatra, the role formerly played by Dorothy Morton. She was in good voice and was repeatedly encored. Louise Royce, Walter Allen and Louis Casavant, of the original company, played and sang parts to the satisfaction of the audience. All the new members did well, especially Leonard Walker, as Ptarmigan, Cleopatra's music teacher. His love songs were all redemanded.

Alhambra Club Entertained.

The members of the Alhambra Club and their friends were pleasantly entertained at the home of Miss Bertha Thorn on Craig place, Monday evening. The first part of the evening was devoted to progressive euchre, in which the first prizes were won by Thomas U. Smith and Miss Mary Buckle.

Miss Emma Buckle and Franklin P. Noble were the winners of the booby prizes. Several games were played, among which was "guessing advertisements" for which prizes were offered. They were won by Miss Edith L. Pruden and Charles Noble. Refreshments were served during the evening.

Sold a Lot of Soap.

F. Merton Lunger, a clerk at F. W. Dunn's grocery on North avenue, received a check this morning from Lever Brothers, of New York, manufacturers of Sunlight soap. Mr. Lunger received the money as a present for having secured 3,613 soap wrappers. This was the largest number received from this district during March. Mr. Lunger was assisted by the other clerks in the store, Garrie Mattis, John Gano, William Cleaves and Albert Soper, and the money will be divided among all.

Played for a Phonograph.

Wm. E. MacClymont, who recently composed what is known as the "Cornell University Two-Step," played the composition a few days ago for Fred VanEps, of Park avenue, so that the latter could make a record for his phonograph. Clarence Hillman also played a violin selection for the same purpose.

IN THE MEMORIAL PARADE.

New Jersey's Naval Reserve to Participate in the Dedication Day Exercises.

The New Jersey Naval Reserve will participate in the Grant Memorial Parade. Captain Jaques, commander of the reserve, issued the necessary order Wednesday. The Battalion of the East, which has its headquarters on the Portsmouth, and the Battalion of the West, which has its headquarters on the monitor Ajax, at Camden, will both turn out.

The Battalion of the West will be transported from South Jersey on the same train as the Second Brigade of the New Jersey Division of the National Guard. The Battalion of the East is under orders to assemble on the Portsmouth at 7 o'clock on the morning of the parade and proceed from there to the Erie ferry in Jersey City, where it will embark on barges for New York.

Another of Their Popular Dances.

At the meeting of Martha Washington Council, No. 23, D of A, last Tuesday, two members were initiated and five elected to membership. The Council decided to hold another one of their popular dances on the evening of May 12th, in the Elkwood Hall. The Council will also hold a dime sociable at the residence of Mrs. Dodge, corner of Lincoln place and Duer street, next Tuesday evening.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mrs. Andrew Stiglitz, of Elm place, is visiting friends in Brooklyn.

Miss Maud Acock, of Craig place, is spending the week in Trenton.

Mrs. A. H. Lewis, of Central avenue, is able to be out after a protracted illness.

Miss Eshleman, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., is the guest of Miss Reinhart, of Netherwood.

Frank H. Smith, of Madison avenue, spent Easter with friends in Westerly, R. I.

George Van Nest has accepted a position with Albert Hedden, the popular liveryman.

Charles Willis, of Johnston's Drive, has recovered from his recent attack of the grip.

Miss Laura Sydenham, of Craig place, is spending her spring vacation in Orange.

Miss Katherine Thorn, who has been visiting friends in this city, has returned to her home in New York.

Miss Barber, of Elizabeth, has been spending several days with her friend, Miss Elsa Pfeiffer, of Madison avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Green, of Manning avenue, have a baby daughter, which was born to them on Monday last.

Mrs. Florence P. Boas will move in a few days from the "Chestnuts" to the Pond residence on West Seventh street.

It is understood that Rev. Jocelyn Johnstone, rector of the Church of the Redeemer will conclude his work in this city on May 31st.

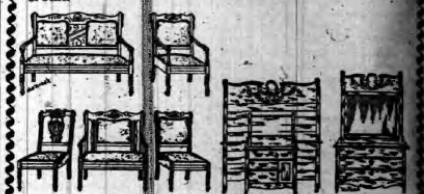
Miss Emma Tantum, of Craig place, is spending her spring vacation from the North Plainfield Public School at her home in Ocean Grove.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Pope, of West Front street, entertained a few friends at their home last evening. Music was furnished by A. G. Carpenter.

AMOS H. VAN HORN, Ltd.

It's Easy to Buy Here

When you're buying Furniture and Carpets you want BIG VARIETY to pick from. We HAVE it. NEXT, you want LOWEST prices. Comparison proves OUR prices as low as ANY cash house. Pay us cash or on credit.



Parlor Suits by the 100—coverings of every material. Above pattern put at $19.00. Mahogany frame, well finished.

Big shipment of Oak Bedroom Suits just in—above is one of them—$18.50 is its price for a week instead of $25.00 its regular worth. Other Suits, $10.75 up.

One of the best Refrigerator lines in the State. We never had a better, lower priced stock. Hardwood Refrigerator, $4.85—just to open the season.

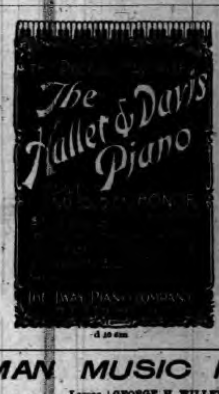
Insurance Gasoline Stove—can't possibly explode. Can has to be filled away from stove. Sold only by us. Full line "Blue Flame Odorless"—something new.

CARPETS Our big Carpet floor reaches from Market to Campbell St. Every weave woven, in all new Spring colorings. Display is in a good light. You can SEE what you're buying.—Heavy Ingrains, 25c yard; All-wool Ingrains, 55c yard; Body Brussels, 90c yard; Moquettes, 75c yard.—Mattings, Oilcloths and Linoleums.

AMOS H. VAN HORN, Ltd.

73 Market St. Near Plane Street NEWARK, N. J.

CASH OR CREDIT. Telephone 830—Goods Delivered Free.



STILLMAN MUSIC HALL

GEORGE E. ROGERS ..... Lessee. | GEORGE H. WILLEY ..... Manager

ENGAGEMENT EXTRAORDINARY!

The Great N. Y. Lyceum Theatre Success.

Monday Evening April 26.

The Prisoner of Zenda

Dramatized from Anthony Hope's famous Romance, by Edward Rose, produced by arrangements with Mr. Daniel Frohman, Manager Lyceum Theatre, New York.

Management of Mr. Alfred Hinsetone.

Prices $1.50, 75, 50, 25 and 15 cents. Seats on sale at Box Office Friday, April 23.

A Lame Letter Carrier.

Letter Carrier Edward Hann met with an accident at his home on Somerset place, last Tuesday. He was going down a flight of stairs when he stepped on a box that had been left at the head of the stairs and fell down the entire flight. Although lame and bruised as a result of his fall, Hann returned to duty as usual this morning.

—A junior dance will be held at the Park Club house on Friday evening.

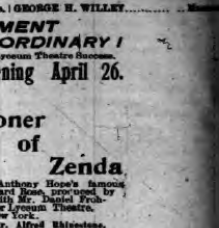
—Alfred Malm, of Bound Brook, who was injured at the North Avenue station last Saturday night, is improving from his injuries and is now anxious to leave the hospital and go to his home.

Ask your Druggist for a generous 10 CENT TRIAL SIZE.

Ely's Cream Balm

contains no cocaine, mercury nor any other injurious drug. It is quickly absorbed. Gives Relief at once. It opens and cleanses the Nasal Passages. Allays Inflammation. Heals and Protects the Membrane. Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell. Full Size 50c.; Trial Size 10c. at Druggists or by mail.

ELY BROTHERS 56 Warren Street, New York.



—A gang of Italians are at work on West Front street repairing the tracks of the street railway.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL.

VOL XXX. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, APRIL 29, 1897. NO. 17

"Support the Constitution, Which is the Cement of the Union, as Well in Its Limitations as in Its Authorities."—Madison.

DELIGHTFUL TOURING.

MISS REVELL TOOK HER AUDIENCE THROUGH SWITZERLAND.

The Entertainment Was Given in Y. M. C A. Hall Last Tuesday for the Benefit of the Advance Circle of Kings Daughters.

"Switzerland" by Miss Dorothy Harrington Revell was a unique but very delightful entertainment given in the Y. M. C. A. Hall, last Tuesday, for the benefit of the Advance Circle of King's Daughters. It was a monologue, giving the supposed conversation of an American girl in a trip through Switzerland accompanied by her aunt Jane and "the Count," by consulting her guide book and describing what she saw to the imaginary aunt, the audience was given a description of some of the most beautiful sights in that little republic of Europe. The part was a difficult one but Miss Revell understood it thoroughly and made the entertainment a very satisfactory one to all the audience. She made a very fasinating traveller and presented a charming appearance whether attired in travelling costume or as a peasant girl.

Miss Revell introduced several character recitations in connection with the story. Her rendition of "The Naughty Little Girl" was particularly well received.

Between the parts of the story, there were contralto solos by Miss Lillian East, of Elizabeth, which were well received, and banjo duets by Mr. and Mrs. George Jenkins, of Somerville. Mr. Jenkins' accomplishments on the banjo are too well known to need comment, only it may be said that he played his best. His selections were familiar catchy marches.

As already stated, the entertainment was for the benefit of the Advance Circle of King's Daughters of the First Presbyterian church. The members of the circle acted as ushers and ticket collectors. The chief usher was Mrs. George O. Stevens. The other ushers were Miss Pansy Geane Herring, Miss Lillian Torrey Glen, Miss Elizabeth Bittenbender, Miss Evelyn Searing and Miss Spaulding, of Bound Brook. Programmes were given out by Miss Margaret Cave, Miss Ella Bilsh and Miss Elitta Dunham. The tickets were collected by Mrs. J. M. McClintock. Mrs. J. A. Haynes presided over the ticket window and was in general charge of the entertainment.

RACING SEASON OPENS.

SEVERAL MATCHES AT THE GENTLEMEN'S DRIVING PARK.

The Day Was Too Cold and Windy for Fast Work, But Krewson's New Trotter Made Some Very Good Time.

The weather was not all favorable to the auspicious opening of the Gentlemen's Driving Park track, Tuesday afternoon. It was cold and the drivers came forth in ulsters to protect themselves from the chilly blasts that blew across the track all the afternoon. There was, nevertheless, quite a crowd assembled to see the sport, and several matches were arranged.

There were three horses in the first match. Will Smalley had his fast trotter out, Frank Hand was in line with his and Joe Krewson had his recent purchase out for the race. Hand's horse caused a little excitement in the first heat and ran over the track. Smalley crossed the line first. Krewson's trotter came up in the second heat and made the best time of the afternoon, 2:33, winning the heat.

One of Thomas Brantingham's stable defeated Gwyett's trotter in two straight heats.

There were also several single exhibitions o speed.

Crystal Wedding Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Compton, of Metuchen, celebrated their crystal wedding anniversary last Tuesday. There were about fifty guests present from Metuchen, Newark, Elizabeth and Plainfield. During the evening the guests enjoyed several vocal and instrumental selections. One of the features was the dancing, music for which was furnished by Sam. Frazee, of this city. It was early next morning when the happy event came to an end, but all wished the bride and groom many years of joy and prosperity.

Talented Artists.

The same artists who assisted Eugene Field's daughter, Mary French Field, in the entertainment given recently at the Berkley Lyceum, have been secured by the Park Club committee for their entertainment at the Casino, May 5th, viz: William H. Lee, the baritone, and John Francis Gilder, the pianist and composer. The last number of The Musical Courier says of Mr. Lee: "Frankly, Mr. Lee, made the hit of the evening, etc."

TO THE PACIFIC SLOPE.

A TRIP THAT CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS MAY ENJOY.

A Special Train for the New Jersey Members to the International Convention—Reduced Rates and Stop-Over Privileges.

The Sixteenth International Christian Endeavor Convention will be held in San Francisco, July 7-12.

The New Jersey Christian Endeavor Union will run a special train of the finest Pullman Palace Sleeping Cars through from Jersey City to San Francisco and return without change.

This solid vestibuled train will leave New York (by ferry) Monday morning, June 28th, at 9 o'clock. Special stop-over privileges will be given along the route, including one whole day at Manitou and Colorado Springs, two days at Salt Lake City, etc. The ranges of the Rocky and Sierra Nevada Mountains will be crossed at daylight.

The return trip will be by the Mt. Shasta route to Portland, and thence by Northern Pacific Railroad. Stop-overs on return at Portland, Tacoma, Seattle, Spokane, Helena and Livingston. From the last place arrangements will be made for those on the New Jersey special to visit Yellowstone Park at reduced rates.

The total expenses of this entire trip will be about one-half the price usually charged for such an excursion. No one who desires to visit the great west should fail to take advantage of this wonderful trip of nearly 8,000 miles, at a total cost for all necessary expenses of less than two cents a mile.

Full information will be given by the transportation manager, or any member of the committee. Rev. T. E. Davis, Bound Brook, is transportation manager. The committee is Rev. J. Clement French, D.D., Newark; Rev. W. E. Davis, Lebanon; Rev. E. W. Thompson, Paterson; E. E. Anthony, Plainfield.

FIGHT FOR RIGHT OF WAY

WORK COMMENCED ON THE CROSS STATE TROLLEY LINE.

Gangs of Men at Work Building the Bond Neser Somerville—Ordinances for the Right of Way at Bound Brook.

In spite of the bitter war between them and the Brunswick Traction Company and the uncertainty of its result, the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company Tuesday began the work of building a trolley line between Bound Brook, Somerville and Raritan. Gangs of men are now at work widening two bridges at Bound Brook and building a new one near Somerville. The track and poles have already been laid for about a mile this side of Somerville.

As has been told in this paper, this part of the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company's line is to be a link in the proposed chain which will connect Jersey City and Philadelphia. From the start the company has had a strong opponent in the Brunswick Traction Company, of New Brunswick, in which Gottfried Krueger is a large stockholder. Each company is fighting for the right of way through the principal streets in Bound Brook, and the Philadelphia company is trying hard to get a franchise in New Brunswick, apparently with little prospect of success.

The Bound Brook Council Tuesday night took up the ordinances of the rival companies and advanced them to a first reading. The fight will come later, when efforts are made to pass the ordinances. The Philadelphia company expects to award the contract this week for the building of the line between South Bound Brook and New Brunswick. The road is to be completed by July 15th, but unless the Board of Aldermen can be moved will only find an entrance into New Brunswick through some side street.

HORSE'S LEGS IN THE WAGON.

Exciting Experience of A. J. Groischmith With a Horse.

A most peculiar accident happened last Tuesday on East Front street while A. J. Groischmith, the upholsterer, was driving his horse toward his home. Without any warning the horse began to kick and it was not long before the wagon was occupied with the hind quarters of the animal and the man was quite willing that she should take possession of the wagon. Before Groischmith left the vehicle he received a severe kick in the shins.

George Moore, the butcher, realizing the danger which not only threatened the horse but his driver, ran to the rescue of the trouble and assisted very much in getting the horse on his four legs. The horse was quite badly cut about the feet and walked lame, as did also Groischmith.

—The contract case of Burke against Scott has been adjourned for two weeks in Justice Nash's court.

FOR TOWN IMPROVEMENT

PROGRESSIVE WOMEN ELECT THEIR LEADERS FOR A YEAR.

Mrs. Pierre Malli at the Head of the Association Again—Plans for Raising Money to Improve City Park so it Can be Used.

The first annual meeting of the Town Improvement Association was held Tuesday afternoon in the Y. M. C. A. building, with the president, Mrs. Pierre Malli, in the chair. The members present were very much encouraged to see so many of the members of the children's Auxiliary present, and Mrs. Malli invited Miss Patton, the president, to take a seat beside her.

The report of the secretary, Mrs. S. R. Krom, was presented. It was an interesting review of the work of the past year. There have been held eight public and thirteen executive meetings.

Mrs. Alexander Gilbert, the treasurer, stated that there had been received $1,301 and $126.46 had been expended, leaving a balance of $235.74.

The president said that the members have cause for great encouragement at the close of the first year's work. The prizes offered for the best kept yards had resulted in much good and it had stimulated others to keep their yards in better condition. Mrs. Malli also spoke of the work of planting trees and said that there are several places in the city where trees are needed. One place she mentioned is on the west side of Watchung avenue where there is hardly any shade.

The work being done in the city park was also spoken of. Mrs Malli stated that a great deal of work had been done under the direction of Mr. Maller, the man who had graded and laid out Hillside cemetery. In his opinion the trees in the city were too close together and he suggested that in the future they be planted that twenty-five feet apart.

Regarding the wire baskets placed about town, Mrs. Malli said that this improvement had accomplished great good. She thought it would be a good idea to have these baskets placed near the public schools so that the children could make use of them in throwing away waste paper, etc. The work with the children was spoken of as an important one and Mrs. Malli urged that the members take more interest in the children. In accordance with a suggestion, Mrs. Alex. L. Drake was chosen as chairman of the Children's Auxiliary.

The president stated that plans for the city park had been received and accepted and the work of putting the park in condition was being pushed rapidly. She regretted that it would be impossible to have the park ready for use this year as there was not a sufficient amount of money in the treasury to do the work. To secure this necessary money Mrs. Malli said that an entertainment was being planned to be held at her place on East Front street. She hoped that more than enough money would be secured so that a fund could be established for the building of a second park, which she thought was needed. The entertainment spoken of is to be a lawn party and it will be one of the most elaborate affairs of the kind ever held in Plainfield. There will be everything to attract and it will cost very little for admission.

Mrs. Gilbert and Miss Tweedy were appointed tellers and the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. Pierre Malli; first vice president, Mrs. A. S. Patterson; second vice president, Mrs. L. V. F. Bandolph; recording secretary, Mrs. S. R. Krom; corresponding secretary, Miss Elizabeth Stewart; treasurer, Mrs. Alexander Gilbert.

Mrs. Malli announced that for the summer the meetings of the association would be held on the second and fourth Tuesdays at 10 a. m., in the Y. M. C. A., instead of the afternoon. There being no further business the meeting adjourned.

Piano Recital Patronesses.

The following are the patronesses for the piano recital to be given by William H. Barber, at the Casino, May 10th: Mrs. Otto Arens, Mrs. Rowland Cox, Mrs. A. A. Drake, Mrs. John B. Dumont, Mrs. George Wharton Edwards, Mrs. Charles Fisk, Mrs. Stephen A. Ginna, Miss Kenyon, Mrs. Warren Marsh, Mrs. Massett, Mrs. J. Kirtland Myers, Mrs. David W. Rond, Mrs. Joseph W. Reinhart, Mrs. William R. Richards, Mrs. Joseph Sandford, Miss Schipper, Mrs. Walter Scott, Mrs. Augustus D. Shepard, Mrs. Mason W. Tyler, Mrs. Orville T. Waring, Mrs. John Weir and Mrs. Charles Work.

—Sheriff Kirk is making several improvements about his place on West Seventh street.

—One recruit will be mustered at the meeting of the Sons of Veterans next Tuesday evening.

MARRIED FOR 25 YEARS

SILVER WEDDING ANNIVERSARY OF MR. AND MRS. G. W. ROCKFELLOW.

At the Same Time Their Daughter Miss Nellie, Made Her Debut Into Society—A Pleasant Time Enjoyed by the Guests.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Rockfellow, of Park avenue, was the scene last Tuesday of two charming events—the celebration of the twenty-fifth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Rockfellow, and the debut of their daughter, Miss Nellie Rockfellow, into society.

The fore part of the evening from 7 to 9 o'clock was devoted to the celebration of the wedding anniversary, and it was indeed a brilliant affair. The home was decorated with smilax and white carnations which produced the prevailing colors, green and white, and the effect was beautiful. In the dining room the same colors were used and the table presented a very attractive appearance adorned so prettily.

Mr. and Mrs. Rockfellow received their guests in the parlor, and they were assisted by Mrs. Close and Miss Rockfellow, of Bound Brook. The former is a sister of Mrs. Rockfellow, while the latter is a sister of Mr. Rockfellow. The gown worn by Mrs. Rockfellow was the same one in which she was married twenty-five years ago. It is a silver gray gown trimmed with beautiful white lace and chiffon, and both the bride and her husband look just as young as ever. This was remarked by nearly every one as they showered congratulations upon the bride and groom. While the guests were enjoying the social features of the event, Rogers' orchestra discoursed sweet music.

During the stated hours a delightful supper was served in the dining room and this made way for others who desired to meet the host and hostess and extend their best wishes.

A princely gift was received by Mr. and Mrs. Rockfellow in the shape of a floral basket of pink and white roses, sweet peas and maiden-hair ferns, tied with a white satin ribbon. It was the gift of William H. Brower, a close friend and admirer of the bride and groom. Mrs. Rockfellow carried a bridal bouquet of twenty-five roses, one for each year of married life.

The entire affair was marked by an absence of formality and the sociability of the guests was a delightful feature. Mr. and Mrs. Rockfellow were the recipients of a large collection of costly silver presents from their many friends, and this evidence was universal on the part of all.

Those who assisted as waitresses were Miss Demarest, Miss Giles, Plainfield; the Misses Russell, East Orange; Miss Potter, Rahway; Miss DeForest, Mt. Pleasant; the Misses McDowell, Stelton, while Mrs. Foster and Mrs. Sebring poured tea at the table.

Following the celebration Miss Rockfellow made her debut by giving a dance to her friends. This part of the event was a most pleasing feature. The debutante was richly gowned in Nile green brocaded silk trimmed with lace and ribbons, and she carried an exquisite bouquet of pink roses.

It was chiefly the younger set that remained to dance and the genuine pleasure experienced by all will never be forgotten.

Among those present during the evening were: Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Rockfellow, East Orange; Mr. and Mrs. Close and family, Bound Brook; Mr. and Mrs. Boice, New Brunswick; Mrs. McDowell, John McDowell, Stelton; Mr. and Mrs. Russell, Orange; Miss Robbins, De Forest, Mt. Pleasant; Miss Remsen, Brooklyn; Mr. and Mrs. Sebring, Bound Brook; Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Armstrong, Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Morgan, Rev. and Mrs. C. L. Goodrich, Mr. and Mrs. O. T. Waring, Mr. and Mrs. George Raynolds, Mrs. Fuller, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. LaBoyteaux, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Morse, Mr. and Mrs. Nomer, Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Stelle, Mr. and Mrs. Dumont, Mrs. Remsen and family, Mrs. William Hand, Mrs. Robinson, Miss Robinson, Miss Pratt, Hayes, Miss Stelle, Miss F. Demarest, the Misses Livesey, Miss Maude Mosher; George Fuller, Joseph Bodinson, A. C. Mallison, Stacy Raynolds, Walter Raynolds, Charles Hayes, Irving Oakley, Harry Coddington and George Homan, of Plainfield.

D. and D.

Adon Smith and Wizzard Wilson, of the borough, were arrested Tuesday by Marshal Kiker for being drunk and disorderly on Somerset street. They were arraigned before Justice Thomas next morning. Smith was fined $5 and Wilson $10. The fines were paid and the men were released.

—A meeting of the Woman's Relief Corps will be held on Friday evening of this week.

MAY LOSE HIS RIGHT EYE

L. W. SERRELL, JR., STRUCK IN THE EYE WITH A GOLF CLUB.

He Wore His Glasses at the Time and Some of the Particles of Glass Were Driven Into the Ball of Mr. Serrell's Eye.

Lemuel W. Serrell, Jr., of Crescent avenue, met with an accident Tuesday afternoon that may result in the loss of sight in his right eye.

Mr. and Mrs. Serrell went out on their wheels Tuesday afternoon and rode up to the links of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club on Plainfield avenue. Mr. Serrell is a member of the club and intended to show his wife how to play golf, and with that intention they went to a point on the course near the clubhouse to start. She swung her club and struck at the ball, missing it. At the same time, Mr. Serrell stepped up to her side, and the club, swinging around, struck him squarely in the eye. Mr. Serrell was wearing his eye glasses, and the right lens was broken into fragments by the blow, and a portion of the glass driven into his eye.

D. O. Tiffany was near by when the accident occurred, and he assisted Mrs. Serrell in conveying her husband to the clubhouse, where his eye was bandaged and Dr. J. T. Fritts sent for. The doctor arrived and took Mr. Serrell home in his carriage.

Mr. Serrell is still in a serious condition, and it is feared that he will lose the sight of his right eye as a result of the accident. Every effort, however, is being made to save it.

GRANT DAY CEREMONIES

HOW PLAINFIELD ASSISTED AND HOW SHE WAS REPRESENTED.

The High School Cadets Had a Great Day of It Despite the Chilly Breeze—Lieut. Bettman Distinguished Himself.

Tuesday was an eventful day for New York and for many of the residents of Plainfield. A description of the parade and ceremonies at the Grant tomb will be found in another column. It did not rain but a cold wind came from the north west that kept the crowd shivering and shaking throughout the day. It was better, of course, for those in the parade but the spectators who tried to watch the parade from the Riverside Drive were fairly driven off by the cold. There were Plainfielders among them and there were many, this morning, suffering from a severe cold caught in New York yesterday.

The members of the Independent Fife and Drum Corps were in line at 1 o'clock and did not start until nearly 5 o'clock. They stood around and shivered while they waited. Then they played to keep warm but with no success. As soon as the march began, they were all right, however.

The members of the Plainfield and North Plainfield High School cadet companies had a big day of it. As was told in Tuesday's Press, the cadets went to Elizabeth and then accompanied the Seventh Regiment of the New Jersey National Guard to Jersey City and then up to Forty-fourth street, New York, in a barge. The expenses of the companies were paid by the State and the boys were treated to lunch and dinner by their militia hosts. From Forty-fourth street, where they landed from the barge, the cadets marched down to Thirty-third street and Madison avenue, where they formed behind the Bordentown Military Institute cadets in the rear of the New Jersey National Guard.

After their part of the parade was over, the cadets marched around and finally took the barge with the Seventh Regiment at 123d street and sailed down the river in time to witness part of the review. The company marched about twelve miles in all and everybody was tired out when it was over. The cadets boys found the last journey growing very heavy toward the last, but they pluckily stood to their guns and finished in good order. Captain Edwards was complimented by the officers of the Seventh on the orderly appearance of the cadets and the able manner in which they were drilled. They took the special train to Elizabeth on the Pennsylvania railroad and then returned to Plainfield at about the o'clock mark. Captain Edwards

The cadet companies were represented on the staff of Col C. F. Wright, of the cadet division, by Fred Bettman, of the North Plainfield High School cadets. Bettman was a mounted aide. As the division was passing Eighty-third street, Bettman received a serious accident by bravely stopping a runaway horse. The horse of a mounted policeman became unmanageable at the corner. Eighty-second and after throwing the rider off, went galloping up the street. At Eighty-third street there were several of the staff of Col Wright, among them Bettman. The runaway horse started to rush into the crowd and a panic seemed inevitable. Bettman turned his own mount beside the runaway and caught him by the bridle. Another aide came to his assistance and the frightened horse was quieted.

THE CITY'S POSITION.

MAYOR FISK'S COMMUNICATION TO THE COMMON COUNCIL.

How the Change from a Third to a Second Class City Will Affect the Local Government in More Ways Than One.

The following communication was sent to the Common Council by Mayor Fisk last Monday night:

This city, by reason of a recent decision of the Supreme Court, being now subject to all valid general laws pertaining to cities of the second-class, the attention of your Honorable Body is respectfully invited to the following important statutes:

Gen. St. p. 512, pl. 256 provides, in substance, that no resolution or motion involving the expenditure of money adopted or passed by the Common Council when the amount thereof exceeds the sum of fifty dollars shall be operative unless the same be approved by the Mayor. Provision is made in the act whereby in case of a veto or refusal or neglect to veto or approve within five days by the Mayor, the Common Council may, nevertheless, order payment.

Gen. St. p. 214, pl 266, &c., enacts that it shall be the duty of the Common Council to publish in a newspaper printed and published in the city a detailed itemized statement of the expenditures of the public moneys by the Common Council for the preceding month.

Gen. St. p. 2329 pl. 31 provides for the designation, with the consent of the Mayor, of the official newspaper or newspapers published in the city, in which shall be solely published all official notices, etc., and authorizes the Common Council to fix the compensation to be paid by the city for services rendered by such official newspaper or newspapers.

Gen. St. 501, pl. 269 authorizes the Common Council to adopt ordinances for the appointment of one Overseer of the Poor, and three Commissioners of Appeal, in cases of taxation, which said officers are required to be appointed by the Mayor, by and with the consent of the Common Council; and the act provides that the appointment of the Commissioners of Appeal shall be made for not less than one year, or more than three years, the term to be determined and fixed by the Mayor at the time of making such appointment; and the act further provides that the offices of such Commissioners of Appeal, in cases of taxation now existing in the city, shall be abolished, upon the appointment of said officers under the act referred to.

Gen. St. p 2614, Section 34, etc., provides that the Mayor shall appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Common Council, five persons, residents of the State, who shall constitute a park commission, and who shall serve without compensation; their terms of office to be for 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 years respectively from the date of their appointment; and the act commits to such Commissioners the entire control and management of all public parks, and authorizes them to make, alter and establish rules and regulations for the government and management thereof.

Gen. St. p. 1546, pl. 395, etc., provides that the chief and captain of police employed or appointed by municipal authority shall hold their respective offices and continue in their respective employments as long as municipal officers and employees during good behavior, efficiency and residence in such city, and shall not be removed for political reasons or of any other causes than incapacity, misconduct, non-residence, or disobedience of just rules and regulations established, or which may be established, by the proper municipal authority.

Gen. St. p. 2239, Sec. 483, authorizes the issue of bonds for excess of costs of public improvements over assessments for benefits.

Gen. St. p. 515, pl. 272, enacts that in all cities of the second-class in this State, the annual or charter elections thereof shall be held on the second Tuesday in April. This act having been, so to speak, sprung upon the city suddenly by reason of the act known as the "Griggs Act," having been declared unconstitutional, it was apparent that confusion would result unless immediate relief should be sought from the Legislature, and there was not even time to call a special meeting of the Common Council to consider the matter. Accordingly, an act was prepared, which is now a law, being Chapter 95 of the Laws of 1897, whereby the late city election is in all respects validated, and the necessity for an election on the thirteenth of this month was obviated. The act provides that the next succeeding municipal election shall not take place earlier than December of this year. Another act passed by both houses of the Legislature, and

CONTINUED ON PAGE 8.

OUTRAN THE SERGEANT.

BUT THE POLICE OFFICER SAYS HE DROVE WALLACE INTO HIS HOLE.

A Bit of Repartee That Was Indulged in Police Court Saturday Morning Between Prisoner Wallace and Sergeant Kiely.

The local police tribunal was a lively place, Saturday, and the offenders there had some lively experiences to relate. Liveliest of all was the adventure of Robert Wallace with Sergeant Kiely.

Robert Wallace does not love the Sergeant, that was plain to be seen. Wallace thinks that the Sergeant was waiting for a chance to arrest him, and Wallace was not anxious to march through Park avenue on Saturday night in the grasp of an officer and spend the night in jail. Therefore he ran when the Sergeant started to grab him. Last Saturday evening, Wallace and his friend, Peter Cullen, and several others were standing on the corner of Second street and Park avenue. Wallace had some information that Cullen wanted to know but refused to impart it to him. Cullen called him down and Wallace smacked Cullen under the eye and called him a "but termilk," just for fun they say.

The sergeant heard loud words and saw the blow struck. He started to arrest Wallace, but the latter skipped along Second street. The sergeant pursued. The chase was a lively one until Wallace reached his boarding house on West Third street and sprang through the door head first and bolted it after him. He was afterward arrested by Patrolman Myers.

Wallace was arraigned for trial this morning. He was telling how he had fooled the sergeant when the officer exclaimed:

"Your head isn't big enough to fool me."

"Ugh," sneered the prisoner, "You can't run fast enough to keep your feet warm."

"I can run fast enough to drive you into your hole," retorted the sergeant. The crowd laughed and the Judge threatened to clear the court room.

Wallace was represented by Walter L. Hetfield. Sentence was suspended.

Charles Barry, the hackman, was up in court again for violating the hack ordinance. Several witnesses were heard and the trial was adjourned until Monday morning.

John Lynch and Morris Barre both pleaded guilty to violating the same ordinance, and were fined $3 each. Peter Scaider was charged with the same offence, but pleaded not guilty. After hearing the testimony of the witnesses the Judge found him guilty and fined him $5.

Sentence was suspended on Henry Staats, the offender against the health ordinance.

O'DONNELL DID NOT COME.

So His Trial for Illegal Liquor Selling Was Adjourned for a Week.

Hughie O'Donnell was to appear before the City Judge Monday, in the Council chamber, for trial on the charge of liquor selling on Sunday. The trial was set down for 10 o'clock, but O'Donnell did not appear. The court instructed the officers to arrest him and bring him to the court at once, but he was not to be found. At eleven o'clock, Assemblyman W. R. Codington, one of the counsel for the prisoner, stated that he had received a note from the prisoner asking for an adjournment as he had been called to Long Island to attend the funeral of his wife's sister. The case was remanded for a week. He was also represented by ex Councilman Walter L. Hetfield. The city was represented by Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh.

A Fine Team of Horses.

The English poodles, belonging to T. Benton, of Rockiew avenue, have attracted the attention of all the dog fanciers of the city. Now Mr. Fenton's bay horses received many admiring glances from the equine experts. The team is one of the finest in the city and can hold its own with the best to be found. The horses are under the careful supervision of John Kelly, whose thorough knowledge makes him just the man for the place.

Hospital in Debt.

There have been many demands made on the Muhlenberg Hospital during the last month and the treasury is now in debt to the amount of $1,000. Of the $1,000, $131 was paid towards the completion of the Nurses' Home, which cost that amount more than was expected.

A Southern Cause.

Thursday evening there will be held in the Crescent Avenue Church a meeting in the interest of the Normal Institute at Tuskegee, Ala. There will be addresses, and singing by a quintette from the school. This is the school in which Booker T. Washington is interested.

A New Drop Curtain.

Last Saturday Manager Willey, of Music Hall, signed a contract for a new drop curtain to be painted and hung in that theatre during the summer months. The curtain will be a beautiful one, representing a wheeling scene along a shady country road, where the bicyclists have stopped to harry for a few moments.

BIG SMASHUP AT RARITAN

SIXTEEN COAL CARS TELESCOPED AND BLOCKED THE TRACK.

Caused by An Axle Breaking and Derailing One Car.—Three Men Slightly Injured.—Trains Delayed for Several Hours.

A disastrous railroad smashup occurred on the Central railroad at Raritan, one mile above Somerville, Friday afternoon about 4:30, and as a result travel was delayed for nearly three hours.

Engine No. 546, east bound, drawing along coal train, was speeding along at a lively rate for the purpose of reaching the siding at Somerville so as to get out of the way of the fast express which was due in a short time. There are only two tracks at Raritan and the coal and freight trains are sometimes obliged to run fast so that the tracks may be clear for the passenger trains.

The engine and several of the coal cars had hardly passed the Raritan station when an axle on one of the forward cars broke. The car was derailed and the other cars piled up in a promiscuous way.

In an instant the engineer learned that something was wrong, but he was unable to stop the train before serious damage resulted.

The broken axle was the cause of telescoping sixteen coal cars directly in front of the Raritan station. The cars were piled one upon the other and large pieces of iron flew in every direction, covering the platform at the station.

Thomas Kelly, of Raritan, together with two other men, were working in a freight car, nearby, loading machinery. As a result of the accident, Kelly's ankle was severely sprained and the other two men received slight injuries.

The two tracks were blocked entirely and it was three hours later when travel was resumed. In the meantime passengers were transferred and in that way reached their destination.

A large force of railroad employes were dispatched to the scene of the wreck and at once began to clear the tracks. After much hard work the tracks were cleared and the first train from Easton reached this city about 8 o'clock.

PARSONS PLAYED BEST.

REVS. O'DONNELL AND JOHNSON THE MAINSTAYS IN BASKET BALL.

The Two Plainfield Ministers Distinguished Themselves by Repulsing the Regular Team's Tactics to Down Them.

The basket ball season in Plainfield closed Friday evening with a fiercely contested game between the regular team of the Y. M. C. A. and the team from the business men's class. At least these were the teams that were supposed to be playing, but neither side played with their regular team and the question of supremacy between the two rival teams remains undecided. In the game, last evening, the regular team won by a score of 13 to 10.

Both sides were in for blood, as the expression is, and the game was a livelier one than has been played for some time. Fred Bonny filled the place of Smith on the regular team very acceptably and made quite a reputation for himself. He played with Captain Walter Long, who was at his regular position at forward. There was a tendency on the part of three of the regular team to slug and they played a much rougher game than usual. No one, however, was hurt. The ministerial team of the business men, Revs. Messrs. O'Donnell and Johnston, played together better than any two men on the floor and showed the regulars they could not run over the business men after all.

The score stood 8 to 4 at the end of the first half and the final result might have been closer, but for the unusually poor luck the business men had in having the ball stay in the basket when it was thrown there.

New Directory Compiler.

Charles VanWinkle, who was the secretary of the Republican Association in this city during the last campaign, has purchased the share of H. H. Baker in the Plainfield city directory and will issue the directory this year.

Too Much Dust.

A petition is in circulation and being numerously signed asking the Common Council to compel the Street Railway Company to devise some improvement whereby the dust caused by the running of their cars can be obviated.

A Private Bridge.

George P. Dupee, of Rockview avenue, is building a new bridge over Stony brook on his premises. It is about twelve feet wide and sixty feet long, of heavy oak and chestnut timber, capable of supporting a loaded team carrying ten tons weight. He will have it completed this week.

—Boys and girls delight in good strong stockings. Parents delight in our prices, and Peck is delighted in being able to give such stockings at such prices.

GAYETY AT PARK CLUB.

A DANCE ARRANGED BY THE JUNIORS PROVED VERY PLEASANT.

The Guests were Sprinkled with a Number of Visitors from Out-of-Town—Names of All Who Were Present at the Affair.

The gayety of the post Lenten season was continued at the Park Club, last Friday, with a Junior dance. As this is the only social event of importance held last evening, it was largely attended. The number of out-of-town visitors was quite noticeable. As is usual with affairs given in the charming little club house of the borough, the dance was a great success and the junior entertainment committee came in for its share of credit. Although the night was rather warm, there was no lack of couples to fill all available dancing space and two-step followed waltz and waltz followed two-step as the night passed away and the early hours of morning approached.

There was a pleasant interruption at 10:30 o'clock when the guests adjourned to the basement where Steward Jones had a collation ready.

The patronesses of the dance were Mrs. William J. Roome, Mrs. B. A. Hegeman, Jr., Mrs. J. T. Scott, and Mrs. William L. Saunders. The affair was arranged by the junior entertainment committee, which is composed of Charles S. Cook and Fred P. Taylor.

Among those present during the evening were Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Howell, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Saunders, Mrs. F. H. Ball, Mrs. W. J. Roome, Mrs. J. T. Scott, Dr. and Mrs. Charles R. Thiers, Mrs. Charles H. Smith, the Misses May Thompson, Alice Thompson, Kate McClure, Constance Patton, Elsa Pfeiffer, Mary Anderson Reinhart, Emma Sterling, Marion Henderson, Daisy Elsberg, Florence Waring, Adelaide Ball, Sarah Ball, Sadie Howell, Grace E. Overton, Mabel VanDeventer, Hallie VanDeventer, Eleanor T. VanDeventer, Sallye Swayne, May Hull, Elizabeth Hull, Alice Barlow, Helen Phillips, Edith Clapp, Alice Bushmore, Ethel C. Green, Marie Dryden and Genevieve Daniel; Miss Bosher, of Richmond; Miss Katheryn Gillespie, of New York; Miss Hall, Miss Pierson, Miss Elizabeth Miller, of Cranford; Mr. Bidduiph, Henry C. Wells, John McCready, Welles Taylor, Wm. L. McClure, E. Maxwell Honeyman, John D. Brower, George Proctor Smith, W. P. Wimpson, of Bound Brook; Theodore Bourdley, Wm. Sterling, John W. Kirkner, J. B. Dumont, Jr., Robert A. Suffren, Sherwood West, Laurens T. VanBuren, Mr. Fisk, Mr. Benedict, Edward Wilson, Carl Stedman Brown, Chas. Dupee, Charles S. Cook, Fred P. Taylor, Fred O. Ball, Bert Ball, Everett Peck, Carroll L. Runyon, Allan Wilson, A. Willis West, Robert Terrill, Arthur Murphy, Allan Laing, William K. Dwight, Seigfried Arens, Ernest Swayze, William Townsend, A. E. Fisher, Clarence L. Murphy, Elston M. French, Fred K. R. Fish, Jr., Chas. Davis, Bert Loomis, of Lehigh University; Gifford Cooley, Meredith Dryden, W. J. R. Thiers and Arthur A. Freeman.

VERDICT FOR BURNETT.

The Case Bitterly Fought and Jury Gave $3,800 to Plaintiff.

In the case of Burnett against the Lehigh Valley R. R. Co., the verdict was not reached until after this paper went to press. As previously stated, Mr. Bergen's motion that the Chief Justice should direct the jury to find a verdict in favor of the defendants was denied. Mr. McCarter, of Newark, then addressed the jury for the railroad company and Craig A. Marsh delivered the speech for Mrs. Burnett. Both speeches were very forceful, and occupied about one hour each. The charge of the court took about twenty minutes. The jury was out about two hours and came in with a verdict in favor of Mrs. Burnett for $3,500.

The case was tried on both sides with great skill and each side took every possible exception to pave the way for future proceedings. Whether the railroad company will try to get a new trial or carry the case to the court of last resort is not yet known.

Trolley to Bound Brook.

It is learned that the contract to build the trolley railroad from Bound Brook to New Brunswick will be awarded next week, and that the contractor will give bonds to complete the line for the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company and have cars running by July 15th next. The company is determined to build the road in the time stated. There is great rivalry between the above company and the Brunswick Company for a section of 900 feet of streets in Bound Brook, and action on the matter will be taken next Tuesday, but the New York and Philadelphia Company will go ahead whether action to them is favorable or not.

—On Friday evening of this week the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Baptist church will hold an unusually interesting meeting. Mrs. Kilpatrick, a missionary to Upper Burmah, will be present and relate some of her experiences.

EARLY MORNING FIRE.

HOUSE OCCUPIED BY MRS. JULIA PHILPITT PARTIALLY DESTROYED.

It is Thought That the Origin of the Fire Was Incendiary—The Firemen Quickly Responded and Did Excellent Work.

A fire broke out at 2:10 Saturday in the house occupied by Mrs. Julia Philpitt, on Mountain avenue. William H. Turner, a boarder, discovered the fire by the dense smoke arousing him from his slumbers. He called to Patrick Eagan, who lives next door, and the latter sent in an alarm from Box 123, corner of Mountain and Westervelt avenues. Only seven minutes elapsed before the department was on the scene and had a stream of water on the building. It is the opinion of the firemen that the fire started in the northeast corner of the second floor, but Mr. Turner says that it started on the ground floor. The supposition is that it was of incendiary origin.

The entire roof was burned and the northeast side of the house, while the damage by fire and water inside is quite large. The firemen did good work in saving considerable furniture. A great deal of the furniture and furnishings were either ruined by fire or water. A line of hose was laid from the corner of Westervelt and Grandview avenues, a distance of 1,300 feet, so that plenty of water and good pressure was obtained. Mrs. Philpitt was asleep at the time and it was with difficulty that she escaped from the house without being suffocated.

Julius Stahl was among the first of the firemen to arrive and he helped to carry out the furniture. He says that it seemed to him that the fire started in the second story for there did not appear to be any fire below that point when he reached the place.

The house is owned by Charles Ende and is insured in the German-American Insurance Company for $500, and there is an insurance of $1,000 on the furniture. J. C. Pope & Co. hold the insurance on the house. Mrs. Philpitt lost a very valuable sealskin sacque which was destroyed by fire. Many other things were soaked with water and they are practically useless.

BOWLING TEAMS BROKE EVEN.

No High Scores Were Made by Either of the Contestants.

Two very interesting bowling games were rolled on the Ulrich alleys last Monday between the Cleveland Cyclers and the P. C. C. Each team won a game, and while no high scores were made the bowling was excellent. T. T. Barnes and Harry Milligan acted as umpires, while the scorer was C. Sutphen. Below will be found the scores in full:

Cleveland Cyclers.	1st game.	2d game.
Hand	148	113
Kiely	162	179
Overbaugh	147	159
Young	160	166
Tunison	130	164
	738	781

P. C. C.	1st game.	2d game.
Berville	151	149
Hinkle	128	152
Shannon	156	127
Gallagher	163	151
Carty	142	121
	800	699

PROGRESSIVE EUCHRE.

Miss Fanny Western Entertained Her Young Friends.

Miss Fanny Western, of Washington Park, gave a progressive euchre party at her home Saturday evening to her friends. A very pleasant time was passed by all who enjoyed the hospitality of the hostess. Miss Hull, of Brooklyn, secured the prize for the ladies, and Robert Turrill, the prize for the gentlemen.

Those present were: Miss Bertha Hall, Miss Hannan, Miss E. Marsh, of New York; Miss E. Hall, of Cranford; Miss A. Hull, of Brooklyn; Miss S. Hogan, of Mexico; Miss Georgia Fountain, Miss Fanny Western, Chas. McNabb, Robert Turrill, Charles Turrill, John H. VanWinkle, Jr., B. Platt Charles Western, Rowland Western and Percy Western, of this city.

Accepted an Invitation.

A meeting of Central Lodge, A. O. U. W., was held on Thursday evening. An invitation to attend the reception to Grand Master Workman Rutherford by Memorial Lodge of Newark, May 10th, was received, and the lodge has now decided to attend in a body. A programme arranged by the good and welfare committee followed the business session and was much enjoyed.

Fell Off a Wheel and Hurt.

Charles Scribner, of Berckmans street, is confined to his home as the result of an accident on a wheel a week ago. It is only recently that Mr. Scribner learned to ride a wheel and last week he rode to Newark. While in the latter place he fell off of the wheel and sustained an injury to his foot which makes it impossible for him to walk except with the aid of crutches.

—The Woman's Association of the Congregational church will hold missionary meeting in the church parlors on Thursday afternoon. The meeting will be led by Miss F. H. Clarke.

THE COLONIAL DAMES.

THE TRENTON MEMBERS TRY TO MONOPOLIZE ALL THE OFFICES.

The North Jersey Colonials Object to All the Honors Going Out of Their Section and Opposition Candidates Will be Put Up.

There is every prospect of a warm meeting on May 4 when the Colonial Dames of New Jersey meet in annual session in Trenton, says a Trenton correspondent. This organization has among its members ladies who trace their ancestry back to the time of the Puritans and Mayflower, several of whom reside in Plainfield.

The trouble has been brewing two years and arises, it is alleged, through the attempt or disposition of Trenton members to monopolize all the important offices and committees to the exclusion of those who live in Essex, Hudson and Union counties.

Such distinction is one of the honors connected with the organization, and two years ago the North Jersey members made a strong effort to secure a representation in the list of offices. They charged that the Trenton members were running the organization to suit themselves, and as they were in the majority of the lavish entertainments which the society had been accustomed to had ceased and the Colonial Dames existed in name only.

When the effort was made to secure representation the Trenton members informed their sisters that the constitution provided that all the officers must be residents of the State capital. This plan was successful until recently, when a member of the society took time to read the constitution and decided that the statement was a bluff on the part of the Trenton members. At the next meeting the matter was discussed amid warm words and tears.

A committee was appointed to draft an amendment incorporating the Presidential clause. This was done two weeks ago. The Board of Managers, by a vote of 5 to 4, refused to adopt the amendment.

Consternation has stricken the Trenton members, because a majority of the Board of Managers are residents of that city, and it is indicated that the hearts of the Capital City members are softening towards their North Jersey sisters. As a consequence the North Jersey members have prepared a ticket to be voted for on May 4th, and some of the candidates live north of Trenton.

Mrs. Joseph D. Bedle, of Jersey City, is slated for president, Mrs. Frank Mrs. Frank Olyphant, of Plainfield, for first vice-president, and Mrs. Hugh A. Hamill, of Trenton, for second vice-president.

The meeting in May, it is expected, will settle all differences unless the Trenton members succeed in passing proposed amendment.

PRESENTED WITH A BIBLE.

First Presbyterian Sunday-school's Token of Esteem to H. B. Lounsbury.

A pleasant surprise was given to H. B. Lounsbury, superintendent of the First Presbyterian church Sunday school, yesterday afternoon after the session of the school, when Rev. C. L. Herring, the pastor, on behalf of the teachers, presented him with a handsome and costly Oxford Bible, as a token of appreciation for past services. Mr Herring in making the presentation expressed feelings of regret that the church and school were so soon to lose one whom they had all learned to love. Mr. Lounsbury responded in a very happy and appreciative manner, and thanked all for the kindnesses shown to him.

Mr. Lounsbury and his family will remove to Brooklyn in a few days and they will be missed by a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

A Talented Speaker.

Major G. A. Hilton, the talented speaker and lecturer, will visit Plainfield on Tuesday, May 11th, under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. Those who have heard this speaker need not be told what a treat is in store for them. In the afternoon he will give a Bible reading, and in the evening he will deliver a lecture. The following complimentary notice explains itself:

"Five to eight hundred people were turned away from Foster's Opera House, Beaver Falls, Sunday night, unable to obtain admittance. Galleries and aisles were packed. Never before has that town been so aroused, and never before have they listened to such soul stirring eloquence and Gospel-riveted truths as have come to them through this evangelist.—Shenango Valley News.

A Wagon Wrecked.

Saturday afternoon, about 4 o'clock, a wagon owned by William Van Sickle, the North avenue butcher, was wrecked on Watchung avenue. Rudolph Giles, the driver, was in the wagon, and he attempted to make a short turn across the street railway tracks. The wheels caught in the rails and were turned inside out. Fortunately the horse did not run away and the only damage was to the wagon.

—New lot of ladies' brown bicycle boots, just received at Doane & Easall's, only $2.50.

SIX MONTHS FOR HALL.

A WIFE BEATER GETS THE FULL PENALTY IN THE CITY COURT.

The Culprit Was Indicted for Manslaughter in Somerset County on the Charge of Killing "Big Jack," but Wasn't Convicted.

After assaulting his wife and father-in-law, Benjamin Hall fell into the clutches of the city police and, Monday, Judge DeMeza sentenced him to a term in the county jail that will give him anything but pleasant remembrances of Plainfield.

About a year ago, a man named Jackson, better known as "Big Jack," was assaulted at Bound Brook and his skull fractured by a blow from behind. Hall was suspected of the crime and indicted on the charge of manslaughter. The evidence was not strong enough to convict him, however, and he was acquitted.

After his release from jail at Somerville, Hall came to this city where his wife lived. She was then employed in a family in Washington Park. He met her in a lonely spot, and she alleges that he assaulted her, threatened to cut her heart out if she did not give him money, and tore her clothing almost from her body, then skipped. A warrant was issued for his arrest, but he did not put in an appearance. That happened last November.

Yesterday, Hall came from Rahway, where he has been working, and went to the home of John Lee, of West Second street, the father of Ella Hall, his wife. She was living with her father at the time. Hall came in and talked in a friendly manner with the family and then begged his wife to come to an upper room with him as he had something he wished to tell her in private. She demurred but the husband finally persuaded her and they went up stairs. A few minutes later, Mrs. Lee heard her daughter's screams upstairs and called her husband to see what was the matter. Mr. Lee went up to investigate. Although the grey hairs are rapidly outnumbering the others, Lee is still a powerful man and full of pluck.

He found his daughter on the floor, covered with blood, crying that her husband had assaulted her. Lee ordered Hall to leave the house at once and seconded his invitation with a powerful shove. Hall turned on the old man and they clinched. Lee managed to force his son-in-law out of the door, however, but Hall kept his hold on Lee and dragged him out too. Then Hall broke away and threw a large stone, but Lee dodged it, and in turn began to belabor Hall with a fence picket. Hall got away.

Then the enraged father grabbed his hat and hurried to town where he met Patrolman McCue and Roundsman Flynn and related his story. The officers started after the assailant and found him on East avenue. He was locked up to be arraigned before the City Judge Monday.

When he appeared before the Judge, Hall tried to lay the blame for the trouble on his wife and father-in-law, but after the Judge had heard the testimony of the latter, he did not see it in that light.

Hall was declared guilty and the Judge gave him the extreme sentence of the court, sixty days in jail and a fine of $100. As Hall has but little money he will have to serve out one day for the time which will amount to about six months altogether.

A razor was found on his person, but he tried to evade the charge of carrying concealed weapons by saying that he had just bought it to help a poor man.

Constable Rockafellow was in court with the warrant for Hall on the charge of assault last November, ready to take him in custody as soon as the Judge was done with him. Rockafellow will greet Hall when he is released from his present imprisonment.

DIED FROM HIS INJURIES.

Albert Malm's Head Came at the Hospital Yesterday Afternoon.

Albert Malm, the Swede, who fell down the stairs at the North avenue station a week ago last Saturday night, and received serious injuries, died at the hospital yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock. He was not conscious when he passed away. Ever since he was brought to the hospital there seemed to be grave doubts of his recovery as there was apparently internal injuries. At the time of the accident Malm lost a great deal of blood not only from the wound in his head but from both ears. He was in an intoxicated condition and was unable to take care of himself.

As far as known Malm has no relatives in this locality but it is said that there are several wealthy relatives in England. Malm adopted the trade of machinist against the wishes of his relatives and for this reason it is said that he was left out of a will. An effort will be made to find the relatives and inform them of what has occurred.

This afternoon an autopsy will be held at the hospital for the purpose of ascertaining exactly the cause of death.

—When you are on Park avenue stop at Willett's windows. You can't help seeing what you want.

RESCENT'S CYCLE MEET

ENTS ARRANGED FOR THE DECORATION DAY RACES.

Professionals and Amateurs to be Urged to Make Fast Time by Costly Prizes—Contests After the Milburn Road Race

The announcement of the coming ...e meet of the Crescent Wheelmen ... Decoration Day has been made. ...will be the tenth race meet of the ...ub to be held on their one-third ...ile track, Monday, May 31st. There ...ill be events for amateurs and professionals. The amateur events will ...e a mile novice, a mile open, a two-...ided mile handicap, a mile handicap ...d a two-mile tandem race. In the ...ovice event the prizes will be medals ...lues at $25, $15 and $10. The other ...ces will all be diamonds. In the ...adem event they will be valued at ...0, $15 and $5, each. In the other ...vents they will be valued at $35, $20, ...0 and $5.

The professional events will be a ...ile scratch and a two-mile handicap, ...ith cash prizes of $70, $30, $10 and ...5.

The entrance fee for the amateur ...vents will be 50 cents for each event ...d $1 for the professional events.

The races will commence at 3 ...'clock to allow all who attend the ...vington Milburn race to wheel to ...is city and get dinner in time to ...each the track before the racing ...ommences. Ample provisions will ...e made for the checking of wheels.

All information, entry blanks, etc., ...ay be obtained from Charles C ...ister, 147 North avenue, Plainfield.

PASSED TO HER MAKER.

Funeral Obsequies Over the Remains of the Late Mrs. Gardner.

The funeral services of the late Mrs ...artha Gardner were held from the ...irst Baptist church Friday after...oon at 2:30. A very large number ...f people were present to pay their ...ast respects to the departed. Rev ...r. D. J. Yerkes, pastor of the church, ...onducted the services and spoke at ...ome length regarding the life of the ...eceased. He spoke of her devotion ...o Christ and His work and of her ex...mplary Christian life.

There were several very beautiful ...loral decorations, one consisting of a ...unch of lilies from the children, and ...a number of smaller bunches of cut ...owers from friends.

During the service E. E. Runyon ...ang "One Sweetly Solemn Thought," ...ccompanied on the organ by Howard ...ase.

Interment was in Hillside cemetery ...eside the remains of the late husband ...f the deceased.

MISS KOEHRING GOES FREE.

The Grand Jury Fails to Indict Her on Her Former Mistress's Charges

The Somerset Grand Jury has failed ...o indict Mary Koehring on the ...harge of forgery, preferred by her ...ormer mistress, Mrs. Evelyn Went...orth Murray.

Miss Koehring was arrested about ...wo weeks ago, immediately after her ...ischarge from St. Barnabas' Hospital ...n Newark, where it is alleged she was ...nder treatment for severe injuries ...nflicted on her by Mrs. Murray, ...gainst whom she had brought both ...riminal and civil action for assault. ...Miss Koehring, who has been in the ...ounty jail since the day of her arrest, ...as discharged Friday. The action ...f the Grand Jury on Miss Koehring's ...omplaint of assault against her mis...ress has not yet been made public ...ut it is rumored that Mrs. Murray ...ill escape indictment.

Mrs. Field's Reading.

For the entertainment to be given ...y the Park Club at the Casino on ...ay 8th, a long list of patronesses has ...een secured. In addition to Miss ...ary French Field the Club has en...aged William Henry Lee, baritone, ...nd John Francis Gilder, the piano ...olist and composer. The Philadel...hia Times, of Feb. 27, says of Miss ...ield: "Almost, if not quite all, of ...hose present had heard of her, want...d to meet and to know her, long be...ore they saw her; almost, if not quite ...ll, were also aware that it was to her ...hat the 'Little Book of Profitable ...ales' was dedicated."

As Approaching Marriage.

The marriage of Miss Elfleda ...lberto Whiting, of East Sixth street, ...o Rev. Charles Erancis Taylor, of ...ew York, will take place at the Con...regational church, West Seventh ...treet, on Thursday afternoon, May ...th, at 5 o'clock. The ceremony will ...e performed by Rev. C. L. Goodrich, ...f this city. The wedding will be ...ollowed by a gathering of the near ...elatives at the home of the bride.

Hospital Grounds Being Improved.

The grounds surrounding Muhelen...erg Hospital and the Nurses' Home ...re being greatly improved under the ...irection of H. P. Reynolds, who is ...hairman of the committee having ...harge in charge. Thomas Burke ...s doing the work of harrowing, grad...ing and seeding the grounds, and it is ...he intention of the committee to have ...a fine lawn in place of the otherwise ...are condition of the ground.

A. W. Kleinecke has moved from ...Franklin place to East Ninth street.

A BRILLIANT EVENT.

MISS REINHART MAKES HER SOCIETY DEBUT BY GIVING A DANCE.

Casino Prettily Arranged With Floral Decorations—Grace and Charm of the Debutante Made it Very Pleasant for Guests.

One of the most brilliant events of the post-Lenten season was that of last Thursday when Miss Reinhart, of Belvidere avenue, made her debut into society by giving a dance at the Casino. The affair was a social triumph in every particular and the grace and charm of the debutante was proverbial.

The decorations, consisting of southern smilax and palms, transformed the hall into a perfect garden which added greatly to the general beauty.

The favors were especially attractive and they were given out by Mrs. Pfeiffer, Mrs. Van Boskerck, Mrs. Waring, Mrs. Van Buren and Miss Cock.

Among those who graced the occasion by their presence were: Mr. and Mrs. J. Pendleton Rogers, Mr. and J. Parker Mason, Mr. and Mrs. Stuart A. Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Schoonmaker, Mrs. O. T. Waring, Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Sandford, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Saunders, Mrs. Ackerman, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Van-Buren, Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Timpson, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Borden, Mrs. Delanoy, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Yates, Mrs. J. Reinhart, Miss Mary Anderson Reinhart, Miss Edith Van Boskerck, Miss Talmage, Miss Hyde, Miss McCready, Miss May Evans, Miss Waring, Miss Nancy Lawson, Miss Miss Smalley, Miss Maude Middledith, Miss Kate McClure, Miss Gertrude Baker, Miss Wilson, Miss Marion Dumont, Miss Whatton, Miss Anthony, Miss Laura Lovell, Miss Walz, Miss Margaret Yates, and the Misses Haviland, Coe, Bushnell Holly, Ellis, Clark; J. S. Anthony, Harry Patton, Frank Cokefair, Jos. Myers, Clarence Murphy, Sigfried Ahrens, Francis Post, Mr. Ackerman, Messrs. Shepard, Wesley Abbott, Fred Wals, Howard Hoagland, Laurens Van Buren, Melville Waring, Louis Waring, Harry Talmage, Walter Murray, Rowland Cox, Clarence Peck, Fred Case, George Van Boskerck, William McClure, Charles Case, Harry Bushnell, John Dumont, W. Gilbert, Reeve Stockton, McCready Sykes, Westervelt Clark, Harry Opdyke, Irving West, Sherwood West, Allan Wilson, Percy Stewart, Walter Stewart, Dr. And, W. N. Runyon, Clifford McGee, Harry McGee, W. H. P. Watson, of Plainfield; Miss Hoppin, Beekman Hoppin, Rudolph Nesser, Macklin Orr, Mr. Gillespie, Eugene Willard, Sheppard Strong, of New York; Wm. Larned, of Summit; Miss Bosher, of Richmond, Va.; Miss Eshleman, of Lancaster, Pa.; Lawrence Perrin, of Baltimore; Arthur Hegemeyer, Howard Coolidge, of Orange; Percy Zerzie, of Elizabeth.

SUIT TO RECOVER INSURANCE.

First Case of the Kind in Union County to be Tried in May.

The first life insurance case to be tried since Union county was formed in 1857, will come up at the May term of the Union County Court. It is that of the Catherine Regan against the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company of New York.

The plaintiff is suing for a $1,000 insurance policy which she held on the life of her son James. He died last August, after only a few days illness. His brother, Timothy, died in March, 1896, of consumption. The insurance company's contention is that James Regan did not truthfully answer the list of questions submitted to him when he took out his insurance policy, and that he did not state that his brother had died of consumption. J. A. Clark, agent for the Metropolitan Company requested Mrs. Regan to file the proofs of the death of her son James with the company, which she did five days after his demise. She was then to get a check for the amount of the policy, but instead received a notice that the company intended to contest the matter. Six doctors will figure in the case.

DEATH OF MRS. WILSON.

A Faithful Christian Woman Passes to Her Last Reward.

Mrs. Margaret Wilson, mother of W. W. Wilson, of No. 816 West Third street, died last Thursday about 11 P. M. after a short illness. She was 64 years of age, and until two weeks ago she enjoyed good health. Owing to the long and serious illess of her son, W. W. Wilson, with whom she made her home and where she died, the deceased has been removed to the home of her niece, Mrs. John Coffey, No. 822 West Third street, where the funeral will be held.

Mrs. Wilson was a devoted Christian woman of rare character, and faithful to her trust in the church and home She will be greatly missed by a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

Miss Mary Whiton, a student at Radcliff College, returned to her studies on Saturday after spending the spring vacation at her home on Central avenue.

STREET IMPROVEMENTS.

WHERE THE STEAM ROLLER IS TO BE USED THIS SUMMER.

Some of the Streets Are in Such a Condition That They Cannot be Improved to Any Extent Without Being Macadamized

The steam roller promises to be with us for a time yet. Front street, one of the principal thoroughfares of the city, has been greatly improved by the use of the roller, crushed stone, sand and water. Now Somerset street, from Front street to the brook, which is the city and county line, is being repaired.

The street committee has decided to do all that is in their power, with the present appropriation, to put the streets in the condition they should be. There are some thoroughfares which are, at present, beyond redemption, unless completely macadamized, which the appropriation does not permit. They will be left as they are. Among them are East Ninth street, First, Second and Third places. It is no reflection on the committee that they are in their present condition Early this season the deep layer of mud was removed as well as possible, but every severe rain thrned them into a mud pond almost impassable for a single horse or heavy vehicle. When the road dries it is full of ruts, which are rarely worn off ere the next storm comes. Those who have had occasion to ride through any of the above mentioned streets on their wheel will remember their condition.

There are plenty of places on macadamized streets that need repairing Central avenue, between Front and Seventh streets, is sadly in need of repairs, and there the steam roller and its accompaning gang of men will go as soon as Front and Somerset streets are completed. The upper portion of Central avenue is also in a rather poor condition.

Another place to which the street committee will devote their efforts this spring will be Franklin place. That street formerly had the reputation of being one of the finest stretches of road in the city, but now it is far from that. The excavations for the water and sewer pipes spoiled the smooth surface and left it rough and uneven. Then the stones have become loosened.

THEIR FIRST ANNIVERSARY.

King's Foreign Missionary Society Just a Year Old.

The first annsversary of the organization of the King's Foreign Missionary Circle, of Warren chapel Sunday-school, was held in the chapel last Thursda, y An entertainingprogramme occupied the first part of the evening, and the rest of the time was spent in enjoying the refreshments that were passed and the social time that followed.

The programme opened with a few remarks by the pastor, Rev. J. O. McKelvey, who acted as master of ceremonies. The rest of the programme was as follows: Vocal solo, Miss Charlotte Messersmith, recitation, Miss Frankie Whiteley; reading of letter entitled "The Trip to Baracca," Miss Maier; vocal solo, Miss Jennie Morring; vocal solo, J. D Moon; recitation, Miss Lizzie Williams; vocal solo, Miss Charlotte Messersmith; recitation, Miss Frankie Whiteley; vocal solo, J. D. Moon.

All the numbers on the programme were well rendered, and received hearty applause. There was a goodly number present. After the programme had been conclued, refreshments were passed and the guests enjoyed a period of social converse. The affair was arranged by a hustling committee of which Mrs. Sutton was the efficient chairman.

LADIES AID ELECT.

A Prosperous Society of the Monroe Avenue M. E. Church.

One of the most enterprising societies connected with the Monroe Avenue M. E. church is the Ladies' Aid Society, which held its annual meeting in Epworth House, Thursday afternoon. The members turned out in force. The reports of the officers were very gratifying to all. The report of the secretary showed a growth during the year, eleven new members having been added to the roll during that period. The treasurer's report was equally satisfactory, for it showed that not only was there a good balance in the treasury at the present day, but that a large sum had been spent during the year on worthy objects.

The election of officers was held and resulted as follows: President, Mrs. Israel P. LaRue; vice-president, Mrs. A. D. Pearson; secretary, Miss Mary E. Brower; treasurer, Mrs. Alice Brouard.

No Indictment Against Fillmore.

No indictment was found against Alec Fillmore, who was charged with stealing a horse from William Taylor, the Bound Brook liveryman, by the Somerset county grand jury and he has been discharged from custody.

Word was received recently from Isaac Laing, of Dunellen, who is in the South for his health, stating that he is very much improved. His friends in this vicinity will be pleased to learn the fact.

QUIET HOME WEDDING.

NUPTIAL VOWS TAKEN BY A POPULAR PLAINFIELD YOUNG COUPLE.

Miss Jennie Louise Pangborn Married to William Hull Western Last Night at the Home of the Bride—Dr. Barnes Officiated.

A very quiet but pretty wedding was that of Miss Jennie Louise Pangborn, daughter of the late Isaac Pangborn, and William Hull Western of Washington Park, which was celebrated last Thursday at 7:30 at the home of the bride's mother on Jackson avenue. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Charles R. Barnes, of Jersey City, a former pastor of the bride.

The rooms throughout were tastefully decorated. In the parlor the prevailing colors were green and white, and the use of the beautiful southern smilax, together with a number of stately lilies, presented a scene of rare beauty. The decorations in the dining room consisted chiefly of pink. In the reception room there was a profusion of smilax and especially attractive was the staircase around which the vine was entwined.

To the appointed hour the bride and groom entered the parlor while the familar strains of the Lohengrin wedding march was being played. They were met beneath a large and beautiful floral bell of smilax and carnations by Dr. Barnes, the officiating clergyman. The service used was of the Episcopal church and the responces were very plain. The bride's gown was white satin point de Alencon en trains, with lace and pearl trimmings A veil was worn and the bride carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses.

Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Western received the congratulations of those present which included only the relatives of the contracting parties. During the evening a delightful supper was served by Wiertz, and while the guests were enjoying the feast P Ludwig Conde and Clarence Eick rendered a programme of classical selections.

About 10 o'clock the bride and groom left the city for an extended wedding tour, and on their return they will reside at No. 44 Fairview avenue, which house and property was a gift of the bride's mother. Another gift was a substantial check from the groom's father. There were also a great many beautiful presents from friends and relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Western have the best wishes of a host of friends for a happy and successful journey through life.

ENDEAVORERS ENTERTAIN.

An Evening of Recitations, Songs and Games at Park Avenue Baptist Church.

The members of the Christian Endeavor society of the Park Avenue Baptist church entertained their friends at a sociable in the parlors of the church, last Thursday in a very pleasant manner. There was the programme, then games and then a social hour with the accompanying refreshments.

The programme consisted of vocal solos by Mrs. Linea, accompanied by Mrs. Richards on the piano, recitations by Miss Elizabeth Fish, and vocal solos by Thomas J. Cuming. After a selection and encore by each, there was a short intermission and then the entertainment was continued each entertainer giving another selection. The numbers were good and the audience applauded them vigorously. Miss Fish is a pupil of Miss Addie Parker Jackson and she showed the advantages of her instruction, for her selections were excellently rendered.

Games in which all could take part made the time pass quickly and were much enjoyed. Cake and lemonade was passed by the committee and a period of general sociability followed.

The committee in charge of the sociable was the regular social committee of the society, which is composed of H. E. Rider, chairman; David Runyon, Miss Annie Wyckoff, Miss May D. Thompson, Miss Lisa Livezay, Miss Jennie Giles, Miss Henrietta Cuming, Miss Mabel Darling, George Poole and Nelson Van-Winkle.

First Occupant of the New Poor House.

The house at the city farm, which is now to be devoted to the purpose of Overseer of the Poor Mars, has its first occupant. He is a colored man, named John Wilson, who has become so aged and decrepid that the city has been called on to look after him. He has been located on the farm and the rest of the city's charges that now are living at the old poor house on Terrill road will be moved down to the new quarters in a short time.

Enlarging Their Business.

Kelly & Campbell, of this city, have purchased another orange grove next to their other one, at Crescent City, Florida. They report that the new crop is promising and they hope to have plenty of oranges in the fall. Many of the groves have been abandoned in the neighborhood of theirs, however, as the owners have not the money to carry on the care of the trees until the new crop is ready for sale.

—Genuine Dongola kid shoes, fine styles, only $1.19. Doane & Edsall's.

BEFORE HYM N'S SHRINE

FOND LOVERS JOINED FOR A LIFE TIME BY MARRIAGE VOWS.

Two of the Nuptial Events Were Pretty Home Weddings, and a Third Was Solemnized in a New York Church.

A charming home wedding was that of last Thursday when Miss Mary Elizabeth Doud, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Doud, and Herbert Chester McVoy, of East Front street, were united in marriage at the home of the bride by Rev. George Anglman, cousin of the groom.

The home was prettily decorated with flowers. In the parlor the prevailing colors were pink and white, and the bridal party stood beneath a horseshoe of white roses, which was entwined with beautiful smilax vine. The table decorations were pink and green, which colors were arranged through the use of pink roses and smilax vine, while at each end was placed a large banquet lamp.

The ceremony was performed at 8 o'clock, and at that hour the music from Mendelssohn's wedding march was heard; at the same time the bridal party entered the parlor. The ushers, Theodore Kurshala, Jr., and William Doud, brother of the groom preceded. Then came the maid of honor, Miss May E. Hughes, who was followed by the bridesmaid, Miss Josie F. O'Brien, of Troy, N. Y., and the groom. The bride came next, leaning on the arm of the best man Raymond McVoy, brother of the groom. A circle was formed beneath the horseshoe where the ceremony was performed, Miss Florence Dodge, cousin of the groom, presided at the piano and played the march.

At the close of the ceremony the guests extended congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. McVoy and all wished them a very successful and happy journey through life.

The gown of the bride was white silk de soie over white, and was trimmed with moire ribbon. She carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses. The maid of honor wore a gown of white silk de soie over yellow, and carried a bouquet of yellow roses. The bridesmaid was gowned in white silk de soie over pink and carried pink roses.

Following congratulations a social time was passed and later in the evening a sumptuous wedding supper was served. During this part of the happy event the bride accepted the honor of cutting the bride's cake.

The presents received by Mr. and Mrs. McVoy were both costly and useful, and evidenced the very high esteem in which they are held by their many friends, among the gifts was a very valuable picture of the "Battle of Newberne," North Carolina, which was given by the mother of the bride.

Those who were present to witness the marriage were: Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Doud, Mr. and Mrs. I. L. McVoy, Mr. and Mrs. James Blair and daughter, Madeline Blair, Mr. and and Mrs. Albert Leader, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Shotwell, Mr and Mrs. Philip Haag, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Spencer, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. C. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Blair, Mr. and Mrs. David Boice, Mrs. T. H. Keller, Mrs. Achesson and daughter, Ella Schesson, Miss Angleman, Miss Cora Sheppard, Miss Louise Koller, Miss Florence Dodge, Percy McVoy, Arthur McVoy, George McVoy, E. H. Cleveley, W. C. Dobbins, John Doud, Haselwood Keller, of Plainfield; Mr. and Mrs. John Angleman, of Bayonne; Rev. and Mrs. George Angleman, of Junction, Hunterdon county; Mrs. Clayton, of Trenton; Mrs. Collins, of Westfield; Mrs. Dodge, of Brooklyn; Freeman Shotwell, of this city.

Mr. and Mrs McVoy have a furnished house on Westervelt avenue and they have gone to housekeeping at once.

WEDDED AT HIGH NOON.

Miss Martha May Wright Becomes the Wife of a Roselle Young Man.

A very pretty home wedding was that of Thursday at high noon, when Miss Martha May Wright, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Webster Wright, of East Front street, and Frederick Ruprecht, of Roselle, were united in marriage by Rev. C. E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church.

The parlors were very beautiful, and consisted principally of palms and cut roses, which were arranged in a pleasing manner in one corner of the room where the ceremony was performed.

The bride was gowned exquisetly in brown grenadine over pink and yellow changeable silk. There was no bridemaid, but the best man was Harry Hazelton, of Brooklyn.

Immediately after the ceremony a delightful luncheon was served, and the bride and groom left the city on the 2:17 Philadelphia train for an extended trip through the south. As they left the house they were showered with rice by their friends. Costly and useful presents were received by Mr. and Mrs. Ruprecht. On their return they will reside in New York, where the groom is in business.

The guests included Mr. and Mrs. Ruprecht, Harry Ruprecht, Charles Ruprecht, Roy Ruprecht, Mr. and Mrs. Jarvis, of Roselle; Mr. and Mrs. Keeney, Mr. Quereau, Mrs. Charles Smith, Miss Hazelton, Harry Hazelton, Mr. and Mrs. M. Tobin, of Brooklyn; Mrs. Putnam Cramer, Miss Lena Campbell, of New York; Robert Adams, of New Haven; Dr. and Mrs. last Thursday at St. Joseph's church, King. Mrs. Stout, Master Warren Wright, of Plainfield.

MARRIED IN NEW YORK.

Edward Delehanty Takes a New York Belle for His Life Partner.

A pretty wedding was celebrated New Year's Day. The contracting parties were Miss Lizzie M. Tobin, of New York, and Edward Delehanty, of this city. The officiating clergyman was Rev. Father Morris, assistant rector of the church.

The bride wore a traveling gown of gray cloth. The bridemaid was Miss B. Tobin, cousin of the bride, and the best man was James Delehanty, cousin of the groom.

After the services a reception was held at 27 Perry street, the residence of Mr. and Mrs. P. C. Wooley, cousins of the bride, where the couple received many pretty and useful presents.

On their return from their wedding trip, Mr. and Delehanty will live in Plainfield.

Western Girl Married Here.

The marriage of Miss Sarah Frazee, of Peoria, Ill., to Mr. Dunham, of Westfield, was solemnized last Sunday by Rev. J. H. McKeivey The bride is a cousin of Whitfield Frazee.

CARPET FUND INCREASED.

Profitable Local Affair Given by the Women of Trinity Church.

The pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Marshall, of East Fifth street, was the scene last Thursday of a very delightful social event. It was a tea given by the members of the Ladies' Aid Society of Trinity Reformed church for the benefit of the carpet fund, and about $12 was received from those present.

The home was attractively decorated with carnation pinks and American Beauty roses which gave an additional charm to the event.

Mrs. and Mrs. Marshall received the guests and those who assisted were Mrs. E. T. VanWinkle, Mrs. J. F. MacDonald, Mrs. F. A. Church, Mrs. E. H. Bird and Mrs. William Startup, while Mrs. P. M. Domàrest poured coffee.

Interspersing the sociability an excellent programme was presented, which included vocal solos by Miss Etta Krymer, cornet solos by B. F. LaVere, and piano solos by Miss Lottie Nevell and Bert Harold.

The attendance was large and the feature of the affair was the sociability which all enjoyed.

ANOTHER APRIL WEDDING.

A Young Couple Married at the Home of Rev. W. H. Miller.

The marriage of Miss Minnie McLwaine, of Somerset street, and Frank Oldmen, of Perth Amboy, was celebrated last Thursday at 8 p. m., in the rectory of St. Joseph's (R. C.) church, North Plainfield. Rev. Father Miller, rector of the church, performed the ceremony. The bridesmaid was Miss Kittie McLwaine, of North Plainfield, and the best man was John Johnson, of Perth Amboy. The bride's gown was blue serge, trimmed with white satin ribbon, while the bridesmaid wore a gown of green serge, trimmed with yellow satin ribbon.

After the ceremony the bridal party went to the home of the groom's sister, Mrs. Andrew Saffron, on Somerset street, where a reception was held and supper was served. The collection of presents were costly and useful. Music for dancing was furnished by Eugene O'Reilly.

Included among the guests were Mrs. Oldmen, Charles Oldmen, Perth Amboy; Miss Dorion, Miss Rose Dever, Miss Kittie Burke, Miss Lynch, Miss Susie McLwaine, Miss Maggie McLwaine, Mr. and Mrs Andrew Saffron.

This morning Mr. and Mrs. Oldmen left the city for Perth Amboy where they will reside.

Borough Realty Changes.

The following real estate transfers from North Plainfield have recently been recorded in the Somerset County Clerk's office:

W. H. H. Wyckoff, sheriff, to Angie Dietrich, $1,188.41; Charles J. Schaffer et ux., to Jacob Schaffer, $1; Geo. V. Longshore and husband to Emily L. Taft, $4,000; Elias Allen et ux., to Charles J. Schentz, $1; Mountain Park Land Company to Susan R. Cheeny, $200; Chas. Pride et ux., to Augustus Compton, $600; Louis Carter to Gastamo Miele, $200.

Dogs Kill Sheep in Hunterdon.

The dog tax in Hunterdon county is likely to be very high this year. Several bills for large amounts have been handed in by farmers who have lost a great many sheep, which, they claimed, were killed by vicious dogs that invaded their farms at night.

Cyclist Took a Tumble.

While Clifford J. Miller, of Park avenue, was coasting down Cole's hill on East Front street, Thursday afternoon, on a bicycle he lost his balance and took an awful tumble. His wheel was badly wrecked and he was painfully bruised.

—H. V. Borden has commenced the erection of a house on Hillside avenue.

The Constitutionalist.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force. Editor and Proprietor

CHILDREN OUT OF SCHOOL.

State Superintendent of Public Instruction, Hon. Charles J. Baxter, calls attention to the fact that more than 80,000 children of the school census at hand no school during the year. If the public school system of the state means anything at all it means to provide an opportunity for every child of the commonwealth to acquire the rudiments of knowledge as a preparation for life, making of each child a more valuable citizen than he otherwise would become. This end is being defeated to a certain extent by the indifference of some parents to the value of educational training and the time seems to be at hand when some better compulsory education law than our present one must be enacted. Superintendent Baxter's suggestion of a remedy, to be found in another column, is worthy of careful thought. Many of our children are obliged to leave school early in life and public education should begin early in the kindergarten as Superintendent Baxter suggests. Children should be kept regularly in school as well and the basing of the apportionment of state funds upon the attendance of the schools would quicken the public conscience in this important respect. It would be of advantage to cities to furnish attractive and adequate school facilities for the children, that the attendance might be large and thus increase the revenue received from the state. We hope to see the progressive suggestions of Superintendent Baxter soon incorporated in the school laws of the state.—Dover Era.

TAX RATES AND VALUATIONS

The New-York Tribune remarks of the tax rates of New Jersey cities that "low taxes do not always mark the most desirable residential districts." That is true. It is also true that the figure of the tax rate does not indicate whether taxes are high or low. It all depends on the rate of assessed valuation. Property-owners in places where the average assessment is about 30 per cent of the real value of property can well afford a high tax rate, since the amount of tax they pay is comparatively small. For example, a tax rate of 4 per cent on a property worth $1,000 and assessed at 30 per cent, or for $300 would be exactly the same as a tax rate of 2 per cent on $1,000 of property assessed at 60 per cent, or for $600.—Newark Advertiser.

AN EASY WAY CUT.

A bill in the hands of Governor Griggs, known officially as Senate No. 230, would, if it became a law, permit the Common Council of Plainfield to choose whether the municipal elections should be held in December or April, but it is reported that the Governor will not sign the measure. The easiest way out of all this turmoil about elections would be the passage of a general law providing that all local elections in the State should be held on the same day.—New York Tribune.

AN APPALLING RECORD.

New Jersey doesn't need a war to reduce the surplus population so long as the railroad slaughter keeps on. Last year there were killed on the railroads in this State 229 persons, and in addition to this there were 1,246 injured. Of these 242 were killed and 417 injured while walking on or crossing the track. This is an appalling record, and it is feared that there won't be much improvement until grade crossings have ceased to exist—New York Tribune.

THE GAMBLERS ARE ALERT.

The racetrack gamblers are not yet disposed of, so the people must continue to be alert until the constitutional amendments which will be voted on next fall are finally passed and become a part of our organic law. It is stated that the gamblers will use every effort to defeat the adoption of the amendments, and they will succeed if the people do not interest themselves enough to go to the polls.

GALLING TO REPUBLICANS.

It must be rather galling to the New Jersey Republicans who have been making such a plea for patronage for members of their party in this State, and especially so in the case of Major Pangborn, of Jersey City, for the appointment as minister to the Hawaiian Islands, to have President McKinley appoint the son of Arthur Sewall, the running mate of Bryan, to the place coveted by the Major.

—Meeting of the Christian Alliance on Thursday evening, at 7:45 o'clock, at the rooms of the W. C. T. U. on Watchung avenue.

ODD FELLOWS CELEBRATE.

Speeches and a Banquet Occupy the Evening at Queen City Lodge.

The members of Queen City Lodge, No. 226, I. O. O. F., at their meeting last Monday, celebrated the 78th anniversary of the founding of the order in a most auspicious manner. District Deputy Stamitz, of Westfield, and his staff, were present and installed G. E. Firstbrook as warden, and J. B. Patterson as left sentinel to the Vice Grand. Mr. Stamitz was then called upon for a speech and he gave one of the best talks ever listened to. His remarks started with the institution of Odd Fellowship and continued through to the present time. He told how the order had grown both in numbers and influence, and every one present was made to feel proud that they belong to such a grand organization.

At the conclusion of the above speech an adjournment was made to the banquet hall where a feast of good things were provided for all. The supper was arranged entirely by William Ford, and to him is due great credit for the excellent repast furnished. After the inner man had been well supplied there was a flow of eloquence such as the members have seldom heard. Speeches were made by several visitors as well as by the home members. It was late when the happy event terminated but all agreed that they had never enjoyed themselves better.

Sale for Benevolent Purposes.

The Benevolent Circle of King's Daughters held a successful cake and candy sale in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue church Saturday afternoon. Tables were arranged about the parlors and they were prettily decorated. The sale was well attended and a neat sum was netted, which will be devoted to the charitable work of the Circle. The president of the Circle, Mrs. W. L. C. Glenny, was in general charge, while the different members presided over the different tables, at which cake, home-made candies and fancy articles were sold. Ice cream was on sale in one of the adjoining rooms.

WORK AT THE HOSPITAL.

Report of the Medical Director to the Board of Governors.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital was held at the Public Library, last Monday. There were several lengthy discussions, but the only important action taken was regarding the anniversary and graduating exercises of the Training School. It was decided to hold them on Thursday evening, May 27th.

The monthly report of the medical director, Dr. W. H. Murray, was read. The substance was as follows: Remaining at date of last report, 15; total number of patients admitted, 17; discharged, cured, 16; discharged improved, 5; died, 1; total number treated, 32; remaining at present date, 10; dispensary patients, 30; visits, 60.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, 75c. Hall's Family Pills are the best.

New Station at Lorraine.

The commuters of Lorraine are jubilant over the erection of a new station at that place. The old one, built by the New Jersey Central Railroad, was nothing but a shed, affording no protection in cold or wet weather. The commuters held a meeting one night last fall, and the next morning the shanty had disappeared. The company refused to build a new one all winter. A few weeks ago, however, the railroad company sent out a load of lumber, and a force of men are now at work erecting a cosey little station on the site of the old one.

A Mean Trick.

A mean trick was perpetrated a few nights ago on Rockview avenue by removing a large plank from the carriage way and placing it against the front door of a residence. It was evidently intended that when the door was opened the plank would fall on somebody's head and inflict personal injury, but fortunately it was placed on the stationary half of the door, so that when the door was opened the plank was found resting against the other half of the door and no one was injured by it.

REALTY CHANGES.

Plainfield Matters Recorded in the County Clerk's Office.

The following property transfers have been recorded at County Clerk Howard's office, from April 15th to 22d inclusive:

Rachel R. Randolph et ux, New York, to Peter B. Randolph, Raritan, lot Park avenue, Plainfield, $1; Central N. J. Land Improvement Co. to Joseph H. Saunders, Plainfield, lot Berckman street, Plainfield, $200; Mina Rider et ux to Laura Boorman, Plainfield, lot Belvidere avenue, Plainfield, subject to $2,000 mortgage, $1; Laura Boorman to Mina Rider, lot Front street and Leland avenue, $1; Charles L Moffett Plainfield, to Lucretta S. Smith, lot Second street and Magie's lane, Plainfield, $800; Central N. J. Land Improvement Co. to James A. Saunders, Plainfield, lot Berckman street and North avenue, Plainfield, $200; John Mair et ux, Plainfield, to Ellwood Valentine, Glen Cove, N. Y., lot South avenue, near Berckman street, Plainfield, $4,100; Susan A. Searler et ux, Plainfield, to Lucretta L. Smith et ux, New York, lot Arlington avenue, Plainfield, subject of mortgage of $2,000, $9,700; John F. McIntire et ux, Plainfield, to Charles H. Hand, Plainfield, lot East Sixth street, Plainfield, $200; Lucy B. Finch to Annie E. Finch, Plainfield, lot Washington avenue, Plainfield, $1,800; Lucy B. Finch to Annie E. Finch, Plainfield, lot Park avenue, Plainfield, $1,000

ALTAR SOCIETY SERVICE.

An Auxiliary of St. Stephen's Church Shown to be Prosperous.

A special Altar Society service was held in St. Stephen's church, Sunday morning. There was a very interesting address by the rector, Rev. S. P. Simpson, on the society and its work, while the reports of the secretary and treasurer of the society were read. The secretary's report showed a steady gain in membership. The death of Mrs. C. P. Ralli was referred to as the only loss of a member that the society had met with since its formation, nine years ago. The treasurer's report was very satisfactory for, while the balance in the treasury was not large, much good work had been done during the year. It was the Altar Society that had started the movement last fall to purchase a new silver communion service by the donation of $50 for that object. The rest of the amount necessary has been raised by private subscriptions about the congregation.

A NEW RECTOR.

Rev. Mr. Harris to Probably Succeed Rev. Jocelyn Johnstone.

Rev. Mr. Harris, of New York, who is to occupy the pulpit of the Church of the Redeemer temporarily as a successor to Rev. Jocelyn Johnstone, preached his first sermon Sunday. He gave a deep and interesting sermon. Rev. Mr. Harris and family have been in Montana, but the climate was not agreeable to their health and they were compelled to return to the east. It is probable that he will be engaged as the permanent rector of the parish. Rev. Mr. Johnstone will take up the practice of law for his future occupation.

A Talented Musician.

John Francis Gilder, the pianist and composer, who is to play at the entertainment at the Casino on May 5th is a brother of the poet Richard Watson Gilder. This versatile composer has been for a number of years touring America with other prominent artists and has undoubtedly been heard by more people than any other. He is a disciple of Gottschalk who was for many years his friend. The special committee of the Park Club are to be congratulated in securing such an artist, who, together with William H. Lee, the baritone will assist Eugene Field's daughter, Miss Mary French Field in the entertainment.

Left the Woman Driver Behind.

A horse being driven along Sixth street by Mrs. Mellick, of South Plainfield, Monday afternoon, caused considerable excitement at the corner of Madison avenue and Sixth street, when the animal jumped over the shafts. After much kicking the horse finally broke away from the wagon and left the woman behind. The runaway animal was caught in the rear of the Congregational church by the sexton. There was no damage to the woman or wagon.

Lee's Examination Adjourned.

William Lee, of Scotch Plains, came before Justice Newcorn, Monday afternoon for a hearing on the charge of atrocious assault and battery. The complainant did not put in an appearance at the time set down for a hearing and the Judge adjourned the matter until Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Cock Fight at South Plainfield.

There was a cock fight at South Plainfield, Saturday night, between birds from New Brunswick and South Plainfield. A number of spectators from Plainfield were present. After several exciting bouts, the New Brunswick birds won seven out of the eleven matches.

Two years ago R. J. Warren, a druggist at Pleasant Brook N. Y., bought a small supply of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He sums up the result as follows: "At that time the goods were unknown in this section to-day Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is a household word." It is the same in hundreds of communities. Wherever the good qualities of Chamberlains Cough Remedy become known the people will have nothing else. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

AVENUE TO BE OPENED.

IMPORTANT ACTION OF THE COMMON COUNCIL MONDAY.

Resolution Passed to Borrow Enough Money to Pay Y. M. C. A. Damages So the Watchung Improvement Can be Pushed

Very singularly, the City Council held an adjourned and a special meeting last Monday, and at first it looked as though all of the members would not be present. However, Mr. Stebbins was the only member absent.

The adjourned meeting was held first and the regular order of business was taken up. A workman and a policeman asked for licenses and both were granted. The Plainfield Medical Association, in a communication, asked the Council to take some steps toward prohibiting people from carrying small children on bicycles. The matter was referred to the committee on laws and ordinances.

Mayor Fisk appointed as special policemen John Kelly and James Bobbitt, and they were confirmed by the Council. The Mayor returned the ordinance repealing the salary of the street commissioner, without his approval. His reason for so doing was that he thought it was too late in the day to make any change in the matter. The Council concurred with the Mayor and the ordinance was killed.

Another communication was received from the Mayor regarding the change in the laws which affect second class cities. The communication was not read and Mr. Barrows moved that the same be received and that copies be sent to each councilman.

Regarding the bill of Michael Powers for $175 for material and work in laying sidewalks on West Front street, the Corporation Counsel stated that he thought the charge was too much. He suggested that the Council pay the bill, provided Mr. Powers would deduct $50. The matter was referred to the street committee. This concluded the business for the first part of the adjourned meeting, and according to the rules the special committee was called at 8:30. The clerk read the call for the meeting which was for the purpose of acting on the tax ordinance for 1897. On a motion of Mr. Baker the ordinance was adopted on the third reading. Messrs. Runyon and Westphal voted in the negative. The Council then returned to the regular order of business.

Regarding the request from W. H. Stillman asking the Council to readjust the ordinance relating to shows, etc., also the fees which are charged for shows at Music Hall, the ordinance was referred to the committee on laws and ordinances for that purpose.

Mr. Barrows offered a resolution which provided for the borrowing of $4,872.75 from the general fund temporarily for the purpose of paying the Y. M. C. A. assessment for damages in connection with the opening of Watchung avenue. This action was necessary so that the city can secure the property for the opening of the avenue. This amount of money will come back to the city when the assessments for benefits are made. This property is the only one on the proposed line of extension which is assessed damages in excess of benefits.

Mr. Runyon voted in the negative. Mr. Westphal did not seem to satisfied with such action but he voted for the resolution.

Mr. Barrows offered a resolution to the effect that Union County Board of Freeholders be given notice that the city intends to open Watchung avenue and they take the necessary steps to erect a suitable bridge across the brook to join the city and borough.

The sidewalk ordinance was called up and amended so as to give the police authority to serve notices on property owners. The ordinance was then adopted and ordered engrossed and advertised.

Mr. Barrows presented an agreement to the effect that the city and street railway tracks are laid, macadamized, repaired and paved, and that the city do the work and the company pay their share, for the same.

Mr. Barrows made a few remarks concerning the agreement. He stated that the streets had been in bad condition where the tracks of the street railway are laid and the work of keeping them in good repair had been unsatisfactory. Mr. Rud presented the agreement to Mr. Riker of the company and the latter said that he would present it at the next meeting of the Board of Directors. Mr. Riker had said that he was in favor of the scheme and he thought that there would be no trouble in consummating the contract.

On Mr. Barrows' motion the agreement was accepted by the council and adopted. When the directors of the street railway meet the paper will be presented to them for their approval.

This finished the business of the evening and the council adjourned. The regular meeting of the council will be held next Monday evening.

In accordance with the action taken by the Council in reference to the opening of Watchung avenue, the work will be started at an early date. As soon as the Y. M. C. A. property is secured the city can commence the work.

Visited a Hen Roost.

Some miscreant visited the henroost of Frank Hedden on East Fourth street, Sunday night, and removed one of his valuable Plymouth Rock roosters and three hens without permission. Hedden is looking for the offender.

Careful experiments made upon a healthy person show that of ordinary oatmeals 83 per cent. alone is digested. Of H-O 99.75 is digested.

The process of preparation of H-O is "peculiar to itself."

Subscriptions Free to

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly
Illustrated American (Weekly)
Truth (Weekly)
New Parisian Modes
Chatterbox (Monthly)
The American Kitchen Magazine
Home Magazine (Monthly)
of Binghamton, N. Y.

WITH COUPONS FROM THE

H.O.Co.'s Goods

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS

For all Blood and Nervous Diseases. They purify the Blood and give Healthy action to the entire System.

Cure DYSPEPSIA, HEADACHE, CONSTIPATION and PIMPLES.

J. H. OLNHAUSEN,
General Superintendent.
R. P. BALDWIN,
General Passenger Agent.

SALESMEN WANTED

To sell our Maple Shade Nursery Stock. Many new specialties offered this year for the first time. Liberal terms. Handsome outfit free. Pleasant and remunerative. No previous experience necessary. We grow a full line of Nursery Stock. Stone, Bro. & Thomas, Lock Haven Nurseries, Pa.

Dissolution of Partnership.

Notice is hereby given that the partnership heretofore existing under the name and firm of Terril & Cole, as Undertakers and Funeral Directors in the city of Plainfield, is this day by mutual consent dissolved, and all debts owing and owing to said firm are to be paid to George W. Cole, at all times and places, and all of said firm are payable to George W. Cole, who will continue the business at the same business, No. 220 West Second street, in the city of Plainfield.

MOSES N. TERRILL,
GEO. W. COLE.

4 15 6

PAINT "PERINITE" COTTAGE COLORS

Save money and get the best. Send for card of beautiful shades to

THE TAYLOR PAINT & OIL CO.,
22 Burling Slip, N. Y. 2 and 4 Fifth St., Troy, N. Y.

The Rev. W. H. Weaver, pastor of the U. B. Church, Dillsburg, Pa., recognizes the value of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and does not hesitate to tell others about it. "I have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," he says, "and find it an excellent medicine for colds, cough's and hoarseness." So does everyone who gives it a trial. Sold by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

Large Church Pledge.

At the Crescent Avenue church the annual subscription was made Sunday for the support of the three chapels for the coming year, and nearly $4,300 was pledged.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The fac simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

Central Railroad of New Jersey.

Jeffersonville, Coal Used Exclusively, Time Table in Effect JANUARY 3rd, 1897.

Trains leave Plainfield and New York, Foot Liberty street, North River, as follows:

Leave Plainfield at 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 a. m., 12 00, 12 30, 1 00, 1 30, 2 00, 2 30, 3 00, 3 30, 4 00, 4 30, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 11 00 p. m., 12 01 night.

Sundays—5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 a. m., 12 00 m., 1 00, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p. m., 12 01 night.

Leave New York, Foot Liberty street, North River, as follows:

Leave Plainfield at 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 a. m., 12 00, 12 30, 1 00, 1 30, 2 00, 2 30, 3 00, 3 30, 4 00, 4 30, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 11 00 p. m., 12 01 night.

Sundays—5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 a. m., 12 00 m., 1 00, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p. m., 12 01 night.

Passengers for Newark please take 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00 a. m. trains.

PLAINFIELD AND SOMERVILLE.

Leave Plainfield at 5 45, 7 30, 8 45 a. m., 12 15, 1 45, 4 30, 5 30, 6 30 p. m. Sunday at 5 45, 8 45 a. m., 4 30, 6 30 p. m.

Leave Somerville at 6 45, 8 30, 9 45 a. m., 1 15, 2 45, 5 30, 6 30, 7 30 p. m. Sunday at 6 45, 9 45 a. m., 5 30, 7 30 p. m.

PLAINFIELD AND RARITAN.

Leave Plainfield at 5 45, 7 30, 8 45 a. m., 12 15, 1 45, 4 30, 5 30, 6 30 p. m. Sunday at 5 45, 8 45 a. m., 4 30, 6 30 p. m.

Leave Raritan at 6 30, 7 45, 9 00 a. m., 1 00, 2 30, 5 15, 6 15, 7 15 p. m. Sunday at 6 30, 9 00 a. m., 5 15, 7 15 p. m.

PLAINFIELD AND LAKE HOPATCONG.

Leave Plainfield at 9 45 a. m., 4 30 p. m. Sunday at 9 45 a. m.

Leave Lake Hopatcong at 6 00 a. m., 2 00 p. m. Sunday at 6 00 p. m.

Passengers for Plainfield, North Plainfield, Dunellen, Bound Brook, Middlebush, Somerville, Millstone, Kingston, Princeton Junction, Trenton, Lambertville, Flemington, Junction, Whitehouse, Bridgewater, Finderne, Bridgewater, Man

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

Celebrated for its great leavening strength and healthfulness. Assures food against alum and all forms of adulteration common to the cheap brands. Royal Baking Powder Co., New York.

THE DUTY OF MAN TO MAN

REV. C. E. HERRING'S SERMON TO THE ODD FELLOWS.

Fraternity is One of the Sublime Influences That Makes the World Better—A Practical Interest in Fellow Men.

The members of Queen City Lodge, No. 236, and Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F., attended divine service at the First Presbyterian church last Sunday and listened to a sermon preached by the pastor, Rev. C. E. Herring. Both lodges were largely represented and the discourse was a most interesting one. Mr. Herring took for his text the words found in Genesis: "Where is Thy Brother?" and in part he spoke as follows:

"This searching question was not only made to Cain. It is made to us, and God demands a better answer than 'Am I my brother's keeper?' Brotherliness is a noble characteristic, but few possess the trait.

"The first curse pronounced against man was because he did not realize the responsibility of fraternity. Not Adam, but Cain was the man who received the curse of God. Did not Christ say 'The second great commandment is Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself?'

"Christianity is more than Sunday sentimentalism. It should be easier to work for a Christian man than for a man with no profession, but it is often otherwise. Some Christian women are tartars to their servants and some Christian gentlemen are like the old Egyptian taskmasters.

"We should have a very practical interest in our fellows. We afford money and clothing to the unemployed, but don't help a man to help himself. We are apt to be not at home if he seeks employment. Ask a man for a position for your friend and he has nothing. He responds that business is not run on the sentimental plan.

"It is a crime to grow old. A young man has a chance, but the man who has passed the dead line of fifty has no chance, though brain and hands may be still active.

"It is a weakness of labor organizations that all labor is on a par and the young men are chosen and the old are left to their fate. Is there any possible way of explaining this state of things on the Christian plan?

"It was a successful French business man who wrote as his creed, 'I believe in a God who has written in our hearts the law of duty, the law of progress, the law of sacrifice of one's self for others. I am the humble disciple of Him who has told us to love our neighbor as ourselves. In this sense I desire to remain a Christian unto my last breath.'"

HIGH SCHOOL DEFEATED.

Newark Academy Easily Won From the Plainfield High School at Base Ball.

The base ball nine of the Plainfield High School played its first match game, Saturday morning, with the team from Newark Academy, on the grounds of the latter team. The Plainfield boys were defeated by a score of 15 to 6. The defeat was not a bad one considering the condition of the two teams. The home team took the lead from the start and in no inning were they closely pushed by the visitors. The game was therefore not an exciting one. Sutphen and Lederer were the battery for the High School team and they were given fair support. Fisher put up a brilliant game for the High School at short. Sebring and Lederer were the only ones of the visiting team that were able to hit the Newark pitcher. Hurd and Smith were the battery for the home club. The Newark infield was a strong one.

The score by innings was as follows:

Newark. - - 3 2 0 4 1 0 0 5 x—15
High School. - 2 1 0 0 0 0 0 1 2— 6

A Real Catarrh Cure.

The 10 cent trial size of Ely's Cream Balm which can be had of the druggist is sufficient to demonstrate its great merit. Send 10 cents, we mail it. Full size 50c.

ELY BROS., 56 Warren St., N. Y. City.

Catarrh caused difficulty in speaking and to a great extent loss of hearing. By the use of Ely's Cream Balm dropping of mucus has ceased, voice and hearing have greatly improved. J. W. Davidson, Att'y at Law, Monmouth, Ill.

BOYS CLUB'S NEW HOME.

A PLACE FOR THE BOYS.

CLUB LIFE THAT EMBODIES GOOD PRACTICAL IDEAS.

Their Home Thrown Open for an Entertainment and Reception Monday—Very Pleasing Programme Rendered.

The new home of the Plainfield Boys' Club was the scene last Monday of much genuine enjoyment on the part of the members and their friends who had gathered to listen to the interesting entertainment provided for their amusement. The programme consisted of piano selections by Mrs. C. De Medina, recitations by Mrs. L. W. Serrell, Jr., and songs by Mr. Evart Jansen Wendall, of New York. The ladies are well known in this city as accomplished performers, and Mr. Wendall also has been heard here, having been the guest of the Club once before, when his characteristic and imitable manner of rendering popular melodies rendered him a general favorite. The committee in charge of the affair were Clarke A. Peterson, Joseph Galbraith and John Butscher.

The club house showed again, as on the evening of the first public reception there a few months since, its admirable facilities for the purpose which the association aims to accomplish. The boys of Plainfield are wonderfully fortunate to have such opportunities for industrial training, gymnastic exercise, and mental culture provided for them. The building located on Sycamore street, between Fourth and Fifth, is the one formerly owned by the Bicycle Club and fitted up by them with a variety of gymnastic appliances and other conveniences. It was recently purchased by some generous friends and presented to the Boys' Club. Built of iron and wood it presents an attractive exterior, as is shown in the accompanying cut. The pleasant impression continues as the visitor passes through the main entrance into the large reception room, and finds himself face to face with the greatest of comforts, a fine open fire place. In the conspicious position above there is a large and tastefully draped American flag, which would seem to indicate that the Club stands for love of country first and foremost. In this connection The Press is pleased to learn that the favorite song of the boys and the one most often sung is "America."

At the rear of the reception room is the large assembly room with galleries on three sides and on the fourth a huge stone chimney piece with artistic decorations. This hall is divided by low fence-like partitions into apartments for the various branches of manual training taught by the accomplished instructor, Olaf Saugstad, a man who has made the mechanical arts a life study. The centre of the building is devoted to a gymnasium where there is a fine outfit of apparatus said to be excelled in completeness by that of few clubs in existence. Adjoining this room are lockers, shower-baths, etc. The portion of floor space under the left gallery is occupied by materials and implements for moulding. In the gallery itself are work-benches at which the use of the carpenter's tools and wood carving are taught, and in the opposite gallery the class in mechanical drawing holds its sessions and keeps its materials. Over the reception room is a large reading room where are to be found books and periodicals likely to be amusing and helpful to boys.

The clubhouse is open every evening except Sunday, four nights being devoted to instruction and the remaining two to gymnastic practice. The boys are looking forward to organizing a debating society soon for the solution of such knotty problems as occur. The club membership is open to all boys, and an increased enrollment is expected in the near future. It is to be desired that as many as possible should avail themselves of the great advantages offered.

Bernardsville, N. J., March 31, 1897.—I have been taking Hood's Sarsaparilla for some time, and it keeps me in good health. My daughter is taking it for loss of appetite, with great benefit, and it has cured one of my neighbors of nervousness. Mrs. John Croot.

Hood's Pills cure all liver ills. 25c.

ASSAULTED AND BEATEN

EX-POLICEMAN NICHOLAS KELLY ROUGHLY HANDLED FOR A GRUDGE.

Kelly's Assailant Followed Him From a Saloon and Attacked Him in the Yard—Said to Have Been John Neuman.

Bleeding from the nose and mouth, and a long gash in the back of the head, Nicholas Kelly, of West Third street, was carried to his home, last Monday, the victim of an assault by a resident of the same street. The cause of the quarrel is not exactly known but it is supposed to be a quarrel of long standing. The assailant is alleged to be John Neuman, a well-known character of the West End.

The trouble occurred in the yard in the rear of Willis's saloon on West Third street, near Plainfield avenue, last evening, but the exact circumstances of the assault are not known as the few witnesses of the start are very reticent about telling what they saw. Kelly is well known in Plainfield where he was formerly employed as a policeman and was a candidate for reappointment at the last selection of officers. He has figured in several cases in the police court. He left Willis' saloon by the side door at ten o'clock and walked out into the yard. It is alleged that Neuman followed him out of the door. There were a few words and then blows were struck. Witnesses of the affray state that Neuman struck the first blow.

Kelly was knocked to the ground at the start and attempted to rise when he was beaten and kicked by his assailant until he became insensible. His assailant finally left him apparently lifeless covered with his own blood. Quite a number had been attracted by the sounds of the conflict but it was over so quickly that no one had time to interfere and the assailant left the place without hindrance. Kelly was carried into the saloon and his wounds bathed and dressed. One eye had been almost closed by a blow while he had been cruelly beaten about the face, causing him to bleed freely from nose and mouth. There was also a gash four inches long on the back of his head.

Patrolman Saunders was summoned but arrived on the scene after the trouble was over. Kelly was conveyed to his home.

Americans are the most inventive people on earth. To them have been issued nearly 600,000 patents, or more than one-third of all the patents issued in the world. No discovery of modern years has been of greater benefit to mankind than Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, or has done more to relieve pain and suffering. J. W. Vaugn, of Oakton, Ky., says: "I have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy in my family for several years, and find it to be the best medicine I ever used for cramps in the stomach and bowels. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

Working for an Episcopal Fund.

Rev. Mr. Taylor, of Burlington, this State, who was recently appointed to look after the raising of the money for the Episcopal fund which is used for the support of the Bishop, was in Plainfield Monday calling on the parishioners of the church in this city. Mr. Taylor is a very able clergyman, and in addition to being assistant rector of St. Mary's church at Burlington, he is also chaplain of St. Mary's Hall. While in this city he was the guest of Rev. E. M. Bodman, rector of Grace P. E. church.

Mrs. A. Inveen, residing at 720 Henry street, Alton, Ill., suffered with sciatic rheumatism for over eight months. She doctored for it nearly the whole of this time, using various remedies recommended by friends, and was treated by the physicians, but received no relief. She then used one and a half bottles of Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which effected a complete cure. This is published at her request, as she wants others similarly afflicted to know what cured her. The 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, cor. Park and and North avenues.

—A new crosswalk has been laid on Somerset street at the corner of Craig place.

Pure Blood

Every thought, word and action takes vitality from the blood; every nerve, muscle, bone, organ and tissue depends on the blood for its quality and condition.

Spring Medicine Therefore pure blood is absolutely necessary to right living and healthy bodies. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the great blood purifier and the best Spring Medicine. Therefore it is the great cure for scrofula, salt rheum, humors, sores, rheumatism, catarrh, etc.; the great nervine, strength builder, appetizer, stomach tonic and regulator.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is sold by all druggists. $1, six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass. Get Hood's and only Hood's.

Hood's Pills taken after dinner aid digestion.

Sweet Peas.

Do not delay planting them, our own mixture contains only the choicest and latest varieties

LAWN & GARDEN SEEDS and FERTILIZERS.
HARDWARE and HOUSEFURNISHINGS.

A. M. GRIFFEN,

119 East Front st.

Telephone Call, 6.

W. R. CODINGTON,

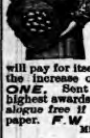
Counsellor-at-Law,

Commissioner of Deeds, Master in Chancery, Notary Public. Offices, Corner of Park avenue and Second street.

SEEDS ... FOR THE ... Garden and Farm

Vegetable and Flower Seeds. All the best sorts and varieties. Our handsomely illustrated Catalogue FREE. ROBERT H. BOE, Seedsman, 114 Chambers St., New York City.

1 28 3m



What a Lot of Eggs the hens lay when fed on Green Cut Bone. With a Mann's Green Bone Cutter will pay for itself in a short time in the increase of eggs. $5 BUYS ONE. Sent on trial. 180 highest awards received. Catalogue free if you name this paper. F. W. MANN CO., Milford, Mass.

2 3 4 5 10 11 12—7 mos.

SAVED

After years of suffering. It has at last been proven beyond a doubt that

NASALENE

Is a positive remedy for local diseases which are the result of cold and climatic changes. Sold in the United States.

CATARRH

Deafness, (caused by catarrh), are instantly relieved.

It is pleasant to use, convenient to carry. Price 50c. and $1. at all druggists.

Dr. V. P. PAGE, Yardley, Bucks Co., Pa., says: "Nasalene is very beneficial."

HUNTER MEDICAL CO.,
44 E. 21st Street, N. Y.

WANTS AND OFFERS

BY women, each with an infant or young child, situations in the country (general housework, plain cooking, etc.). Small wages expected. Railroad fare paid by Association. Apply State Charities Aid Association, 105 East Twenty Second street, New York City. 3 18 1mo

DIED.

GARDNER—At 7 Embury avenue, Ocean Grove, Tuesday, April 27, Mary J. Gardner, widow of Frank H. Gardner, aged 51 years, 7 months and 5 days.

WILSON—In this city, April 28, 1897, Margaret Wilson, aged 84 years.

CURRIN—In North Plainfield, April 29d, 1897, infant son of Thomas E. and Gertrude D. Currin, aged 6 days.

MOONEY—In North Plainfield, April 25, 1897, Charles M. Mooney, in his 2nd year.

SCOTT—In this city, Monday, April 26, 1897, H. Jared J. Scott, aged 26 years, 2 months and 6 days.

POULTRY

We keep everything for Poultry. Send for Catalogue. Poultry Lice, Fencing, Fowl, Incubators, Little Giant Brooders, Bone Cutters, Grit, Oyster Shell, Meat Scraps, Bone Meal, Charcoal, Etc. Call or let us send you our new edition of our handsome catalogue—it's worth having.

Essex Wire & Poultry Supply Co.
37 Vesey St., New York City.

1 28

—Look before you leap. Look at the quality and prices of hosiery at Peok's, and then leap to secure some of them.

JAS. M. DUNN,

Dealer in

GROCERIES, PROVISIONS, VEGETABLES, FRUITS &c

GARDEN SEEDS

fresh and carefully selected.

224 PARK AVENUE,

OPPOSITE NORTH AVENUE.

Everything usually found in a first-class grocery.

Goods delivered free of charge.

Lewis B. Coddington,

[Successor to T. J. Carey.]

Furniture & Freight Express

Office—24 W. FRONT ST.

Large Covered Vans or Trucks. Goods delivered to any part of the U. S. Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges reasonable. P. O. Box 1. Piano moving a specialty

PATENTS

CAVEATS, TRADE MARKS, COPYRIGHTS.

CAN I OBTAIN A PATENT? For a prompt answer and an honest opinion, write to MUNN & CO., who have had nearly fifty years' experience in the patent business. Communications strictly confidential. A Handbook of Information concerning Patents and how to obtain them sent free. Also a catalogue of mechanical and scientific books sent free.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice in the Scientific American, and thus are brought widely before the public without cost to the inventor. This splendid paper, issued weekly, elegantly illustrated, has by far the largest circulation of any scientific work in the world. $3 a year. Sample copies sent free.

Building Edition, monthly, $2.50 a year. Single copies, 25 cents. Every number contains beautiful plates, in colors, and photographs of new houses, with plans, enabling builders to show the latest designs and secure contracts. Address MUNN & CO., NEW YORK, 361 BROADWAY.

DIME

Savings Institution,

Of Plainfield, N. J.,

Is now receiving deposits payable on demand, with interest, allowed on all sums from $5 to $3,000.

JOHN W. MURRAY, President.
J. FRANK HUBBARD, Vice-President.
J. C. POPE, Treasurer.

Money deposited on or before January tenth will draw interest from the first.

GEORGE W. DAY,

General Auctioneer.

Sales of Personal Property solicited. P. O. Box 132, Dunellen, N. J., or address in care of Constitutionalist. Terms reasonable

Townsend's

Marble and Granite Works,

30

Somerset st., North Plainfield.

If you have not engaged your work I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not employ cheap labor. Will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and satisfaction to customers. Especially paid to agents.

I have very little small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the heaviest work of cutting, and all my time is given to the setting of all work, and look upon business as a big thing if I can get a fair profit. Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing article in my business, which will be found by dealer can sell you the same work and same quality any cheaper than I do.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

J. E. TOWNSEND, Manager.

Branch yard, Westfield, N. J.

NEW JERSEY SUPREME COURT

To Richard Garrison, defendant, or whom it may concern:

Take notice that the following writ of Scire Facias has issued out of the Supreme Court in the above cause, to wit:

NEW JERSEY, ss.

THE STATE OF NEW JERSEY to our Sheriff of our County of Somerset, GREETING:—

WHEREAS, at our Supreme Court of Judicature, holden at Trenton, before the Justices thereof, on the second Monday in the Court JOHN D. BARTINE recovered against RICHARD GARRISON, the sum of three hundred dollars and eighty-three cents damages which he had sustained by reason of the non-performance of certain promises to him, the said JOHN D. BARTINE, as he in our said Court by RICHARD GARRISON, defendant, and also thirty-one dollars and seventy-five cents for his costs and charges by him about his suit in that behalf expended, whereof the said RICHARD GARRISON is convicted, as appeareth to us of record, and whereas, on behalf of the said JOHN D. BARTINE we have been informed that all such judgment by there, and that no part thereof has been paid, and that the said costs still remain to be made, as he the Sheriff brought us to provide him a proper remedy in the premises, we, being willing that right and just should be done in the premises, command you that of the goods and chattels of the said RICHARD GARRISON you cause to be made known to the said RICHARD GARRISON that he be before us, at our Supreme Court of Judicature, at Trenton, on the first day of February next, to show if any for him there be why the said JOHN D. BARTINE should not have his aforesaid judgment, debt, damages, costs, charges and costs aforesaid, according to the form, form and effect of the said recovery, if it shall seem to appear for him so to do. And further to do thereon what our said Court, before the Justices aforesaid, shall then and there order and direct in that behalf. And have you then and there the names of those by whom you shall so cause it to be made known to him, and this writ.

WITNESS, MERCER BEASLEY, Esquire, Chief Justice, at Trenton, aforesaid, the seventeenth day of February, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-seven.

STERLE A. MERHAM, Att'y.

BENJ. F. LEE, Clerk. 3 25 5

CARNEY BROS.,

MADISON AVENUE,

Between Front and Second streets.

Tinners,
Plumbers
Gas Fitters,

Grates and bricks for all kinds of stoves can be found here at Jobbers' prices. Bring your tinware mending to us. The best tinners, the best plumbers, and the best gas-fitters in this section. We use none but the very best of materials, and our work always gives satisfaction. Keys of all kinds are made here. Tinware made to order. Ranges, brick and portable furnaces. Sanitary plumbing.

Wm. A. Woodruff,

Fire and Life

INSURANCE AGENT,

OFFICE,

corner Front St. and Park Avenue,

Plainfield, N. J.

Real Estate for Sale and Exchange. Money to Loan on Approve Security.

Sanitary Plumbing,

Brick and Portable Furnace

Gas Fitting, Tin Roofing,

Etc., Etc., Etc.

I am prepared to do any of the above branches in strictly first-class sanitary and workmanship manner.

Having associated myself with the Master Members Association of New York City, I employ none but first class mechanics and non-union men. I believe in every man running his own business, at all times and in all cases.

D. W. LITTELL,

No. 112 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J.

ALBERT HEDDEN

Livery & Boarding Stables

FOURTH ST.,

between Watchung and Park avenues.

First-class Livery. Horses boarded by week or month. Telephone call, No. 114.

A. WOLFF,

Manufacturer of

CIGARS.

And dealer in all kinds of Smoking and Chewing Tobacco and smokers' articles, has removed from 234 W. Front street, to 261 West Front street, one door east of Madison avenue and solicits the patronage of his friends and the public generally.

P. P. VanArsdale,

PIANO TUNER.

Instruments put in thorough order. Terms reasonable. Pianos and organs for sale and to let. Orders by postal, P. O. box 160, or left at Willett's shoe store, No. 107 Park avenue, will receive prompt attention. Residence 201 E. Front street, corner Elm street. 9ly

WANTED—AN IDEA Who can think of some simple thing to patent? Protect your ideas; they may bring you wealth. Write JOHN WEDDERBURN & CO., Patent Attorneys, Washington, D. C., for their $1,800 prize offer.

FRAZER AXLE GREASE Best in the World. Ask your dealer for it. Take no other. Insist upon having the genuine. If your dealer cannot supply you, send to us and we will. Manufactured by the Frazer Axle Grease Co. Chicago. New York. Boston. FOR SALE BY ALL DEALERS.

E. B. MAYNARD,

PRACTICAL

BARBER AND HAIR DRESSER.

204 PARK AVE.

Ladies' and Children's Hair Cutting done at their residence. Shaving, shampooing, etc., satisfactorily performed.

Woolston & Buckle,

PAINTERS.

Wall Papers, Painters' Supplies

141-145 North avenue.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE.

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS, DESIGNS, COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice in the

SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN.

Beautifully illustrated. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Weekly, $3.00 a year; $1.50 six months. Specimen copies and HAND BOOK ON PATENTS sent free. Address

MUNN & CO.,
361 Broadway, New York.

NEW YORK LETTER.

It is a long time since the famous Beecher-Tilton scandal case was tried in Brooklyn, and very many of the people who were conspicuous in it have passed away. Mr. Beecher was the first to die, and then Judge Nelson, who tried the case, followed him. Henry C. Bowen's was the last death recorded of the men prominently identified with it, and now Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher is dead. Moses S. Beach, who gave thousands of dollars to defend Mr. Beecher, and Augustus Storrs, who was for thirty years the treasurer of Plymouth Church, died a few years ago, and half a dozen other self-sacrificing friends of the Plymouth pastor have died since Mr. Beecher's death, among them John T. Howard. Both Mr. and Mrs. John Hutchinson, whose names will be linked always with Plymouth Church, are no more. Of Mr. Beecher's three sons, only one has continued to live in Brooklyn; Henry Beecher seemed unable to anywhere else, and she was intensely interested in the church and all that related to it, attending its social meetings regularly, and being always anxiously desirous to be included in all its entertainings. And, be it said to Dr. Abbott's praise, she was, to the last day of her presence there, constantly gratified by the deference and attention paid her by the pastor first, and then by all associated with him in the management of affairs. At first her place was a rather uncomfortable one, for she was jealous of all her rights and privileges as the wife of the former pastor, but Dr. Abbott's affability and sincerely earnest effort to make her happy resulted successfully, and to the end of her days she was the recipient of attentions from the congregation.

Theodore Tilton survives nearly all those against whom he set himself in the dark days of the scandal, but his wife and daughter will outlive him, in all probability, as he is more advanced in years than Mrs. Tilton and is no longer the robust man he was. He is living alone in Paris, doing what newspaper and other writing he can get to do, and seeing but few of the many Americans who are always at the French capital. A few of his former friends—one in particular—visit him yearly, but he is no longer of importance to those of his own generation, and the younger generation has no memories of him. His reputation alone survives. Dr. Charles Hall, who preached Mr. Beecher's funeral sermon, has joined the great majority, and his brother, Edward, and his sister, Mrs. Stowe, are gone. The Rev. Mr. Talmadge, who succeeded Mr. Beecher for a quarter of a century, still survives, but is old and feeble. Horace B. Claflin died several years ago. Stephen V. White, who, like Mr. Claflin, gave with pride and to Plymouth Church and shared its wealth with Mr. Beecher, is, as he has been for thirty-odd years, a deacon.

A little while before her death, I had a talk with Mrs. Beecher about her early days in the West, where she and her young husband were toiling along on the meagre salary of a preacher.

"About fifty years ago," she said, "we lived in Indianapolis. Those were happy days. We went there from Lawrenceburg to escape the chills, but we had chills, for malaria met us there when we arrived, shook us while we remained and went with us when we left. Our house contained only a parlor and a dining room, which was also used for a kitchen. A veranda ran along the front and in my dear husband turned up and divided into two little bedrooms—each room held a bedstead—that's all. Not a foot of space for washstand or chair, and to make the beds I reached through the windows which opened into the house proper.

"At that time my husband received $400 per year salary, which was an increase of $100 on the salary he received while at Lawrenceburg. This we considered a great increase. I remember how his desk was placed in the parlor so that he could and did watch me while I worked in the combined dining room and kitchen, and how he would read aloud to me every time he finished writing a page or two of the sermons he prepared. I would often drop my work, and sit down beside him while he read his sermons. Then we would talk over his writings, and new thoughts would come.

"I kept boarders, took in sewing, did my own housework, usually with a baby in arms, for children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Beecher, yet I would willingly go through those days again if I could. I had my husband always with me. We worked together. He painted the house by the light of a lantern, which I held. Then the wood had not claimed a share of my husband, and I was very happy. Of course I was glad of the work my husband was engaged in, but I cared nothing for the honor the world gave him. I loved my husband and always wanted him near me.

"I left Indianapolis to come to Brooklyn with my husband. I traveled East just six weeks before the first railroad was finished, and my husband came East on the first train that left Indianapolis bound East."

CYRUS THORP.

Latest Uses for Paper.

The latest use to which paper has been put is in making floors. In the form of pulp it is laid, the paper is spread upon the surface, to be covered and submitted to pressure. It behaves like plaster-of-Paris, and is said to be noiseless under the foot and particularly effective in preserving a uniform temperature. Having no joints, it presents a perfectly smooth surface.

QUEEN'S JUBILEE.

OUR ENGLISH COUSIN IS LEARNING TO ENTHUSE AMERICAN FASHION.

Great Preparations for the June Celebration in London—Windows Along the Line of Parade are Selling for Fabulous Prices—All Nations Will Honor Victoria.

It will no longer be possible to call our English cousins—the Anglo Saxon—a phlegmatic, cold hearted, unenthusiastic fellow. During the closing years of his sovereign's reign the Britisher has several times been called upon to display a degree of sympathy and an expression of feeling which he was never supposed to possess, and in each instance he has risen to the occasion with all the abandonment of the Frenchman and Italian.

It was in 1887 that the staid Britisher first learned to unloosen himself and let the real inner spirit free in big subscriptions, in animated discourse, in great crowds, in fanciful decorations and in loud huzzas.

The occasion, of course, was the golden jubilee of Her Majesty the Queen, who had reigned serene and irreproachable over her loyal subjects for fifty years. Perhaps such an event was the only one that could force the subject to forsake his usual aspect of calm self-satisfaction, coupled with a dignity of mien which makes John Bull the most unapproachable chap in Europe.

QUEEN VICTORIA.

The English, however, have changed all that and cast reserve to the winds since that memorable day, June 22, 1887, when the Queen made her triumphal progress from Buckingham Palace to Westminster Abbey. The route was from the palace up Constitution Hill to Hyde Park corner, down Piccadilly to Regent street, Waterlow Park, Pall Mall, East Cockspur street, Northumberland avenue, Thames Embankment and Bridge street to the Abbey.

Descriptions of the scenes along the route fell how far the Britishers went crazy with joy and enthusiasm. One continuous roar of approbation marked the Queen's slow progress, the lower classes, from even the slums of London, vieing with the nobility and gentry in hurrahing and bubbling over with joy. The Queen, accustomed only to the sober deference of her subjects, was at first quite taken aback, and then hugely delighted with the enthusiasm she aroused, and kept her royal head with its crown of diamonds in a constant state of nod.

This lesson in unbending once learned has not been forgotten by the London populace. Before the stirring scenes of the golden jubilee were forgotten London was again in a ferment of excitement last year over the commencement of the sixtieth year of Her Majesty's reign, and was quite prepared to repeat its jubilant antics of ten years before had not the Queen herself politely requested her subjects to retain their exuberant spirits and wait until they had completed the sixtieth year of her reign, when she will have broken the reigning record of all previous sovereigns of Great Britain, when they might let everything go.

The date of this glorious result of a long and peaceful and constant Parliament will fall on June 22 next, and already London is agog with excitement as to what shall be done by way of celebration and how it shall be done.

It is known that the great feature of the occasion will again be the royal progress through the streets and by the shops and homes of Her Majesty's loyal subjects. This time, however, the Queen will proceed to St. Paul's Cathedral to offer her thanksgivings instead of to Westminster Abbey.

Persons who own houses in Piccadilly are in a frenzy of alarm lest the procession might turn down St. James and pay the great clubs on Paul Mall the compliment of passing their portals. It is more than likely, though, that Piccadilly will be favored on the way to Regent street. But, however this may be, the prices of windows on the Strand, Fleet street and Ludgate Hill, through which the procession has to pass, are already fabulously high.

Two hundred pounds for a window six feet broad in the vicinity of St. Paul's Cathedral is thought to be quite reasonable, and the London papers are full of the sale and offers of advantageous space for sightseers on the same liberal scale.

Sites round St. Paul, especially on the west side, where the cortege will halt, are in special demand. Her Majesty is known to be so weak in her royal limbs that it is deemed impossible for her to walk up the steps which surround St. Paul's, and she is also so averse to being carried in public that it is shrewdly surmised that she will not leave her state carriage at all, and that whatever ceremonies are to be performed at St. Paul's will be in the open air by the Queen's carriage or in a canopy under which she might be driven.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

JOLLY MAY IRWIN ONE OF NEW YORK'S GREATEST FAVORITES.

Interesting Sketch of How "At Piney Ridge" Came to be Produced—Like Many Good Things, Was at First Refused.

May Irwin, the rotund humorist knows more of human nature than any ten playwrights who dish up human foibles appetizingly for us. Miss Irwin, in her knowledge of our ill-nature, gets ahead of us with surprising effect. Before we have time to laugh at her exclamation of feeling which he was never supposed to possess, and in each instance he has risen to the occasion with all the abandonment of the Frenchman and Italian.

MAY IRWIN.

We lean back and roar. We had been thinking rather sneeringly that Miss Irwin was very fat to dance and sing so skittishly. We had almost determined to pass unkind remarks about her as soon as we got home, and roast her generally. And, lo! and behold! this remarkable women knew us like a book, and got ahead of us. She cast her inferiority in our faces. She said to us, in effect, "You are nice and slim and lissome. I am awfully fat. Imagine me playing Rosalind! Ha! Ha! Ha! Think of my giant proportions wedged into a cigarette picture! He! He! He." I will not hesitate to say that May Irwin's immense vogue is due entirely to her marvellous understanding of human nature. She is perfectly aware of the fact that if she posed as a sylph, and stood in the center of the stage and warbled, "Oh, lovel I love you, my love!" in the usual stellar manner, she would awaken nothing but our derision.

In "The Widow Jones" May Irwin first won our approval by this remark: "The advantage of having a big mouth is that you can kiss and talk at the same time." The audience was aghast at her daring; then they warmed into admiration of it.

And clever May Irwin's tactics undoubtedly are—clever, tinged with a streak of genius. Dickens knew no more of human nature than does May Irwin. She has put it to us that while we think we are laughing at her expense, she is really laughing at ours.

The latest story of genius that wouldn't be crushed comes in connection with the play At Piney Ridge, recently produced here to tremendous great success. This play was written by David Higgins, and is a melodrama on somewhat old-fashioned and conventional lines. Two years ago Higgins patched up a company and put his own play on in San Francisco. It won favor, and like many a man before him he thought it must have a New York indorsement before it could be a genuine "go." This idea started him off across the continent, and in due time he was in New York. He danced attendance on Charles Frohman at the Empire Theatre, but that magnate of the dramatic muse wouldn't even see the Western author. Then he tried the other Frohman, but though he might save him the results were all. Then A. M. Palmer was tried, and he pompously said it was waste paper. Thus the entire list was run, and Higgins was disgusted and disheartened. His wife, however, held her faith in him and his play. She, somehow or other, met Hurr McIntosh, who had been engaged by Miner & Brooks, theatrical contractors, for a starring tour. The contract nominated Mr. McIntosh to secure a play that would suit his abilities and the tastes of the public, and in consequence of his services in thus finding and performing a good play the party of the first part became bound to pay the party of the second part a salary of $100 a week and 50 per cent of the profits of the said play. Mr. McIntosh, at At Piney Ridge, saw its merit, and wanted to start out with it. Knowing that the other managers had rejected it, Miner & Brooks wouldn't have the play, and McIntosh didn't take it on the road. Finally, everything else failing, Mr. Higgins determined to prove his faith by his work. He and his wife sold his two brothers, who had places in traveling companies, scraped enough money together to put the play on at the American Theater in New York, and it is one of the successes of the season. Now everybody wants it, and it is going to London. Its success chagrinned all the dramatic dictators, and Barr McIntosh is said clear through. He is now playing a part in the drama.

One of the old-time favorites is Sol Smith Russell, who holds a unique place on the American stage, a place, be it said, which one would find well high impossible to fill, for his style is peculiarly his own, and there is a quaintness and dryness about it which defies imitation. ROSE FANCHON.

A MAN WHO DRIVES TEN-IN-HAND.

The Leader is Thirty-five Feet from the Holder of the Reins.

The despangled riders who guide a score or more of horses at terrific speed about the saw-dust circus rings have been considered for generations the most skillful and picturesque horsemen in the world, an entirely new and far more difficult problem in driving has been devised and satisfactorily solved in Germany.

The feat is rendered especially difficult by combining the difficulties of driving a heavy harness abreast with that of managing a very elongated tandem. The team is made up of ten horses. The tandem is complicated by hitching four horses abreast to begin with, with a team of three horses in front of them, two immediately before them and a single horse at the apex of this curious pyramid.

This remarkable team was devised by William Wesner, of Vienna, and by him driven repeatedly. He has performed many feats in fancy driving with his team before the Emperor of Germany and the Emperor of Austria, and has received medals from both monarchs. The performance is easily the most difficult feat of horsemanship in the world.

The difficulties of controlling ten horses hitched up in this way may readily be understood. The principal difficulty is that of controlling animals driven at such a distance from the man holding the reins. The distance of the leader in this case is fully thirty-five feet from the driver's box.

The strange team is controlled with eight reins. Two reins are carried by each set of horses harnessed abreast. Mr. Wesner not only controls this complicated team by delightfully driving, but has succeeded in driving them in the form of the figure eight. This feat, the driver asserts, he can perform after eight weeks' training with any set of horses, however wild.—New York World.

A la the Matches.

As I drove up to the cabin where I expected to remain all night there were sounds of crying, and upon entering I found a woman weeping bitterly.

"Are you in trouble?" I asked.

"I reckon I be. Ef et's trouble the lose th' bes' son yo' got."

"Excuse me, madam. I had been directed to your house to stay all night, and had no intention of intruding."

"No ha'm done, stranger. I reckon when I'm weepin' Sal kin cook, an' when Sal's weepin' I kin cook. As you kin sleep in th' lof', where yo' kaint hear us ef we git tor grievin' over the boy. He's one of my sons, an' Jess died. He war th' smartest young man in th' State, I reckon. He wa'n cut out fer cuttin' timber; jess stak in th' house an' read th' almanac an' county paper, till 'e knowed 'em by hart, includin' the advertisements, war that smart. An hit's all along of th' county paper thet 'e died. He made up 'is min' 'ter be a lawyer, as th' paper sed th' bes' food fer th' brain war phosphorus, an' th' almanac sed matches were full of it, so he jess stuff put on th' ends o' th' sticks. So I jess bought 'im a hull box o' matches, an' 'e et 'em all. 'E died befo' night. We'll hev th' funeral airly in th' mornin', so's I kin go ter town an' sue th' clerks an' editors about phosphorus fer th' brain fer damages."—New York World.

Old Zimmerschalle's Observations.

A stern reality—A ship's rudder.

You may know it by the letters, E, I, O, U. Principally the last three.

The biggest fool is he who fools himself, and he does that who attempts to fool others.

It is an open question whether the brewery or the turpid liver is responsible for the most headaches.

The man who hopes to get into heaven by proxy will find himself on the wrong side of the door when it closes for the last time.

Wrong is right, right, (except this left ones) and so are the blue ones, but it is a combination of the two that calls for an explanation.

Why, no, my son, you wouldn't go to a cotton factory to get cholera any more than you would go to a vestry to get a vest or a pantry to get pants.—Dansville Breeze.

Mrs. Bancroft's Shawl.

Mrs. Bancroft, the wife of the historian, whose dying in London, went one day to an afternoon musicale at Marshall. On the way she was attracted by a display of shawls in a Regent street window, says the Illustrated American, and, stopping the cab, went into the shop and bought one, throwing it over her shoulders on her way to the social gathering. The astonished guests at the musicale were edified by the sight of the elegant Mrs. Bancroft flourishing through the drawing rooms with a placard on her back bearing the words, "Very Cheap."

The Hardships of Labor.

Pat—Ye'll have to get a new night watchman, sorr. Of'll be lavin yes Saturday.

Bank President—Why, what's the matter, Patrick?

Pat—Shure, this place is on a strate where there's so many noises Oi can't get me slape.—Boston Herald.

A Keen Observer.

"A medical journal says there are from 40,000 to 80,000 germs in an ordinary sneeze."

"Singular! That's from 40,000 to 80,000 more than there are in a round fair oyster stew."—Cleveland Plain-Dealer.

Ben Hogan, the retired pugilist, proves himself a handy man in relieving the distress prevailing among the unemployed in Chicago. He conducts a mission there, and feeds from 1,000 to 1,800 persons a d-

WASHINGTON NOTES.

It is impossible to find a member of either house of Congress who will confess that his official salary enables him to more than cover expenses. What it that they are all to enjoy after they have won the goal? First of all, the annual salary of $5,000. For Representatives add $1,200, allowed yearly for clerical services, but whose expenditure need not be accounted for to any one. For members of both houses add $125 a year for stationery, the balance to be drawn at the end of each session, if not all used. It seldom happens that more than $50 of this allowance is expended.

There is no reason why a thrifty man, even one accustomed to the niceties of life, should not save near five thousand dollars during each term in the House. It is hardly possible for a Senator to save, however, since he has to spend a great deal of money to keep up with his greater social duties in the Millionaires' Club.

The truth of the matter is that many representatives and a few Senators do manage to save a little. The richer the man in the Washington official set, the more is required of him. Over a third of the men who sat in the Senate during the last Congress economized by living at hotels or in apartment houses. One-half of the Representatives cut down expenses in the same manner. They thus avoided the unnecessary cost of maintaining a house, rented or leased, between sessions. To the millionaire member of Congress the annual official salary is merely ornamental. It is the heavy swell thing for the legislator of this brand to turn over his five thousand a year to his private secretary, who generally has his employer's private interests to attend to in addition. A number have done this already, and it is said that Hanna not only gives his secretary his whole annual salary, but a thousand in addition. Brice is said to have given his whole Senatorial salary to his secretary, while his social pile probably receives even more—some say $25,000. But good things like Cairo seldom blow into the Senate, except from Ohio.

During the past week new members of both houses have been pounced upon by swarms of young men clamoring for private secretaryships and clerkships. Under the old order of things Senators' secretaries who received six dollars a day during session would now be toppling over with misery and happiness because of the extra session.

But now, those who have become adept in the business are making wry faces and tearing their hair. The salary of the Senatorial secretary was changed to $1,200 a year, to be received by the month, and the longer the session the more frequent the appearance of sessions or adjournments. It was figured that under the new rule each secretary would receive about as much per Congress as he did before, but extra sessions were not included in this calculation.

The president of the last Senate appointed his son as his private secretary, and so did the Speaker of the Fifty-third Congress. Senators who are chairmen of committees are at liberty to appoint whom they please as clerks to the committees. The clerk to the Senate Committee on Appropriations receives $3,000 a year, and has an assistant clerk, who gets $2,200. The clerk to the Committee on Finance gets $2,500 a year. The present incumbent is the son of the chairman of the Committee on Finance.

In the last Senate altogether eight chairmen appointed their sons as their committee clerks. There is no reason why Senators' sons should not make good clerks, but it frequently happens that these committee jobs are more figureheads, functionaries bluebooked as assistant clerks or "messengers" doing all of the actual work.

There was one case, a few years back, where the son of a Senator who nominally clerk to one of the most important committees of the Senate, while in reality he was attending college in a distant city.

The Senators on the Republican side will be able to dispense a great deal of pastry if the body feels that it can be reorganized, and there will be no civil service obstacle in the passage leading to the counter. Statistics show that there are about four employes in the Senate to every Senator.

The Senate's extravagance, compared with that of the House, has long been proverbial. The House costs the government only about twice as much as the Senate, although its membership is four times as great as that of the latter. The men who look after the doors to the Senate galleries get $1,440 a year, and those who lift Senators from floor to floor in the elevators get $1,200. Messengers who fold Senate documents get $1,000 a year. The Senate firemen get $1,000 a year. The Senate locksmith and upholsterer $1,440.

On the House side salaries are much smaller, and there are fewer sinecures. House messengers do not receive more than $1,200 a year. Clerks to committees get $3,000, $2,000 or $1,000. Conductors of elevators on the House side get $1,100.

One member of the last Congress used his wife as his private secretary. Representatives of wealth, however, generally give the full $1,200 a year to young men regularly employed as secretaries.

SENATOR.

Mr. Clitboy—I don't see how it is the cyclone didn't carry away that shaky little house of yours.

Farmer Kassaw—Couldn't lift the mortgage.—New York Journal.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP

AMY BUSBY WEDS EUGENE H. LEWIS, A NEW YORK LAWYER.

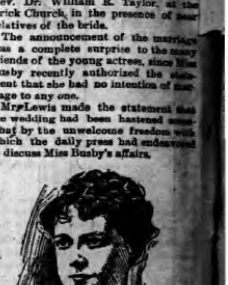
The Pretty Actress Has Quit "Secret Service" to Enter Domestic Service—My Friend from India, Her Popular Song, Was Often Thrown Down by Managers.

Pretty Amy Busby, who was the leading lady in Gillette's "Secret Service" at the Garrick Theatre, was married at her home in Rochester, to Eugene H. Lewis, a prominent New York lawyer.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. William R. Taylor, at the Brick Church, in the presence of near relatives of the bride.

The announcement of the marriage was a complete surprise to the many friends of the young actress, since Miss Busby recently authorized the statement that she had no intention of marriage to any one.

Mrs. Lewis made the statement that the wedding had been hastened somewhat by the unwelcome freedom with which the daily press had endeavored to discuss Miss Busby's affairs.



AMY BUSBY.

My Friend from India is the work of a New York newspaper man, and is one of the best money-making attractions on the road, no less than five companies now playing it. That same play was rejected by every prominent manager in New York. It was offered to the men who assume to set in judgment on things theatrical, and one after another of these persons bounced it back, knowing all about such things, they said it was not available, and they would have none of it. Now that their ruling is disproved, these same mighty minds say the public don't know enough to discriminate, and that's why they applaud the egotistical idea that they know it all. This calls to mind the fact that when John Habberton sent "Helen's Babies" to the publishers it was rejected, and was finally actually thrown into a waste basket, whence somebody fished out the manuscript and became interested, and eventually the most popular book of its time was printed. Then "Jack" Habberton should have never done a lick of more per work, was offered $100 a week by one of the New York papers. Now, the famous farce maker, had a similar experience. He wrote play after play that managers wouldn't even read. Finally he got a hearing, and then he couldn't grind them out fast enough. The men who had assumed the judgment seat would have none of him until he broke into the sacred precincts of the drama in spite of them; and all the things they had scorned became marketable, and he grew prosperous and married Caroline Miskel.

A New York theatre manager has declared war on the theatre hat—at least the old-fashioned method of locating pronunciamento on the theatre programme, by adopting a permanent method worthy of imitation by his fellow-managers.

A portion of the great lobby of the Harlem Opera House has been set aside as a theatre-hat safe deposit vault. It has been fitted up with time clock, and the hats are numbered on the reception of the most exaggerated Gainsborough, and fitted with locks to insure safety. The woman patron of the house will hereafter be expected to deposit her hat in one of these boxes, which will then be locked and the key given to the owner of the hat. When the play is over she will not only get back her hat, but will have the assistance of an obliging maid, full-length mirrors, and an unlimited number of free hairpins in getting the hat back in its proper place.

May Irwin says during a recent conversation: "I treat each houseful of people just as I would an individual. I can size up its particular kind in five minutes. Then I play to it accordingly. I never do the same line of work night by night. It is better for the company; they don't get to playing their parts like a lot of puppins, and then the audience likes it."

The report comes from the West that Francis Wilson has withheld from his allegiance to the theatrical syndicate commonly known as the Hayman & Frohman Syndicate. The syndicate includes managers and controls theatres in various cities, and is formed chiefly for the booking purposes. Mr. Wilson's booking was done by the syndicate, but he rebelled when he was asked to appear in certain theatres in Baltimore and Washington, while he preferred certain others. His intended it is said, to be independent of the syndicate, even though he will have to keep out of all the theatres which it controls, including some of the principal ones in some of the principal cities.—ROSE FANCHON.

He—"Why did Miss Oldfy take to the violin?"

She—"Because there's a bow goes with it."—Detroit Free Press.

IF I KNEW.

If I knew the box where the smiles are kept,
No matter how large the key
Or where the bolt, I would try so hard—
I would open, I know, for me.
If I knew the land and the sea, broadcast,
No matter the smiles to play,
I'd send the children's faces might hold them fast
For many and many a day.

If I knew a box that was large enough
To hold all the frowns I need,
I would like to gather them, every one,
From nursery, school and street;
And folding and holding, I'd pack them in,
Tight, tightly, in that monster key,
Before again to drop the box
In the depths of the deep, deep sea.
—Boston Transcript.

LOVER'S JEALOUSY.

"Robert," said Mr. Vyse, slowly, pushing steadily at the young clerk, "I see no doubt that it is you who have wed me."

The hot blood flooded Robert Acland's neck and face as he took in the meaning of the words.

"Sir," he cried passionately, "that you wrong me—I swear it by my soul!"

"I wish I could believe you, Robert," Mr. Vyse replied, "for I like you; but, unfortunately, appearances are too much against you. What, may I ask, were you doing at five o'clock yesterday evening in my private room? You had no right or business there."

"Nor was I," returned the young fellow proudly, drawing himself up to his full height. "I've never been in the room in my life except when you have sent me. Has any one told you that I was here last evening, sir?"

"Yes, Robert. Your comrade, Richard Starkie, assured me of it not ten minutes ago."

"Richard Starkie!" exclaimed Acland in great wonderment. "Why, he must be mad. What can have possessed him to tell so wicked a falsehood? We have always been good friends, he and I. Why should he thus try to ruin me, I wonder?"

The words, the tone, were those of innocent man. Mr. Vyse began to falter in his opinion as to Acland's guilt.

"Robert," he said more kindly, "will you swear to me before God that you are innocent?"

Raising aloft his right hand, he said: "I call the God before whose judgment throne we both shall one day stand to witness that I am guiltless," he declared solemnly. "Surely, sir, you will believe me now?"

Mr. Vyse held out his hand.

"Yes, Robert, I believe you," he said, "and I beg your pardon for having doubted you. But what Starkie's motive in traducing you has been I am at a loss to understand."

"So am I, sir," answered Acland. "His conduct is quite incomprehensible."

"Well, Robert," wound up the old gentleman, as he dismissed his clerk, "you must publish Richard Starkie's name at will treat him the same as if nothing unusual had occurred. It is my wish."

"I will try, sir. But it will be a hard task," Acland replied as he quitted the room.

Left alone, Mr. Vyse, a hale, active man of sixty-five, lay back in his chair and gave himself up to thought. But the more he puzzled over the disappearance of his cash box the farther he seemed from a solution of the mystery. It was gone, but by whom and how it was difficult to say.

Of course the news that their employer had been robbed ran like wildfire through the small community. It was left to Richard Starkie who first made public the ill news, for no official intimation of it was given to his fellow workers be dare not try to incriminate young Acland, for Acland was a favorite with his colleagues, and Starkie knew well that any remark suggestive of his guilt would be received in a stony silence—the silence of sheer disbelief.

That evening Bob Acland went to see Elsie Venner, the girl of his heart. There was no actual engagement between them, but Elsie understood quite well that Bob was only waiting for a rise of salary before asking her to be his wife. He had intended to tell her nothing about what had occurred at the office during the day, but the tear-stained pallor of her face told some thing was amiss, and taxed him with it, and after a little hesitation on his part and a little pressing on hers the whole story came out.

"I cannot think, darling," finished Bob, "what has induced Starkie to do it."

"Shall I tell you?" said Elsie demurely.

"You?"

"Yes, I. I can, you know." And then she proceeded to relate how Richard Starkie had for a few days before asked her to marry him, and, on her refusal, flown into a violent rage, not only heaping anathemas on her head, but also on Bob.

"And you believe he has attempted to lay the theft at my door to blacken my character in your eyes? What a scoundrel the fellow must be!"

"If you had seen the look on his face when he left me," replied the girl, "you would think, as I do, that he is capable of anything."

Next day Bob Acland repeated to Mr. Vyse the conversation he had held with Elsie Venner.

Meanwhile Richard Starkie was in a very unhappy frame of mind. He had lost credit, manhood left to be able to appreciate the unutterable nourishment of his own conduct. But that did not tend to make him sorry for what he had done. No, it rather embittered him still more against his rival. A maniac for gambling, inherited from his father, who had squandered a large estate during his life, dying only just in time to save himself from actual starvation, had in the first instance made him short of money.

In order to retrieve his position he had still more heavily, and again lost. Ill luck pursued him from day to day, for at last unable to meet the demands made upon him, exposure stared him in the face, and expulsion, he knew, must prompt dismissal from Mr. Vyse's service. In this dilemma he stole the cash-box, and it was only when gloating over its contents that the idea of framing Acland with the theft occurred to him.

It was Mr. Vyse's custom to go for a walk, unless the day was very wet, between the hours of twelve and one. He usually went down the high road straight out of the town for a mile, returning home over the fields and through a small plantation. A few days after the loss of the cash-box he took the accustomed path. Dot, his favorite dog, half pointer, half retriever, accompanied him. In the middle of the plantation Dot suddenly sniffed the air, then bounded in among the bushes and pointed.

"Dot! Dot!" called his master. "Here good dog, come back!"

But Dot had evidently found something and refused to be shouted off. Mr. Vyse made his way to where the dog was standing. Up sprang a fine rabbit and dashed away. Dot in hot pursuit. But Mr. Vyse heeded neither rabbit nor dog. His gaze was riveted on the place from which the rabbit had junped. Thus for a moment or two he stood, then, with a peculiar smile on his face, he wheeled round and walked briskly home.

Some three days later Richard Starkie was summoned to his chief's presence. He went, trembling, fearing he knew not what.

"Starkie," said Mr. Vyse, "you have been in my employ longer than any other of my clerks; therefore I think it only right to make you my spokesman to them. I wish you, then, to tell them on my behalf that I attribute the disappearance of my cash-box to none of them. I am quite convinced of their innocence."

Richard Starkie paled slightly. Had his scheme to ruin young Acland failed miserably after all? It seemed so. But he replied with apparent frankness.

"I am very pleased to hear that Robert Acland has cleared himself, sir."

"He has done so most completely," rejoined Mr. Vyse. "I have a very high opinion of Acland, Starkie."

"So have I, sir," he said gibly, while he inwardly cursed the man of whom he spoke thus laudingly. "It has caused me great pain to think that he could possibly be a thief."

"Is it possible that this man is innocent after all?" wondered Mr. Vyse. "Can his hypocrisy be simply astounding. But I shall soon know the truth."

"Just one thing more," continued Mr. Vyse, looking straight into his clerk's eyes, which met his own unflinchingly, "and on his reply depends my verdict. In the theft of my cash-box I've sustained a far greater loss than any one but myself is aware of. It is a box of peculiar construction—in fact, it had a false bottom, and in that false bottom, Starkie, I was wont to place the value of seven hundred pounds. I had placed them there only two days before I was robbed."

"Of course, you have the numbers, sir?"

"Why, yes, I have the numbers, Starkie, but an expert thief—and I imagine from the coolness and audacity of the robbery that I have been the victim of one—finds no difficulty in changing stolen paper. He knows where to take it and obtain a good price."

When Richard Starkie went back to his old colleagues to give them their employer's message, his breast was torn by two emotions—baffled spite and greed of further gold.

"I will destroy him yet," he thought of Bob Acland. "He's escaped me for a while, but it shall not be for long. Elsie Venner shall never be his wife."

"Poor old buffer"—his mind reverting to the man whose presence he had just left—"you little guessed that in the box you confided to me you were telling the thief how to further enrich himself! Well, five hundred quids will come in very handy just now, and, I suppose, the commission would not be more than two hundred pounds. Mark's a notified thief, and if I can get him and I could pay him and still have a nice little balance in hand. You're in luck's way, Dick, my boy. Fortune favors you."

* * * *

Bending down amid the bramble and brushwood which formed the undergrowth of a small plantation, groping among the briars and the grass, Richard Starkie was searching for the cash-box.

"I know I flung it somewhere here," he muttered fiercely. "Where can the thing be? Ah," and his hand at last alighted on some metal, "here you are! I was just beginning to think that jadish fortune had served me a scurvy trick. Well," clasping the box to his bosom, "you're a pretty friend to me, and I'll treat you as lightly as possible. Come, let's away—merciful powers, what's that?"

Four stalwart arms had seized him from behind and were holding him with a vise-like grip, and before he could utter a word or realize what was really taking place, he felt the cold steel on his wrists and realized that he was a prisoner, a detected thief who had blindly fallen into a skilfully laid trap.—Tid-Bits.

He Named the Mule.

"I reckons," said the old colored man, "dat I better change de name o' dat mule." "It doesn't make much difference what you call a mule, does it?" "No, but I likes ter hab it somethin' 'propriate. Did you ebber hyah tell 'bout suhcumstances ober which you had no control?" "Yes." "Well, dat's what I'se gwinter call 'im; 'Suhcumstances?'"—Washington Star.

NANSEN'S ENDURANCE.

Seemingly a Man of Iron Constitution and Will to Win as a Arctic Explorer.

Dr. Nansen seems to have been born and bred for arctic exploration. The strength and hardihood which were his by birth were developed and confirmed by the robust austerity of his early training. One reads of his habit of swimming in the evening in the coldest pools in the Frogner River that ran by the door of his father's house, and is no less astonished at the story of his plunge in the sea in pursuit of his kayaks in the extreme north, and of his endurance of the various cold he got in fights with bears and walruses. The man who put his wet and frozen foot-coverings in his bosom to thaw out and dry at night while he slept with his companion in a bag was an extraordinarily tough person, with an astonishing physique hardened by Spartan exercises. In his teens, he says, he used to go off on lonely expeditions in the great Frogner woods, and be gone alone for weeks at a time. "I disliked," he says, "to have any equipment for my expedition. A rifle, a cartridge or two, a crust of bread, and broiled my fish on the embers. I loved to live like Robinson Crusoe there in the wilderness."

John Reid's Office Boy.

When John C. Reid was managing editor of the New York Times he had an office boy whose nerve was colossal. One day the boy entertained in the reception room a waiting visitor whose patronizing way nettled him. All kinds of questions were fired at him, and, finally, he was asked how much he earned a week. His reply was "$50."

At that moment the visitor was summoned by Reid, to whom he related his experience with an office boy who said he made $50 a week.

Reid rang bell. Enter boy.

"Did you tell this gentleman that you made $50 a week here?"

"I did not tell him any such thing."

"You heard what the gentleman said. "You mean to say you didn't tell me a moment or two ago that you made $50 a week?"

"Never said any such thing."

"Why, you little liar! You—"

"What did you tell the gentleman?" put in Reid.

"I told him I earned $50 a week, but you pay me only $3."

When the visitor had taken leave of the office, Reid raised the boy's salary to $5.—New York Press.

Mr. Toole's Joke.

Mr. Toole, the English comedian, whose love of a joke is known to everybody, went recently into a barber's shop to get shaved, and, finding the barber out, he determined to have a little fun before his return. So he took off his coat, put on a thinner one and quietly waited for a customer. An old gentleman came in soon.

"Shave, sir?" said our pretended barber.

The old gentleman took a chair, and Toole began to lather, expecting every moment the barber would appear.

Five minutes passed, and no barber. Five more still no barber. The joker began to get desperate, and conceived a bright idea. Putting up his brush, he quickly changed his coat again, took his hat, and was about to quietly slip out behind the gentleman's back, when that worthy turned his head and exclaimed,—

"Here, sir, aren't you going to shave me?"

"No, sir," promptly replied Toole. "The fact is, we only lather here, sir. They shave four doors below."

Taking Him Down.

Mr. Irving tells a good story of his early days—albeit at his own expense. He was playing "Hamlet" one evening when he observed in the front row of the pit, an old lady dissolved in tears. Highly flattered, he sent an attendant to say that he would like to see her after the performance. When they met, Mr. Irving was graciously pleased itself.

"Madame," he said, "I perceive that my acting moved you?"

"It did that, sir," said the old woman. "You see, sir, I've got a young son myself play-acting somewhere up in the North, and it broke me all up to think that maybe he wasn't no better at it than you, sir."

Two Women Ph. D's.

Two American women, Miss Alice Luce, of Maine, and Miss Ida J. Hyde, of Chicago, have conferred a benefit upon their sisters by opening another foreign university to them. They have recently received the degree of Ph. D., each magnum cum laude, from the University of Heidelberg.—American Woman's Home Journal.

A Palatable Medicine.

A lady has been lecturing in Boston in favor of a larger consumption of onions, taking as a motto the saying: "Eat onions in May, and all the year after physicians may play." It is a simple remedy, and the lecturer advised its use, through all the other months, regardless of odoriferous complications.—New Haven Union.

Doubtless.

Jumpuppe—Dear me! That medicine makes me feel horrible.

Mrs. Jumpuppe—Don't think of it, dear. Get it off your mind.

Jumpuppe—I think it would make me feel more comfortable to get it off my stomach.—Truth.

Ink and Vinegar from Banana Peel.

A really indelible ink, and a kind of vinegar can be produced from the juices contained in the banana peel. The fibre of the peel, it is said, can also be utilised in making cloth of great strength and remarkable beauty.

WAS ON THE MONITOR

HANS ANDERSON, SOLE SURVIVOR OF A HISTORIC CONFLICT.

The Veteran Sailor Gives a New and Interesting Version of the Fight With the Famous Confederate Boat Merrimac Near Hampton Roads.

Hans Anderson, the last survivor of the fighting volunteer crew of the Monitor in its memorable battle with the Merrimac, was born in the western part of Sweden in 1823, and comes from a seafaring line of ancestors. In 1847, just fifty years ago, he arrived in America, and sailed hence all over the world on board the fine American ships of that period. In 1856 Anderson joined the American navy, serving on board the frigates Falmouth and Congress. How he came to be one of the crew of the Monitor he tells himself in an interesting way, all the more interesting, perhaps, because his account of the battle differs somewhat from the official report. As Anderson is the only surviving witness of the battle—Commodore Worden having been taken away early in the fight on account of his injuries—his recollections are certainly of some historical value.

HANS ANDERSON.

"I came up to New York on the frigate Congress just before Christmas, 1861," says Anderson. "I heard that the Monitor was ready to go to sea, but I knew none of her crew. I went at once to the rendezvous in Cherry street and offered myself as one of the volunteer crew. I was accepted, and the next day we started down the East River from the navy-yard. The piers all the way round to Castle Garden were black with people, who cheered and shouted as we passed them by. On Saturday night we arrived at Hampton Roads, and a little tug steamed out and asked, 'What little thing is that?' We answered, 'It is the United States Monitor,' and they had soon reason to remember us. The Minnesota was aground, and we went alongside of her until the next morning. We had nothing to eat since leaving Brooklyn navy-yard, for all our food and some bread, and we did not get a square meal until we were through with the Merrimac.

"In the morning the Merrimac was seen. I was on deck looking at her through a spy glass when the officer of the deck. I was the only one who had ever seen the Merrimac before and told the officer that it was the boat they wanted, but at first he rather scouted the idea. 'Why, she looks like the roof of a house,' he said to me. I told him that was just what she did look like. Well, he sent me to report to Lieutenant Worden. The lieutenant came on deck and after the Merrimac had maneuvered some and sent a shot at the Monitor which fell too short for her to get the greatest trial of her life, as the Emperor is always advising her what to do, and insists upon her taking an immense amount of exercise. Her hostess, Madame, has still a shapely figure, and she is less stout than she was a year ago.

The Dog Had Diphtheria.

Miss Grace Kingsland, of Franklin, was attacked with virulent diphtheria, about a week afterward two of the younger children were taken ill with it, and about the same time a pet dog belonging to the family began to act strangely, and it was said, jokingly, "guessed it got the diphtheria, too." Finally the symptoms became so marked that Dr. Philhower, who was attending the sick children, was told about the actions of the dog. The doctor examined the dog's throat, and discovered that the animal was really suffering from the disease in a malignant form.

It was a mystery as to how the dog contracted the disease, until it was ascertained that while Miss Grace was ill ill the dog was sneaked into the room unknown to the family and had eaten some food from a plate that had been left by Miss Kingsland.—New York Tribune.

A Woman Motorman.

Miss Hattie K. Miller, of Santa Barbara, Cal., is probably the only woman in the world earning her living as a motorman on an electric car. When electric streetcars were first introduced in Santa Barbara, she made a theoretical study of the principles on which they were operated. When she applied for the situation she answered all the requirements so well that she was appointed without hesitation.—New York Tribune.

Cat With Two Tails.

A genuine two-tailed cat is owned by Groton by Dan O'Neil. The cat attracts great attention, as he carried one tail curved over her back straight in the air and the other dragging the floor.

It is not a cat of nine tails, but it comes closer to it than other cats.—New York World.

COWBOY'S LETTER.

Which Revealed a Strange Romance in Real Life.

A Western doctor had under his care in the hospital a cowboy from one of the ranges of northern Montana, who, when he became convalescent, one day walked into the doctor's house to thank him for his services and to say good-bye, says the Philadelphia Times. As he was about to leave the office, the cowboy remarked:

"Doctor, I understand that you are soon to set off on a trip to the other side of the water, and that before you return you intend to visit Scotland. If such is the case, I should like to give you a letter to some friends of mine."

The doctor replied that he did intend to visit Scotland, and that he should be pleased to take charge of the letter.

Thereupon the cowboy sat down, wrote a brief letter, sealed it up, and addressed the envelope to—let us say—the "Duke of Craige" at a castle in Scotland. When he handed it to the doctor, that gentleman looked at the address rather dubiously, and then said, in a voice that was possibly a little cold:

"Is that gentleman an acquaintance of yours?"

"Well, yes," replied the ranch-rider. "I think it quite probable he will remember me. He is my father, and I shall be glad to have you call on him and tell him I'm getting along all right."

DOGS AT THE FUNERAL.

They Were the Only Creatures that Mr. Hamilton Wanted There.

Dogs were the only mourners at the funeral of the late Henry Hamilton, of England.

Little was known of Hamilton by his neighbors except that he seemed fond of hunting. Whenever he was not at any other he was always accompanied by some of his pack of fine dogs. By his will the bulk of his property goes to a distant cousin, but he will also provides for all of his dogs.

It was stipulated in the will that no one should follow his body to the grave except his own pack of hounds and the footmen who were to keep them in line.

The country people hearing of the strange funeral about to take place, flocked to the roadside leading from the Hamilton mansion to the cemetery. There was respectful curiosity on the faces of them all as the odd spectacle drew near of four black horses drawing a plain black hearse, which in turn was followed by a double file of fifty black foxhounds, walking quietly side by side, the rear brought up by two liveried footmen, each provided with a whip in the event of any of the animals proving unruly.

Hamilton was buried in a quiet corner of his private property, where were several monuments to favorite hounds who had died before him.—New York Journal.

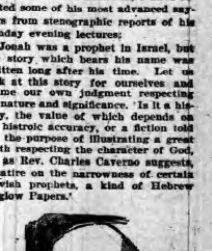
A Trial to the German Empress.

The Gentlewoman" says that almost all the morning dresses worn by the German Empress are made at Munich. Herr Meijer, has this way been able to economize greatly. When in private she likes to be dressed as simply as possible, and her favorite costume is a serge skirt with a pretty blouse and a simple straw hat. She has, however, a great trial, and that is a tendency to grow stout. For her sex she would not mind, but the Emperor has a horror of having a fat wife, and the poor Empress is obliged to diet herself and to wear clothes that are too tight for her. This is said to be the greatest trial of her life, as the Emperor is always advising her what to do, and insists upon her taking an immense amount of exercise. Herr Meijer, however, has still a shapely figure, and she is less stout than she was a year ago.

NEW YORK LETTER.

Dr. Abbott of Beecher's church, Brooklyn, looks like the Bible pictures of some of the patriarchs. He is a scholar of the first magnitude and a devout Christian gentleman, beloved by the Plymouth congregation. His recent utterances have caused much unfavorable comment by his brethren of the cloth, and to give your readers an opportunity to judge whether or not the criticisms are deserved, I have selected some of his most advanced sayings from stenographic reports of his Sunday evening lectures:

"Jonah was a prophet in Israel, but the story which bears his name was written long after his time. Let us look at this story for ourselves and frame our own judgment respecting its nature and significance. Is it a history, the value of which depends on its historic accuracy, or a fiction told for the purpose of illustrating a great truth respecting the character of God, as Rev. Charles Caverno suggests, in spite of the narrowness of certain Jewish prophets, a kind of Hebrew Pilgrim Papers.'



DR. LYMAN ABBOTT.

"A prophet of the olden time is called by Jehovah to deliver a message to a heathen people. He does not believe in heathen people, and he will not go to a heathen city. So he tries to flee away from Jehovah by getting out of Jehovah's province of Palestine. He comes to Tarshish, gets on board a ship, thinks himself safely out of Jehovah's jurisdiction, and calmly goes to sleep. Presently a terrific storm rises. The captain summons Jonah to join with the heathen sailors in prayer to their respective gods. They are sure that the gods are angry, cast lots, the lot falls on Jonah, and he confesses.

"I am fleeing from my God," he says; "it is my fault." "What shall I do?" "Throw me into the sea; that will appease the wrath of God, and He will let you go free."

The sailors are reluctant, take to the oars and keep rowing with redoubled vigor, but all in vain. At last they put to their cry to Jehovah. 'Oh, God!' they cry, 'if we are doing wrong in taking the life of an innocent man lay it not to our charge,' and then they sing the quiescence of people into the sea. The storm instantly ceases. But the Lord has specially provided a great fish for this contingency—there is no reason to call him a whale, except that a whale is a great fish—provided as a prison for Jonah, and for the penitent prophet, who has shown his penitence by his willingness to suffer death for his apostasy. The great fish swallows Jonah, and in its belly he composes a psalm.

"The unknown writer of the story of Jonah wrote this story, by its quaint humor, by its satire of a narrow prophet, by its splendid illustration of the wideness of the mercy and grace of God, to illustrate what only later should be distinctly announced—that God is more than judge, more than king—be the Father and Saviour of the whole human race.

"But Dr. Abbott defined his own position in his answers to a number of questions that were submitted to him at his last service:

"First—Do you believe that the Bible was intended to be an authority on any matters except our relations with God? Is it an authority in astronomy, for example?

"I regard the Bible is an authority concerning our relations with our fellow men. I do not believe that it is an authority on questions of science."

"Second—Do all Christian scholars regard a belief in the verbal inspiration of the Bible a necessity?

"No; a large and influential body of Christian scholars of orthodox standing do not believe in what is called the verbal inspiration of the Bible."

"Third—Is there any large number among Biblical scholars who believe as you do about the Book of Jehovah, the Book of Job and the Songs of Solomon?

"Yes, substantially all scholars who believe in applying to the interpretation of the Bible the canons of literary criticism."

"Fourth—Can a man be a Christian who rejects one part of the chronology of the events of the Bible?

"I think he can; to be a Christian is to be a believer in Christ as the divine Saviour of the world and to be a follower of Him in spirit and in conduct, not to entertain opinions about chronology or science."

"I believe my views are in substantial accord with those scholars to whom I have referred in question No. 3. These views will be found in two series of articles written by a number of English and American Biblical scholars, published in the Outlook last year. One series, entitled "The Bible as Literature" has been republished in book form, and the other entitled "The Bible and the Child," is also issued in book form. To these volumes I refer you to a fuller answer to the questions you ask me.

CYRUS THORP.

THE CITY'S POSITION.

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1.

now awaiting the Governor's approval, repeals the act first cited in this paragraph. Should the Governor fail to approve the repealer it will be necessary for the city to provide for a charter election to be held on the second Tuesday of April, 1898. It will also be important, in that case, to secure additional legislation before the election is held, so as to provide at what time the officers to be then elected to the Common Council or other positions shall enter upon the discharge of their respective duties. If the Governor should approve the repealer above referred to, the City Charter will then govern the time for holding municipal elections in this city as heretofore, unless the Common Council shall deem it wise to avail of an act approved in 1892, (Gen. St. p. 499, pl. 197,) whereby the Council has authority to change the date of the charter or municipal election to the second Tuesday of April.

Annexed to this communication is a copy of the act which was passed for the relief of this city.

There are a number of other laws on the Statute Books which may may affect us, but the above are the most important and have been called to my attention by the Corporation Counsel, and in any important matter he should be consulted before taking definite action.

Holding myself in readiness to co-operate with your Honorable Body in any manner needful for the best interests of the city, I have the honor to be your obedient servant,

Charles J. Fisk, Mayor.

Dated April 27th, 1897.

SPORTS

Sun Rises 5:08 a. m.
Sun Sets: 6:52 p. m.
Bicycle lanterns must be lighted at 7:52 p. m.

GOSSIP OF THE CYCLERS.

ITEMS INTERESTING TO DEVOTEES OF THE STEEL STEEDS.

The Popular Exercise Provides Incidents and Expressions That are of Especial Moment When Wheeling is the Rage.

Miss Ella Boice, of Dunellen, has purchased a Spalding wheel from Rogers, the North avenue cycle dealer.

Ralph Tolles, of Westervelt avenue, temporarily lost his wheel yesterday. It was returned to him soon afterward by the person who borrowed it.

Staten Island with its many good roads has been a favorite resort for the wheelmen of New York and Brooklyn but the difficulties of reaching it from this part of New Jersey has heretofore prevented the majority of the wheelmen of Plainfield and vicinity from visiting it. The authorities of Middlesex county are now preparing to open that district to the riders of Jersey by the building of a good macadam road from Perth Amboy to Metuchen to connect with the present system of good roads Perth Amboy is just across the Staten Island Sound from Tottenville, Staten Island, one end of the fine system of roads that cover that island, and a ferry boat connects to two places.

Up to this time, the road between Perth Amboy and Metuchen has been very sandy and the only path for bicycles was a narrow sidepath, which was never in particularly good condition. Only a very good rider cared to venture there and to such the ride offered very little attraction. With a good macadamized road there all would be different. Plainfielders would take a spin to Perth as they now go to New Brunswick or Springfield, for Perth Amboy is only twelve miles from this city, and there would be the special attraction in the Raritan river which is of sufficient width there to make sailing delightful. Boynton Beach has been a favorite resort for cyclists who wished to enjoy the pleasures of sailing and swimming but with a good road Perth Amboy would be a strong rival to Boynton Beach. Then it would open up Staten Island with its excellent roads and cyclists who are now at a loss for some new ride would have plenty of chances.

About three miles of the road, beginning at Perth Amboy, has been torn up ready for the new surface while the hills are being graded. The rest of the road will be started at once and it is planned to finish the work and have the road in good condition this spring, if possible.

INS AND OUTS.

The students at Leal's School have two nines in the field this season, a first and a second. The first team played with the High School team and won by one run. Since then Captain Bert Stevenson has been trying to schedule games with various school nine in the vicinity, but without success. A challenge was sent to the Rutgers Preparatory School, but they had their schedule complete for the season. Such was the reply Stevenson received yesterday from the captain of the Pennington Institute nine.

The Plainfield Athletic Club will open its base ball season next Saturday afternoon at Whitestone, L. I., playing against the strong Hart Athletic Association of that place. The Hart Athletic Association has one of strongest semi-professional teams in the metropolitan district but the Plainfield boys are confident they will make a good showing, and expect to win the game. Winn and Erickson will be the battery for the P. A. C. The rest of the team will be about as follows: Symons, 1 b.; Cooney or Freeman, 2 b.; Firstbrook, 3 b; Moran, s. s.; Fleming, l. f.; Case, c. f.; Dederick, r. f. Miner, extra.

Two games in the baseball league of the New Jersey Interscholastic Athletic Association have been played so far this season. The schedule for the rest is as follows:

Saturday, May 1st, Plainfield High School vs. Pingry's School, at Plainfield; Newark Academy vs. Montclair High School, at Newark; Wednesday, May 5th, Stevens vs. High, at Plainfield; Friday, May 7th, Montclair High vs. Stevens, at Hoboken; Saturday, May 8th, Plainfield High vs. East Orange High, at Plainfield; Monday, May 10th, Newark Academy vs. Pingry's, at Elizabeth; Wednesday, May 12th, Pingry vs. East Orange High, at Elizabeth; Stevens vs. Newark Academy, at Hoboken; Saturday, May 15th, Montclair High vs. Pingry's at Montclair; Wednesday, May 19th, East Orange High vs. Stevens at Hoboken; Wednesday, May 26th, East Orange High vs. Newark Academy, at East Orange; Saturday, May 29th, Montclair High vs. Plainfield High, at Montclair.

All the Saturday games will be played in the morning and the week day games in the afternoon. A glance at the schedule shows that it was arranged rather poorly, for all the games that the Plainfield High School team plays at home are crowded in the short space of eight days when they might have very advantageously been stretched over a period of three weeks to the great advantage of the local players. The High School boys expect to make enough money from these games to partially pay the expenses of the team, but they cannot expect good support when the games are rushed together in such a fashion. It is not the fault of the local management, however, that such a schedule was made, but of the baseball committee of the state association.

AMONG THE STEPPERS.

Mr. Right, who has recently purchased the Webb King farm on the road leading from Dog Corner to Paris avenue, it is understood, will go into the breeding of trotters quite extensively, and his many friends wish him every success in his new venture and hope he may be able to raise the two minute trotter.

North Plainfield will not have to take a back seat this year, as Nute Smalley has two crack-a-jacks, in Ned Norton, 2:12, (the boss of the snow path) and his fast-pacing mare that he bought at the Alcott sale last fall; while his brother Will has another pacer that is reported to be very fast. These, with other good ones owned by Mr. Crusen and the Messrs Emmons, make the road riders of the borough a very strong brigade.

The horses that belong to Mr. Maltby, of Plainfield avenue, are all in good condition and are receiving their early work over the home track.

R. A. Fairburn's handsome stallion, Baron Rose, 2:30¼, is very fine, and Westfield can claim the handsomest horse in the state. This horse is booked to go a race against Sidmut, Mr. Johnson's stallion, which will probably take place in the near future, as John Osborne is ready with Sidmut at any time.

Douglas Darby's candidate for the coming club races will probably be a little short of work to start up just yet on account of Mr. Darby's recent illness, but now that he is out and about again he will probably get him in shape as soon as possible.

James Arkell, of Westfield, has decided to drive his fast pacer, Roger, on the road.

Myers Hodge, of Finderne, who owns the very promising mare, Alcetta, by Robert M, one of the best sons of the great Alcyone, will probably be at the track on Tuesday to see the sport.

Morris Higgins, of South Plainfield, still has his fast mare, Minnie B, and is preparing her for the coming events.

WHIST.

At the suggestion of T. E. Otis, the president of the New Jersey Whist Association, the Woman's Whist Club, of Newark, was organized Wednesday. Officers and committees were elected. A delegation was appointed to represent the club in the Woman's Whist Congress at Philadelphia. Representatives of whist clubs in Orange, Rutherford and East Orange, were present at Wednesday's meeting and promised to help organize a State association.

Miss Gertrude Page, of New York State, is the guest of Plainfield friends.

900 Drops

CASTORIA

A Vegetable Preparation for Assimilating the Food and Regulating the Stomachs and Bowels of

INFANTS CHILDREN

Promotes Digestion, Cheerfulness and Rest. Contains neither Opium, Morphine nor Mineral. NOT NARCOTIC.

Recipe of Old Dr SAMUEL PITCHER
Pumpkin Seed
Alx. Senna
Rochelle Salts
Anise Seed
Peppermint
Bi Carb Soda
Worm Seed
Clarified Sugar
Wintergreen Flavor

A perfect Remedy for Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea, Worms, Convulsions, Feverishness and LOSS OF SLEEP.

Fac Simile Signature of
Chas. H. Fletcher.
NEW YORK.

At 6 months old
35 DOSES – 35 CENTS

EXACT COPY OF WRAPPER.

SEE THAT THE FAC-SIMILE SIGNATURE —OF— Chas. H. Fletcher IS ON THE WRAPPER OF EVERY BOTTLE OF CASTORIA

Castoria is put up in one-size bottle only. It is not sold in bulk. Don't allow anyone to sell you anything else on the plea or promise that it is "just as good" and "will answer every purpose." See that you get C-A-S-T-O-R-I-A.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

GAME COMMISSIONERS APPEAL.

Find Judge Fort's Decision in the Newark Dealer's Case Unsatisfactory.

The Fish and Game Commissioners of New Jersey are satisfied that as long as there is a market for game out of season in the State infractions of the game laws will continue, and have therefore decided to appeal from the recent decision of J. Frank Fort, of Newark, that it is legal to bring game from other States and sell it during the closed season.

The old statute prohibited the unlawful possession of game, which was construed to mean game shot out of season in New Jersey, but the more recent law makes mere possession illegal. Under it wardens throughout the State were instructed that all possession of game must cease thirty days after the close of the season.

A Newark dealer was fined $40 and costs for such possession, but on appeal to Judge Fort, in the Court of Common Pleas, the decision was reversed, the Court declaring that dealers had the right to purchase game outside the State and do as they pleased with it.

Prosecutor Eugene Emley, of Passaic county, has been engaged to carry the case to the Supreme Court on certiorari, and it will probably be argued before Judge Dixon at Paterson, within a few days.

TOOK THE WRONG HARNESS.

It Belonged to City Judge DeMeza, and Was Afterwards Returned.

City Judge DeMeza's double set of harness took a trip, Sunday, which its owner did not intend it to take. The harness was a new set valued at $65, and it was being cleaned and put in order for use at the stable. After being cleaned, it was hung up on a hook on the wall. A man drove down from Somerville, Sunday, and put his team in the stable where the Judge's harness was. The horses were looked after and fed and then, in the afternoon, the Somervillian prepared to return home.

He went to the stable and had his horses harnessed up. Now it happened that his set of harness had been hung on a hook next to that where the Judge's hung, and in the hurry and excitement the wrong harness was put on the Somerville man's horses, and he drove away.

As the harness remaining was an *old set and not as nice as that one be*longing to the Judge, it was supposed that someone had appropriated the Judge's property, and there promised to be plenty of excitement, but the identity of the man was discovered, and he gladly restored the harness to its rightful owner.

Security Assured.

The Dime Savings Institution has just completed the fencing off of their portion of the room, occupied jointly by them and J. C. Pope & Co., insurance agents. The safes of the institution are now perfectly secured against loss by theft and the officers and depositors are also to be congratulated on the improved appearance of the place.

—The sum of $200 was realized as profit from the reception given recently by the Continental Chapter, Daughters American Revolution, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. McCutchen.

A GOVERNMENT GOOD ROAD.

New Brunswick Likely to Have an Avenue Paved at Slight Expense.

A lesson in road building is about to be given at New Brunswick by the United States Government, providing that municipality will consent to have College avenue paved at a nominal cost to the taxpayers.

Not many persons are aware that in connection with the Department of Agriculture there is a Good Roads Division, the officers of which are empowered by Congress to give practical demonstrations of the art of highway construction at experiment stations in various States. Prof. E. B. Voorhees, director of the State Experiment Station, and Dr. Austin Scott, of Rutgers College, proceeded to lay wires to have Uncle Sam's first demonstration in road building take place there. Hence the application of New Brunswick was the first to be received at Washington.

Professor Voorhees was notified by the Department of Agriculture that his request would be granted provided the city consented to supply labor and material. The Government was to furnish stone crushers, carts, rollers and—most important of all—brakes. The Professor's first intention was to have the model road laid out at the Rutgers College farm, for the benefit of the students, but there were no funds available for this project, so he picked out College avenue as the most appropriate site for the experiment. The Board of Aldermen are expected to act upon this proposition at their next meeting As they have already appropriated $4,000 to pave College avenue, and as they will get a better road for only one-third of the expense by availing themselves of the Government's offer, they are not likely to raise any obstruction to the plan.

E. G. Harrison, special agent of the Good Roads Division of the Department of Agriculture, arrived in New Brunswick on Saturday to lay the matter before the City Fathers. The Government undertaking is to lay from half a mile to a mile of macadam, sixteen feet wide and eight inches deep. But College avenue is so wide that it remains to be seen how the work will be equalized. Mr. Harrison recommends that the thoroughfare be narrowed and the sidewalks extended, by which, he contends, the general effect would not be marred in the least.

Lost One Finger.

John Owen, of South Second street, an employe at the Pond Tool Works, had two fingers crushed Monday afternoon while at work on some heavy machinery. He went to Muhlenberg Hospital where he received proper treatment. He was obliged to have one finger amputated owing to the fact that it was so badly crushed. Dr. Probasco performed the operation. Owen was able to leave the hospital soon afterward, and in a few days he will be able to return to work.

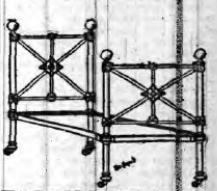
A Horse Thirty Years Old.

One of the oldest horses in the city, the property of Dr. Bushmore, of Park avenue, was found dead in its stall one morning last week. The horse was over thirty years old and had outlived its usefulness, but the Doctor remembered the good services of the animal in the past and kept and fed the horse until it died.

Amos H. Van Horn, Ltd

Look for BOTH Low Prices & Credit

when buying here—we COMBINE the two—yet prices as AS LOW as those of any "CASH HOUSE." To PROVE that we SELL AS WE ADVERTISE we URGE that you bring this ad. WITH you.



White Enamel Beds—Exactly like $5 cut $3.25. Full line Brass and Enamel Beds—dressers to match.

50 kinds of Parlor Suits—overstuffed suits in damask, $20.50. Other suits $47.50.

A Carriage like this, $3.75. Other kinds as many as 25—all NEW stock; bright and pretty.

Carpets

Match these prices if you can:

Axminsters, $1.10
Moquettes, 90c
Velvets, 75c
Body Brussels, 90c
Tapestry, 55c
All-wool Ingrains, 55c
Ingrains, 29c
Mattings, 10c

Oak Extension Tables—same as above, $3.95. You can't find a better stock—all the new designs—as high as $20.

Above Woven Wire Spring, $1.25

This Couch, corduroy covered, $5.45

Refrigerators

Our Spring line's all made up—a leader, stout wood Refrigerators, $4.35.

AMOS H. VAN HORN, Ltd.

73 Market St. Near Plane Street NEWARK, N. J.

CASH OR CREDIT. Telephone 280—Goods Delivered Free

STILLMAN MUSIC HALL

GEORGE E. BOGERS..... Lessee. | GEORGE H. WILLET..... Manager

4 NIGHTS 4

The beautiful and talented American actress

Miss Loraine Hollis,

Supported by a Metropolitan Company of recognized merit.

REPERTOIRE:

Wednesday Night, April 28, "Mr. Barnes, of New York,"
Thursday Night, April 29, "Forget-Me-Not."
Friday Night, April 30, "The Arabian Nights."
Saturday Night, May 1, "The Tigress."

Special Scenery for each production.

Prices 30c, 20c and 10c.

Wheelmen Aroused.

In view of the fact that there have been so many robberies of late in which a wheelman has figured, Chief of Police Tenny, of Elizabeth, has issued an order to the effect that all wheelmen out after 1 a. m. may be stopped by the police and compelled to answer any questions put by the officer. The wheelmen are incensed over the order, and there is likely to be much trouble ahead.

Church Trustees Officers.

The Board of Trustees of the Congregational church met for organization, Sunday morning, at the close of the morning service. George W. Rockfellow was elected president and Joseph E. Morse secretary.

ELY'S CREAM BALM is a positive cure. Apply into the nostrils. It is quickly absorbed. 50 cents at Druggists or by mail; sample 10c. by mail. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren St., New York City.

—The regular meeting of the Plainfield McAll Auxiliary will be held in the Public Library on Wednesday morning, May 5th, at 11 o'clock.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL XXX. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, MAY 6, 1897. NO. 18

"Support the Constitution, Which is the Cement of the Union, as Well in Its Limitations as in Its Authorities."—Madison.

CONVENTION CONTINUED

PROCEEDINGS OF THE EPISCOPAL DIOCESAN CONVENTION.

Bishop Scarborough Made His Annual Address—Interesting Reports Made—The Services Last Tuesday Evening.

The Episcopal Diocesan Convention, which opened Tuesday morning in Grace church, continued its session in the afternoon. The afternoon session opened at 2:30, Bishop Scarborough presiding.

The first item of business was the nominations for committees and trustees. This occupied the first half-hour, and was followed by the Bishop's annual address. The earnest words of the venerable and well beloved Bishop were listened to with the closest attention.

He began by reviewing the events which had taken place during the year since the last meeting of the Diocese, speaking of the suffering caused by the business depression, the excitement of presidential election, the trouble between Greece and Turkey, and the death of men well known in ecclesiastical circles. He then spoke of the signs that the year had not been one of stagnation in the churches, mentioning new churches and parish buildings built in the diocese, mission work taken up, changes among the clergy, and the more than one thousand confirmations in the diocese. One church, in a town where an epidemic of typhoid fever was raging, gave up their parish house for an emergency hospital.

Bishop Scarborough had very kind words to say of the clergy under him, whom he pronounced earnest, hard-working and self-denying. The large number of candidates for confirmation had appeared unusually earnest and devout. He spoke enthusiastically of mission work, saying that the church that did not have a mission of its own missed one of its most life-giving elements.

The weakest point of the work of the diocese, the Bishop said, was the lack of provision for the widows and children of deceased clergymen. He would like to see a new interest in the subject.

He thanked the churches of the diocese for their kindness to him, and urged them to go into the new church year with renewed zeal and interest, and seeking God's blessing in everything, closing by giving a summary of the number of churches in the diocese, number of services held, number of candidates for confirmation, etc.

Reports of the treasurer and of the trustees of the funds of the diocese were read, showing careful management of the funds on the part of the trustees, much good work being done in the various lines, and satisfactory balances remaining.

Reports of other committees and of the registrar followed, after which Rev. E. K. Smith, secretary of the convention, submitted his brief report.

Resolutions respecting amendments to constitution and canons were offered and discussed with a good deal of interest. Especially earnest was the discussion of the question of dropping from the church roll the names of such persons as had not been present at the Holy Communion for a certain number of years, the discussion becoming so warm that the session, which was announced to close at 5 o'clock, was continued for half an hour, after which the question being called for the motion was lost. The convention then adjourned till 8 p. m.

The evening session of the convention was held at 8 o'clock and was a very interesting one, having as its subject the missionary work of the church. The opening services were the usua ones of the evening prayer service, beginning with the processional by the vested choir. The service was conducted and the lesson read by Rev. Mr. Lancaster, of St. Peter's church, Perth Amboy.

Dean Bodman announced that there would be an early celebration of the Holy Communion on the following morning at 7 o'clock, and that at 9 o'clock morning prayer would be read, after which the convention would resume its business.

Bishop Scarborough now came forward and said a few words, before introducing the delegates who should render missionary reports, as to the great importance of this branch of the church's activity. He then called for the report of the Dean of the Burlington convocation, read by Rev. Mr. Perkins. He reported a total expenditure of $1,577.19, and a balance on May 1st, of about $471. Other reports were given by Rev. Mr. Duvoe and Dean Baker, of the New Brunswick convocation, the former reporting a balance of about $328, and the latter giving an account of mission work

CONTINUED ON PAGE 8

CHASE FOR THE PENANT.

HIGH SCHOOL BOYS PUT UP A GOOD ARTICLE OF BALL.

Though the Team Was Rushed Together in Short Order They Defeated the Stevens' Institute Boys by a Score of 7 to 5.

Again the Plainfield High School boys showed that they are decidedly in the chase for the baseball championship of the New Jersey Interscholastic Athletic Association by defeating the nine from the Steven's School, of Hoboken, Tuesday afternoon. The game was a more even one than the Pingry game, the final result being 7 to 5 in favor of the High School team.

Through a mistake of the president, George Proctor Smith, in copying the schedule at the meeting of the State Association, it was supposed that the game was to be played this afternoon but the manager of the Stevens team telegraphed that the High School would have to play or forfeit the game. Captain Lederer rushed his team together and they were ready for the visitors when they appeared.

The High School boys made all their runs in the first inning, when they batted Beach all over the field. Numerous errors on the part of the visitors assisted in the run getting. Raphel was taken from short to finish the inning and he held the High School boys down.

Sutphen did some great pitching for the Plainfield team, striking out nine batters. He held the Stevens boys down until the sixth inning when an accident compelled him to ease up. Seven innings were played. The visitors made their runs in the last two innings. Sutphen was struck in the ankle by a liner and the game was delayed for some time until he could pull together again.

The local team fielded well and batted well and showed considerable team work. Although many of the players were small, they played better than the visitors.

The batting order of the teams was as follows:

High School: Sebring, left field; Smith, first base; Lederer, catcher; Fisher, short stop; Phillips, centre field; Sutphen, pitcher; Craig, third base; Dean, second base; Thompson, right field. Stevens School: Holcombe, right field; Beach, pitcher and short stop; Raphel, short stop and pitcher; O'Neil, first base; Chambers, third base; Rothand, centre field; Bravishaw, left field; Gibson, second base; Dill, catcher.

The score by innings was as follows:

High School	7	0	0	0	0	0	x	—7
Stevens	0	0	0	0	0	1	4	—5

FOR THE RIGHT OF PROPERTY.

Dispute of Charles W. Tallman and Oscar F. Pierson Settled by a Jury.

A right of property case was tried before Justices Nodyne and a jury of six men Tuesday afternoon.

Some time ago, Irving Brady secured a judgment for his client, Charles W. Tallman, the Muhlenberg place grocer, against Oscar F. Pierson, the East Front street painter, and Constable Rockafellow served the execution. The constable made the levy about two weeks ago, when Mrs. Pierson claimed that the property belonged to her. She placed her case in the hands of Swackhamer & Williams, who brought the matter before Justice Nodyne and had the latter appoint a day to hear her claim. A jury was also called for. Tuesday afternoon was the time set down and the case was heard. The jury was out about fifteen minutes, when it came in with a verdict for the claimant, Mrs. Pierson.

BRANCH ALLIANCE ELECTS.

The Annual Meeting Held and Encouraging Reports Received.

The annual meeting of the Plainfield Branch Alliance of Unitarian and Other Liberal Christian Women was held Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. R. C. Leonard, of East Ninth street. The reports of the secretary, librarian, treasurer and postoffice mission secretary were received and filed. Each report showed progress and the members feel very much encouraged. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Florence Howe Hall; vice president, Mrs. E. W. Conklin; treasurer, Mrs. H. B. Wells; recording secretary, Mrs. S. R. Krom; corresponding secretary, Miss Anna Dodd; secretary postoffice mission, Miss E. L. Reynolds; librarian, Miss M. B. Browne; executive board, Mrs. A. C. Nickerson, Mrs. W. F. Adams, Mrs. R. C. Leonard, Miss M. B. Browne, Miss E. L. Reynolds; committee on programme, Mrs. Nickerson, Miss Leonard.

—Our coffee at 15c. and 20c. are talking for themselves. If you havn't tried it you are losing money. MacDonald's.

PAID THE DEATH PENALTY.

Jacob Johnson, the Colored Murderer, Executed at Somerville.

The Condemned Man Bore a Courageous Attitude to the End—Thanked the Sheriff for His Kindness—The Hanging Done Without any Hitch at All.

Somerville, N. J., May 5th—With as a steady a step as any man ever took when in his happiest and most complacent mood, Jacob Johnson, the slayer of Annie Rogers of Beekman, walked to his fate, this morning, in as short a time as was possible after the hour that Judge Magie named for the expiating of the crime on the gallows. In a word, Johnson died game, and astonished the thirty-four witnesses of the execution in the barren, grated corridor, wherein the death dealing apparatus had been erected but a short time before, by his courageous attitude in a time when it was most naturally supposed he would break down with the load of remorse and sorrow that had beset his career.

Johnson's last hours on earth were not eventful ones. He occupied the little cell that has been his home in the third tier of the Somerset county bastile without conduct any different than has heretofore marked his incarcerated life.

Yesterday afternoon Johnson received a number of visitors, among whom was his brother, Charles Johnson, of Millstone, the eldest son of the family. The greeting between them was affectionate, but not effusive. They talked over family affairs for a few moments, but whatever was said in this respect it was impossible to learn. A few days ago a Somerville photographer visited the jail and Johnson sat for photographs. They were finished so that he was put in possession of several of them, and one of these he tenderly proffered to his brother.

About 4:30 o'clock, yesterday afternoon, James J. Meehan, of Somerville, who strained and invoked every point of law that might prevail upon those who held his life in the balance, paid him a farewell visit in company with two or three local news paper men. To his counsel, the condemned man expressed the most sincere appreciation for his efforts in his behalf. He said he was convinced that they did all in their power for him, and as much as anyone could do under the circumstances, but still he maintained that he was entirely innocent of the accusation that had been made and proved to the law's satisfaction and for which he was to suffer a terrible ending.

One of the newspaper men who accompanied Mr. Meehan to visit the condemned man was Robert Brunt, a newspaper reporter, against whom it was said that Johnson felt unkindly at one time. Mr. Brunt was one of the first men to question Johnson after finding the body of Annie Rogers in the bushes along the Raritan river, and the story that Johnson at that time told was used to good effect by the prosecution in securing his conviction and sentence. Johnson told Brunt yesterday afternoon that he did not hold any hard feelings against him. Johnson admitted that once he did feel a little disgruntled towards the reporter, but now he had forgiven every man on earth and he held only good will towards the reporter.

After Johnson had partaken of a hearty supper, last night, he spent the early hours of the night in deep meditation and about 10:45 o'clock retired to the little cot that graces his cell as a bed. During the night he had a slight attack of sickness and arose and took a little medicine. Then he retired and slept soundly, the guard says, until 5:30 o'clock this morning. He arose and put on the clothes that he has been wearing for several weeks past—a cheap brown suit. About 7 o'clock, a breakfast of beefsteak and coffee was served to him and he ate it with apparent relish. After this he sat in a thoughtful manner for sometime till Sheriff Wyckoff, who is the personification of kindness, and with as little solemnity as the occasion made, read the death warrant to the condemned man.

At 8 o'clock Johnson commenced to prepare for death by dressing himself in a cheap black suit of diagonal, the coat being of the sack pattern. He put on a white shirt and black bow tie. A cheap stone reposed in the bosom of the shirt.

It was just before 9 o'clock when Rev. John DeHart, a Reformed minister, of Neshanic, who has known Johnson for the past thirteen years, and has been his spiritual adviser since he has rested under the charge of murder, appeared at the jail. A few minutes after he was allowed to go to Johnson for the last time. Johnson welcomed him with a grasp of the hand that betrayed scarcely any emotion.

Rev. Mr. DeHart offered prayer for Johnson's forgiveness and salvation and at the close the latter softly repeated the Lord's prayer in unison with the pastor. From that time to the moment when Johnson was to walk to his fate, the two joined in earnest conversation. The general drift of the talk, as Rev. Mr. DeHart told a Press reporter after the man had been executed, was about the crime and the evidence that had been submitted against him on trial. He seemed to be filled with a desire to impress on the minister that he did not commit the murder, although there was no inference on his part that he was not entirely free from duplicity in its enactment. Rev. Mr. DeHart said that Johnson made no requests of him to send messages to any relatives or ransact any affairs after he was dead.

While the condemned man and the reverend were engaged, things were in active preparation about the county building for the hanging. The Sheriff was at his office early of course. As early as 9 o'clock those who has been accorded the privilege of witnessing the execution commenced to arrive at the Sheriff's office. The jurors appointed by the court were sent to the office of County Clerk Somers, where they were sworn in while the deputies and others selected by the Sheriff lolled about the latter's office.

Among those who attracted a little attention as they mingled about the crowd was James VanHise, who had been employed to actually conduct the execution. VanHise is a short, thick set man with a long shady moustache. He was regarded with more or less awe.

To a friend Sheriff Wyckoff introduced VanHise as "my right hand man, if there is any right hand about this thing." VanHise was rather stoic in his manner and talked principally with Wm. Tompkins, his assistant, and Wm. Bovett, warden of the Essex county jail. The latter man asked VanHise what time he erected the gallows this morning and he evasively replied: "Well, really, I don't know just what time it was." He said, however, that it took about twenty minutes to put up the gallows. While the witnesses were waiting for the time for the execution to take place, they joked and talked in a manner far from indicating the grues ome event of death approach.

It was shortly after 9 o'clock when all the witnesses had gathered in the Sheriff's office and their names called as follows:

Court jurors: Dr. H. G. Wagner, Dr. T. H. Flynn, Somerville; Dr. John A. Hecht, Raritan; Dr. C. P. Fisher, Bound Brook; Dr. P. J. Zeilo, North Plainfield; Dr. A. L. Stillwell, Somerville; H. D. Diits, Raritan; A. Treman, North Plainfield, John A. Layton, Somerville; James Bowman, South Branch; George Terrill, Somerville; Steven Hoagland, Somerville.

Deputies appointed by Sheriff—George A. Dilts, Raritan; G. W. Cooper, A. S. TenEyck and E. F. Brown, C. D. MacMurtry, Somerville; J. M. Smalley, North Plainfield; H. P. Davis, North Branch; James Auten, Hillsboro; G. S. Cook, Somerville; John Ringleman, Somerville; and John F. Brady, Raritan.

City Judge George W. DeMeza, of this city, was admitted as a representative of the lawyers. The newspaper correspondents were Robert Brunt, John Anderson, and John E. Wehrly, of Somerville; and a representative of the Press.

Just before 10 o'clock the witnesses were all escorted to the west corridor of the jail where the gallows had been erected. Here they waited for a few minutes for the condemned man to appear and submit to his fate.

In the meantime Sheriff Wyckoff, Hangman VanHise and Deputies Henry W. Wyckoff and Theodore Barkalow had ascended to the condemned man's cell.

Sheriff Wyckoff told Johnson that they were ready and the latter arose and took a position so that his arms

CONTINUED ON PAGE 8.

LIBEL SUIT AT AN END.

WESTFIELD SCHOOL TEACHERS WITHDRAW PRINCIPAL FRANCIS' LIBEL.

The Case Has Been Pending in the Elizabeth Courts for Some Time—It Was the Outcome of the Principal's Report.

The end of a famous lawsuit came Tuesday in Elizabeth when Miss Jennie Pomerene and Miss Mary L. Graffam, plaintiffs in the libel suit of Graffam and Pomerene vs. Francis, withdrew their charges, and paid the costs.

The case has commanded widespread attention, as it was the outcome of a number of hot battles which were waged in the Westfield school board by the partisans of the two sides.

Professor E. Francis, the defendant, was principal of the Westfield public schools, prior to last June; and the plaintiffs were the teachers serving under him. In a regular report presented to the Board of Education last spring, Mr. Francis took occasion to call attention to certain conditions on the part of these teachers which he regarded in the light of insubordination. It was upon the strength of this report that a majority of the trustees refused to consent to the reappointment of the teachers for another year.

Their friends remonstrated, a petition for their reappointment was presented, and during several stormy meetings of the board the battle to secure reappointment was bitterly waged. But five out of nine of the trustees remained firm, and the teachers had to go.

It was then, after the storm seemed to have subsided, that action for $10,000 damages was brought against the principal, on the ground that certain statements in his report to the trustees amounted to a malicious libel. The plaintiffs were represented by R. V. Lindabury. Mr. Francis entrusted his case to Craig A. Marsh, of Plainfield.

The history of the case has been one of continual postponement, until its abandonment by the plaintiffs Tuesday.

Mr. Francis is now being congratulated, and his friends are jubilant over his vindication.

AN ACTOR CALLED A STICK.

Fate and an Unsympathetic Audience Not Kind to Billy Woods.

That wild and wooly aggregation known as the Woods and Henry Comedy Company astonished the natives of Bound Brook Tuesday with their jokelets, songlets and dancelets. Voorhees hall was partly filled by an expectant audience, drawn thither by the flaring posters depicting a wonderous symetrical form of Billy Woods, late of the illustrious Canada minstrels, and characterized as "the wide mouthed comedian." Billy Woods was to be the whole show, aided and abetted somewhat by other sons of dusky hue, but some how or other the fickle Bound Brook theatrical folk, who had witnessed famous productions of stirring melo-dramas in which blood and revolvers played star parts, did not take kindly to Billy's efforts at being funny and were cruel enough to call him a "stick." However, the show went to a finish and the young man in the box office came out a winner by seventeen cents. Several of the acting aggregation, or aggravation, had taken their wives along to see them act, and after the show there was a great scurrying for fares back to good old Plainfield. All but four of the actors got through in shape, and the lone quartette cast back on a freight train. Billy Wood's property trunk, made snowy white by the prevailing dates, came also with the stock of costumes, including three slippers, four pair of damaged red kickerbockers, a dress shirt and three burnt corks.

Sons of Veterans Meet.

At the meeting of John Hand Camp, No. 38, Sons of Veterans, held last Tuesday, one recruit received the first degree. The new by-laws for the Camp were adopted on the second reading and they have been sent to the Division Commander for his approval. Capt. McVoy appointed H. J. Martin, H. S. Thatcher and Raymond McVoy as a memorial committee to confer with the G. A. R. committee in making arrangements for the celebration of Decoration Day.

Entertained "By Edison's Inventions."

The Park Avenue Baptist church was filled with a large and appreciative audience last Tuesday, when a phonograph and projectoscope entertainment was given. The pictures were excellent and included some of the very latest, while the selections by the phonograph were equally enjoyable. Altogether it was one of the best entertainments of the kind witnessed in this city.

—Several members will be admitted to the First M. E. church on Sunday next.

NEW CLUB; OLD NAME.

A CRACK BASEBALL TEAM TO BE KNOWN AS THE CRESCENTS.

The Team to Be Under the Management of H. A. Mumford, and Will Have Some of the Best Players in This City.

Last year saw the beginning of a revival of interest in baseball in Plainfield, and this year, when a strong amateur nine under the old familiar name of the Crescents plays again on the famous rattle ground of the "Old Crescents," the interest in the national game promises to increase mightily. The old cranks are expected to turn out again with all their accustomed vigor and encourage the local players on to victory.

The club, the announcement of whose appearance on the diamond this season has just been made, is the Plainfield Crescent Baseball Club, known last year as the Plainfield Athletic Club. Eleven games won out of thirteen played against strong clubs was the record of the team last year, and this year, strengthened at several points, they will try to give the people of Plainfield a good, honest game of baseball.

The Crescents have returned to the field where their predecessors of the same name played. The field is the one at the corner of LaGrande avenue and Richmond street. Comparatively near the centre of the city and directly on the line of the trolley, it will be convenient to all. Several houses have been built on the far side of the field but they do not interfere in the slightest with the grounds, which are to be as large as the old ones, which were enclosed. The Crescents will not enclose their diamond this year, but will merely erect a wire back stop, and some seats for the accommodation of the patrons of the game. In the future a suitable grand stand and an enclosed field are planned, but they will depend on the support that the team receives this year.

There will be no charge to the game but a collection will be taken up at the close to defray such expenses as are necessary to any team. Private subscriptions will be received.

Benjamin A. Mumford, who so successfully managed the Plainfield Athletic Club last year, will have charge of the nine in the same capacity, and will, no doubt, make as great a success of the Crescents as he did of the P. A. C.'s last year.

At present, the management has not announced whom their batteries will be, for it is their intention to have two ready for every game, but whoever is finally selected, they will be good ball players. John G. MacLaughlin, the captain of the Y. M. C. A. nine last year, will fill the same position for the Crescents and cover first base. Arthur Lederer will be at his old position on the second bag. He has made a reputation for himself already as captain and catcher of the High School team. George Schoonmaker, an old and familiar figure on the amateur diamond, will play at third base where he has put up his best game. Lorenzo D. Townley needs no introdcotion to the Plainfield cranks. He has always been a favorite, especially at his old position as shortstop, where he will again be found this year. C. Stillman Mumford will try his hand at left field, and if he plays as well there as he did on first base last year, he will be indeed a valuable man. Robert Rogers, the center fielder, put up a good game for the P. A. C.'s last season which has resulted in his getting a place on the nine. Carman P. Sutphen, who is to play right field, comes from a baseball playing family, and he is already distinguishing himself as pitcher for the High School team. It might be added that the games of the High School team will in no way interfere with those of the Crescents, as the High School boys always play on holidays. On Saturday mornings, Rufus B. Booth and Walter I. Swaim will be the substitutes.

The Crescent uniform will be the same as that of last year's Plainfield Athletic Club, grey suits with black trimmings, while on the front of the shirts will be P., a crescent and then C.

The season will open for the team on the morning of May 31st. Games will then be played every Saturday afternoon during the summer, and also on holidays. The schedule has not been completed as yet, but it will include many of the strongest amateur teams of the Metropolitan district, and many exciting games are assured.

Benner's New Road House.

Jacob Benner has closed his former road house and his new place will be opened on Saturday. Mr. Benner secured his license Tuesday. The new place has been made as attractive as possible.

—Fine creamery butter 19 cents at MacDonald's.

SIBERIAN PRISONERS.

The Russian Government is Often Justified in Exiling Its Subjects.

There is a popular idea that the wastes of Siberia are peopled with men who have been unjustly exiled from Russia, and that the criminal is really as difficult to find as the traditional needle in the bundle of hay. Facts, however, do not substantiate this theory. Of course, there is a large majority of peaceful exiles, but it went down to the profession.

[illegible] I had explained my purpose [illegible] or three of the squatters whom I happened to come upon fishing in [illegible] of my streams, they entered no protest, but looked at one another and said I had better see Spud Dearmin as he was the man they had chosen to do the business of the colony. I tried to impress them with the fact that there was really no business to be done. They were trespassers, the property was mine, and they would have to leave. They made no sign as to the merits of the question, but told me to see Spud. He wasn't no edicated lawyer, but he knowed his own business.

"Howdy," was Spud's salutation. "I hearn you bought this place," he announced with startling promptness. "Weuns kim here an' opened up lan' an' raised truck and r'ared our fam'lies an' established a burying groun' an' made all our 'rangements ter live an' die here. It's too late ter change our plans. But they hain't nothin mean 'bout us fellers. I 'tend ter bus'ness for all of 'em, and it won't hain you more'n three minutes. You kin remain here an' raise crops an' dig in yer mines, but we mus' have th' cabins an' th' little patches we's got an' stay here. Nobody else kin bother you. That's th' law, an' th' rest of it is that you don't agree you'll be planted right here on yer own lan'."

"I agreed and never made a better bargain. I don't miss what Spud and his colony take, and they see to it faithfully that no one else takes anything."—Detroit Free Press.

TALK THAT WAS NOT CHEAP.

Long-Distance Telephones Rather Expensive Luxuries.

A Rochester manufacturer dropped into a long-distance telephone office yesterday afternoon and told the young woman in charge that he wished to talk to New York. Thereupon he was promptly connected and at once proceeded to talk. He talked quite a little while. Then he had an afterthought and talked again. Then the man in New York thought of something and the Rochester man talked some more. Outside the booth two men were pacing the floor, one of whom wished to have his canal boats lying in the slips at Buffalo painted, and the other was anxious to reach the head of the great coal industry of Syracuse. They fidgeted with more or less patience while the Rochester man talked. At last the door opened and the talker emerged.

"How much do I owe?" he asked of the girl in charge.

"As you aware," she said, "that you have been in the booth for some time?"

"Oh, yes," he said. "I suppose your regular charge for New York is three dollars and a half."

"Yes," she said in a business-like way, "three dollars and fifty cents for five minutes. Your bill is twenty-five dollars and ninety cents."—Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

LAYING DOWN THE LAW.

And How it Was Carried Out to the Satisfaction of All Concerned.

"Some years ago," *said the profes-*sor, "I bought a tract of iron and coal land in northern Missouri. There were a lot of squatters on the premises, but I anticipated no trouble in getting them vacated.

I arrived with a deed, and nothing could be plainer. So I went down to [illegible] I had explained my purpose [illegible] or three of the squatters whom I happened to come upon fishing in [illegible] of my streams, they entered no protest, but looked at one another and said I had better see Spud Dearmin as he was the man they had chosen to do the business of the colony. I tried to impress them with the fact that there was really no business to be done. They were trespassers, the property was mine, and they would have to leave. They made no sign as to the merits of the question, but told me to see Spud. He wasn't no edicated lawyer, but he knowed his own business.

"Howdy," was Spud's salutation. "I hearn you bought this place," he announced with startling promptness. "Weuns kim here an' opened up lan' an' raised truck and r'ared our fam'lies an' established a burying groun' an' made all our 'rangements ter live an' die here. It's too late ter change our plans. But they hain't nothin mean 'bout us fellers. I 'tend ter bus'ness for all of 'em, and it won't hain you more'n three minutes. You kin remain here an' raise crops an' dig in yer mines, but we mus' have th' cabins an' th' little patches we's got an' stay here. Nobody else kin bother you. That's th' law, an' th' rest of it is that you don't agree you'll be planted right here on yer own lan'."

"I agreed and never made a better bargain. I don't miss what Spud and his colony take, and they see to it faithfully that no one else takes anything."—Detroit Free Press.

Newsboy Wit.

On a train pulling up for a short stop at a certain railway-station an affectedly benevolent lady-passenger, calling a diminutive newsboy, proceeded to overhaul the assortment of papers, the boy therefore, expecting to effect a good sale.

Having deliberately examined each and every illustration in his stock-in-trade, she, to the lad's natural surprise, declined to buy anything.

Evidently the youngster was rather taken aback by the feminine flibbertigibet's colossal audacity, and he fell back a pace or two in deep disgust, written in every line of his intelligent phiz. He proved equal to the occasion, however.

Stepping forward again, he, with all the withering sarcasm at his command, remarked aloud:

"Beggin' yo'r pardin', Mrs. Millionaires, I thought as ev'rybody knew it was my job to sell these 'ere Journils, betsetters; but it seems as you've taken me for a bloomin' free libreary!"

Bass Viol Puzzled Him.

The company of one of the opera houses at the close of a London season, had arrived at Liverpool to embark for a continental tour. The musical instruments were being shipped with the rest, and among them was the double bass, or "big fiddle," as it is also called, not cased, as usual, for this member of the string family will stand a little rough treatment.

A bluff seaman was discovered secretly watching it with wondering eyes. He was asked his reason for standing thus idle.

"Well, yer know," said Jack, "I'm just waiting for to see the length of the bloke's arm that can play that there fiddle."—Musical Anecdotes.

Delicately Organized.

Those who enjoy the possession of singing birds should not forget that they are extremely nervous in their organization. In nine cases out of every ten, when birds lose their song, it is because they have been frightened. They are so high strung in the matter of nerves that a fright results in paralysis, which in many cases is permanent. Persons should never show a stuffed or dead bird to a caged bird. Numbers of birds have been frightened out of the song by seeing stuffed birds on the hats and bonnets of ladies.

How Isinglass is Made.

Most people take isinglass to be a mineral production, but such is not the case. Isinglass is prepared from the air bladders of giant sturgeon, a species of fish which inhabit the Caspian Sea and its tributary rivers. These fish average 25 feet in length, and it is said to take the bladders of 17 good-sized ones to make three pounds of the glass.—From Hardware.

Large Fees for a Discovery.

*For inoculating the Russian Em*press and her son Paul against smallpox in 1768 Baron Dimsdale received £50,000 as a fee, £10,000 for expenses, and an annuity of £2,500, which, in addition to all this, he was granted the title of Baron. This was just thirty years before Jenner's discovery of vaccination, for which Parliament granted him $150,000 altogether.

Invariable.

"Where do bad little boys go when they die?"

"Dunno. But Uncle Harry says it's the same place good little boys go to when they grow up."—Truth.

Flinge: "And did the stage have the appearance of a real garden in the garden scene?"

Storms: "Oh, yes: I hadn't been on three minutes before the place was filled with vegetables."

TRUSTS DEFENDED.

H. H. ROGERS, OF THE STANDARD, DECLARES IT A BENEFACTOR.

Oil Cheaper Than Water—Sugar Combine Is Also Doing the Greatest Good for the Greatest Number, He Asserts—All This in a School Debate.

Henry H. Rogers of New York, one of the wealthiest and most influential members of the Standard Oil Trust, has created a sensation at Fairhaven, Mass., by a public statement of his position concerning combinations in general.

Fairhaven is a little village separated from New Bedford by a body of water bearing the Indian name of Acushnet River, and is renowned in these parts chiefly for being the birthplace of Mr. Rogers and the recipient of many gifts at his hands. It is there that he has his costly summer home.

In Fairhaven's high school Mr. Rogers takes a great pride. He attended its classes when he was no peer he had to sell newspapers in New Bedford. Recently the High School Alumni Association had a public debate on the subject: "The outlook, social, economical and ethical, and the duty of the teacher, the thinker and the citizen." Mr. Rogers attended.

A young lawyer pitched into the trusts, giving them all sorts of hard knocks, and some of the guests who had consideration for the Standard Oil magnate were much embarrassed. But Mr. Rogers was not disconcerted. He took the floor to reply, and said:

"We are all monopolists in a way if we desire to be, for every one of us, if a valuable idea strikes us, can have it patented and secure exclusive control of it for a term of years and make all the money we can."

He declared that he did not encourage trusts, and was rather against combinations.

"What is a trust?" he asked. "Nine-tenths of the lawyers and newspapers cannot tell, and they are the ones that do the most talking. The first trust was the Savings Bank Trust. Have they been improving or have they not?

"Is there anything in a combination of ideas backed by capitalists? I worked five years in a union grocery store, and by buying our stock of a union in Boston we were thereby enabled to sell below competitors. Could the Pennsylvania Railroad carry on the immense volume of traffic it does if it were not for a combination?"

Mr. Rogers stated that he was in his thirty-sixth year in the oil business, and would like to know what he had done in the way of taking advantage of the people. All oil was drilled in West Virginia at an expense of $10,000, the oil brought to New York and shipped to all parts of the world. In New York, he said, the oil is sold cheaper than spring water can be sold after being brought the same distance.

"How did we get capital?" asked Mr. Rogers. And he answered that he had worked as hard as any one he knew of to get it. He spoke of the large gifts of John D. Rockefeller, "whom some choose to call a monopolist," he said.

"We are going to have a new tariff," he continued, "and the only unfortunate part of it is that it will be made by lawyers. All lawyers are a nuisance. It is easy to pull down, but hard to construct.

"The idea of a trust, so called, is to economize and bring before the people the best product at the lowest prices. The Sugar Trust is doing the greatest good for the greatest number.

"Combinations have come to stay. We are going to have better times, I believe, but they will come slowly."

Mr. Rogers, although not a wheelman, is much interested in good roads. So much so that he had himself elected a trustee over the Streets in Fairhaven at the regulation salary of $3 per diem. This he turns over to an assistant superintendent, who looks after the details which Mr. Rogers plans out.

His gifts to Fairhaven would easily aggregate $1,000,000. He has presented it with a fine town hall, a gem of a public library, a comfortable schoolhouse, and has been instrumental in seeing that the town was supplied with pure water and a sewage system.

Not Accepted.

Her motherly eye is very acute, but in this case she did not know all that had occurred.

"Come, Mr. Washington," she said affably, "I wish to present you to my daughter."

"Thank you," said Willie, "but I don't think there's any use in your trying. I have already offered myself to her, and she wouldn't accept me."—Washington Star.

A POSER FOR PAPA.

Willie—Papa, isn't a monarchy the best form of government?

Papa—No, a republic is.

Willie—Then why do they say "the Kingdom of Heaven?"

SACK TO DE OLD HOME.

"Uncle" Loses His Money and Finds a Friend in Nashville.

As we waited in the Louisville and Nashville depot for the train, some one began crying, and an excitement was raised among the passengers, says a contributor to Our Dumb Animals. A brief investigation proved that it was an old colored man who was giving way to his grief. Three or four people remarked on the strangeness of it, for some time no one had anything to him. Then a depot policeman came forward and took him by the arm and shook him roughly and said:

"See here, old man, you want to quit that! You are drunk, and if you make any more disturbance, I'll lock you up!"

"Deed, but I hain't drunk," replied the old man, as he removed his tear-stained handerchief. "I'ze losted my ticket an' money, an' dat's what's de matter."

"Bosh! You never had any money to lose! You dry up, or away you go!"

"What's the matter yere?" queried a man as he came forward.

The old man recognized the dialect of the Southerner in an instant, and, expressing his sympathy with a great effort, he answered:

"Say, Mars Jack, I'se bin robbed."

"My name is White."

"Well, then, Mars White, somebody has done robbed me of ticket an' money."

"Where were you going?"

"Gwine down into Kalntuck, whar I was bo'n an' raised."

"Where's that?"

"Nigh to Bowlin' Green, sah, an' when the wah dun sot me free I cum up this way. Hain't bin home since, sah."

"And you had a ticket?"

"Yes, sah, an' ober $20 in cash. Bin savin' up fur y'ars, sah."

"What do you want to go back for?"

"To see some white folks, de tobacco an' de co'n. Mars Preston an' de good old missus. Why, Mars White, I'ze dun bin prayin' fur it fo' twenty y'ars. Sometimes de longin' has cum till I couldn't hardly hold myself."

"It's too bad."

"De ole woman is buried down dar, Mars White—de ole woman an' free chillen. I kin 'member the spot same as if I seed it yisterday.

"And what will you do when you get there?" asked the stranger.

"Go up to de house an' ax Mars Preston to let me lib out all de rest of my days right dar. I'ze ole an' all alone, an' I want to be nigh my dead. Sorter company fur me when my heart aches."

"Where were you robbed?"

"Out doahs, dar, I reckon, in de crowd. See? De pocket is all cut out. I'ze dreamed an' pondered—I'ze had dis money in my mind fur y'ars, an' now I'ze dun bin robbed an' can't go!"

He fell to crying, and the policeman came forward in an officious manner.

"Stand back, sir!" commanded the stranger. "Now, gentlemen, you have heard the story. I'm going to help the old man back to die on the old plantation and be buried alongside of his dead."

"So am I!" called twenty men in chorus, and within five minutes we had raised enough to buy him a ticket and leave $50 to spare. And when he started for the train, the old, snow-haired black fell upon his knees in that crowd and prayed:

"Lord, I'ze been a believer in You all my days, an' now I dun axes You to watch ober dese yere white folks dat has helped us out an' helped me to go back to de ole home."

And I do believe that nine-tenths of that crowd had tears in their eyes as the gateman called out the train for Louisville.

PROMINENT PEOPLE.

The Archbishop of Canterbury is patron of 191 livings, the Prince of Wales of twenty-one.

Princess Marie Von Hohenlohe, wife of the imperial Chancellor of Germany, performed the notable feat of killing a bear while hunting on her estates in Russia. The Princess is 68 years old.

Mr. Gladstone is the owner of the largest pencil-case in the world. It is the gift of a pencil-maker at Keswick, and is thirty-nine inches in length. In place of the customary rubber cap it has a gold cap. Its distinguished owner uses it for a walking stick.

Phoebe Wood, a young Indian girl, daughter of a Pawnee chief, has recently successfully gone through the course for trained nurses in Philadelphia. The other Indian girls, Lily Wind, of the tribe of the Ottawas, and Kate Greenod, of the Wyandotte tribe, have already taken this course.

The German Emperor, it is said, was about the "worst-dressed boy in the school at Cassel, partly because he was obliged to wear out all his clothes, and partly because he was not quite so fond of dress then as he is at present. He was also at the school particularly, though he was on very friendly and democratic terms with the boys there.

Miss Alice Hughes, of London, daughter of Edwin Hughes, the great portrait painter, is said to be the most successful artist-photographer in England. She has her gallery in her own beautiful home, and her art in posing her subjects is said to be exquisite. She photographs royalty and all London celebrities, and has more orders than she can attend to. Her prices are very high, but she is the busiest and most popular photographer in London.

A Transferred Beauty.

"Everybody says my daughter got her beauty from me. What do you say to that?" "That it was unkind of her to take it from you."—Fliegend Blatter.

COSTLY THINGS.

What People All Over the World Spend Their Money.

Interesting paragraphs compiled by the Chicago News:

The costliest building of modern times is the State Capitol, of Albany, N.Y. Over $20,000,000 has been expended on it.

The biggest price ever paid for a horse in America was $125,000, given by J. Malcolm Forbes, of Boston, for Leland Stanford's Arion, a trotter.

The finest machine rifle exhibited at a New York chicken fair in 1892 was valued at $100.

The Shah of Persia has a tobacco pipe worth $400,000.

In the year 1635 a tulip bulb was sold in Holland for $2,200. It weighed 200 grains.

The largest sum ever offered or asked for a single diamond was $2,-150,000, which the Nizam of Hyderabad agreed to give Mr. Jacobs, the famous jeweler of Simla, for the Imperial diamond, considered the finest stone in the world.

The costliest rugs in the world are owned by the Shah of Persia and the Sultan of Turkey. Each possesses a mat made of pearls and diamonds, valued at $2,500,000. The Carleton Club, London, owns the largest mat or rug ever made.

The costliest crown is that worn by the Russian Czar on ceremonial occasions. It is surmounted by a cross formed of five magnificent diamonds, resting upon an immense mcut but polished ruby. The ruby rests on eleven large diamonds, which in turn rest on a mat of pearls. The coronet of the Empress is said to contain the most beautiful collection of diamonds ever gotten together.

The largest price for a cane was bid at an auction in London of the walking sticks which were once the property of George III. and George IV. It was £38, or $90, and was given for a walking stick of ebony, with a gold top engraved and with a small crown, and also containing the hair of the Princesses Augusta Elizabeth, Mary Sophia and Amelia, and inscribed, "The Gift of the Princess Mary, 1804."

The most expensive royal regalias in the world are said to be those of the Maharajah of Baroda, India. First comes a gorgeous collar, containing 500 diamonds, arranged in five rows, some of these as large as walnuts. A top and bottom row of emeralds of equal size complete the chain of diamonds. A pendant is composed of a single brilliant called the "Star of the Deccan," and there are aigrettes, necklaces, bracelets, rings and chains to match. The Maharajah's own special jewel, which he wears on state occasions, is entirely of pearls, with a big diamond in the center and in each corner, cost $1,500,000.

PAPER DRINKING CUPS.

Solitary Idea Which Carries With It the Great Advantage of Economy.

A paper manufacturer of Elberfield, Germany, has recently patented quite a novelty which has a great future, particularly for advertising purposes. It is a substitute for a drinking glass and may best be styled a cup made of paper. The idea is well executed. The drinking cup is so small that it may be carried in the pocket-book. It enables the traveller on foot or on a wheel to always have his own clean drinking glass. It is so cheap that it may be thrown away after having been used but once, or when it has served its purpose. These paper drinking cups are of a strong yellow paper, provided with a leather-like surface, and are absolutely water tight. The outer surface many, of course, be used for advertisements, and the advertisements given away in this shape will probably be of much value, the cost is little more than if the same advertisement had been printed on plain paper. The new cup is also made square for the purpose of selling confectionery, ice cream, etc., the boxes being folded away into a minimal space until used.—Philadelphia Record.

His Eloquence Missed Fire.

The San Francisco Wave tells a story of a judge on the Pacific Coast, noted for his tendency to explain things to his juries, who expressed in a recent case his own ideas with such force that he thought it almost unnecessary for the jurors to leave the box. They did leave it, however, and were out hours. Inquiring the trouble, the judge was told one of the twelve was standing out against the eleven. He summoned the jury and rebuked the recalcitrant sharply. "Your Honor," said the juror, "may I say a word?" "Yes, sir," said the indignant judge; "what have you to say?" "Well, what I wanted to say is, I'm the only fellow that's on your side."

Toys of the Kaiser's Sons For Charity.

According to the diary of a German courtier, the children of the Emperor are well supplied with play things. On Easter eve, he writes, the tutor of the Emperor's sons requires all the toys which have been given to the children during the year. They consist for the most part of things of a military nature, such as miniature cannons, sabres, horns, drums, corsets, and, of course, tin soldiers. These he causes them to be repainted and generally repaired, and distributes them among the poor and the hospitals of the capital. Last Easter four cart loads of toys were thus distributed.

Life Insurance Manager (in astonishment)—"What under the sun ever made you take a risk on this man's life? Why, he swears that he has been a confirmed invalid for five years."

Agent—"One of the best risks, sir. Confirmed invalids never die of anything but old age."—Tid-Bits.

WEIGHING AN ENGINE.

A Peculiar Experiment that Will Interest Mechanics and Scientists.

A peculiar scientific experiment has been made with the famous engine 870 of the New York Central Railroad at the shops at West Albany, named the Albany Express. Some months ago this large engine, which in the opinion of many well-informed railroad men excels even the famous 999, was taken into the shops and completely overhauled. It was taken apart, completely, and every part from the largest from the massive driving wheels to the very smallest bolt and nut, was separately weighed. The heavy portions were weighed in the shops and the small parts were taken to a Watervliet avenue pharmacy where they were weighed on the pharmacist's scales.

The greatest care was taken by the machinists under the direction of Master Mechanic Buchanan to see that the weighing was accurate. When every part of the engine had been weighed it was put together again and when it was put to work to reassemble the engine. When it was complete again it was put into active service.

A short time ago the engine was taken back to the shops and mechanics were put to work dissecting it again. Once more every part was brought into service again. When every portion had been weighed the record was compared with the former one. Then Master Mechanic Buchanan knew just how much the engine had lost in weight through the wear of a known amount of work. The records of the weights of the separate parts also showed which parts were subjected to the most wear.

The test cost many hundreds of dollars, but the New York Central was willing to spend the money in order that it might be able to know what parts of an engine wear out most quickly and in what ratio the several parts wear out. The exact figures have not been made public. There is no doubt that they will be of interest to mechanics and scientists.

Where Garfield Was Shot.

The marble tablet that rested in the south wall of the ladies' waiting room of the Baltimore and Potomac Railway Company's depot at Washington to the brass star placed in the tiled floor of the apartment to mark for all time the spot on which President Garfield fell when assassinated have been removed.

So superstitious dread on the part of the traveling public of a constant reminder of a tragedy seems to have led to the removal of these monuments. The immediate cause of the removal of the tablet and star was the fact which appeared in the depot on the night of March 4, which damaged the tablet to such an extent that the officials of the company declared it was not in condition to be replaced. A portion of the marble tilling also had to be removed, and a new piece put in its place. It was permanently removed, and the spot is now marked only by a piece of red tiling, which would pass unnoticed except to those familiar with the place and the tragedy that was enacted there.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Rich Women's Railway Carriages.

The ladies of Paris not only have their carriages for shopping, for traveling, and for their rides in the parks, but fashion now demands that they must have their own railway carriages. The Baroness de Rothschild travels in her own carriage on wheels. Countess Potocka has purchased the carriage originally bought from the estate of the Duc de Morny.

Mrs. Mackey, from San Francisco, has her carriage, which is a fairy palace on wheels, costing her husband $25,000. The pleasure is costly, but it enables the ladies to enjoy all the comforts of home while they are flying through the world.

Apart from the charge for transportation, $2,000 annually must be paid to the railway company for keeping the carriage in running order.

3,000 Dinner Invitations.

It is estimated that the Prince of Wales receives annually 3,000 invitations to dinner from people having the social right to entertain him. It is obvious that but few of these can be accepted, but such acceptance is a great honor.

When he signifies his royal pleasure to attend, the host must forward a list of the guests to the Marlborough House. If for any reason any of them is objectionable to his Royal Highness, the fact is so stated, the list returned, and the name or names of those eliminated. This system avoids many unpleasant consequences, and is, moreover, an additional honor to the guests who attend, for they may be sure that they are personally accepted by the first gentleman of Europe.—Chicago Record.

A Powerful Anesthetic.

A Polish chemist named Eisenberg is said to have invented an anaesthetic which volatilizes rapidly on exposure to the air, rendering the persons near unconscious for a long time. A pellet broken under a man's nose put him to sleep for four hours. It is asserted that its vapors are bombs charged with this material will make large bodies of an enemy incapable of resistance.

In the Thick of the Fight.

"Look here," said the pugilist's friend, "that enemy of yours says he can whip you with one hand."

"He says that, does he? Well, you tell him I outclass him from the start. I can whip him with both hands. I'm a lightweight champion and can write two letters at once."—Washington Star.

BABY INCUBATORS.

How Science in Paris Raises the Little Ones in Glass Cases.

The incubator baby is a distinguished fad in medical circles now. The Maternity Hospital in Paris has a whole ward of incubators, and there's a baby in every incubator.

Of course, the duration of the treatment, if so it may be called, entirely depends on the condition of the new born child. Often a stay of one or two weeks in the incubator will transform a moribund mite into a healthy, kicking child, and occasionally a baby remains the temporary tenant of his glass mother from forty to fifty days. Fortunately it is comparatively easy to see when the baby has had enough of the incubator, for when that is the case, instead of placidly sleeping away the long hours, it turns fretful, cries, and makes vigorous attempts to stretch its limbs.

Before the introduction of the baby incubator 60 per cent of the children born at the Maternite weighing less than four pounds died within a few hours or days of their birth; now, thanks to the incubator, more than half that number are saved to become active French citizens.

The principle of the baby incubator differs very little from that so long and so successfully practised in the incubators used for hatching chickens. Both consist of a case divided into two compartments, of which the lower one contains boiling water, which, kept at an even temperature, warms the "little stranger" lying above.

When the baby begins to kick and throw its tiny arms the doctor takes it out of its glass case and puts it in a cradle, to see if a few days it goes home with its mother.

American doctors are getting so that they think no more of a glass case baby than they do of a case of everyday measles. Philip Armour, the million-dollar head of Chicago, has had his incubator for a long time, and he's just about as healthy and lively a little fellow an if he had been born without a penny to his name.—American Woman's Home Journal.

A Bicycle Made for Two Thousand.

The bicycle built for two created a sensation not long ago. The bicycle built for two thousand is the latest novelty. It is to be the great attraction of the Paris exhibition of 1900, and will be the largest bicycle ever built.

This monster wheel will be two thousand times as large as an ordinary bike, and constructed after the manner of the Eiffel Tower. There are to be two large entrances—one at the bottom of each of its wheels—one right through the tires. Winding stairways lead from the doors up the front and back of each wheel through the forward and rear standards to the backbone of the machine. Thence spiral steps ascend to the handle-bar and saddle.

The stairs are lighted throughout by numerous windows of quaint design, through which a great variety of views can be obtained as the sightseer mounts to the top of the structure.

The backbone of the big bicycle will contain a large apartment to be used as a banqueting-hall. One long table will run down the centre through its entire length, at which six hundred persons may be seated comfortably.

A Brave Act.

An anecdote illustrative of the devoted gallantry of the native Ensat Indian soldiers has been told by an English writer who was an eye-witness of the deed. In an expedition against a tribe of hill robbers, a little party of twenty-five soldiers got into a stockade and were surrounded by four times that number of the natives. They would have been shot down to a man if they had ventured on a sortie. Then it was that a young Goorkha stepped forward and said to the officer in command:

"Sir, I will jump on top of the parapet, and the enemy will fire at me; then we shall be able to rush on them before they can reload."

Before the officer could remonstrate, the Goorkha sprang upon the parapet and waved his sword. In an instant bullets by the score were whistling around him, but, strange to say, he was not hit. When every musket was emptied, he leaped from the parapet, crying:

"Now, sir, come on!" and, his comrades following, the enemy was driven in a headlong rout.

A Menagerie Farm.

The thousand-acre menagerie farm in Merced county is putting the "glorious climate of California" to a new and interesting use, says the San Francisco Argonaut. On it will be tried an experiment in the breeding of elephants, hippopotami, lions, tigers, camels, nilgaus, kangaroos and other tropical and exotic animals such as are in common demand for purposes of exhibition. The design is to obtain the conditions suited to every sort of animal used for exhibition, and the proprietor thinks that he can come nearer to realizing these conditions in California than anywhere else. Natives of the various countries from which the animals come, who are accustomed to their ways, will be employed to look after them.

A Peculiar Business Deal.

Warren E. Burton has sold the Burton House, Harwich, Mass., for $30,000, of which $7,000 was paid in cash and the balance in postage stamps, the number being 8,000,000. This is probably one of the most remarkable business transactions ever recorded in the West, and will call renewed attention to the widespread interest in philately.—New York Tribune.

AN UNUSUAL CALL.

Incident in a Country Doctor's Life—His Trust Not Betrayed.

"The life of a country doctor is not one of ease and luxury," commented an old practitioner. "A call at night and then a drive, perhaps of five or six miles, uphill and down dell in the darkness of the forest. One night I received a call from a distant farm house. Upon arriving there I found a lad of about eighteen with a bullet wound in his shoulder. I dressed the wound with much care, and then the lad with much anxiety observed:

"'You won't say anything about this, doctor?'

"'Why not, my lad?' I pitied him in a way, for his eyes had a hunted look and he appeared half famished and half dead.

"'Because I received this wound in escaping from the Sheriff.'

"'You needn't tell me.'

"'I must. I couldn't get work, sir, and not able to resist temptation, I stole. It was for the first time. I thought you might speak of dressing a wound and then they would know where to find me. If you say nothing I may be able to leave the country. You have been kind to me, doctor. Do this and—'

"'On one condition, my lad.'

"'And that is?'

"'You will not steal again.'

"'Would you believe a—a thief?'

"'I will believe you.'

"'I promise.'

"Many years afterward I received a box of good things for Christmas from California. The next year another box came, and so for many years. The only one I ever had to the sender were a few words in the first box: 'I have kept the promise I made you, doctor.'"—Detroit Free Press.

Opposed to Schools.

"Have you good schools in this neighborhood?" asked a farmer with whom I stopped in West Virginia.

"Good as any, I reckon," was the reply. "They air all frauds."

"Why, you have children, have you not?"

"Ten o' em."

"Don't any of them go to school?"

"Nary school. I don't believe in eddycation, 'cept for preachers and lawyers an' doctors."

"Why not?"

"Why, I went ter school fer two y'ar when I war a boy, an' I thought I knowed it all, thar wan't no mo' ter learn. I took th' county paper an' 'lowed I'd hev what chillun I bed, all eddycated. I bed a good farm an' plenty o' stock. One day I got some circulars from a feller in Noo York, sayin' he would give me good paper money for fifty cents fer a dollar in gol'. I kin use paper money es well es gol' hyar, so hit war a good trade. I war too sharp fer be cotched, so I sen' fer a sample dollar an' tuk it ter bank when it come. It war all right an' I mor'gaged everything I bed an' sen' th' feller th' money. I got a box o' sawdust and it busted me. Ef I hadn't learned ter read all newspapers knowed what ther circular said an' I 'low thet no boys o' mine shall ever larn ter read, so as they kin keep what they git."

No Market for Them.

Patrick O'Farrell, an attorney of Washington, D. C., is something of a raconteur. One of his stories is worth repeating. "It was during Cleveland's first Administration," says he. "The horsecars had just been replaced by systems of trolleys and cable-cars. A Texan wrote to the Representative in Congress from his district asking about the market for horses. The constituent said the street-car companies should need horses, which were being killed and fed to the hogs in Texas, they were so cheap. There is no market for horses in Washington," wrote back the Congressman. "Horse-cars have just been replaced by trolleys and cable-cars. The trolleys are run by electricity, the cable-cars by steam, and the government is being run by a jackass. There is no market here for horses."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The Tallest Steel Chimney.

Just south of the low brick structures that mark the presence of the pumping station at Ridgewood, which supplies the city of Brooklyn, N. Y., with the greater part of its water, stands the tallest steel chimney which was ever built.

The chimney is made up of 137 steel plates. These masses of steel weigh from 800 to 1,400 pounds each and vary in thickness from a quarter to a half inch. Such a thing as a break in the chimney is well nigh impossible, and that it should burn out at all the brick lining which extends one-half the distance from the ground to the top is improbable.—New York Journal.

The Student Had Him.

At a restaurant some gentlemen were discussing politics, when a young student entered and joined in the conversation. His arguments did not please the others, and one of them said to him: "Be quiet. At your age I was an ass myself."

"You are wonderfully well preserved, sir," was the reply of the student.—Scottish Nights.

Non-Committal.

Mrs. Brown—Have you met Mrs. Smith, your next door neighbor, yet?

Mrs. Jones—Oh, yes, indeed, often.

Mrs. Brown—What do you think of her?

Mrs. Jones—You know I never criticise my neighbors, and I would be the last to speak ill of any one, but I will go so far as to say that I am sorry for Mr. Smith.—New York Journal.

DAINTY SUMMER GOWNS.

Sleeves are Reduced, but the Material Saved Goes into Ruffles.

(By Special Arrangement with the N. Y. Sun.)

It is a wise provision of fashion which prescribes that the modes in gowns which we need last shall be first in the display of summer dresses.

This spring is no exception to the rule, and organdies, batistes, and muslins of the most summery description grace the first opening of new styles in dress. The most striking features of these fascinating gowns shown thus far are the countless rows of narrow satin ribbon and innumerable ruffles employed for decoration. Lace and wider ribbon for belt, bows, and collar are necessary accessories, and even chiffon has an inning on some of the batiste dresses. The sleeves are beautifully less in size, but the extra amount of material saved, with yards in addition, is all absorbed in the ruffles. Three, five, or seven ruffles about four inches wide sewn on in a cluster at the bottom, the upper one finished with a heading, trim some of the organdie skirts, while others have narrow ruches of the muslin set on fully a quarter of a yard apart. These are both very narrowly hemmed, and a pretty effect is gained by sewing one row of satin ribbon of some color in the flowering on the edges. Ruffles are also edged with narrow lace, as they were last season, and one ruffle of this sort five inches wide is quite enough for the simpler gowns of dimity and lawn. Rows of lace insertion are sewn on some skirts plain around, but the dainty ruffles are a far more effective and suitable finish.

As the season advances, the prettiest feature of the Victorian fashions, which is lace-edged ruffles from the waist to the hem, will no doubt flourish in all its quaint fluffiness, so we need not spare our material or labor in the department of ruffles if we would be quite up to date.

The plain seven-gored skirt seems to prevail among the muslin gowns, as it is a good foundation for any amount of trimming, and silk linings are by no means a necessity this season for a successful and fashionable cotton gown. The same material or dimity, in white or a plain color, is used for the underskirt and waist lining. The underskirt is finished with a deep hem and in some cases has an additional ruffle.

An organdie dress with fifteen rows of narrow ribbon around the skirt, beginning at the bottom edge and the width of the ribbon apart, is a decided novelty in dress trimming, but it is very much in evidence this season. The new gauze ribbons with plain and flowered stripes, plaided lines, and dots of colors on a white ground, are a charming finish for the plain tinted organdies trimmed with lace.

A Painful Awakening.

Socialistic Orator—Wake up! Wake up! Let us kindle the fires of liberty.

Smithson (waking from a doze)—Durned if I will, Maria. It's your turn this morning.—New York Journal.

"What on earth is ever to become of you, Wallie?" cried the boy's father, wrathfully. "You are never satisfied with anything."

"Oh, I guess I'll be a mugwump," said Wallie.—Harper's Bazaar.

MILITARY TRAINING.

A Patriotic Spirit Fostered by Its Use in the Public Schools.

There are many good people who oppose military training in the public schools for the reason that, to them, it suggests war, and they fear that it will promote a military spirit among the boys. It would be equally beneficial to the girls, but there is not the same fear in their case. It should be remembered, however, that if such a sentiment as militarism exists in the Indians, which, with all the cotteracting influences in this country, there is little danger— it would be suppressed for the simple reason that there is no way to exploit it. The embryo soldiers can no more go into the army than they can go West and fight the Indians. There is no army for them to go into. A few of them can join the State militia, but only a few, for that organization is limited in numbers, and its ranks will be filled whether the schools teach military discipline or not. On the other hand, the good effects of the drill in promoting physical stamina, mental training and honorable ambitions are great and manifest. It would be worth introducing it only for its value in counteracting the bad effects of unnatural positions, poor light and imperfect ventilation in the schoolrooms.

KANSAS WORTH.

An Overproduction of Statesmen Render Them Less Valuable.

Kansas is suffering from an overproduction of brains. This announcement will doubtless cause surprise, for, while it was known that Kansas had an overproduction of grain, of cyclones and of statesmanship—the last not being necessarily synonymous with an overproduction of brains—yet it was not suspected that intellect was a drug on the Topeka market. The State Legislature has shown it, however, by passing a bill cutting down the salaries of professors, particularly the chancellor and professors of the State University. Good judges, declared Senator Lewelling, could be got for $25 a month. That is much cheaper than they can be hired in the States, but how a whole Legislature, wealth runs to intellect cheapness of that commodity is inevitable. This seems to be the most serious of Kansas's afflictions. When a State produces too much corn it can stop planting, but what is the remedy for a production of intellect what check can there be? Hereafter when Kansas opens her mouth let no dog bark. This in*cludes the dogs of Egypt, for* whom Governor Leedy has ready a new "Kiyi" gun.

"Blowing to Music."

An organ-blower of a very eccentric disposition always demanded "cash in advance" for the music he was about to play, as he professed to be a man who understood the science of "blowing to music."

A strange organist was playing one day, and he was forced to procure another copy for the blower.

To the great annoyance of the player, the wind was anything but regular, and after the service he went behind the scenes to expostulate with the eccentric one, who easily asked him what music he had been playing.

The answer was:

"Chopin's 'Fugue in A.'"

"Oh!" responded the blower, "that makes all the difference; for I have been blowing to 'Tallis in G.'"

Poison that Makes You Laugh.

The strangest poison in the world is that used by the Indians of British Columbia. This poison, which is used on all their weapons in war-time, has puzzled medical experts for years and no man has yet found an antidote for it.

Unlike other poisons, this deadly concoction plays strange freaks with its victim after it has been inoculated, and it is first seized with a longing to laugh, and afterwards has a fit of melancholy. When these stages have passed, the victim falls into a light sleep, during which pains begin to rack his body, and he dies after hours of torture.

The poison is concocted from a number of unknown herbs and barks, the secret of which is carefully guarded by the Indians.

A Pointed Question.

A joke just now going the rounds of the press should be read every morning by the inexperienced in speaking about himself. "And there I stood, Aunt Susan," said Miss Parter's long-winded nephew, who had been droning on about his summer in Switzerland for some hours since the old lady's eyes had begun to droop, "and there I stood, Aunt Susan, with the abyss yawning in front of me." "Why, William," said Aunt Susan, speaking as one who has long kept silence, "was that abyss a-yawning before you got there, or did it begin afterward?"

Worked Once Too Often.

"When you stepped on that gentleman's foot, Tommie, I hope you apologized."

"Oh, yes, indeed, I did," said Tommie, *"and he gave me 10 cents for be*ing such a good boy."

"Did he? And what did you do then?"

"Stepped on the other and apologized, but it didn't work."—Philadelphia Times.

An Optimist.

The palsied old man sat by the fire, his head shaking from side to side in the manner peculiar to his complaint.

"It must be awful to be afflicted that way," said the sympathetic young man.

"Oh," said the old gentleman, "I find it right handy in the summer when I want to look at a two-ringed circus."—Indianapolis Journal.

AN ELDORADO.

But Will Not Long Retain Its Arcadian Simplicity if Tourists Invade It.

Perched high among the Swiss Alps is the abode of a small and interesting community, the name of the place being Abland Scheneu, which, being interpreted, signifies an out-of-the-way locality. The people have no standing army, and therefore never go to war. They have no fleet, being hundreds of miles from the sea in every direction. They have no political bosses or wire-pullers, and consequently such elections as they have are pure. They have no doctors and, as a rule, die of old age. There is no news and no need of a newspaper; the post comes only once a week; there are no trades, and there is little industry. There is no shop-keeper, blacksmith, wheelwright or public baker, no notary, advocate or policeman. Once a week a Cheap Jack comes, bringing them all the goods they want, and their herds, flocks and poultry yards supply them with the rest. Having little money, they require no bank, but they have a church, with a bell, which, besides its Sabbath summons, rings for births and funerals and festivals.—New York Tribune.

Jim Duncan Could Talk.

The crowd had been talking of eloquent speakers, and Ingersoll, Bourke Cockran, Depew, Talmage, and other notable orators had in turn been championed by their respective admirers. The old cattle man had listened to it all, and when the talk lagged a little, he asked if anybody present had ever heard of Jim Duncan. No one had.

"I never heard any of the fellows you mentioned," said the cattle man, "but I wouldn't be afraid to back Jim against any of 'em fer persuadin' ways. Jim Duncan was a talker. I tell you what he did one time. Here is a specimen. There was a fellow named Bob Harris moved to Abilene (that was the name of the town), and he had a young wife and seemed to be pretty well fixed. One day Harris was killed up-town in a row. Some five or six of us got together and tried to figure it out who was to break the news to his wife. 'Squire Irvis, our justice of the peace, was the oldest one among us, and we wanted him to go, but he said he'd rather face a grizzly bear than to take such news as that to a woman. Finally we pitched on Jim Duncan to go and tell her, he bein' so handy with his tongue, and Jim said he was willin' to do his best. He hid a few flowers through his red hair, hitched up his cravat, and went into Mrs. Harris' house, while the rest of us waited at the corner. In about 15 minutes Jim came to the door and called Squire Irvis in. We 'lowed that the widow must be cuttin' up real sharp, fer in 10 minutes more Jim came out to us.

"'How'd she stand it, Jim?' we asked.

"'I guess it's pretty well smoothed over,' says Jim, 'and Mrs. Duncan and me would like all of you to come in and have some refreshments.'

"Jim Duncan shore had a persuadin' tongue."—Detroit Free Press.

Dogs Kill a Dog.

A. C. Heffenger tells in the American Field how an old fox hound was done to death by the pack of which he was a member. The hound was called Clay, and was owned by Dr. Pope. He was kept it in the Wite Oak Hill Kennel at Poland, Me. The dog was a prize taker, and always got a place when it ran in the annual trials of the Bruns-wick Fur Club. After the annual hunt of Brunswick, Me., in which Clay proved better than all the younger hounds, the dog was taken back to Poland and put in the yard with the rest of the pack. McGregor, keeper of the hounds, heard a row in the yard, and coming down found that the pack had pitched upon the champion hound and killed it by chewing its throat and chest. Wolves have been known to kill their fellows in a similar manner. A wolf showing signs of pain is set upon and killed by its comrades. A male fox, when it finds a female fox in a trap, attacks and kills it. A fox bellowing with pain, it set upon by the pack and gored to death. Whether the attacks are to aid the one in pain or not is not known by students of natural history.

Tender-Hearted.

Judge Q., who once presided over a criminal court out West was famous as one of the most compassionate men who ever sat upon the bench. His softness of heart, however, did not prevent him from doing his duty as judge. A man who had been convicted of stealing a small amount of money, and who was about to receive sentence, looked very sad and hopeless, and the court was much moved by his evident appearance. "Have you ever been sentenced to imprisonment?" the judge asked, in a very sympathetic tone. "No, never!" replied the prisoner, bursting into tears. "Then, sorry, don't cry," said Judge Q., jovially; "you're going to be now."

What He Feared.

He was watching his neighbor's troublesome boy climb a tree, and had a look of painful anxiety on his countenance.

"Are you afraid the lad will fall?" was asked him.

"No," he replied, "I'm afraid he won't."—From Twinkles.

His Explanation.

"Why do you behave so, Jimmie?"

"It's all pa's fault," said Jimmie. "When I grow up I want to be able to tell my boys what I did when I was little—the way pa does."—Round Table.

HIS TROUBLESOME HABIT.

He Does Odd Things in His Sleep Which Are Not Conducive to Rest.

Robert Boyarth has for years suffered inconveniences incident to somnambulism. Young Boyarth secured a position in a cotton mill at Bristol. He would work all day, go home at the usual hour in the factory and retire early, as had been his custom.

It was not long before the somnambulistic microbe began its work. The young man arose, carefully dressed himself, and, taking up his dinner pail, started for the factory. Boyarth, of course, found the factory locked up, and, thinking there was no work, returned home none the wiser for his nocturnal pedestrianism.

One night he went to the river and started on a fishing tour to Mutiniconk Island. How long he rowed he did not know, but it took him almost until daylight to return.

Other nocturnal walks followed, until Boyarth finally concluded that it was just as well for him to know where he was at when all the rest of the world slept. So taking an old rocker, he tied it around one leg, attached it to a stout cord a couple of yards long and made the other end fast to the bedpost. For once in his life Boyarth retired with every assurance that he would be there in the morning. In the middle of the night, however, he arose as usual, but when he got as far as the end of the cord he was halted. In fact he fell headlong.

The jar he experienced awakened him and he crawled back to bed.—New York Journal.

LACK OF SQUIRRELS.

The Effect on the Good Roads Question in One Locality.

"I was driving along a fairly good mountain road in east Tennessee when I came to a place where for two miles it was the worst stretch of road I ever saw," said a traveling salesman to a Washington "Star" reporter. "I had to get out and lead my horse and lift the buggy wheels around the rocks, taking nearly two hours to go the two miles.

"At the first stopping place I inquired: 'Why don't they fix this road?'

"'They do. Law makes 'em wu'k it,' was the reply.

"'The last two miles are the worst I ever saw,' I replied.

"'Yas-suh,' I yo' they don't never wu'k them two miles.'

"'Why not?'

"'I dunno. Yo' see, when we go ter wu'k ther roads we allus takes our rifles erlong ter git squirrels. That's a mighty good place fer squirrels, 'ceptin' jess them two miles, 'so in cose we don' wu'k them.'"

Tomato Heart.

Epicures especially and the public in general should be warned by the fate of Paul D. Warner. He was examined at the city hospital and while showing the symptoms of consumption, was also suffering from a peculiar heart affection, which, after repeated examinations by the attending physicians, was pronounced to be lycorpersicum cardiopathia, or tomato heart.

Curious as it may seem, the man's debilitated condition and the weakness of that important organ were due to the patient's love for that luscious vegetable, which he ate at every meal.

When first admitted, Warner exhibited all the symptoms of acute poisoning, and for a while all care baffled the skill of the attending physicians. Only when his inordinate fondness for the fruit was discovered was a diagnosis made possible.—Cincinnati Inquirer.

Stamps Cover Furniture.

There has come to light in Binghamton, N. Y., the most wonderful collection of stamps which any one ever heard of. Not so much does the oddness lie in the stamps themselves as in the method of arrangement. There are 882,000 of them, and they completely cover every portion of a bedroom set, *consisting of bedstead, dress*ing and chairs. The stamps are secured to the set with the aid of glue, and then covered with heavy spar varnish. The stamps can be washed in their present condition without injury.—New York Herald.

A Mammoth Bicycle.

A Cleveland firm sent to the Paris exhibition the largest bicycle ever made. This mammoth machine was perfect in all its parts, but it could only be ridden by a giant with a stride large enough to propel the wheels, which are 15 feet in diameter. This wonderful bicycle, such a rider once aboard, would equal the speed of a bird, and could cover a distance of from 450 to 600 feet with each revolution of the pedals, and the speed attained would be a mile in less than 30 seconds.—New York Journal.

At the Boarding House Table.

"Yes, I'm red hot for war with Spain. They can't get to fighting any too soon to please me."

"Why do you talk so gory, Mr. Splindig?"

"They tell me that just as soon as war is declared prunes will go right up."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Lot.

"Darling," he cried, passionately, "I know our troubles are great, but must you, therefore, leave me? You said you would share my lot."

"Yes, but nothing was said about a job lot," she answered, with a sad, sweet smile.—Detroit Journal.

Didn't Pass.

"Why can't you get an accident insurance, Grumpy?"

"Because they say I'm too stiff to dodge bicycles.—Detroit Free Press.

The Constitutionalist.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

SENATOR REED FOR CONGRESS.

A year from next fall the biennial election of Congressmen will take place, and as Hon. Benjamin F. Howell is now serving his second term, it is unlikely that he will be willing to neglect his large business interests still further to act as Representative of the Third New Jersey District in Congress. Naturally the nomination of a candidate to succeed him will come to Somerset county, as his predecessor was a Monmouth man, and in casting about for an available person, the drift of the party leaders seems to be toward Hon. Charles A. Reed, at present our State Senator. His term of office there will expire with the close of the legislative session of 1899, just in time for him to take his seat at the opening of the next Congress. Mr. Reed's course in the Assembly of 1896 and his record in the Senate during the late session have been such as to commend him to the further suffrages of the people, and it is not hazardous to predict that when the time comes, he will be found a leader in the race for the Republican Congressional nomination in the Third District.—Bound Brook Chronicle.

CON'T WANT HIM TO BE HAPPY.

A correspondent writes to The Press of a whistling friend that makes life miserable for commuters going to and fro to New York, and asks that the following be published in the effort to reform the young man:

The question of the right of an individual to whistle is involved in a trial soon to come off in a New York Court. A man undertook to silence a whistler by hitting him with a brick, and is held for assault and battery. The outcome that would please the greatest number of citizens would be an equitable balancing of the injury done on each side. Probably the assault with a brick was a greater injury than the assault with offensive sounds, but there was undeniable provocation. There is no harm in whistling while going after the cows or walking home along a country road on a dark night, but that is very different from insisting upon whistling in a passenger's ear in a public conveyance or in front of a window near which a person is working.

NEWSPAPERS.

The New Brunswick Predonian has experienced another editorial change an event that seems to happen with great frequency, and this time in favor of George W. Boroughs. Mr. Boroughs has assumed entire charge of the paper and will endeavor to make not only a good newspaper, but also a paying investment. Another candidate for public favor in the newspaper field is the State Centre, published at Bound Brook by Nat Wilson. The first issue of the State Centre appeared last Saturday and was creditable in every way. "Deeds not words" is the motto of Editor Wilson. However, it is a fact that Mr. Wilson's words will be his deeds when he is running a newspaper.

DUER STREET OPENING.

In the person of Col. Wilson, North Plainfield has a Mayor who is constantly acquainting himself with the affairs of that municipality by personal inspection. A few days ago His Honor was looking over the ground where it is proposed to open Duer street to connect with Madison avenue on the city side of the brook. It is understood that he is heartily in favor of making the improvement and if opportunity affords he will push the matter to an issue during his term of office.

ALMOST PERPETUAL.

Through every administration, whether Democratic or Republican, for the last twenty years John L. Derby has served as postmaster at Cranford, and yesterday he was reappointed for a term of four years by President McKinley. Derby came near losing his place, however, last February when ex-President Cleveland nominated Editor Potter for the position. However, the nomination was held up so long that it was not reached in the last days of Congress, and Derby's continuance was assured under a Republican administration.

NOT MUCH SORROW.

The losses of speculators who built stands along the line of March of the Grant monument dedication parade in New York are said to amount to nearly $100,000. This will not occasion general sorrow. Such speculations are nuisances, says an exchange.

OLD BRAND, NEW NAME.

The authorities of Plainfield arrest bicycle scorchers. New Brunswick isn't troubled that way, but the authorities here might, if so inclined, make an occasional arrest of offenders who stand on the corners and scorch with their mouths.—New Brunswick

A BAD BOY HE IS CALLED.

BUT WILLIE DRAKE SAYS THE POLICE HAVE A GRUDGE AGAINST HIM.

A Paradise Alley Youngster Who Has Frequently Been in the Toils of the Law is Charged With Theft of Shoes.

Either Willie Drake is a persecuted little boy or else he isn't, and that is what Justice Newcorn has been called upon to decide. The police claim he is the worst of all the youthful gang in Paradise alley and that Joseph Kearns is a good second in the race. Willie and his mother claim that the police are abusing him and that they lay lots of trouble at his door for which he is not accountable. Mr. Drake is a respectable, hard-working man, who has done his best to bring up his son in the right way.

Drake has been figuring quite prominently in the city court of late as the starter of a riot in Paradise alley. Now the trouble is something more serious. Young Drake is accused of stealing a pair of shoes from one of the shoe boxes in front of Abrams' shoe store on West Front street. Mrs. Abrams declares that she saw the boy take the shoes, and there are several other witnesses. The alleged larceny is said to have taken place Monday at 4:30 o'clock.

A complaint was made before Justice Newcorn last Monday by Mr. and Mrs. Abrams, and a warrant was issued for his arrest. Two policemen went to Drake's home next morning and watched for the lad, but he did not appear. His mother said that he had not come home. The boy finally came before the Justice, next morning, and was released in the custody of his mother for a hearing this evening.

PROPERTY TRANSFERS.

Plainfield Matters Recorded in the County Clerk's Office.

The following property transfers have been recorded at the County Clerk's office, from April 23d to 29th inclusive:

L. R. Finch, Plainfield, to Anna R. Finch, two lots Arlington avenue, adjoining Cortell lots, $2,500; Catherine H. McClure et ux., Plainfield, to Asa B. Eastman, lot Pitman avenue, $1; John Maire et ux., Plainfield, to Elwood Valentine, Glen Cove, lot South avenue, Plainfield, $100; D. N. Force et ux., Plainfield, to Jacob L. Voorhees, New York, lot Richmond street, Plainfield, subject to $1,500 mortgage, $2,500; William H. Moore et ux., Plainfield, to Mary Kunzig, lot West Front street, adjoining Bocap property, Plainfield, deed to correct error, $1; Isaac W. Rushmore et ux., to Abram W. Lewis, lot West Seventh street and Irvington place, Plainfield, $1,362.78.

The following contracts have also been filed:

Isaac W. Rushmore with William H. Pangborn, North Plainfield, mason work, house West Seventh street, Plainfield, $720; Isaac W. Rushmore with Abner Titsworth, Dunellen, carpenter work, house West 8 venth street, Plainfield, $2,182; Philomena Hope, Plainfield, with Pierson & Gayle, North Plainfield, new house Jackson avenue, North Plainfield, $1,262.

CLUB OFFICERS CHOSEN.

Mrs. E. C. Perkins the Executive Head of a Progressive Circle of Women.

The annual meeting for the election officers of the Monday Afternoon Club was held Monday at the Casino and the following officers were chosen: President, Mrs. E. C. Perkins; First Vice-President, Mrs. W. E. Lowe; Second Vice-President, Mrs. Walter Haviland; Third Vice-President, Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson; Treasurer, Miss Scribner; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Lawson; Recording Secretary, Mrs. Robert Lowry.

Work for the coming year was planned for and the club will take up the study of Holland. The Literary Committee has this matter in charge and will see that prominent speakers are secured to lead the members into an interesting study of the subject chosen.

The Best Remedy for Rheumatism.

(From the Fairhaven, N. Y., Register.)

Mr. James Rowland of this village, states that for twenty five years his wife has been a sufferer from rheumatism. A few nights ago she was in such pain that she was nearly crazy. She sent Mr. Rowland for the doctor, but he had read of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and instead of going for the physician he went to the store and secured a bottle of it. His wife did not approve of Mr. Rowland's purchase at first, but nevertheless applied the Balm thoroughly and in an hour's time was able to go to sleep. She now applies it whenever she feels an ache or a pain and finds that it always gives relief. He says that no medicine which she had used ever did her so much good. The 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

Change of Trolley Schedule.

Another change has been made in the running time of the trolley cars of the Plainfield Street Railway at night. The cars will run with twelve minutes headway during the day as usual but after 8 o'clock, instead of 7 as heretofore, the cars will be run on fifteen minutes headway.

Appointed a Regular Patrolman.

Andrew Saffron, of Somerset street, has been appointed a regular patrolman in place of Ex-Patrolman Post. Patrolman Saffron was on duty Saturday night for the first and he has been assigned to the beat in the central portion of the city.

THE FIRST MAY WEDDING

MARRIAGE OF JENNIE BROKAW TO WINFIELD C. CODDING.

The Ceremony Performed at the House of Rev. J. W. Richardson, After Which a Reception Was Held at the Bride's Home.

The marriage of Miss Jennie Brokaw, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Webster Brokaw, of East Fourth street, and Winfield C. Codding, of Newark, was celebrated last Monday at the home of Rev. J. W. Richardson, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, who performed the ceremony at 7:30. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Amy Hyer, as bridesmaid, while the best man was John Holstedt, of the borough. The bride was prettily gowned in French blue cloth, trimmed with white satin, and she carried a bouquet of bridal roses.

Following the ceremony the bridal party returned to the home of the bride's parents where a reception was held and supper was served. Only the immediate relatives of the contracting parties were present at the house.

Mr. and Mrs. and Coddington left in time to catch the 10:17 train at Westfield and from there they went to Newark where the groom had furnished a house and which was already for them to go to housekeeping. The reason they went to Westfield to take the train was that a number of their friends were waiting for them at the North Avenue station and they were anxious to fool them.

The groom is in the employ of the Vienna Yeast company at their Newark place of business and he has a lucrative position. The bride is one of Plainfield's well known young women and both she and her husband have a host of friends who wish them success and happiness. They received a useful collection of presents from their friends which is evidence of the esteem in which they are held. Mr. and Mrs. Coddington are living at No. 30 New street, Newark.

WOMEN BRAVED THE WEATHER.

Large Attendance of the Fair Sex at the W. C. T. U. Meeting.

Owing to the inclemency of the weather Sunday afternoon there was not a very large attendance of veterans at the service held at the W. C. T. U. rooms. The attendance of women was much larger and those who remained at home missed a good address by Rev. Mr. Crampton, a veteran of the late war. The speaker related a number of interesting stories of the war and from them he presented a practical lesson in which he likened the former war to the one now being fought by Christians. He said that he belonged to the Lord's army and that every veteran should be enlisted. It is the duty of every citizen, he said, to defend the flag and the country against the invasion of traitors, and the person who failed was to be compared to the traitor. At the close a short time was devoted to testimony and prayer and many of those present took part. The music was in charge of Mrs. Newton Honeyman and Joseph Moon, while Miss Peck presided at the piano. Altogether the service was a helpful one and all present passed a pleasant hour.

FUNERAL OF MRS. FENNER.

Last Sad Rites Over the Remains of a Christian Woman.

The funeral services of the late Mrs. Rebecca Fenner were held last Sunday morning at the residence of Henry VanMiddlesworth, of Liberty street. Revs. B. W. Hand and W. O. Thomas, of the First Church of Christ, officiating. At 3:30 the services were held from the Baptist church at Somerville, and were conducted by Rev. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of the Trinity Reformed church, of this city. There was special music by a quartette rendered very effectively. The floral tributes consisted of an anchor and a cross from the relatives. There were other beautiful offerings in the shape of bunches of roses.

Those who served as pall-bearers were the son-in-laws of the departed. They were George Wortman, Henry VanMiddlesworth, George Clicknor, Charles Foster, H. J. Martin and Harry Swackhamer. Interment was made in the family plot at Somerville.

Enterprising Business Methods.

It is the up-to-date dealer who introduces modern machinery and is enabled to sell better goods at less prices. Such is the case with L. L. Manning and Son, marble and granite dealers, corner of West Front street and Central avenue. Their tools for cutting letters are run by compressed air, while all their polishing is done by steam power. An inspection will show that their work is done better by these methods than by the old way. They have a fine stock of monuments and headstones on hand, the largest in the State. They are just completing several very fine monuments for Hillside Cemetery and other parts of the country. 5-1-3 c-1

—The Children's Home building is being beautified with a coat of paint, which is being put on by John Goodwin.

FIRE COMPANIES ELECT.

UTMOST HARMONY PREVAILED AS TO THE ONES TO BE CHOSEN.

Owing to the Early Adjournment of the Common Council the Officers Were Not Confirmed—Those Who Were Elected.

The various companies composing the Plainfield Fire Department met last Monday and elected officers for the ensuing year. The utmost harmony prevailed at each meeting and there was little opposition. Owing to the fact that the Council adjourned rather early the list of officers were not submitted to that body for confirmation. Below will be found a list of the officers chosen:

GAZELLE ENGINE CO., NO. 1.

Foreman, L. Dunavan; first assistant, W. H. Addis; second assistant, F. C. Putnam; secretary, J. E. Huntington.

PLAINFIELD ENGINE CO., NO. 2.

Foreman, R. B. Rogers; first assistant, W. Chamberlain; second assistant, H. Connett; secretary, A. Kahrmann; financial secretary, J. H. Dawe; treasurer, Frank Schuck; engineer, Frank Schuck; first assistant, A. Manning; representatives to relief association, C. J. Newman and William Townley.

ZEPHYR HOOK AND LADDER CO.

Foreman, F. S. Moore; first assistant, J. Blimm; second assistant, E. McCann; recording secretary, George Mehl, Jr.; financial secretary, S. L. Miller; treasurer, J. Blimm, Sr.

ALERT HOSE CO., NO. 1.

Foreman, J. M. Hawkins; first assistant, Abner Bartlett; second assistant, Roger T. Murray.

CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATION.

Will be Held for Clerks and Carriers on June 5th.

The United States Civil Service Commission has ordered that an examination be held in this city on Wednesday, June 5th, beginning at 9 a. m., for the grade of clerks and carriers in the postal service. The age limitation for carriers are from 21 to 40 years, inclusive. Clerks must be over 18 years of age, but beyond this there is no limitation. All applications must be filed with John H. Whitenack Secretary of the Board, on the regulation blanks, before the Postoffice closes on Monday, May 22. It is recommended that the applications be filed early, so that errors that may be given for correction if necessary.

The Commission states that the examinations are open to all reputable citizens of the United States who may desire to enter the service, without regard to race or to their political or religious affiliations. All such citizens are invited to apply. They shall be examined, graded and certified with entire impartiality, and wholly without regard to any consideration save their efficiency, as shown by the grades they obtain in the examination.

MUSIC HALL AFFAIRS.

Manager Willey to Have Entire Control Next Season.

Music Hall closed for the season last Saturday night, after having been opened eighty times by the present management. The season was not a profitable one. George E. Rogers, who has been the lessee of the theatre, will retire, and George Willey, who has been the manager, will sign a contract for the lease of the hall for next season, conducting its affairs alone.

Mr. Willey will leave today for a seven weeks' tour ahead of the projectoscope, in which he has secured an interest. He will return to assume control of Music Hall about August 1st. Taken all in all, and considering the many adverse conditions surrounding the management of a theatre in a city the size of Plainfield, Manager Willey has been quite successful in the venture. During the summer he will book the attractions for next season. Profiting by this year's experience he will book no melo-dramas, which almost invariably lose money here. Comedies, farces and comic operas will be the rule of the season.

Spring Humors, eruptions, hives, boils, pimples, sores, are perfectly and permanently cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, the best spring medicine and one true blood purifier.

Hood's pills act easily and promptly on the liver and bowels. Cure sick headache.

Lacerated His Hand.

Robert Morgan, aged 13 years, received a lacerated wound of the hand while at work at the Pond Tool Works Monday afternoon. The hand caught in a planer, inflicting the wound. The boy went to the hospital where he had the hand dressed. It will be some time before he can use the injured hand.

"It is the Best on Earth."

That is what Edwards & Parker, merchants of Plains, Ga., say of Chamberlain's Pain Balm, for rheumatism, lame back, deep-seated and muscular pains. Sold by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, corner of Park and North avenues

Yellow Card Removed.

The yellow card, announcing the prevalence of contagious disease, has been removed by the Board of Health from the residence of Geo. P. Dupee, of Rockview avenue, his son having recovered from the scarlet fever.

Careful experiments made upon a healthy person show that of ordinary oatmeals 83 per cent. alone is digested. Of H-O 99.75 is digested.

The process of preparation of H-O is "peculiar to itself."

Subscriptions Free to

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly
Illustrated American (Weekly)
Truth (Weekly)
New England Magazine
Chatterbox (Monthly)
The American Kitchen Magazine
Home Magazine (Monthly)
of Binghamton, N. Y.

WITH COUPONS FROM THE

H.O.Co.'s Goods

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS

For all Bilious and Nervous Diseases. They gently regulate the Bowels and give Healthy action to the entire system.

Cures DYSPEPSIA, HEADACHE, CONSTIPATION and PIMPLES.

SALESMEN WANTED

To sell our high grade inspected Nursery Stock. Many new specialties offered this year for the first time, as well as the standard varieties of fruits and ornamentals. No previous experience necessary. Write for terms, stating age, etc.

Rogers Bros. & Thomas, Maple Avenue Nurseries, West Chester, Pa.

Central Railroad of New Jersey.

Commencing at New York foot of Liberty Street, and Communipaw, Central Railroad Terminal, Jersey City, as follows:

In effect JANUARY 10th, 1897.

LEAVE SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

WESTWARD.

6 05 a. m. Daily (Sundays 8 01) Local for Mauch Chunk.

8 34 a. m. Daily except Sunday for Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Chicago, and principal intermediate stations.

9 27 a. m. 2 34, 5 22, 7 23 p. m. daily except Sunday, Local for Bound Brook.

12 56 p. m. Daily except Sunday. Local for Mauch Chunk.

4 26 p. m. daily except Sunday. "BLACK DIAMOND EXPRESS" for Rochester and Buffalo.

5 46 p. m. daily except Sunday. Local for Mauch Chunk.

7 23 and 8 56 p. m. daily except Sunday, express for Wilkes-Barre, Scranton, Pittsburg, Hazleton, Shamokin, and principal intermediate stations.

9 30 p. m. Daily. Local for Easton.

7 00 and 8 56 p. m. daily, solid vestibule express for Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Chicago, and principal intermediate stations.

9 30 p. m. daily except Sunday. Past for Buffalo.

EASTWARD.

For New York, Brooklyn-Local 6 40, 7 12, 7 48, 9 46, a. m. 2 35, 4 46 and 6 37 p. m. Express 9 03 a. m., 2 21, 4 05 p. m. Express 10 27, 10 02 a. m. 12 14, 2 15, 6 15, 7 07 and 9 17 p. m. Sundays 9 03 a. m. and 4 07 p. m.

For Perth Amboy and intermediate stations 6 40, 7 00, 10 05 a. m. 12 13, 2 35, 5 26, 7 10 p. m. Sunday 8 00, 9 10 a. m. 2 20 and 4 00 p. m.

For Monmouth Junction 4 05 p. m. except Sunday.

For further information consult Ticket Agent.

H. WILBUR,
General Superintendent.

S. Bethlehem, Pa.

CHAS. S. LEE,
General Passenger Agent.

Philadelphia, Pa.

A. W. SONNEMACHER,
Asst'l General Passenger Agt.

Bethlehem, Pa.

NEW YORK TERMINALS—Foot of Cortlandt and Desbrosses street.

LEHIGH VALLEY RAILROAD.

In effect December 3d, 1896.

LEAVE SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

WESTWARD.

6 05 a. m. Daily (Sundays 8 01) Local for Mauch Chunk.

8 34 a. m. Daily except for Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Chicago, and principal intermediate stations.

9 27 a. m. 2 34, 5 22, 7 23 p. m. daily except Sunday, Local for Bound Brook.

12 56 p. m. Daily except Sunday. Local for Mauch Chunk.

4 26 p. m. daily except Sunday. "BLACK DIAMOND EXPRESS" for Rochester and Buffalo.

5 46 p. m. daily except Sunday. Local for Mauch Chunk.

7 23 and 8 56 p. m. daily except Sunday, express for Wilkes-Barre, Scranton, Pittsburg, Hazleton, Shamokin, and principal intermediate stations.

9 30 p. m. Daily. Local for Easton.

7 00 and 8 56 p. m. daily, solid vestibule express for Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Chicago, and principal intermediate stations.

9 30 p. m. daily except Sunday. Past for Buffalo.

EASTWARD.

For New York, Brooklyn-Local 6 40, 7 12, 7 48, 9 46, a. m. 2 35, 4 46 and 6 37 p. m. Express 9 03 a. m., 2 21, 4 05 p. m. Express 10 27, 10 02 a. m. 12 14, 2 15, 6 15, 7 07 and 9 17 p. m. Sundays 9 03 a. m. and 4 07 p. m.

For Perth Amboy and intermediate stations 6 40, 7 00, 10 05 a. m. 12 13, 2 35, 5 26, 7 10 p. m. Sunday 8 00, 9 10 a. m. 2 20 and 4 00 p. m.

For Monmouth Junction 4 05 p. m. except Sunday.

For further information consult Ticket Agent.

H. WILBUR,
General Superintendent.

S. Bethlehem, Pa.

CHAS. S. LEE,
General Passenger Agent.

Philadelphia, Pa.

A. W. SONNEMACHER,
Asst'l General Passenger Agt.

Bethlehem, Pa.

NEW YORK TERMINALS—Foot of Cortlandt and Desbrosses street.

Dissolution of Partnership.

Notice is hereby given that the partnership heretofore existing under the name and firm of Terrill & Coles, as Undertakers and Funeral Directors in the city of Plainfield, is this day dissolved by mutual consent, and all debts due said owing by said firm are to be paid by George W. Coles, and all claims and demands of said firm are payable to George W. Coles, who will continue the business at the old place of business, No. 200 West Second street, in the city of Plainfield.

MOSES N. TERRILL.
4 16 c-4 GEO. W. COLES.

Purchased an Instructive Book.

The devotional exercises at the meeting of the Primary Teachers' Union held Monday afternoon were led by the president, Miss Nettie Beeching, and the lesson was taught by Mrs. Baker, of Westfield, who reviewed the lesson for last week and gave a synopsis of the lesson for next week. A business meeting followed and seven new members were reported. There is at present a balance on hand of $5 89. It was suggested that the Union purchase the book entitled "Teaching and Teachers," and the suggestion was followed out. It was decided to invite Mrs. Petit, of Elizabeth, to teach the lesson next week.

According to the newspapers, an Ohio husband became the happy father of seven children not long ago. Of the seven all lived but one. It is to be hoped he laid in a supply of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, the only sure cure for croup, whooping-cough, colds and coughs, and so insured his children against these diseases. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

In Colors.

One of the principal features of Ernest R. Ackerman's illustrated talk on his "Trip Around the World," is that many of the views which will be exhibited Thursday evening at the Y. M. C. A., will be beautifully colored.

Arrival and Departure of Mails.

NEW YORK MAILS.

Arrive—7:30, 9:40, 11:30 a. m., 2:30, 5:25, 6:30 p. m.

Close—7:30, 9:30 a. m., 1:30, 6, and 7:30 p. m.

SOMERVILLE AND EASTON.

Arrive—9:40 a. m., 3 and 6:25 p. m.

Close—7:30 a. m., and 4:30 p. m.

PHILA., WASH. and WESTERN—Direct.

Arrive—1 p. m.

Close—4 p. m.

WARRENVILLE.

Arrive—12:30 p. m. Close—9:30 a. m.

SUNDAY MAILS.

Office open from 9:30 to 10:30 a. m.

Mail closes at 6:30 p. m.

J. M. HEPPENHEIMER, P. M.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

Celebrated for its great leavening strength and healthfulness. Assures the food against alum and all forms of adulteration common to the cheap brands. Royal Baking Powder Co., New York.

SOLONS SIT AND SOLVE.

MUCH BUSINESS TRANSACTED BY THE COMMON COUNCIL.

The Time Limit for Adjustment of Taxes Coming Under the Martin Act Extended to May 17th.

In striking contrast to the previous sessions of the City Council for 1897, was the one held last Monday, for it was marked by the absence of anything that would prove sensational. Councilman Frost was the only member absent, but the other members are capable of looking after all the business.

After the reading of the previous minutes there were a large number of petitions presented. One was from the residents of Plainfield avenue between Front and Seventh streets asking the Council to place suitable crosswalks at the intersecting streets, also one from the residents of West Third street asking for electric lights near the railroad. The G. A. R. Post, through their memorial committee, made the usual request for the appropriation of $100 for Memorial Day, and the same was granted. A petition was received from the residents of Johnston avenue asking for electric lights on their street between Front and Second streets. This petition was referred with power. J. F. McIntyre and Charles H. Hand, who were bondmen for former City Treasurer Alex. Titsworth, asked to be released from the bond, and the same was referred to the proper committee. Two licenses for truck and hack were received and granted. Three petitions were received from residents on the line of the street railway asking that the Council adopt an ordinance compelling the company to sprinkle the streets upon which their tracks are laid. All three were referred to the proper committee. A large batch of petitions were received from taxpayers who had received tax bills, and the same were referred to the proper committee. The bond of the Plainfield Sanitary Company was presented, but owing to the fact that the document did not designate the location of the plant, the bond was referred back to the company. Mayor Fisk appointed Theodore Hooper a special policeman, and the appointment was confirmed. Mr. Hooper is the janitor of the Mt Zion A. M. E. church and for this reason he was appointed. The reports of the city treasurer, collector and overseer of the poor were received and filed. Street Commissioner Gavett reported that ninety sewer permits had been granted during the month of April, and up to date 900 had been granted. On the recommendation of the Board of Engineers J. W. Gavett was placed on the exempt fire men's list. Inspector of Buildings T. O. Doane reported that thirty-one permits had been granted during the month. Mr. Baker stated that all corrections of indebtedness on account of the sewer had been cancelled, and that bonds had been issued.

Mr. Stebbins offered a resolution to the effect that inasmuch as Drivers James Daley and George Fiering, of the fire department, had served three years there salaries be raised from $60 to $65 a month. This resolution was adopted, as was also another to the effect that the salary of Driver James Bailey be raised from $25 to $60 a month, he having served six months.

Mr. Westphal stated that he thought that it was an unnecessary expense to hire the latter driver under such conditions, which are that he furnish a horse. He thought that the city should own the horse which is used for Chief Doane. Mr. Newman said that he could see no economy in such a scheme. According to Mr. Westphal's plans a driver would cost the city $40 and that would only leave $10 for a horse. Mr. Westphal asked if it was necessary that the chief should have a driver. To this there was no reply, and the resolution did not receive the support of President Dumont and Mr. Westphal for they voted in the negative.

Fire alarm boxes were ordered placed at the corner of Park and Arlington avenues, beyond Ninth street, and at the corner of South avenue and Berckman street. Three fire hydrants were also ordered as follows: South avenue and Berckman street; South avenue and Central street; Grant and Sherman avenues.

Mr Serrell stated that the committee on assessment and collection of taxes desired more time to examine the petitions received from the taxpayers regarding their tax bills and the committee would report later.

On the recommendations of Mr. Tolles an electric light was ordered placed at No. 117 Hillside avenue.

Mr. Baker offered a resolution that $4 875.75 be borrowed for the general fund in anticipation of taxes, and the same was so ordered.

Mr. Barrows offered a resolution that all property owners on Second street, between Watchung avenue and Madison avenue, be required to curb the street in front of their property to conform to the city grade.

The application of the residents of Sycamore avenue, who have opened the new portion of the street, and who asked the city to accept the same, was received, and Mr. Barrows offered a resolution to the effect that the street be accepted on the condition that a bond of $3,000 be filed within ten days that the street will be macadamized, curbed, graded, and that drain pipes be laid and that the sidewalk be flagged. Also that the petitioners stand all expense of litigation should there be any. The resolution was adopted but it is safe to say that the street will never be accepted on such conditions.

On a motion made by Mr Serrell the time limit for the collection of back taxes previous to the adoption of the Martin act was extended to May 17th, and following this Mr Serrell moved that when council adjourned it be to meet on that date.

Mr. Serrell made a highly interesting report showing in detail the valuation of each ward in the city and the an unt of money received from the same, also the amount of benefits received. Mr. Serrell's object in doing this was to show that the Fourth Ward is not receiving its proportion of benefits and improvements. The report is as follows and will prove interesting reading:

	TOTAL. Acres.	Valuation.
1st ward	810	$1,894,197
2d ward	1,923	3,194,488
3d ward	1851	1,867 919
4th ward	775	1,764,995
		$7,531,489

DISTRICT.

In district bounded by brook, Richmond street, Stelle avenue, Plainfield and Girard avenues, and brook.

	Acres.	Per Acre.	Per ct.
1st ward	150	$1,182,497	$7,883.31	23
2d ward	146	1,304,559	8,935.33	27
3d ward	151	1,297,104	8 608.35	19
4th ward	708	1,065,926	1,761.80	30
	98 per cent.	$5,349,984	98.

SURDIVIDED—ALL TOLD.

	Acres.		Per acre.
1st ward	150	$1,182,497	$8,079.34
Outside	660	511,560
	810	$1,694,197
About 25½ per cent.
	Acres.		Per acre.
2d ward	146	$1,304,559	$1,503.97
outside	1,176	889,929
	1,379	$2,194,488
About 30½ per cent.
	Acres.		Per acre.
3d ward	181	$1,307,150	$2,027.73
outside	750	560,069
	931	$1,867,819
About 30 per cent.
	Acres.		Per acre.
4th ward	108	$1,068,220	$2,277.41
" outside	667	696,775
	775	$1,764,995
About 28 per cent.

About 85½ per cent. for the 1st and 4th wards against about 66½ per cent. for the 2d and 3d wards.

The strictly business portion of the city is included in an area of 64 acres, bounded by Green brook, Watchung avenue, Fourth street, Central avenue and Grove street. The total assessment in this area is $1,378,397, a little more than 1-5 of the total city assessment.

This district is entirely in the 1st and 4th wards, and much the large part and most valuable proportion in the 4th ward.

ELECTRIC LIGHTS.

First ward	110
Second ward	204
Third ward	165
Fourth ward	161
	640

HYDRANTS.

First ward	49
Second ward	82
Third ward	74
Fourth ward	49
	255

After the reading of the above statement Mr. Serrell moved that the same be referred to the street committee for the purpose that each ward could receive equal benefits, and that the committee could have something to guide them in their work. After disposing of this matter the Council adjourned until May 17th.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo O., is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo O. Sold by druggists, 75c. Hall's Family Pills are the best.

KIDNAPPED BY A TRAIN.

PERCY BILLINGS CARRIED AWAY FROM HOME ON A FREIGHT TRAIN.

He Was Playing on the Cars When the Train Started—The Train Slackened at Plainfield and He Jumped Off.

"Is that all you have to eat?" queried fifteen year old Percy Billings as he looked at the bread and water which Patrolman McGee brought to his cell in the station house, Monday morning, for his morning meal.

"That's all," replied the officer as he handed over the scanty meal to the lad behind the bars. "It isn't as good as you get at home, is it?"

"No," dolefully answered the boy.

Percy Billings is the son of George Billings, the proprietor of a large paint store in Philadelphia. Mr. Billings is well off and lives on South street, some distance out. Yesterday afternoon, Percy and several of his associates wandered over to the freight yards of the Philadelphia and Reading railroad.

All went well until the boys found a train that was about to start for Jersey City. They had climbed up on one of the cars when the train started to move. That was more fun than playing that the train was going. The speed of the train increased and the boys began to think about getting off.

But the train didn't stop. Philadelphia was left behind and the open fields of Pennsylvania passed quickly by. Night came on and with it rain.

The train slackened its speed here and Percy jumped off. Sergeant Kiely put him in the station house for safe-keeping, and next morning Chief Grant telegraphed to the boy's parents.

THE EARTH WAS UNSTEADY.

Kelly Thought So and the Policeman Locked Him Up.

No man shall experiment with Jersey lightning unless he is prepared to take care of himself or let the police take care of him, so have said the good fathers of the city and it was only in following out their directions that City Judge DeMeza made the following suggestive remark to Michael Kelly, "Ten dollars or thirty days." Kelly is now considering the advantages of a month's free lodging.

Patrolman Saunders found Brother Kelly on Plainfield avenue. The earth was remarkably unsteady, according to Kelly's point of view, and it had a way of flying up and hitting him that was unpleasant. He spoke to the earth for its uneasy behavior and criticized it gyrations until the neighbors looked at him in awe. Then Saunders came along and suggested that the station house was built on a firm foundation and thither they went.

The Judge thought thirty days in the county jail a good cure for such troubles but intimated that $10 added to the city treasury would do as well. Kelly is now considering the matter.

NEW OPEN CARS.

Fine Rolling Stock of the Street Railway Company.

The five new open cars for the Plainfield Street Railway have not arrived yet, but they are expected in a few days. The delay is occasioned by the non-arrival of the trucks for them, and as soon as the latter arrive, they will be placed in position at once and the cars shipped for Plainfield.

In the meantime, the trucks and motor have been removed from closed car No. 4, and placed on one of the old open cars, No. 10. The changes in the others will be made now as fast as possible until all the open cars are ready for use. It is expected that be*fore that time the new cars will be* here so that the entire system of street railway lines can be equipped with open cars.

The conductors on all the cars of the street railway will appear on the fifteenth of this month in their new summer uniforms. The uniforms will be blue with brass buttons and the conductors will also turn out on that occasion in straw hats.

The Westfield (Ind.) News prints the following in regard to an old resident of that place: "Frank McAvoy, for many years in the employ of the L., N. A. & C. Ry. here, says: "I have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy for ten years or longer—am never without it in my family. I consider it the best remedy of the kind manufactured. I take pleasure in recommending it." It is a specific for all bowl disorders. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

Special Rates for Unveiling of Washington Monument.

For this occasion, which will take place in Fairmount Park, Philadelphia, on Saturday, May 15th, the Central Railroad of New Jersey will sell excursion tickets from all stations to Philadelphia on May 14th and 15th, good to return until May 17th, inclusive at one fare for the round trip.

Commencement Honors.

The commencement honors have been awarded to the two members of the senior class having the highest rank in scholarship. Miss Sarah E. Schuyler will be salutatorian and Lewis Squires valedictorian.

Pure Blood

Every thought, word and action takes vitality from the blood; every nerve, muscle, bone, organ and tissue depends on the blood for its quality and condition.

Spring Medicine

Therefore pure blood is absolutely necessary to right living and healthy bodies. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the great blood purifier and the best spring Medicine. Therefore it is the great cure for scrofula, salt rheum, humors, sores, rheumatism, catarrh, etc.; the great nervine, strength builder, appetizer, stomach tonic and regulator.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Is sold by all druggists. $1, six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass. Get Hood's and only Hood's.

Hood's Pills take rather dinner aid digestion.

Sweet Peas.

Do not delay planting them, our own mixture contains only the choicest and latest varieties.

LAWN & GARDEN SEEDS and FERTILIZERS, HARDWARE and HOUSEFURNISHINGS.

A. M. GRIFFEN,

119 East Front st.

Telephone Call, 6.

W. R. CODINGTON,

Counsellor-at-Law.

Commissioner of Deeds, Master-in chancery, Notary Public. Offices Corner of Park avenue and Second street.

SEEDS ...FOR THE... Garden and Farm

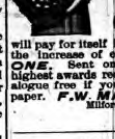
Vegetable and Flower Seeds. All the standard varieties, tested and unsurpassed. Illustrated Catalogue FREE.

WEEBER & DON, Seed Growers, 114 Chambers St., New York City.

1 26 mm



What a Lot of Eggs the hens lay when fed on Green Cut Bone. With a home made

Mann's Green Bone Cutter

will pay for itself in a short time in the increase of eggs. $5 BUYS ONE. Sent on trial. 180 highest awards received. Catalogue free if you name this paper. F. W. MANN CO., Milford, Mass.

2 24 4 9 10 11 —7 mos.

SAVED

After years of suffering. It has at last been proven beyond a doubt that

NASALENE

Is a positive remedy for local diseases which the wealth of gold cannot obtain the same. Cold in the Head. Hay Fever.

CATARRH,

Deafness, (caused by catarrh), are instantly relieved.

It is pleasant to use, convenient to carry. Price 50c. and $1.00, at all druggists.

O. SAGE, Warden of Sing Sing, says: "Nasalene is very beneficial."

HUNTER MEDICAL CO.,

54 E. 31st Street, N. Y.

WANTS AND OFFERS.

BY women, each with an infant or young child, situations in the country (general housework, plain cooking, etc.). Small wages expected. Railroad fare paid by Association. Apply State Charities Aid Association, 105 East Twenty Second street, New York City. 18 1mo

PAINT "Don't decide with the manufacturer—use only the

"FERINITE" COTTAGE COLORS.

Save money and get the best. Send for card of beautiful shades to

THE TAYLOR PAINT & OIL CO.,

29 BURLING SLIP, N. Y. IT WILL PAY YOU.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. is on every wrapper.

JAS. M. DUNN,

Dealer in

GROCERIES, PROVISIONS, VEGETABLES, FRUITS &c

GARDEN SEEDS

fresh and carefully selected.

224 PARK AVENUE,

OPPOSITE NORTH AVENUE.

Everything usually found in a first-class grocery.

Goods delivered free of charge.

PATENTS

CAVEATS, TRADE MARKS, COPYRIGHTS.

CAN I OBTAIN A PATENT? For a prompt answer and an honest opinion, write to MUNN & CO., who have had nearly fifty years' experience in the patent business. Communications strictly confidential. A Handbook of Information concerning Patents and how to obtain them sent free. Also a catalogue of mechanical and scientific books sent free. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

DIME

Savings Institution,

Of Plainfield, N. J.

Is now receiving deposits payable on demand, with interest, allowed on all sums from $5 to $3,000.

JOHN C. MURRAY, President.
J. FRANK HUBBARD, Vice-President
J. C. POPE, Treasurer.

Money deposited on or before January tenth will draw interest from the first.

GEORGE W. DAY,

General Auctioneer.

Sales of Personal Property solicited. P. O. Box 132, Plainfield, N. J., or address in care of Constitutionalist. Terms reasonable

Townsend's

Marble and Granite Works,

30

Somerset st., North Plainfield.

If you have not engaged your work I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

Lettering neatly executed. Orders can be added to or reduction in the price for any work to the customer, of the commission generally paid by agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and two men doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the sale of all work, and feel sure that business in this light, that Good Work and Good Prices will be appreciated by those in the market for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no one will sell as cheap as myself for the same stock any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

J. E. TOWNSEND, Manager.

Branch yard, Westfield, N. J.

NEW JERSEY SUPREME COURT

To Richard Garretson, defendant, or whom it may concern:

Please take notice that the following writ of Sequestration issued out of the Supreme Court of the State of New Jersey, to wit:

[L. S.]

The State of NEW JERSEY to our Sheriff of Somerset County, GREETING:—

WHEREAS, lately in our Supreme Court of Judicature, holden at Trenton, before the Justices of the same, in the Chancery Court JOHN D. BARTINE recovered against RICHARD GARRETS N the sum of five hundred and thirty dollars and eighty-three cents damages, which he had sustained by occasion of certain promises and assumptions then by him, the said JOHN D. BARTINE then lately made by the said RICHARD GARRETSON, defendant, as by the said complainant's bill filed in the said Court more fully appears, and whereas the said RICHARD GARRETSON has not yet satisfied the said JOHN D. BARTINE the said damages and costs aforesaid, or any part thereof, although the said JOHN D. BARTINE hath humbly sought us to provide him a proper remedy in the premises, by reason whereof we being willing that right and justice should be done in the premises, do command you, that you enter into and take into your hands all and singular the lands and tenements of the said RICHARD GARRETSON that he be before us and Justices at Trenton, aforesaid, on the thirtieth day of March next, to show if he have or know anything to say for himself why the said JOHN D. BARTINE should not have his execution against him for the damages and costs aforesaid, according to the form, force and effect of the said recovery, if he shall seem expedient to you and them so to do, and to do and receive what our said Court, before the Justices thereof, shall then and there consider of him in this behalf, and have you then and there the names of this writ, by which you shall manifest it to be made known to him and this writing.

WITNESS, MERCER BEASLEY, Esquire, Chief Justice, at Trenton, aforesaid, the seventeenth day of February, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-seven.

BENJ. F. LEE, Clerk. 2 25 5w

POULTRY We keep everything in POULTRY LINE, Fencing, Feeders, Live Stock, Brooders—anything for our business. Call or let us send you our Illustrated catalogue. It's free for the asking. If you want anything,

Excelsior Wire & Poultry Supply Co.,

25 Vesey Street, New York City.

1 28 mm

CARNEY BROS.,

MADISON AVENUE,

Between Front and Second streets.

Tinners, Plumbers Gas Fitters,

Grates and bricks for all kinds of stoves can be found here at Jobbers' prices. Bring your tinware mending to us. The best tinners, the best plumbers, and the best gas-fitters in this section. We use none but the very best of materials, and our work always gives satisfaction. Keys of all kinds are made here. Tinware made to order. Ranges, brick and portable furnaces. Sanitary plumbing.

Wm. A. Woodruff,

Fire and Life

INSURANCE AGENT,

OFFICE,

Corner Front St. and Park Avenue,

Plainfield, N. J.

Real Estate for Sale and Exchange. Money to Loan on Approve Security.

Sanitary Plumbing,

Brick and Portable Furnace

Gas Fitting, Tin Roofing,

Etc., Etc., Etc.

I am prepared to do any of the above branches in strictly first-class sanitary and wormanship manner.

Having associated myself with the Master Members Association of New York City, I employ none but first class mechanics and non-union men. I believe in every man running his own business, at all times and in all cases.

D. W. LITTELL,

No. 112 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J.

ALBERT HEDDEN

Livery & Boarding Stables

FOURTH ST.,

between Watchung and Park avenues, First-class Livery. Horses boarded by week or month. Telephone call, No. 114.

A. WOLFF,

Manufacturer of

CIGARS.

And dealer in all kinds of Smoking and Chewing Tobacco, and smokers' articles, has removed from 239 W. Front street, to 301 West Front street, one door east of Madison avenue and solicits the patronage of his friends and the public generally.

P. P. VanArsdale,

PIANO TUNER.

Instruments put in thorough order. Terms reasonable. Pianos and organs for sale and to let. Orders by postal, P. O. box 160, or left at Willetts' shoe store, No. 107 Park avenue, will receive prompt attention. Residence 301 E. Front street, corner Elm street. 9jly

WANTED—AN IDEA Who can think of some simple thing to patent? Protect your ideas; they may bring you wealth. Write JOHN WEDDERBURN & CO., Patent Attorneys, Washington, D. C., for their $1,800 prize offer.

FRAZER AXLE GREASE Best in the World

It lasts longer, lubricates better, is smoother and more durable than any other grease. Try a box and be convinced. FOR SALE BY ALL DEALERS.

E. B. MAYNARD.

PRACTICAL

BARBER AND HAIR DRESSER.

204 PARK AVE.

Ladies' and Children's Hair Cutting done at their residence. Shaving, Shampooing, etc., satisfactorily performed. 11y1

Woolston & Buckle,

PAINTERS.

Wall Papers, Painters' Supplies

141-145 North avenue.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE.

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS, DESIGNS, COPYRIGHTS &c

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice in the

SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN,

beautifully illustrated, largest circulation of any scientific journal, weekly, terms $3.00 a year; $1.50 six months. Specimen copies and HAND BOOK OF PATENTS sent free. Address

MUNN & CO.,
361 Broadway, New York.

FIFTY YEARS A MINISTER.

GOLDEN JUBILEE OF REV. JOHN W. SARLES, AT STELTON.

For Eighteen Years He Was Pastor of the Stelton First Baptist Church, One of the Oldest Societies in the United States

With impressive services the golden jubilee of the Rev. John W. Sarles, D. D., was celebrated Friday in the First Baptist church at Stelton, Middlesex County, of which he has been the pastor for eighteen years. Of all the churches in New Jersey few have a more eventful history than this quaint, old-fashioned edifice. It was in 1689 that the church was constituted. The church, it is said, was the second in the State to receive its charter, and the tenth to be organized in the United States. In 1747 the church numbered one hundred members, scattered throughout Middlesex County. This little congregation was destined to become the founder of several other churches, which have since become prominent in the denomination. On September 8, 1747, fifteen members founded an independent Baptist church at Scotch Plains, five years later another band organized a church at Morristown, and twenty-three members of the church on September 21, 1816, founded the First Baptist church in New Brunswick, from which several other churches have sprung.

In the Revolutionary war, when the British troops were quartered in the city of New Brunswick, the historic church at Stelton was sacked by the British, and the records from the beginning of its organization were destroyed. What is known of the church's history in the early days has been gained from careful research among colonial documents and township records. Though the venerable pastor, Dr. Searls, will be eighty years old on June 26 next, he is still hale and hearty, and takes an active part in assisting in the services. A year ago last January he retired from active pastoral work in favor of the Rev. W. D. Durward, receiving the honorary title of Pastor Emeritus of the church. The jubilee celebration began yesterday afternoon in the church, where congratulatory addresses were delivered by Rev. Dr. John T. Beckley, of New York; Rev. Dr. D. C. Hughes, of Brooklyn, Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, of this city, and Thomas O. Conant. At six o'clock last night a dinner was served to the visitors. An hour later the evening service took place.

The services were continued last evening, when the church was filled to its utmost capacity with people who had the rare treat of listening to addresses by Dr. Wayland Hoyt, of Philadelphia, and Dr. H. G. Western, president of Crozier Theological Seminary. Both addresses were highly interesting and very complimentary. A feature of this service was the singing for the first time of the original hymns composed by Rev. Dr. Lowry, who was present and opened the service with prayer. Dr. Searles was given a pleasant surprise at the close of the meeting when he was presented with $600 in gold. The doctor was very much overcome, but he was able to respond and thank those who had so kindly remembered him.

Those who attended the services from this city were Rev. and Mrs. Lowry, Rev. Dr. Yerkes and O. B. Leonard.

A FRENCH CONFERENCE.

Interesting and Instructive Affair Arranged by Mrs. Clapp.

A delightful French conference was held Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. John Clapp, of Mercer avenue, when Monsieur Lacasse was introduced to Mrs. Clapp's friends, who are interested in French. Monsieur Lacasse is a professor from the University of Paris, and has had five years experience in teaching his language in Washington, D. C. With pure diction and pleasant manner he gave an interesting sketch of the life of Francois Coppee, following with two monologues selected from his writings. Monsieur Lacasse showed much dramatic power in these recitations, the tone of which was pathetic. An appreciative audience gave him their undivided attention.

Miss Frances Weir rendered a charming selection on the piano, followed by an encore. Tea and refreshments announced the return to English speech and social chat. The aids in serving the tea were Miss Clapp, the Misses Haviland, Shreve, Weir, Faber, Henderson, Hegeman and Miss Meade of New York.

Presented With a Bible.

George R. Cornwell, one of the best workers in the First M. E. church and the Y. M. C. A. has left Plainfield and taken up his residence in New York. Yesterday afternoon, he served for the last time as assistant superintendent of the Sunday-school of the First M. E. church. After the lesson, Superintendent J. W. Jackson presented Mr. Cornwell with a handsome Bible and an engraving of "St. Anthony" as a token of remembrance of the officers and teachers of the school. Mr. Jackson made a few remarks to which Mr. Cornwell replied.

HIS SKULL FRACTURED.

JAMES CAMPBELL STRUCK BY A TRAIN NEAR WHITEHOUSE.

Found on the Tracks Early Sunday Morning and Brought to the Muhlenberg Hospital—He Cannot Recover.

About 3 o'clock Sunday morning the body of a colored man was found on the Central Railroad tracks about a half mile west of Whitehouse. The man was saturated with water and suffering from a fracture of the skull. At the time the man was not known and he was brought to this city in a caboose and taken to the hospital from Grant avenue in the ambulance. Dr. Long was summoned and he in turn called the medical staff, who made a thorough examination of the injured man. It was learned that there was a complete fracture of the skull in two places, each one inch in diameter, and that the fractured bones were crushing the brain. The staff decided to perform an operation at 9 o'clock yesterday morning, which they did. The man was in an unconscious condition all day, and it was hardly thought he could recover. He did not seem to be injured in any other way.

The name of the man is Jas. Campbell, it was learned later, and he was formerly a resident of this place and New Market. He was employed on a farm at the latter place. He is a well known character and has lived in this locality for years. It is supposed he went to Whitehouse to visit friends and while there imbibed too freely. It was while on his way back that he walked on the tracks and was struck in the head by an engine drawing a coal train. He was not discovered at the time and it is supposed that he had laid on the tracks for nearly an hour. Campbell is about fifty years old and as far as can be learned he is unmarried. It is not thought that he can get well.

PUBLIC LIBRARY.

April Bulletin of New Books—A Selection.

The following are the new books that have been added to the Library during April:

Abbott, L., Christianity and Social Problems.
Adams, G. B., Civilization During the Middle Ages.
Andrews, C. M., Historical Development of Modern Europe.
Audsley, G. A., Keramic Art of Japan.
Baldwin, Ja., Readings in the Britannica.
Bryant, W. C., Picturesque America. 2 v.
Cameron, V. L., Across Africa.
Corbuhn, R., Landscape Painters of Holland.
Dunbar, P. L., Lyrics of Lowly Life.
Eggleston, E., Beginners of a Nation.
Gannett, H., Building of a Nation.
Garves, A., Memories of War and Peace.
Goodyear, W. H., History of Art, 2 v.
Gower, R., Figure Painters of Holland.
Greenaway, K., Under the Window.
Hamerton, P. G., Autobiography.
Hawkins, A. H., Paroso.
Head, P. R., VanDyck an. Hals.
Hervey, M. H., Dark Days in Chile.
Hobson, J. A., Problem of the Unemployed.
Jones, W., Crowns and Coronations.
Kett, C., Rubens.
Kipling, R., Many Inventions, and Balestier, W., The Naulahka.
Lockwood, L., Little Baron Trump.
Latimer, E. W., Italy in the 19th Century.
Lucy, H. W., Diary of the Salisbury Parliament.
Lowell, F. C., Joan of Arc.
McCarthy, J. H., Thousand and One Days. 2 vols.
Matthews, Ja. E., Studies of the Stage.
Moulton, R. G., Bible as Literature.
Muther, R. G., History of Modern Painting, 3 vols.
N. J. Officers and Men in the Civil War. 2 v.
Putnam, G. H., Books and Their Makers. 2 vols.
Pyle H., Jack Ballister's Fortunes.
Reid & McNally's Atlas of the World.
Republic of Colombia. (Anon).
Richardson, Messages of the Presidents v 3.
Riley, J. W., Child World.
Rodenbough, T. F., Army of the U. S.
Rolfe, W. J., Shakespeare, the Boy.
Santayana, G., Sense of Beauty.
Scudder, G. D., William I and the German Empire.
Skinner, C. M., Myths and Legends of Our Own Lands, 2 v.
Smith, Mrs. F. A., On the Face of the Waters.
Stevenson, R. L., In the South Seas.
Story, Jos., Exposition of the Constitution.
Stoddard, W. O., Sword-maker's Son.
Strange and Krehbiel Annotated Bibliography of Fine Arts and Music.
Taylor, H. O., Ancient Ideals, 2 v.
Taylor, J., Names and Their Meanings.
Upton, R. K., Two Boys in Dixie.
Vaporeau, G., Dictionnaire des contemporains.
VanDyke, H., Gospel for an Age of Doubt.
Wheatley, H. B., How to Form a Library.
Wanters, A. G., Stanley's Emin Pasha Expedition.
Wells, D. A., America and Europe.
Weber, A., History of Philosophy.

More Than Paid Expenses.

The officers of the University Extension Society report that the total receipts of the course of last season were $716.70; the expenses, $625.78; leaving a balance in the hands of the treasurer of $90.92. This statement covers the work in the Fourth Ward in which the disbursements were $149 90 in excess of the receipts. It is urgently requested that all persons wishing to join in the work of next winter immediately send their names to Miss A. P. Newton, secretary, East Ninth street, stating the number of tickets desired.

A New Mission Chapel.

It is expected that before long work will be started on the erection of the East Third street Mission chapel. Nearly enough money has been subscribed for the structure and as soon as the required sum is obtained the work will be commenced.

THREATEN A LIBEL SUIT

CONSTABLE ROBERT PIERCE WANTS TO MULCT EDITOR RUNYON.

He Claims That the News Editor Published Statements That Were Injurious to His Character—Suit Not Instituted Yet.

Robt. Pierce, the constable who figured in the exciting landlord and tenant case of Stein against Meserole, threatens to bring a suit for heavy damages against Editor Frank W. Runyon, of the News, for alleged libel. Pierce takes exception to some of the statements published in reporting the case in the News, which he seems to think are injurious to his good name. Pierce first called on Justice Suydam, of New Brunswick, and wanted him to institute proceedings against Editor Runyon. The Justice told him that he had no jurisdiction over such an affair and referred him to Judge Cowenhoven, a well-known New Brunswick lawyer. The offended constable called on Judge Cowenhoven and told his grievances, but the Judge did not take his case. Whether or not Pierce has placed the matter in the hands of any other lawyer it is impossible to learn. It is said that he wanted to sue Editor Runyon for $20,000.

In publishing whatever statements he did in the News, Editor Runyon probably had no intendon of maliciously libeling the constable. Newspaper editors are constantly threatened with all kinds of suits for defamation of character, etc, etc., but it is seldom that they amount to more than talk or threats. Of course, now and then a suit is started, but it generally ends in defeat for the instigator. However, it is annoying to publishers to be compelled to defend such attacks, and we trust Editor Runyon may be spared the trouble of defending a libel suit.

THE BISHOP CONFIRMS.

NEW ADDITIONS TO THE LOCAL EPISCOPAL CHURCHES.

Bishop Scarborough Conducted the Services and Gave Good Words of Advice to the Young People Who Were Given Rites.

Bishop Scarborough was present at the morning service in the Grace P. E. church, yesterday, and confirmed a large class. The class was composed of eleven girls and thirteen boys. The Bishop made an address to the class as they stood before him and gave them words of good and profitable advice as to their future conduct. During his remarks, John Pickering, a slight lad, was overcome by the excitement of the occasion and fainted. He was quietly carried to the choir room by two of the choir and the service went forward without interruption.

Bishop Scarborough attended the service at the Church of the Redeemer last evening and made a very eloquent address. The attendance was excellent considering the weather and all enjoyed the remarks of the Bishop. There was no confirmation class and this part was omitted.

The service at Holy Cross church yesterday morning was unusually interesting. Bishop Scarborough was present and confirmed a class of sixteen. His address to the new members was one of the best ever listened to and it is full of good spiritual advice both to those who joined and the older members of the church. The altar was prettily decorated with lilies and roses, and the music was a pleasing feature.

THROWN OUT OF A WAGON.

A Fractious Horse Hurts a Driver Near Union Village.

A serious runaway accident occurred late Saturday night on the road from Plainfield to Passaic, near Union Village. Otto Jerod, of Passaic, was on his way home from Plainfield and when near the Union village his horse became frightened and ran away. Jerod lost all control of the animal and before he could save himself the horse run the wagon into a tree and threw him out. Jerod received a deep cutin the forehead and his leg was severely sprained. The excited animal kept on running and finally collided with a fence. This resulted in the wrecking of the wagon. The horse then broke away from the wagon and before he stopped he reached the owners' premises at Passaic.

In the meantime the groans of the injured man attracted the attention of John Burnett, who lives near by, and the latter took Jerod into his house, where he was given proper treatment. Later Mr. Burnett took Jerod home with his own rig. The latter will recover though his injuries will confine him to the house for some time. His escape was certainly very miraculous. The horse was not injured.

Garwood's School Still Running.

The report in several of the New York papers that the public school at Garwood had been closed by the Garwood Land Improvement Company is a mistake, as the school is open and will remain so until the end of the school year. Next year, it is expected that the school boards of the townships of Westfield and Cranford will assume control and pay the expenses of running the school.

FROM JAIL TO HOSPITAL.

A NOTORIOUS PLAINFIELD WOMAN HAS A CRACKED SKULL.

Johanna Haley, Who Spends Most of Her Time in Jail, Lies in a Precarious Condition as a Result of a Drunken Spree.

There is no more regular attendant at the Union county jail in Elizabeth than Johanna Haley. She is more at home in jail than she is anywhere else, although Plainfield is nominally spoken of as her home. Now she lies ill with a fractured skull in the Elizabeth Hospital and the doctors have little hope of her recovery.

There is no name better known in the police annals of this city than Johanna Haley. She visits the police courts of this city, Westfield and Elizabeth at regular intervals, usually charged with drunkenness, and the judges send her down for a term at the county jail. For many years she has continued that kind of an existence, making a little money now and then at washing, only to spend it at once on "Jersey lightning" or some other equally powerful intoxicant.

On March 26, 1896, she was arraigned before City Judge DeMeza on the charge of being drunk and disorderly and trying to steal a pair of gloves from Gregg's hat store on Park avenue. It was alleged that she hid the gloves under her shawl and started to depart with them when she was stopped. The Judge found her guilty and sent her down to Elizabeth for forty days. After her release from the jail, she went to Westfield and and had a tete-tete with the judge in that place, with another trip to jail as a result.

After sundry wanderings, Johanna landed in Plainfield just one year from the time of her last remembered visit and celebrated the occasion by getting most gloriously drunk. The police did their share in the celebration and locked her up. She appeared before the Judge, on March 29th, and was sentenced to thirty days in jail.

When she was released on April 26th, she again celebrated the event but this time in Elizabeth. She was found on Union street, Elizabeth, in a state of intoxication and arrested. She complained at the time that she had had a fall and hurt herself but the police thought it the cavings of a drunken woman and paid no attention. She was sent to jail for fifteen days. Saturday, she again complained and an examination was made revealing the fact that her skull was fractured. She was conveyed to the Elizabeth Hospital where she now lies. She is steadily growing worse.

DANCING CLASS RECEPTION.

A Pleasant Event Arranged by Miss Van Zandt's Pupils.

The members of Miss Van Zandt's dancing class gave a reception in the rooms of the Plainfield Camera Club, in the Babcock building, last Friday. A delightful evening was spent. Miss Helen A. Hasbrouck was the pianist. Refreshments were served during the evening. Mrs. Harold Serrell and Mrs. Bronson Smith, the patronesses. Among those present during the evening were the Misses Elsie Van Zandt, Jennie Van Zandt, Grace Van Zandt, Florence Serrell, Elsie Jobs, Elma Thayer, Eleanor Williams, Clara Long, Cora Laire, Miss Angie S. Kuhl, of Somerville, and Miss Nettie Langdon, of New York, Henry W. Brower, Carroll L. Runyon, Benjamin O. Bowers, Jr., A. Willis West, Eugene Jobs, Clifford M. Crane, Edward Kline, William Glading, of Brooklyn, William A. DeLong, Jr., Bronson Smith, Henry B. Drake, Howard Turrill, and George Proctor Smith.

PINGRY'S PITCHER AN EASY THING.

High School Base Ball Team Won Their First Victory.

The Plainfield High School baseball nine won its first victory in the contest for the championship of New Jersey Interscholastic Athletic Association, Saturday, by defeating the nine from Pingry's School of Elizabeth, by a score of 27 to 10. The game was played on the Washington avenue grounds, Plainfield.

The Plainfield boys found the Elizabeth pitcher an easy thing in the first three innings and batted out twenty runs with the assistance of Pitcher Gray, of Elizabeth, who gave them nine base on balls in the three innings. Meanwhile Pingry's team could not hit Sutphen, who pitched for Plainfield. In the next three innings the luck changed, and Elizabeth scored seven to Plainfield's nothing. In the seventh and last inning, the High School boys scored seven runs. The Plainfield boys batted well and fielded excellently. Fisher, at short, particularly distinguished himself. The score by innings was as follows:

High School—	5	5	10	0	0	0	7	—27
Pingry's	—	0	0	0	4	3	3	0	—10

To Open June 1st.

Mountain Park Inn will open for the season June 1st. Manager Moulton will arrive in Plainfield about the last of May and will at once prepare for the opening. This season promises to be very successful and already a number of people are booked for the summer.

A SMALL SIZED FLOOD.

HEAVY RAIN FALL DID SOME DAMAGE SATURDAY NIGHT.

Green Brook Overflowed Its Banks and Prevented Traffic Near Sebring's Mills—A Very Nasty Night for Pedestrians.

High winds and a remarkably heavy rainfall marked the storm that visited this section on Saturday night and Sunday. The rain came in gusts that were extremely fierce. All Saturday, the clouds portended rain and hung dark and threatening overhead. It sprinkled in the morning several times but the storm did not set in until late in the afternoon, when it began with a few drops that fell easily and softly. Just before 8 o'clock, the wind increased in volume and the rain began to fall in torrents. The crowd of Saturday evening shoppers were driven home or else did not venture out and the business part of the city was remarkably quiet for a Saturday evening.

The rain did not fall steadily but came in strong gusts in which the very fountains of the heavens seemed to have been let loose. With the rain was a high wind that turned umbrellas inside out and with great facility. While it was bad enough in the city, it was worse on the outskirts of the city where the wind had full sweep. Limbs were torn off trees and grape-arbors were wrecked and other damage done.

All night the rain continued to fall without abatement and Sunday morning the storm was its height. By noon, the worst of it was over and there was nothing more than a drizzle to disturb those who ventured out. After the sun set, the clouds broke away and the stars came out.

Weather observer Neagle kept an eye on the rain-gauge and reports that the total rainfall was 2.15 inches, which is very large considering the short time in which it fell.

The ground was very dry when the storm began and quickly absorbed much of the water. That prevented a serious flood that would have otherwise occurred in this vicinity. The heavy rainfall swelled the streams far above their usual size. Green brook, in the vicinity of Sebring's Mills, overflowed its banks and flooded the fields. The roadway to the bridge was covered with several feet of water which prevented traffic through there, yesterday. In some places the water was up to the tops of the rail fences, while the barley and rye crops were injured materially by the water.

The flats in the vicinity of Bound Brook the water overflowed, but while the Raritan river rose several feet there was no signs of a flood in that borough and the water, except the rain, did not make its appearance there. The crops in the lowlands, between Bound Brook and Somerville, were damaged to some extent by the water.

SONGS OF FOREIGN LANDS.

Miss Dickson Rendered Selections Typical of Many Countries.

On Saturday evening an entertainment of unusual interest was given at the Hunterton Hotel, Netherwood, when Miss Antonia Dickson, of New York, presented her popular musical "Songs of Foreign Lands," before a large and cultured audience. Miss Dickson is a highly cultured woman and her musical talent is marked. She rendered selections typical of many countries on the piano and her imitations were perfect. The selections were all familiar and the audience was not slow to catch on. At the close of the entertainment Mr. Dickson, a brother of Miss Dickson, sang very acceptably.

In addition to the guests stopping at the hotel there were present: Dr. Robert Hunter, L. M. Porter and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Dickson, D. S. Mason, Mr. Bingham, A. C. Mason, the Misses Plummer, J. D. Ottewell and daughter, Miss L. M. Root, Mr. Kathanel C. H. W. Berbecker, Miss I. C. Irwin, Miss Amy Hyde, of New York; Rev. P. S. Simpson, Mr. and Mrs. Finch, Mr. and Mrs. Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Dyett, Mr. and Mrs. Beal, Miss Beal, Mr and Mrs. Guion, Winfield Angleman, Mr. Davison, of Netherwood.

STRUCK BY A BLUE LINER.

Driver of a Bakery Wagon Hurt at a Cranford Crossing.

Giovani Copola, better known as "The Priest," of late has been driving a bread route for Nicola Orchetti. At about 6 o'clock Sunday morning as Copola was driving over the tracks above Cranford at what is known as the Nitin crossing, an Eastbound Royal Blue Liner flyer struck the wagon and scattered bread, wagon and "The Priest" along the track. The wagon was completely demolished. The horse escaped without injury, but Copola was not so fortunate. He was badly bruised and shaken up. The train stopped and took him aboard and was met at Elizabeth by the ambulance and taken to the General Hospital.

A Finger Crushed.

An employee at the Scott Press works had his finger crushed, Friday afternoon. The injured member was dressed by Dr. Hallock.

A SMALL SIZED FLOOD.

A CULVERT CAVED IN AND MRS. RENNIE COVERED WITH DIRT.

It Was Twenty Minutes Before Her Body Was Reached and Then Life Was Extinct—County May Be Responsible.

The caving in of a culvert over a creek in Middlesex county, between Piscataway and Bonhamtown, shortly after 2 o'clock p. m., Sunday, occasioned an accident by which a woman lost her life. The culvert forms a portion of a county bridge, and the situation is such that an interesting question as to responsibility may arise.

Mrs. Margaret Rennie, a widow, thirty-two years old, lives with her father, Patrick Rodgers, at the top of a steep hill about one mile from Bonhamtown. At the foot of this hill, about 100 yards down, is what is known as Mill Creek, a brook about fifteen feet wide and a foot in depth. Over this creek there has been for forty years an old bridge with a single brick span fifteen feet wide. The County Board of Freeholders not long ago voted to have the bridge widened by the building of another span of similar width. The contract was given to Julius Van Horn, of New Brunswick. On Friday the job was completed, the false centres removed and the bridge thrown open to the public. The two spans constitute a brick arch ten feet above the bed of the stream.

Mrs. Rennie, with her sister, Mrs. Matilda Martin, who lives near by, started yesterday afternoon to take a walk.

They stopped a moment on the new portion of the bridge. Suddenly the earth gave away, and Mrs. Martin had just time to jump to hard ground. The entire structure caved in, and Mrs. Rennie was buried as completely as if a yawning chasm had opened to receive her.

Mrs. Martin ran for assistance, and soon Mr. Rodgers, Henry Thomas and Samuel Martin were digging for Mrs. Rennie's body. The debris had dammed up the brook and forced the water to rise, so that all the earth and bricks were submerged. Mrs. Rennie was found in twenty minutes in a sitting posture, with her head forward. There was a slight abrasion on the forehead, and death was due to drowning. Word was sent to County Physician Samuel Long, and he went to the scene at once. After an autopsy he gave a permit for burial.

James M. Parsons, a member of the Freeholders' Committee on the bridge, said last night that the new portion of the bridge had not yet been examined by the county engineer or accepted by the committee, and that the county could not be held liable.

Loosened masonry, due to the heavy rain on Saturday night, no doubt occasioned the accident.

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE.

Mrs. Steven R. Hope Receives an Unexpected Visitation from Friends.

Mrs. Steven R. Hope, of East Third street, celebrated the sixty-fourth anniversary of her birthday Friday, and in the evening she was pleasantly surprised by her many friends who called on her very unexpectedly. She was not aware that her visitors were coming and the surprise was all the more complete. The company met at the home of a friend nearby and marched in a body to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hope, where they found everything quiet. They immediately took possession of the house and made themselves comfortable after congratulating their honored hostess. Among the guests were a number of young people who found pleasure in playing the latest games, while the older ones were more sedate.

Interspersing the social part of the affair a short programme consisting of piano solos by Mrs. King, Miss Vannatta, Miss Florence Symons, vocal solos by John Hope, and instrumental and vocal selections by the Martin Brothers, was rendered. Each selection was encored heartily. Late in the evening the guests were served with refreshments after which they departed for their home wishing their hostess many, many happy returns of the day. Those present were:

Mrs. Weber, Mrs. Terrill, Mrs. Scull, Mrs. I. C. Vannatta, Mrs. Manchester, Mrs. Frank Manchester, Mrs. Inson, Mrs. Clarkson, Mrs. Kelly, Mrs. Gaskill, Mrs. Jennings, Mrs. Workman, Mrs. Clark Hope, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Carbone and children, Mr. and Mrs. John Hope, Miss Rattman, Miss Randolph, Miss Terrill, Miss Scull, Miss Lillian Hope, Miss Florence Symons, Miss Grace Webster, Miss Josie Vannatta, Miss Beulah Waters, Miss Lucy Jennings, Miss Irene Hope, Miss Violet Hope; Harry Scull, Hiram Runnes, William Swick, Vernon Waters, Clifford Braider, Robert Schreiner, of Plainfield; Frank Glockeer, of Elizabeth.

The surprise was arranged by Mrs. I. C. Vannatta and Mrs. John Hope, and to them is due great credit for the able manner in which it was planned. Mrs. Hope received many presents from her friends as reminders of the happy event.

J. L. Lechum is seriously ill at his home on East Front street.

NET DEATH UNDER CARS.

RECORD FOR 1896 SHOWS THAT 323 WERE KILLED BY TRAINS.

Many Victims Were Tramps—1246 Were Injured—Pennsylvania Railroad is the Route for Those Who Beat Their Way.

The railroads of New Jersey are so numerous, so active and so compact that there go down under the wheels many to a quick death, others to survive as physical wrecks. The official report of the number mown down by the railroads last year, tabulated by the State Comptroller, is now available.

It shows that there were killed and injured more people than live now in the village of Tenafly, in Bergen county, and the last census gives that place 1,532 souls. The injured gathered together and placed in one locality would make nearly the same population as that of Midland Park, which has 1,254 residents, while the dead are greater in number than those who live in Holly Beach, which is accredited in the census report with 319 inhabitants.

New Jersey has 130 railroads, with 4,557 miles of trackage. Some of these are important roads having their terminals in the State. There is more trackage and railroad property in this State to the acre covered than in any other State. There are more killed and injured to the population, and the report just submitted shows the largest number yet recorded. It is a record of 323 killed outright and 1,246 injured, making a total of 1,569 killed and injured. It is even worse than this, because all the accidents are not reported. The law compels the roads to report accident, but there is no penalty for not doing so, and some of the roads report what they only conveniently get hold of.

The coupler continues to be as deadly as ever, and 343 men were injured and 34 killed while in the act of coupling cars.

There were 242 persons killed walking and crossing tracks and 417 were injured in this way. This includes those who walk on the track, cross them or attempt to mount the cars while moving. The majority of those killed were tramps. Those killed from other causes are 23. The injured foot up 300. This includes those hurt getting on and off passenger trains, mishaps by slight collisions and the ordinary run of casualties.

The report of 1896 is heavier because of the frightful accident last summer at the Atlantic City meadows, when 231 were killed and wounded.

In the way of comparison it can be stated that in 1891 there were 278 killed and 1,440 injured, making a total of 1,718 killed and injured. In 1895 the killed were 2 5 and the injured 1,174.

The Pennsylvania Railroad is the favorite route for the tramps and the unfortunate who journey from place to place searching for work. Hundreds ride each day on the freight trains, and the number killed on the tracks by the fast trains and while getting off and on is very large. Last year there were 67 killed and 45 injured while walking on the track; 7 killed and 38 injured getting on and off the trains; 9 killed coupling and 180 injured; 13 killed and 73 injured by other causes, making a total of 96 killed and 73 injured.

There were 326 killed on the United Railroads of New Jersey. The Central Railroad of New Jersey, which has a trackage in this State of more than 71 miles, is another road which has a long chapter of accidents. Those injured from falling off the cars or by attempting to get off while the train was in motion were 70 during 1896, and 5 were killed; 54 were injured by coupling, none fatally; 40 were killed while walking and crossing the tracks, and 27 were injured. Two were killed from other causes and 40 were injured, making a total list of 47 killed, and those injured were 194. Last year on this road there were 49 killed and 269 injured.

The Delaware and Bound Brook Railroad, which is part of the Philadelphia and Reading system between New York and Philadelphia, and which extends from Bound Brook to the Delaware Bridge, had 3 killed and 38 injured. The Easton and Amboy Railroad, a part of the Lehigh Valley system, had 18 killed and 50 injured.

BOULEVARD TO BE BUILT ANYWAY.

Lincoln Road to be Improved by Private Enterprise.

Since it was decided by the Freeholders of Middlesex county last week that the county could not accept the Lincoln Boulevard from Bound Brook to Dunellen, steps have been taken by the property owners along the Boulevard to open up and grade the road at once. The road is already open from Bound Brook to the easterly line of Lincoln proper, and before fall it will be opened up as a public thoroughfare and dedicated to public use. It was contended by some that it would be a too heavy tax on the county to telford pave it this year, but it will be only a short time when this step will be necessary, as this link partly disconnects too many valuable interests on either side.

NO VOTE FOR TRUSTEES

THE LIMITED FRIVILEGES OF WOMEN IN SCHOOL MATTERS.

In New Jersey Women Are Actually Holding Office, But Since 1894 Have Been Unable to Have a Voice in Their Selection.

Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, president of the New Jersey Woman's Suffrage Association, has prepared the following to be published in the newspapers of New Jersey:

New Jersey is one of the twenty-three states in which women posses school suffrage in some form; but in our State the Supreme Court decided in 1894 that the powers conferred on women by the Legislature of 1887 (and exercised by them with increasing advantage to the schools) were in part unconstitutional. At the present moment, therefore, an anomalous and unsatisfactory condition of things prevails in the rural districts. In cities, women do not possess School Suffrage, nor is it proposed to extend it to them.

Women can attend school meetings, (i. e. in rural districts) and can vote for appropriations, and on all questions coming before such meetings, save only that they cannot vote for the election of School Trustee.

Women can, themselves, be elected to the office of school trustee, however. A number of women are now serving in the capacity in different parts of the state.

It is sometimes argued that women should not be permitted to use the ballot lest such use should entail upon some of them the burdens and responsibilities of office. Yet here, in New Jersey, women are actually holding office, but have been unable, since 1894, to choose which of their number shall fill such office.

To remedy this state of things, and to restore to the women of New Jersey the rights and privileges conferred upon them by the Legislature of 1887, three successive Legislatures (of 1895, 1896 and 1897) have voted, with hardly a dissenting voice, in favor of the Amendment to the Constitution which will come before the people at the special election of Sept. 28th, 1897. This amendment, it should be clearly understood, grants no new rights and privileges, but simply restores to women the right to vote at school meetings for the election of members of Boards of Education.

Ours is a conservative State, and yet one which believes in progress, and which is noted for its justice. Since this measure is both conservative and just, in that it makes no new experiments, but simply restores to mothers a voice in the welfare of their children in the school, there is every reason to believe that it will be ratified at the polls in September, as it has been in the Legislature, with hardly a dissenting voice.

LYCEUM CYCLERS WON.

Defeated the Cleveland Cyclers at Bowling by a Good Margin.

The Lyceum Cyclers enjoyed sweet revenge last Friday when they met the Cleveland Cyclers on their alleys and rolled two games. The former team were determined to win both games if possible and they succeeded admirably. At no time during the progress of the games were the visitors in it, and the Lyceum team bowled in their old-time form. There was a good-sized crowd of enthusiastic people present, who cheered their favorites and thus materially helped to win the games. The defeated team will probably arrange another series of games at an early date, for they are anxious to get even. Below will be found the scores of the two games:

P. C. C.

	1st game.	2d game.
Beville	134	179
Gallagher	132	149
Higgins	159	202
Shannon	121	204
Carty	131	197
	719	831

Cleveland Cyclers.

	1st game.	2d game.
Young	133	146
Overmaugh, H	128	159
Overmaugh, T	121	144
Sawdon	128	121
Sawdon	164	130
	674	852

Freeholder Lutkins to Resign.

It is to be regretted that Freeholder Andrew Lutkins, of the borough, is to soon retire from the Somerset County Board. Mr. Lutkins has made one of the best of Freeholders and his valuable assistance and counsel will be sadly missed by the present members who will continue as such. During Mr. Lutkins' term much important work has been accomplished and the good judgment displayed at all times has been a great saving to the county.

On the other hand, the county is to be congratulated that Freeholder Barkalew is to remain and continue to represent the borough so ably.

Y. M. C. A.'s New Year.

The month of May begins a new year in the history of the Young Men's Christian Association. The annual meeting for the election of officers of the association will be held Thursday evening, May 13th, at the association building. All active members are entitled to vote for the officers.

—The Junior Endeavor Society of the Congregational church will hold a sociable on Friday afternoon in the church parlors.

GREETED THEIR PASTOR.

THE METHODISTS EXTEND A WELCOME TO DR. SNODGRASS.

The Reception Was a Special One on the Part of All Concerned—Dr. Snodgrass Well Pleased With His New Associations.

The hand of greeting and good-fellowship was cordially extended to Rev. Dr. Winfield C. Snodgrass by the congregation of the First M. E. church, last Friday, when he and his family were heartily welcomed to their new home. Dr. Snodgrass was appointed to the First church from the Centenary church at Newark by the last conference and made his first appearance here on Easter Sunday. He was welcomed at the time by Rev. Dr. Whitney and then introduced to the congregation. Last evening, however, he was welcomed in a social way at a reception given by the Ladies Aid Society of the church.

The reception that Dr. Snodgrass received was a cordial one, not only on the part of his new congregation, who turned out in large numbers, but by the ministers of the city as well. All but two or three of the clergy of the city, who were unavoidably detained elsewhere, were present and welcomed Dr. Snodgrass into the ministerial circles of Plainfield.

Mrs. Snodgrass was present as were two of her daughters, the eldest one being away at school, and the three Misses Snodgrass. They were introducted among the congregation and left a very pleasant impression with all who met them.

Henry A. McGee acted as master of ceremonies. After all had been seated, a hymn was sung and Rev. A. E. Main led in prayer. James R. Joy was then introduced to make the address of welcome, which he did in a very happy manner. Rev. W. C. O'Donnell extended the welcome of the Ministers Association of the city in a bright speech.

Rev. Dr. Snodgrass was then introduced and replied to the former speakers. He spoke very feelingly of the hearty welcome that he had received by the congregation and how he no longer felt a stranger among them. He referred to the unity among the clergy of the city as something to be very thankful for. His remarks were well-chosen and closed with the wish that his future connection with the church would be as pleasant as the start had been.

The rest of the evening was spent in sociability. The members of the congregation who had not already met the new pastor and his family were then introduced.

The reception committee consisted of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. George R. Cornwell and Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. McGee. The committee on refreshments consisted of Mrs. D. E. Davis, Mrs. C. E. Horne, Miss Jackson, Mrs. N. W. Pike and Miss Sharpe.

AT HYMEN'S ALTAR.

Marriage of Etta May Thorn to Lorenzo D. Townley.

A quiet wedding of April was that of Miss Etta May Thorn, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis B. Thorn, of East Third street, and Lorenzo D. Townley, of Grandview avenue, which was solemnized April 29, at 8 p. m. at the home of Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel.

The bride wore a travelling gown of brown cloth, while the bridemaid, Miss Frances Thorn, sister of the bride, was gowned in green cloth with brown trimmings. The best man was Frank Eick, of East Third street.

After the ceremony the bridal party returned to the home of the bride's parents where a reception was held. Those present only included the relatives of the contracting parties.

The decorations at the house consisted chiefly of smilax and roses and in the parlor the arrangement of flowers was very attractive.

Mr. and Mrs. Townley received the congratulations of those present upon their arrival at the house, and during the evening supper was served. At a late hour the bride and groom left for Canada, and their return they will reside on Grandview avenue, the home of the groom. The collection of presents was a substantial token of esteem on the part of the friends and relatives.

ADJUSTING FOR A TROLLEY COMPANY.

Representatives of a Cross State Line Visit Scotch Plains.

Three trolley magnates were in Scotch Plains Thursday and dinnered at Emery's Hotel. To a Press representative they said that they represented a Trenton trolley syndicate, which had the right of way over almost the entire route from Trenton to Elizabeth, and they were in town trying to amicably adjust matters with property owners along the proposed route where the trolley is to run. The gentlemen were of the opinion that the staid old town of revolutionary times would be connected with the trolley circuit by fall.

Drivers' Salary Raised.

A raise has been made in the salary of Drivers Feiring and Daly of the fire department. They will hereafter be paid $55 a month instead of $50 a month.

ANNUAL CLUB RECEPTION

PROMINENT SOCIETY PEOPLE LENT GRACE AND CHARM TO THE AFFAIR.

Monday Afternoon Club Members and Friends Entertained in a Delightful Manner at the Casino Last Evening

The annual reception of the Monday Afternoon Club was held at the Casino last Thursday, and it was one of the most brilliant affairs of the season. The pretty hall was made exceedingly attractive and it is doubtful whether the decorations were ever equaled. There was a decided charm and beauty about the arrangement and all present were unanimous in their admiration and praise of the committee having the decorations in charge. The stage was completely hidden from view through the use of stately palms, while the change of scenery was a pleasing feature. The use of banquet lamps amid the palms added beauty. About the hall there was a beautiful display of flowers, while the different colored electric lights presented a scene of fairy land. Comfortable seats were arranged about the hall and the large number of pretty sofa pillows afforded ease and enjoyment for the guests. In the rear of the hall surrounding the balcony there was a profusion of flowers and apple blossoms arranged in the most pleasing manner to the eye.

Combined with the beautiful decorations, there was a large number of Plainfield's society women present, together with their escorts, and this added grace and charm. The social side of the affair was the feature, and interspersing its a short programme was presented, which included soprano solos by Miss Louise St. John Westervelt, of New York, accompanied on the piano by F. J. Smith, organist of the Crescent Avenue church, and several solos by Philip Egner, 'cellist, of New York. The selections were cordially received and a number of encores were given.

Mrs. Sterling, president of the club, announced the several numbers and she also made a few remarks in which she extended a cordial welcome on behalf of the club to those present as guests.

The guests were served with refreshments about 11 o'clock and the pleasant affair came to an end. Mrs. Patterson, Mrs. Stockton and Mrs. Randall composed the committee on decorations and entertainment and they were highly complimented for their earnest efforts to provide such an evening of rare pleasure.

WOMEN IN A GYMNASIUM.

PHYSICAL CULTURE CLASS ENDED ITRAINING THURSDAY.

Miss MacMartin, the Instructoress, Presented With a Watch and Chain as a Token of Esteem by Her Pupils.

During the past six months Miss MacMartin has been conducting a gymnasium class at the Y. M. C. A. for women and girls, and the work of the class closed Thursday afternoon for the season. Miss MacMartin is thoroughly trained in her work and she has succeeded in obtaining excellent results with her scholars. For some time she was an instructor in Barnard College, Cambridge, and her methods are up-to-date.

There are at present twenty-five members in the Plainfield class and their work during the season has been very good, which was evidenced yesterday. A very interesting basket ball game was played between the senior and junior members and the latter won by the score of 6 to 4.

An unexpected pleasure was realized by Miss MacMartin when Miss Anna Miller, on behalf of the class, presented her with a handsome watch and chain as a token of esteem. Miss Miller made a few happy remarks which were responded to in an appreciative manner by Miss MacMartin.

It is the intention next year to form a fencing class among the members, and all who are interested in joining the class can apply to Mrs. Eaton, 229 East Fifth street, who will give all information.

Will Remove to Raritan.

The Somerset Lighting Company has come to an agreement with Mr. Duke and the Raritan Water Power Company, whereby their electric plant is to be removed to Raritan. The new power house is now in course of erection near the Star Mill, and when completed will be one of the best equipped houses in the State. The Somerset Lighting Company purpose getting a new dynamo with which they can furnish power as well as light. The new plant will be in operation by the middle of September.

Rasores Club Attracts Attention.

Harper's Bazar of May 1st has an article on "Club Women and Club Work" from the pen of Margaret Hamilton Welch, in which a short history of the Rasores Club, of Plainfield, is given. Complimentary reference is made to Mrs. Horace Kimball, the president, and Mrs. Halloway, the secretary, whose witty remarks on the name of the club, given at the last anniversary meeting, are quoted.

EDUCATION OF NEGROES.

TUSKEGEE STUDENTS TALK OF THEIR SCHOOL AND WORK.

Young Men and Women Who Have Had No School Advantages at Home Find Book Intelligence at a Normal Institute.

"Negro Education in the Black Belt of the South" was the subject of a very interesting public meeting held Thursday in the Crescent avenue Presbyterian church, in the interests of the Normal and Industrial Institute of Tuskegee, Alabama. The Institute was represented by Thomas J. Calloway, assistant to the principal, Booker T. Washington, Mrs. L. N. Calloway, one of the teachers, and four of the students, Miss Esther L. Spies and Miss Edna A. Spies, '98, and William Bolden and Edward N. Broadnax, '99. All were colored.

Rev. William R. Richards, D. D., introduced Mr. Calloway, under whose direction the exercises proceeded. He called upon William Bolden to say something about his life as a student for the ministry at Tuskegee, and the manly young fellow, almost as black as ebony, but with a clear brain and an earnest Christian spirit, told of his early desire for an education, which his father lacked the means to give him, his delight on hearing that at Tuskegee he could work and support himself while studying, and his entrance and life there, spending so many hours in work and so many in school, and trying in spare hours to do missionary work in the surrounding country.

Mrs. Calloway, a pleasant-faced young woman, scarcely darker than a brunette American, described the work of the school, with its division of time between work and study, and the outreaching of the directors to help those whom the school did not reach. In that section of the country the black population far outnumbers the white, and Mrs. Booker T. Washington has established in the town various organizations to lead the people to a higher life. She holds classes in cooking, cleaning, etc., has started a circulating library, a social purity club, and others, which have a large influence. She has also opened a school on a neighboring plantation, where only one or two could read or write.

Mr. Calloway himself told of the early life of Booker T. Washington, who was educated at Hampton, and who established the Tuskegee Institute, and related many interesting facts about the latter. They have nearly 1,000 students and eighty instructors. The school provides an English education, combined with industrial training. Twenty-five industries are in constant operation; the young men work at farming, brickmaking, blacksmithing, painting, etc., while the young women are given such employments as sewing, mending, cooking and laundry work. Graduates go forth well equipped to earn their living, and give great satisfaction to their employers. They are also much interested in raising their own people to a higher plane of life, and in this some of them are succeeding nobly, for what the people of the south need is some one to lead and guide them, and show them how to make the most of their lives.

A very pleasant feature of the evening was the singing of a number of the wierd plantation melodies by the four students, Mrs. Calloway as leader. "Steal Away," "Peter on de Sea," "Befoe I'd be a Slave," and several others were sung by the soft Southern voices, and were heartily enjoyed. The students had all bright and intelligent young faces, the two girls being decidedly pretty, and almost white.

At the close of the exercises, Dr. Richards said a few earnest words in praise of the noble work done by the Institute, and an offering was taken for its benefit.

MAY NOT ACCEPT THE ROAD.

Middlesex Freeholders Inspect the New Road Near Bound Brook.

The road committee of the Middlesex County Board of Chosen Freeholders met at Taylor's Hotel, Dunellen, Thursday, but the session was private. It is understood, however, that the committee voted against the acceptance of the new road laid out from Bound Brook through the new town of Lincoln to Dunellen, entering the latter place at a point just west of Taylor's Hotel. The main objection was said to be from those living on the old road who claimed that by opening the new one, all, or mostly all, the traffic would be taken from the old thoroughfare, and in consequence they would thereafter have to go begging for road repairs.

Commissioners to be Appointed.

The partition suit of Miles against Miles was tried before Vice Chancellor Stevens at his chambers in Newark on Friday and he decided to appoint commissioners of partition.

Nurses' Graduation.

The graduation exercises of the training class at the Muhlenberg Hospital will be held on May 27th. The place where they will be held has not been decided.

—According to custom the oyster will now have a rest for awhile.

PRETTY HOME WEDDING.

MISS CAROLINE ERIKSEN MARRIED TO FREDERICK SCHREINER.

The Ceremony Performed by Rev. Mr. Braker, of Scotch Plains, at the Home of the Bride in Netherwood.

One of the prettiest of home weddings was celebrated last week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jeppe Eriksen, of South avenue, when their daughter, Miss Caroline Eriksen, and Frederick Schreiner, of Scotch Plains, were united in marriage by Rev. Dr. Braker, pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church. The ceremony was performed at 7 o'clock in the presence of the relatives and a few intimate friends of the contracting parties.

The bride was attractive in a gown of brown cloth trimmed with silk, and she carried a shower-bouquet of bridal roses. The maid of honor, Miss Caroline Borrup, of Netherwood, was gowned in white crepe trimmed with lace and ribbons. Emily Schreiner, sister of the groom, and Mamie Eriksen, sister of the bride, were flower girls, and both were prettily gowned in white swiss trimmed with blue ribbons, and they carried bouquets of pink roses. They preceded the bridal pair and maid of honor. The best man was James Eriksen, brother of the bride. A shower of congratulations followed the ceremony, after which a sumptuous wedding supper was served to all. This pleasing feature of the happy event was complete in every detail and all to be desired. During the evening some excellent vocal and instrumental music was rendered and the guests passed a pleasant time in a sociable manner. The presents received by Mr. and Mrs. Schreiner were both costly and useful.

The table was attractively decorated with choice roses arranged in a pleasing manner. There was also a large banquet lamp on the table which gave an additional charm to the scene. Those who were present to witness the marriage included Mr. and Mrs. Jeppe Eriksen, father and mother of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Schreiner, father and mother of the groom; Mrs. Petersen, Mrs. Winters, Henry Winters, Miss Klemser, Miss Balser, Miss Hicks, Miss Fredericksen, Miss Sorensen, Miss Anna Borrup, Mr. and Mrs. Borrup, Frank Klemser, George Klemser, Edward Eriksen, Mr. Sorensen, Ras Krogg, Andrew Krogg, Peter Krogg, of Netherwood; Miss Frank, of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Schreiner will take up their residence in Netherwood, so the groom will be near his work, which is in this city.

ACKERMAN-MILLS.

Nuptials of Popular Young People Performed Last Week.

Among the pretty weddings of the month was that of April 28th, when Miss Lottie Mills, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Mills, of Summit avenue, and Harry C. Ackerman, of Clinton avenue, were united in marriage by Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, pastor of the Monroe Avenue church.

The ceremony was performed at 7:30 in the presence of only the relatives of the bride and groom. The bridal party were married beneath a large floral bell which was prettily arranged with many different kinds of flowers.

The bride wore a gown of French serah trimmed with white moire silk and lace, and she carried the usual bouquet of bridal roses. The gown of the bridemaid, Miss Rosa Adams, cousin of the groom, was gray cloth trimmed with silk and lace. The best man was William Ackerman, brother of the groom.

The bride and groom were congratulated after the ceremony which was followed by a wedding supper and a reception. Mr. and Mrs. Ackerman were handsomely remembered by their relatives and friends with acceptable gifts. The newly-wedded couple will take up their residence on Summit avenue for the present.

Lehigh's Earnings Are Growing.

The net earnings of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company for March, 1897, compared with the same month of 1896, shows an increase of $125,335.99. The net earnings of the coal company for the same period shows an increase of $83,272.85.

Rev. Mr. Needham to Reside Here.

Rev. George E. Needham, who conducts a Bible class in the Y. M. C. A. Hall every Monday evening, is so charmed with Plainfield that he has leased a house on West Eighth street and will reside here this summer.

Patrolman Flynn Married.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Julia Fields, of New York, and Roundsman John Flynn, of this city. The bride and groom will reside on West Front street.

The Right Place for Boys.

The progressive city of Plainfield has instituted a Boys' Club, which seems to be the right kind of a place for boys.—New Brunswick Fredonian.

—According to reports several people of the borough have been losing some chickens of late. Chief Marshal Wilson is making a close investigation.

PAID DEATH PENALTY.

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1.

might be pinioned. This work was done by VanHise with straps and tape. Then commenced the walk to the gallows. VanHise led the way, followed by the Sheriff, Rev. John DeHart, and the condemned man, flanked on either side by Deputies Wyckoff and Barkalew. Johnson set out with a steady step and maintained it till he stood under the rope that was to send him into eternity.

There was a feeling of suspense as the party entered the narrow corridor, but Johnson did not quiver. Van Hise directed him to the point where he would stand for the last time on this earth, while the sheriff stood silently in front.

In a moment, however, Sheriff Wyckoff said to the condemned man: "Johnson, have you anything to say."

Johnson raised his head a trifle and spoke, not with a tremor in his voice, but as if the words stuck in his throat.

"I don't know as it would do me any good to say anything here," commenced the condemned man. "I want to say I am thankful to the Sheriff Wyckoff for his kind treatment, and to his son in-law, (meaning John Amerman, the warden of the jail). I have made my peace with God and I soon expect to be on the other side. All I have to say is good-by."

Then Johnson's head dropped and he stood motionless. Van Hise stepped forward and pulled the blackcap down over his eyes, tied the straps around his ankles, adjusted the noose so that it would slip easily and then hooked it on to the clamp that hung to the rope at the end of which was the weight that did the effective work.

The spectators were now gazing intently at the proceedings as Hangman VanHise stepped back a few feet and took hold of a small rope. He gave it was quick jerk.

Choo-choug fell the ponderous weight into the box of sand on the floor and Johnson's body bounded into the air for a distance of six feet, and then fell back about two feet as the rope drew taut.

For a half minute there was not a movement of the body, then the hands commenced to twitch and clutch as if in terrible pain. The lower limbs pulled up a little bit and the body commenced to swing gently to and fro. The breathing was very heavy and every time the lungs expanded the muscles of the legs contracted a trifle. At intervals of a few seconds, however, the body was entirely quiet except for the swinging and then suddenly the hands would clutch and grasp.

As soon as the trap had been sprung there was a murmur of voices among the spectors as one and another made observations on the movement of the suspended body.

The trap was pulled at 10:07 1 4 and the body was allowed to remain in that position for six minutes. Then VanHise lowered it to a point within six inches of the floor and the physicians gathered around to watch the symptoms of the dying man. It was just a trifle less than fourteen minutes from the moment that the body bounded into the air that Dr. Zeglio, who was listening to the heart beats, declared the man dead. In the meantime all the physicians had made observations.

At 10:27 Sheriff Wyckoff told the court jurors to report to the County Clerk's office and they filed out of death's presence. Then the newspaper men were dismissed and five minutes later, in the presence of the Sheriff's deputies, the body was cut down and placed in the casket that had been provided. The face was natural except the eyes were bulged out of the sockets.

The doctors were unable to determine whether the neck was broken or whether death ensued from strangulation. It was thought to have been painless, though.

The Sheriff's deputies then filed out, the body was put in charge of Undertaker M. A. Johnson and the first hanging in Somerset county in over a century ended.

The body will be buried at Montgomery, Somerset county, tomorrow.

The entire arrangements were carried out to a nicety—if such a thing can be properly said of a hanging. The spectators were surprised at how little repulsive the hanging was.

STORY OF JOHNSON'S CRIME.

Strong Circumstantial Evidence That He Killed Annie Rogers.

It was during the night of Saturday, September 14, 1895, that the crime was committed for which Jacob S. Johnson paid the penalty by hanging to death this morning. The first evidence that lead to the ghastly discovery of a dead body was seen the following morning (Sunday) by P. N. Dow, who lives near the cemetery south of Somerville. The morning was a balmy one and Dow had determined to take a little exercise by walking along the banks of the Raritan river, made famous in the songs of students at Rutgers College, New Jersey's old educational institution. He had not gone far from his home, however, which is very near that stream of water, when his attention was attracted to footprints and other evidences on the ground of a severe struggle of some sort on the roadway which runs through the woods skirting the river. He suspected that something was wrong and peering into the bushes, nearby, Dow saw the inanimate body of a woman laying there. A closer look showed it to be that of a colored woman who had evidently been strangled to death. The body was soon identified by the townspeople who had been apprised of the ghastly discovery as that of Annie Rogers or Beekman.

The inquest revealed the fact that the murdered woman had been staying with the Johnson family in a small house on the Elmendorf place just over the river. Johnson and the woman had been to Neshanic on Saturday, where Annie got $47.50 from Calvin Corle. She put the money in a purse, and placed the money in her bosom. Johnson and the woman returned to Somerville, and were seen that night by several people about the town. About 12:30 a man and woman who answered the description of Johnson and Annie Beekman, crossed the Central Railroad tracks, going toward Johnson's home. The man carried a bag on his shoulder, such as Johnson was shown to have had earlier in the evening.

Johnson and his wife were arrested on the strength of these facts, but Mrs. Johnson was soon discharged. On the trial the State produced such a strong chain of circumstantial evidence connecting Johnson with the crime, that he was found guilty of the murder. The footprints in the road were declared by witnesses who saw them to be similar to those made by Johnson's shoe in a box of sand. The woman's money was gone, and her dress was torn open, showing that the person who murdered her knew where she had put it. The purse was never found. A bag similar to that seen carried by Johnson was found at the Johnson house.

The defense was an attempt to prove an alibi. There was no denial that Johnson was with the murdered woman, but an attempt was made to prove that he was home early in the evening. Johnson, himself, was not put on the stand to tell the story. His family testified that he was home at 10 o'clock.

Johnson was a local preacher, and he and his wife conducted evangelistic meetings among the colored people. They lived at Neshanic before going to Somerville, and Johnson bore a good reputation.

Since the trial Messrs. Steele & Meehan, who ably defended Johnson, have done all in their power to get a new trial for him. His case was carried to the Supreme Court for review, and when that Court decided against Johnson, they applied to the Court of Errors and Appeals, but without success. Since the last decision they have made no further effort at Johnson's request, but have repeatedly declared their belief that an innocent man was to be hung.

MIDMER CLUB CONCERT.

It Was Held Last Night and Proved Very Successful.

Those who had the opportunity of attending the concert of the Midmer Glee Club in Y. M. C. A. Hall last Tuesday, listened to a programme of more than usual excellence.

As the only club of its kind in the city, the Midmer Glee Club deserved the support of the townsfolk, and it received it for the hall was packed to overflowing. The club was assisted by Dr. Carl E. Dufft, baritone of New York, Miss Leontine Gaertner, 'cellist, of New York, and Miss Evelyn Kirk, elocutionist, of New York.

Dr. Dufft was at his best. His selections had been well chosen to show his clear and powerful voice. Miss Gaertner had perfect command of her instrument, and the full rich tones were greatly appreciated by the many music lovers present.

Miss Kirk was equally good in pathos or humor, and gave her selections with a simplicity of action that seemed very realistic.

William E. MacClymont, musical director of the club, played two piano solos, one of which, "Polka Caprice," was his own latest composition. It was well received.

The club itself met with an enthusiastic reception. Its selections were of different styles and showed well the versatile talent of the club. The number, "Hushed in Slumber Deep," by Dr. Dufft and the club, was particularly well rendered.

Robert M. Clark is president of the club, W. E. MacClymont, musical director and Edward O. Clark business manager. The club is composed of R. M. Clark, E. O. Clark, Charles Foster, George H. Smith, and Herbert Schutt, tenors, and William Holmes, B. T. Barnes, W. E. MacClymont and Wyatt E. Barnes, basses.

—The Plainfield Board of Health have examined the cans to be used by the Plainfield Sanitary Company and they pronounce them to be all right.

CONVENTION CONFINED

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1.

done in his section. All three reports told of the mission stations under the charge of the Diocese, and showed a steadily increasing interest in that most glorious work, the outreaching of the church for the saving of souls.

Miss Hattie B. Taggart's report of the New Jersey Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary was now read. This was very interesting and encouraging, showing that over $7,000 had passed through their hands during the year, and that the society had proved a most helpful aid to the mission work of the church.

Rev. Mr. Knight next read the report of the Christian Knowledge Society, which has for its work the distribution of the Prayer-Book throughout the Diocese. This report told of good work done. It also reported, as the result of the election held in the afternoon, that Rt. Rev. John Scarborough had been made their president, and Rev. E. K. Smith, secretary and treasurer.

Two stirring missionary addresses followed. The first was delivered by Rev. Mr. Bettleher, of Beverly.

He said that it ought to be the ambition of every priest to see his church's name on the Roll of Honor of missions. Never forget that we derive our marching orders from the Apostles, to whom the Saviour gave the command, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."

There was a time when the missionary spirit of the church, at first so strong, began to die out. It was because the church had grown strong and rich, and had the government to back her. And then followed what we call the Dark Ages. If the first spirit had continued, the whole world would have been converted before the sixth century. Is it possible that in these days any clergyman believes that he will have more money for his own parish's use, if he cuts off all offerings for outside? A greater mistake could not be made. The more we work for missions, the more God will bless us. We rejoice in God's promise to be with us alway, even to the end of the world; but we can only claim the promise if we obey the command which precedes it, to go into all the world and preach the gospel. The offering was now received, the choir singing an anthem, "Awake up my glory."

The second missionary address was delivered by Rev. Dr. Jones, of Trenton. "The Lord has sent us," he said, "to preach the gospel. It is a trust committed to us, a trust for which we shall surely be called to give account. Our hearts will become paralyzed, if we do not allow them to burn within us, as we think of the need of those around us. And so paralysis may come to our arms, our tongues, all our best powers, if we do not look about us to see who is the neighbor to whom we can render a service. We should give as we are able to give. Many impulses of giving are ruined by saying 'I will give so much if such a one will give.' If we can give anything, let us give it, without making it conditional. There is need every day for the sympathy which you and I may be able to extend. In some way or other, it is the duty of each one of us to keep the light of the gospel burning. It is an such a responsibility placed upon us as it was upon St. Paul."

Closing prayers were offered by Bishop Scarborough, then, singing, "Onward, Christian Soldiers," choir and clergy followed the cross out of the church, and the first day of the convention was over.

A Compound Fracture.

Martin Hingle, of 740 West Third street, aged sixteen years, an employee of the Pond Tool Works, was brought to Muhlenberg Hospital today soon suffering from a compound fracture of the left malar cheek. The lad was at work at the time when a heavy piece of iron struck him in the face causing the injury. The opening in the cheek is two inches long and before treatment was given Hingle had several hemorrhages. The flow of blood was stopped, however, and no serious results are anticipated.

Justice Newcorn Busy.

There were a number of cases to come before Justice Newcorn for trial Tuesday. The contract cases of Manning et als against Chase, and Reed et als against Wyckoff et als, were adjourned for a week. The case of Sharkey against Clark, on contract, was continued. The contract case of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company against Wolson was adjourned two weeks pending settlement.

Summons were issued in the cases of Mayer et als against Smith, on contract, returnable on the 7th; Burgess against Morley, landlord and tenant, returnable on the 7th; Van Horn against Oldstein, on contract, returnable on the 10th; Polites against Campbell, on contract, returnable on the 8th; Coleus against Campbell, on contract, returnable on the 8th; Cannons against Shaerer, in tort, returnable on the 10th.

TO ADDRESS GRADUATES.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR COMMENCEMENT OF THE HIGH SCHOOL.

Merrill E. Gates, President of Amherst College, to Deliver the Address on that Occasion—Also Other School Affairs.

Plainfield is to receive quite a distinguished speaker at the time of the High School commencement in June when President Merrill E. Gates, of Amherst College, will come to this city to deliver the address of the evening. Such was decided at the May meeting of the Plainfield Board of Education held last Monday in the High School building. The meeting was an unusually short one and the only business of importance transacted was the making of the arrangements for the Commencement exercises.

All the members of the Board were present except Mr. Lounsbury, the secretary of the Board, who was kept at home by illness. Mr. Lovell act d as secretary in the absence of Mr. Lounsbury. After the usual list of bills was ordered paid, the report of City Collector Bird was read. It showed that taxes amounting to $686.55 had been collected, together with interest amounting to $71.50, making a total of $766.05, which had been deposited to the credit of the Board in the First National Bank.

A letter from Architect Karr was read in which he advised that the bill for the heaters in the Lincoln school be not paid until next fall so that they may be given a test first to see if they were all satisfactory. Mr. Karr also asked for $421.60 still due him as his commission on the contracts for the building of the new school. That amount was ordered paid by the Board.

Dr. Jenkins, as the committee on hall for the Commencement exercises, reported that he had engaged Music Hall for the evening of June 24th at a cost of $50, with the privilege of using it two days before for rehearsal.

Mr. Lovell, as chairman of the committee on music, reported that he had engaged Rogers' New York orchestra of ten pieces for the commencement and the reception afterwards.

Regarding the speaker for the evening, President Probasco told of the result of the correspondence between Superintendent Maxson and Merrill E. Gates, president of Amherst College, by which the latter had consented to come to Plainfield on that occasion. After some remarks on his excellence as a speaker, the Board went into executive session.

The financial statement of the month was given out. It was as follows:

RECEIPTS.

On hand	$5,902.29
Collector	776.09
Loaned to the Building Account	5,776.66

DISBURSEMENTS.

Janitors	$4,261.30
Books	153.49
Repairs	481.54
Sundries	313.71
Deposited in City Nat. Bank	$3,465.87
Deposited in First Nat. Bank	4,069.93

LIBRARY DIRECTORS MEET.

They Acknowledge the Receipt of Several Gifts.

The regular meeting of the Board of Directors of the Public Library was held last Tuesday. There were present Mr. W. Tyler, William H. Larrabee, J. Evarts Tenney, J. W. Yates and William M. Stillman. Bills for binding, librarian's and janitor's salaries were ordered paid. The thanks of the board were extended to Major Anderson Post, 109, G. A. R. for their gift to the Library of the two volumes of the "Official record of the officers and men of New Jersey in the Civil War." The secretary was also directed to extend the thanks of the board to Dr. Mathewson for his gift to the Library of Aggasiz's Contributions to the natural history of the U.S., 4 vols., Binney's work on Mollusks and other books on anatomy and medicine. The librarian report for April was received.

Court Opens at Elizabeth.

The lawyers in four cases that were to have been tried at this term of court have saved the court the trouble of trying the cases, by consenting this morning that the cases be discontinued. Craig & Marsh was counsel for the successful defendants in all these cases. Henry G. Runkle, Wm. T. Kaufman, Wm. H. Brower, J. C. Pope and DeWitt C. Ivins are the grand jurymen from Plainfield.

Granted a Leave of Absence.

Because of ill health, Miss Niles has been granted leave of absence by the Board of Education for the remainder of the school year. This is Miss Niles' first material absence during a term of more than 25 yerrs. Miss Niles' place will be taken by Miss Caward, who was educated at Syracuse University and the Trenton Normal School. Miss Caward has had previous experience in High School teaching.

Ladies Aid Society Elect.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Trinity Reformed church met Monday afternoon and elected the following officers for the ensuing year:—President, Mrs. Anna Gillem; First Vice-President, Mrs. Seaman Williams; Second Vice-President, Mrs. Garret Van Winkle; Secretary, Mrs. Harry Marshall; Treasurer, Mrs. Oscar Dunham.

900 DROPS

CASTORIA

A Vegetable Preparation for Assimilating the Food and Regulating the Stomachs and Bowels of

INFANTS CHILDREN

Promotes Digestion, Cheerfulness and Rest. Contains neither Opium, Morphine nor Mineral. NOT NARCOTIC.

Recipe of Old Dr. Samuel Pitcher
Pumpkin Seed
Alx. Senna
Rochelle Salts
Anise Seed
Peppermint
Bi Carb Soda
Worm Seed
Clarified Sugar
Wintergreen Flavor

A perfect Remedy for Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea, Worms, Convulsions, Feverishness and LOSS OF SLEEP.

Fac Simile Signature of
Chas. H. Fletcher.
NEW YORK.

At 6 months old
35 DOSES—35 CENTS

EXACT COPY OF WRAPPER.

SEE THAT THE FAC-SIMILE SIGNATURE —OF— Chas. H. Fletcher IS ON THE WRAPPER OF EVERY BOTTLE OF CASTORIA

Castoria is put up in one-size bottles only. It is not sold in bulk. Don't allow anyone to sell you anything on the plea or promise that it is "just as good" and "will answer every purpose." See that you get C-A-S-T-O-R-I-A.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

DIED VERY SUDDENLY

SHERIFF KIRK'S MOTHER PASSED AWAY APPARENTLY WELL.

Had Just Finished Her Lunch With Evident Relief—Heart Failure is the Cause Assigned for the Very Sudden Demise.

Mrs. Elizabeth T. Kirk, mother of Sheriff William T. Kirk, died at her home, 109 West Seventh street, Tuesday afternoon, at 1:40 o'clock. Death came very unexpectedly.

Mrs. Kirk has not been feeling very well for the past few days and has been confined to her bed since Saturday. She felt better, Tuesday morning, and came down stairs for a short time. She ate her lunch with evident relish and was lying down after it when the end came. Death must have come very suddenly and probably painlessly. Dr. W. H. Murray was called at once and Sheriff Kirk telegraphed for. Death was caused by heart failure.

Mrs. Kirk was very well known in this city, were she has lived for many years. She has a host of friends who will be greatly shocked to hear of her decease. She was about sixty years of age.

WILLOW GROVE.

Miss Etta Lee is the guest of relatives at Perth Amboy.

The Misses Jonson, of Plainfield, are the guests of Miss Pickell.

The service at the chapel Sunday evening was led by Mr. Sweezy.

Mrs. Simeon Lambert is slowly recovering from her recent illness.

Mrs. White, of New York, has been the guest of relatives at the Grove.

Arbor Day was appropriately celebrated at the school house and the large audience present highly appreciated the efforts of the children. A number of trees were planted and a large flower mound was constructed by the children.

A Christian Endeavor social was held recently in the chapel, and a programme consisting chiefly of tableaux was presented. The playing of games also furnished amusement. A silver collection was taken at the close for the Endeavor fund.

—Supt. Ackeman, of the street railway, does not expect the new open cars until next week. Everything is now in readiness to move them off of the cars when they do arrive.

Ask your Druggist for a generous 10 CENT TRIAL SIZE.

Ely's Cream Balm

CATARRH

contains no cocaine, mercury nor any other injurious drug. It is quickly absorbed. Gives Relief at once. It opens and cleanses the Nasal Passages. Allays Inflammation. Heals and Protects the Membrane. Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell. Full Size 50c. Trial Size 10c. at Druggists or by mail.

ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren Street, New York.

COLD IN HEAD

COLLIDED WITH A HACK

Butcher Van Sickle's Horse Caused Excitement at the Station.

A runaway horse, with delivery wagon attached, ran full tilt into the throng of carriages at the North avenue station, this Tuesday, at 10:20 o'clock, but a lucky slip of the horse prevented any serious damage being done.

The horse, which belonged to J. W. Van Sickle, the North avenue butcher, was tied in front of his store. A wagon passed too close to the horse's head and the animal jumped back, breaking the bridle. The horse sprang forward and ran at full speed toward the station. The hacks were lined up about twenty feet from the curb while the carriage of J. W. Sandford stood in front of the main entrance. There were several other private equipages around.

The runaway passed between the line of hacks until the carriage of Mr. Sandford blocked the way, and then the frightened equine turned toward the side of the hack of John Keely. At this moment, the animal slipped and fell. Before it could get under headway again, the collision with Keely's hack came, but the damage was slight. Keely's hack was pushed against William Callahan's, bending the axle of the latter. The horse broke loose from the wagon, which was partially wrecked, and was caught after a few steps.

Robbed the Poor Box.

Malicious boys broke a panel in the front door to the church of the Heavenly Rest, on Clinton avenue, Monday night, and robbed the poor box of its contents. A reward of $5 is now offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the boys who did it.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL XXX. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, MAY 13, 1897. NO. 19

"Support the Constitution, Which is the Cement of the Union, as Well in Its Limitations as in Its Authorities."—Madison.

SHOT ON THE HIGHWAY.

ALFRED CONO, A MT. BETHEL FARMER, CRUELLY ASSAULTED.

His Assailant is Alleged to be Alfred Nelson, a Neighboring Farmer—The Trouble Over Some Insulting Remarks.

Somerset county seems fated to see more than her share of horrible crimes, in which murder plays a prominent part. Another attempt at murder has been added to the criminal annals of that county, as was exclusively told in Tuesday's Press. The bare facts of the assault of Alfred Cono, near Mt. Bethel, Warren township, were then given, and that the man accused of the crime was a fellow farmer named Alfred Nelson.

Alfred Cono is a farmer, living back of Mt. Bethel on the old Harrison Straw farm. He is a native of Switzerland and came to this country many years ago. He has a wife and a large family of children. Half a mile from his farm, near Mt. Horeb, is that of Alfred Nelson. Nelson formerly kept a grocery store on Somerset street, where Titus' bakery is at present.

Both farmers drove to Plainfield, Monday afternoon in spring wagons. Cono came particularly after an Indebator which he had purchased and he took it home with him. Both men were alone in their wagons. They left here about dusk and started home. It is thought that Cono went first and that Nelson tried to pass him in the narrow road near Mt. Bethel.

At any rate, they came together on the road at about 3:30 o'clock. There was a collision but no damage was done. Nelson was very indignant at his neighbor, blaming him for the accident, and then calling him insulting and improper names. They then continued their way homeward.

Cono reached home, took a little refreshment, and then walked over to his neighbor's home. Nelson had, in the meantime, partaken of his evening meal and answered Cono's knock at the door.

Cono says that he asked Nelson to explain what he meant by his remarks at the time of the collision. Nelson appeared to be excited.

"Get off the place, or I'll shoot you," he shouted, according to the statement of Cono.

"I suppose, Mr. Nelson, I'll have to get off if you tell me to, as you own the place," was the reply of Cono. Nelson turned and went into the house while Cono slowly walked to the road and started in the direction of his home. He did not notice Nelson who had reappeared at the door with his shot gun in his hand. Both barrels were loaded with bird shot. Nelson followed Cono a short distance down the road and then, without warning, Cono alleges, Nelson fired both barrels. The shot struck Cono in the legs just above the knees and he fell to the earth with a groan.

Then, according to Cono's story, Nelson rushed at him with the butt of the gun raised in the air. Cono put up his arm to defend himself and the force of the blow fell on the arm just above the elbow, fracturing the bone. Then Nelson departed, leaving Cono groaning in agony.

Slowly and painfully, Cono crawled to his home, half a mile away, where his appearance caused consternation. A physician was summoned, and as soon as Cono explained the cause of his wounds, Justice Charles Wood was summoned.

After hearing Cono's statement, the Justice issued a warrant for the arrest of Nelson and the warrant was placed in the hands of Constable Jacob Riensmass. Nelson was not at home, however, when the constable went to look for him. The premises were searched but there was no trace of him. The family professed ignorance as to his whereabouts.

The news of the shooting spread quickly and the farmers gathered, indignant at the wanton assault, and there was talk of lynch law for the assailant should he be caught.

Prize Won for Architectural Drawing.

The annual exhibition of the New York School of Applied Design for Women opened Tuesday. The jurors who are selected to pass upon the work of the art students met on Monday. Among the prizes awarded was one for Architectural Drawing, the prize, a scholarship, being carried off by Miss Amelia Day, of Rockview avenue.

A Salary Increased.

At the regular meeting of the Middlesex County Board of Freeholders held yesterday in New Brunswick the salary of Henry S. Garretson, Supervisor of Roads, was increased from $200 a year to $400.

Opened a Hotel.

Eugene Laine has sold his barber shop on East Front street to David Modovink and has now opened a hotel in South Plainfield.

IN A HURRY TO MARRY.

NELSON GRAVE REFUSED AND SO HIS BETROTHED TOOK POISON.

Grave Was a Painter and Came Here Three Months Ago—He Was Planning to be Married in Two Weeks.

A most tragic scene was enacted, Tuesday, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Claassen, on Liberty street, when Miss Freda Peterson, of Perth Amboy, attempted to commit suicide by taking half of a two-ounce bottle of carbolic acid. The handsome young woman is engaged to Nelson Grave, who is a boarder at the home of Mr. Claassen, and she came to the place ostensibly for the purpose of getting married.

When she came to the house Tuesday she was met at the door by Grave and he evidenced surprise on seeing his fiance. However, she entered the house and the two occupied the parlor for a few minutes, during which time, Mrs. Claassen, who sat in the dining room, could hear a low conversation which seemed to be of a pleading nature. The fact was that the girl wanted Grave to marry her at once. To this proposition he objected, that is for the present. He wanted Miss Peterson to wait two weeks when he would have a sufficient amount of money to start married life right. He told her that he had engaged rooms on Chatham street, North Plainfield, and had furnished the same preparatory to their marriage.

This announcement did not seem to satisfy Miss Peterson and she demanded that he marry her at once. Again he refused, and while his back was turned, she drew from her pocket a two ounce bottle of carbolic acid, and, before he could prevent it, drank about half of the poisonous liquid. She gave one scream and fell to the floor. Grave hastened at once to the dining room and asked Mrs. Claassen for some mustard and water, but did not tell her what he wanted it for. He secured the preparation and gave it to his betrothed. It had little effect and she showed no signs of returning to consciousness. Grave became frightened.

He called Mrs. Claassen and the two carried the Peterson to the dining room where she was laid on the sofa still in an unconscious condition.

In the meantime someone was sent for two doctors, but for some reason neither one was able to come. The next step taken was to send for the ambulance, which Patrolman Saunders did, and the woman was removed to the hospital. The acid when taken burned the mouth and tongue of the young woman very much and she was apparently in great pain.

Grave came to Plainfield from Perth Amboy about three months ago and secured a position as painter with Rushton & Hansen. He is a very industrious lad and is well thought of by all who know him. He has been saving his money so that he could get married, and it was his intention of doing so in two weeks' time. The young woman, a native of Denmark, to whom he is engaged, is a highly respected person and has a large circle of friends in Perth Amboy, who will be unable to account for her strange actions.

REALTY CHANGES.

Property Transfers Recorded From This City.

The following property transfers have been recorded at County Clerk Howard's office, April 29th to May 6th, inclusive:

John H. Kitchen et ux., North Plainfield, to A. J. Kitchen, Brooklyn, lot Second street, Plainfield, $1; Watson Whittlesey et ux., to Gilemann Brook, Plainfield, lot Jackson avenue, $200; Sheriff Kirk to John H. Thompson, lot Berckman street, Plainfield, $2,000; Same to same, lot Berckman street, $600; David W. Force et ux., Plainfield, to Jacob L. Voorhees, N. Y., lot Richmond street and LaGrande avenue, Plainfield, $2,500; Wm. M. Moore et ux., to Marie Kuenlin, Plainfield, lot West Front street, Roselle Park, $1; John Bushnell et ux., Plainfield, to Caroline H. Bushnell, Plainfield, lot Madison avenue and Sixth street, $1; Geo. Snell et ux., North Plainfield, lot Spooner avenue, Plainfield, $1; Caroline Male et ux., Toronto, Canada, to O. L. Jenkins, Plainfield, lot Broadway and Watchung avenue, Plainfield, $1; Augustus D. Shepard, Fanwood, to J. A. Coles, Roselle, part of late Scudder's Plains, $1; Isaac W. Bushmore et ux., to Elliott T. Barrows, Plainfield, lot West Eighth street, Plainfield, $1; Egbert Force to W. J. Campbell et ux., Plainfield, lot Johnston and North avenues, Plainfield, $400; Charles H. Hand et ux., and George Tobin et ux., Plainfield, to F. M. Masher et ux., lot La-Grande avenue, near Woodland, Plainfield, $600; Isaac W. Bushmore et ux., to Abram H. Lewis, Plainfield, lot West Seventh street and Irving place, Plainfield, $1,263.78; E. C. Randolph, Plainfield, to Alex. T. Randolph, Piscataway, lot Park avenue, Plainfield, $1.

Miss Mabelle Schenck, of East Second street, will on Saturday next take up her residence at Somerville with her grandmother.

The Rev. and Mrs. E. W. Bliss, of Washington, D. C., are spending a few days with the sisters of Mrs. Bliss, Mrs. and Miss Denton of Hillside avenue.

BOY THOUGH HE WAS, CLAWSON WAS HUNG.

WALKED TO HIS FATE IN A PENITENT AND COURAGEOUS MIND.

The Trap Sprung at 10.07 And He Was Pronounced Dead Eight Minutes After—There Was But Little Convulsions of The Limbs.

In a penitent and courageous attitude Elmer Clawson, the boy murderer of Harry Hodgetts, a Bedminster farmer, was hung to death in the Somerset county jail at Somerville, Tuesday morning.

As was arranged Wednesday, when Johnson was executed, the Court Jury and the Sheriff's deputies, gathered in the latter's office between 9 and 9:30 o'clock. They were as follows.

Sheriff's deputies—Benjamin S. Totten, Dr. C. B. Wright, Dr. John P. Hecht, Dr. W. H. Cawley, Andrew McArdle, Andrew Lutkins, Dr. C. B. Matthewson, Oliver Perry, William J. Logan, George D. Totten, E. H. Casterlin, A. B. Rohn, Jr.

Court Juriors—Dr. S. A. B. Taylor, Dr. J. Howard Cooper, W. J. Swinton, Dr. L. T. Reed, Dr. A. B. Mosher, Dr. J. F. McWilliam, W. V. Gibson, E. B. Mathews, C. W. Hoagland, Luther Marshal, E. B. Allen and John Whitenack, Judge George W. DeMeza, of Plainfield, represented the Bar of Somerset county.

The reporters were: J. A. Searey, National Press Association; John E. Wehrly, Somerville Democrat; R. S. Brunt, Somerville Unionist-Gazette; John Anderson, Somerville Messenger; J. F. Byrne, Evening Journal; and a Daily Press reporter.

The skilled help were James VanHise, hangman; Wm. Thompson, as sistant, and E. S. Amerman, Deputy Sheriff of Essex county.

Sheriff Wyckoff had as his assistants Deputy Sheriff Totten and Jailer Dora Barkalew.

The court jurors were sworn in before County Clerk Somers shortly after 9 o'clock and then filed into the Sheriff's office.

At 9:30 o'clock the Sheriff instructed the court jurors to fall in line and as their names were called they responded and were escorted by a deputy-sheriff to the Judges' room in the rear of the court house, to enter which it was necessary to pass near the gallows located in the west corridor, where a few furtive glances were cast as the jurors filed by the door.

After the jurors had left the Sheriff's office, the Sheriff's deputies names were called off, and as each answered they were taken to the corridor where the execution was to take place.

They passed the gallows and were clustered in the farthest end of the corridor.

In the interim the court jurors and reporters had been waiting in the Judges' room above, where they were smoking and chatting in a manner more characteristic of a political convention than of the realization that they were about to stand in the presence of death, as brought about by the majesty of the law.

Just before 10 o'clock a deputy made his appearance and told the assembled witnesses to go to the improvised death chamber below.

Previous to all this, however, James Van Hise and his assistants, accompanied by the Press representative, had left the Sheriff's office at 9:20 o'clock and went to the west corridor by a side entrance.

Hangman VanNise had set up the gallows that was to deal out the death penalty earlier in the morning, after the prisoners confined for minor offenses had been removed from their cells and quartered in another portion of the jail. After looking the apparatus over with a critical eye trained by participation in almost a score—eighteen to be exact—events of this sort before, to see that nothing was out of place or order, and thus liable to mar or delay the carrying out of the law's ecmmand, VanNise set about to arrange the few details left for him to do.

In one end of the corridor set a drab colored box, a foot high and four feet long. From the depths of this box he took out the straps that were to pinion Clawson's hands and feet, the blackcap that was to shut out daylight forever, and the rope noose that was to be the effective means of jerking the boy murderer from this earth. The straps and black cap were folded up in a neat pile and laid aside, while the finishing touch to the noose was completed when a common bar of yellow soap was produced and the portion of the noose that tightens around the neck, greased so that it would slip easily when the trap was sprung.

At 9:40 the immense weight, weighing 400 pounds, was hauled into position seven feet above the surface of the floor by Van Hise and his assistants. This concluded the work of preparing the gallows for their deadly work.

The hour hand on the clock had scarcely passed the 10 o'clock mark when the Sheriff, Hangman Van Hise and his assistant, Thompson, accompanied by Deputies Barkalew and Totten, ascended the stairs leading to the cell that has been Clawson's abiding place since his incarceration. The cell door swung back and the Sheriff announced that they were ready for the execution. Clawson arose without a word and assumed a position that his hands might be pinioned, the noose put around his neck and the black cap adjusted on his head, the front lap being pulled back so as to allow him to see until just before the trap was to be sprung. These articles were the same the ones used in the execution of Johnson a week ago.

Van Hise adjusted the noose himself while Thompson pinioned the hands. This took about three minutes, and was witnessed by Revs. Winner and DeHart, besides the officers mentioned before.

It was just about 10:01 when the witnesses below heard the tramp of feet, for then it was that the walk to death was started. Hangman VanHise took the lead, followed by the Sheriff, Clawson, on either side of Sheriff Wyckoff had as his assistants Deputy Sheriff Totten and Jailer Dora Barkalew, Totten holding his arms, and the two ministers who had been offering consoling words to the condemned boy.

A moment later the party were seen coming down the stairs. Clawson walked with apparent effort, and seemed to be bearing up under a heavy load. The tread was a slow one.

The boy murderer never looked to the right or left as he entered, his eyes being listless and cast towards the floor. He was guided to the side of the projecting support of the gallows and took up his position under the dangling rope on the same spot that Johnson had a week ago.

Though it was plain to be seen that he was undergoing great mental anguish, and was on the point of collapse, he maintained a courageous attitude to outward appearances as Sheriff Wyckoff, with the folded death warrant, bearing a big red seal, walked in front of him and said in a quiet tone:

"Elmer Clawson have you anything to say?"

Glancing at the Sheriff he replied in broken syllables, some so quietly pronounced as to be almost indistinguishable to those a few feet away:

"I want to thank you and Mr. Amerman Steele and Meehan for all your kindness to me, and to my brothers and sisters and mother. I hope to meet you all in heaven."

The last sentence was spoken so that those only very near to him could understand it.

Hangman VanHise immediately pulled down the black cap and shut out the light of the world from Clawson's vision for the last time. Then he knelt and buckled the straps around his legs.

While this was being done the Sheriff grasped the boy's hand and shook it fervently, after which Dora Barkalew, the venerable old jailer, who has been Clawson's confident in many instances, and to whom he made several requests early this morning, grasped the hand through which the blood was coursing in throbs, and, after shaking it, held it until the trap was sprung.

By the time VanHise had got through strapping Clawson's legs the latter commenced to quiver and swoon as though he was about to fall. Deputy Totten caught hold of his arm and held him for the moment that it took VanHise to move from the spot where Clawson stood to the little rope that held the death dealing apparatus in abeyance.

At just 10:07:30 VanHise gave the rope a quick jerk and the ponderous mass of iron attached to the other end of the rope connecting with the noose dropped into the box of sand with a dull thud.

Clawson's body shot into the air for seven feet and then dropped back two feet as the rope drew taut. The murderer's body swung back and forth as a result of its sudden ascent, and then

CONTINUED ON PAGE 8

COST OF LIQUOR TRAFFIC

MAJOR HILTON TOLD INTERESTING FACTS REGARDING IT.

He Gave a Lecture on the Subject at the First Baptist Church Last Tuesday Which Was Well Attended.

Two very successful meetings were held at the First Baptist church Tuesday afternoon and evening under the auspices of the W. C. T. U., and the members were very fortunate in having with them Major Hilton, the famous temperance orator. In the afternoon he gave a very instructive Bible reading to a large number of people and in the evening he delivered a highly profitable lecture. Mrs. Farse, president of the union, presided and introduced the speaker. There was an excellent attendance and the remarks of Major Hilton were thoroughly enjoyed. After the lecture a number of persons joined the union on the solicitation of Mr. Hilton. A portion of the speaker's remarks were as follows:

"I have not come tonight to deliver a temperance address. I have given up the subject. Opinions differ so much that we are unable to understand a definition of the word. A man who appeared in court at one time said that he was a temperance man and yet he drank sixty glasses of beer a day.

"I want to speak to you regarding the legalized liquor traffic of this country. We are as a people grievously deceived in this mat er. We have been trying recently to make ourselves believe that we are poor. We are not by any means poor. We are a great people, but not a good people. We are poor in wisdom. No people who spend $48 a second for liquor can be prosperous.

"We have a great deal of liberty in this country, and it often becomes in reality a license.

"We spend $75,000,000 more for beer than we do for education. Newark holds the honor of being the greatest consumer of beer in the United States. You can usually smell Newark before you reach it.

"In one sense, there is today a hopeful outlook for the temperance people. The liquor traffic holds the power, it has paralyzed everything. Legislators are under its influence, and the pulpit has not escaped, for the ministers are often afraid they may offend some of their members.

"The liquor traffic is proving to all that the wages of sin is death. Who are those behind the prison bars, filling our asylums? Are they not drawing the wages of sin?

"The men who engage in the liquor business are characterless. In New York state 90 per cent have been in State Prison.

"The liquor traffic demands all and gives nothing in return. It is easier to find evidence to hang a man than to convict a liquor dealer of violating the law, yet these are the men to the number of 250,000 who are sending souls to perdition.

"We are gambling today over our heavy tax rate, and yet we increase it to support our courts and police departments. It costs the government about $5 for every one dollar they collect.

"When Americans drink they don't alone. Everything is provided for them in the saloon to attract. The finest free lunch is served free, but it is expensive in the end.

"There are twenty-seven trunk lines of railways in this country who will not employ a single man who touches liquor. This is encouraging.

"Many of the banks, insurance companies, etc., serve dinner in their buildings so that the clerks may keep away from saloons. It has cost these institutions thousands of dolars for this experience but we are glad to note this advancement.

"Our railroad company has prohibited its employees from playing cards or the use of tobacco in any shape, form or manner. This is also encouraging.

"Over 150,000 children enter the saloons of New York every day except Sunday. Last year 4 000 children were arrested in New York as drunkards. In the United States last year 250,000 women were arrested as ruined and outcast. Its a marvel that so few women interested in women.

"What we need today is loyalty to principle and we must have it by all means."

Mr. White has put on sale a very handsome assortment of bicycle leggings for ladies.

The tandem race at the Decoration Day race meet of the Crescent Wheelmen will be something new for Plainfield audiences. Last year saw only one of those very exciting contests on the Crescent Wheelmen's track but that one found great favor with all who saw it. Some of the best tandem teams of the Metropolitan district have decided to ride in Plainfield on that occasion.

CECELIA CLUB CONCERT.

A DELIGHTFUL MUSICAL EVENT AT THE Y. M. C. A. HALL.

The Club Made An Excellent Impression on the Large and Enthusiastic Audience—A Cantata Was a Feature of the Affair.

The pretty little Y. M. C. A. hall presented an unusually charming appearance Tuesday, at the opening of the concert given by the Cecilia Club, great bunches of lilacs in every available place giving a summery look to the room, a large and enthusiastic audience filling the seats, and the stage being occupied by the women of the club, in their dainty light gowns, with the skilled accompanist, Miss Jessie Utter, at the piano, and Edward C. Fitzhugh, so well known to Plainfield audiences, in the conductor's place.

The Cecilia Club, though comparatively a new musical association, is composed of over fifty of the musical women of the city, and has been doing excellent work during the past few months, under the skilful training of Mr. Fitzhugh. The programme for their concert, in which they were assisted by Mrs Frank J. Smith, an accomplished reader, was a very pleasing one, and the concert proved an unqualified success.

Two part songs by the Cecilia Club, "Now is the Month of Maying" and "To Daffodils," opened the program. Both were dainty and sweet, one with a bright joyousness, the other graver, but both showing the careful training of the club to great advantage. Mrs. Browning's "Rhyme of the Duchess May" was then recited by Mrs. Frank J. Smith, a pretty and charmingly dressed young woman, with a clear sweet voice, and a manner that was grace itself. The hearty applause that followed testified to the audience's appreciation of Mrs. Smith's rendering, and she returned to the stage to give a sprightly little piece entitled, "An Ibyl of the Present." A beautiful waltz-song, "The Woeing of the Rose," by the Cecilia Club, followed, and was much enjoyed, after which "The Same Old Story," a lively little love tale, was recited with much spirit by Mrs. Smith, who was encored as before. The Cecilia Club now gave two selections, "To Stay at Home is Best," by Tours, and Schubert's "Serenade," which latter was perhaps the most popular number of the evening. It was exquisitely sung, and the audience insisted on a repetition.

"Cupid's Alley" was Mrs. Smith's last number on the programme, and was a dainty little recitation with a musical accompaniment, which was played by her husband. It was greatly enjoyed, and when an encore was requested, Mrs. Smith gave another recitation with accompaniment, saying farewell with a low and very graceful bow.

A cantata, "King Rene's Daughter," by the Cecilia Club, closed the evening's entertainment. This cantata, which is by Smart, is a free adaptation from Henrik Hertz's drama, and its plot is as follows:

Iolanthe, daughter of King Rene, of Provence, has been betrothed in infancy. Stricken with blindness when but a year old, she has been reared with all knowledge of the faculty of sight withheld from her. A magician has promised to restore her sight, on condition that she is first informed of the pissing sense, but the king has refused permission. Iolanthe's betrothed, wandering as a troubador, lights upon her abode, and without knowing her is enthralled by her beauty. He does not know she is blind, and his words reveal to her the faculty of which she had been kept in ignorance. He thus unwittingly aids the magician's art, and Iolanthe is restored to sight.

The part of Iolanthe was beautifully sung by Mrs. Frank T. Clawson, while other solo parts were taken by Miss Delphine Bowers, Mrs. H. E. Rider, Miss Bessie Blair and Miss Alice Carroll, all of whom sang with much taste and ability. The chorus parts were excellently rendered, and much praise was given to the club for their faithful study and pleasing singing, and to Mr. Fitzhugh for the careful and thorough training which, in so short a time as the club has been practicing, had brought a chorus of so many voices into such perfect harmony and unity.

J. Kenney, of east Second street, has received his new '97 Hunter wheel.

D. Thompson, of Belvidere avenue, has purchased a new Keating wheel.

The Cleveland Cyclers held their regular Sunday afternoon run to New Brunswick last Sunday. Fifteen of the members turned out for the run.

Clement Morgan, of East Ninth street, has selected his mount for the coming season. He will ride a Hartford wheel. He is one of the most enthusiastic wheelmen in the city.

A FIRE WOMAN.

MISS LILLIAN BROWN HAS MANY ADOPTED FATHERS.

She Takes a Deep Interest in the Fire Companies, and is Ready to Start for a Conflagration Immediately After Receiving the Alarm.

The awful forebodings of enemies of the new woman that she would take to fighting fires has come true. Here is a firewoman. She is Miss Lillian Brown, of Greensboro, N. C.

She has been officially adopted by the North Carolina State Firemen's Association. Her favorite fathers, of which she, as a daughter, has over a thousand, are in Greensboro, here she was first adopted by the Eagle Hose Company, every man of whom is so proud of his adopted daughter as if she were a queen. Never a fire occurs without the firemen's daughter being on the scene, and to see her, dressed in her red flannel fire clothes, helmeted, and with an axe in her dainty hands, as she urges the "boys" on to conquer their fiendish foe, is a sight to remind one of the heroic acts of Joan of Arc. On one occasion she actually drove the engine to the scene of the fire, handling the rushing steeds like a veteran driver.

There is a curious train of circumstances leading up to the adoption of Miss Brown by the fire boys. She was born in Fairfield, N. C. Her first appearance in Greensboro was about three years ago, when she entered the Female College there. It so happened that she was assigned to play the leading role in the drama "The Fireman's Heart," at the college students' annual performance. The play was produced at Bogart Opera House, and was a tremendous success.

As Hyacinth Bradley, the pet and "mascot" of the firemen, Miss Brown literally captured every heart in the audience, and especially those of the fire boys. Soon after this, at the regular monthly meeting of the Eagle Hose Company, Miss Brown was formally adopted as the firemen's daughter, and the honor was placed upon the honorary roll of the company's membership.

The new fire girl gracefully accepted the honor thus conferred upon her, and pledged herself to advance the cause of firemen in general, and especially the interests of her many fathers—the Eagles. Miss Brown carried off the honors with a modest bearing, and her fame spread to different parts of the state. Town after town wanted to have her for its adopted daughter, and many meetings were called to consider the subject. All difficulties were finally adjusted at the meeting of the State Firemen's Association, when by a unanimous vote the pet of the Greensboro boys was made a daughter of the State association.

Already the daughter of the company boasts two medals for her bravery at fires, and several resolutions have been passed by different bodies of citizens who owe to her plucky work the saving of many thousand dollars.

Miss Brown takes the greatest interest in the department. She has a call in her house connected with the general signal system. It is very rare that she is late at the scene of a blaze, for so matter at what hour her fire gong sounds the alarm, Miss Brown dons her clothes and starts off to help her fathers.

Many of them have reason to bless her for her kindly help, especially after some accident, for the little girl is ready to nurse the sick and injured, and is always prepared for such emergencies.

Besides being so brave she is extremely pretty. Her eyes are dark and fawn-like, with rounded features and a mass of waving chestnut hair, which the little fire girl wears parted loosely in the middle and brought up at the back of her head by a plain black velvet band.—New York Journal.

The Bricks Must be Returned.

There is a small town in one of the Eastern states, not far from Boston, where inhabitants take great pride in excelling every other town in their vicinity. They try every new invention, and if it has any sort of merit it is sure to be assigned to duty in some part of the place. Two portly gentlemen, one a sea-captain and the other a lawyer, both retired from active life, were the prime movers in the experiments and adoptions, and, naturally, in the course of time they failed to agree. Avenue jealousy then prevailed, and a bitter animosity sprung up between them.

Unfortunately these two gentlemen lived next door to each other—in fact, so close were their houses that the side walls were whitewashed. One very windy night the lawyer was reading a book in his study when a terrific crash upstairs startled him. Upon investigating he found that an unruly chimney had ruthlessly buried itself through the roof, doing considerable damage. That in itself was a matter of great annoyance, but when he discovered it was the sea-captain's chimney that was responsible, his wrath knew no bounds. Hastening down to his library, he pulled out his law books and hunted up similar cases, devising and scheming how he could secure satisfaction from the detestable captain. While thus engaged a note arrived from his enemy that read as follows:

"Sir,—If you don't return those bricks at once, I will put the matter in the hands of the law."—Harper's Round Table.

Why is a church-bell more affable than a church organ? Because one will go when it's tolled, but the other will be "blowed" first.

THE CIVILIZING WHEEL.

Facts of Interest to Riders of the Silent Steed.

It is the concurrent testimony of the daily news reports that whenever two vehicles come into collision, or two opposing umbrellas collide, there is a certain amount of friction engendered, sometimes giving rise to bad language and even to lawsuits. But how different is the result when bicycle collides with bicycle! Instead of breaking out into objurgation and hatred, each one became deeply interested in the other and wanted to know the make of his wheel and its capacity to resistance in collision. After minor matter of personal damage was then settled at the nearest drug store, a libation to the new acquaintanceship was poured out In those soft drinks which the wheel has done so much to popularize, mutual inquiries were made as to their respective rides and the condition of various suburban roads, and they who had met as strangers parted as friends because each one was satisfied that his wheel was the better. This is the striking illustration of the civilizing and humanizing influence of the bicycle, but it is something which to all wheelmen is mere commonplace. Politeness and good nature are merely two in a long catalogue of benefits. Its cheerful influence know no limit to their range. It has multiplied court ships and abolished elopements, and while it has encouraged matrimony it has diminished divorces. The melancholy wheelman is wholly unknown, and it is positively asserted that no wheelman has ever committed suicide voluntarily. When one reflects that the bicycle is, so to speak, still an infant industry, the mind is lost in conjecture as to the future of its influence on the human race.

BY THE WAY.

Once every two months should be enough to take a tolerably good wheel apart, and if half that is claimed for the 1897 wheels is true, and you have one of them, once a year should be sufficient. Many riders have a mania for taking their machines apart and talking of the great amount of time that is wasted in keeping bicycles in good order. Amateurs rarely do any good by looking into the bearings, and are as likely as not to do considerable harm by getting grit into the cups or failing to adjust the bearings so that they shall be just snug enough when they put the parts together. So much depends on the adjustment of a wheel being exactly right that it is always wise to leave that matter to a thoroughly competent person. Pedal mounting is becoming more and more common. It is a good thing to avoid. It wrenches the wheel, and however carefully and thoroughly it may be made, successive shocks of that kind are certain to make trouble later in the season. Curb mounts are the best for the wheel.

No amount of preaching or instruction will fully impress the novice with the possibilities of side slip. Warn him ever so faithfully to be careful not to turn sharply on wet spots, and when he will go with a slam at the first favorable opportunity. The one thing to do in slippery places is to ride in a perfectly straight line. Turn a matter of two points in either direction and the situation is lost. Not until the average beginner has gone to earth once or twice can he be convinced that this is so. The feeling that prevails when the machine, crablike, begins to edge off sideways, is the most forlorn and helpless of all cycling sensations, save that experienced by the brakeless cyclist when he realizes that his wheel is running away with him down hill. And the more frantic the effort to recover equilibrium the more complete the contact of the rider's person with the ground when the sprawl follows.

A writer on hygiene states that the intense thirst which attacks many wheelmen is the result of breathing through the lips, thus parching the lips, mouth and throat, and advises that the mouth be kept shut against inhalations. He says: "When you can't make a hill without opening the mouth there better to dismount than to continue exercise. Even when you are mounted and the breathing is labored, the mouth should be kept closed. He also advises against the use of tobacco, stating that chewing affects the circulating system; smoking, especially cigarettes, affects the heart, and breathing, making one short winded. Concluding, he says: "A cigarette smoker will find that it requires more exertion for him to ride a fine, well-geared, well-oiled machine than it does a non-cigarette smoker to push an old-fashioned, rusty, out-of-date bicycle."

In Mexico the bananas that are considered best by many are only about two inches long.

INDIAN GIRLS GIVE A PARTY.

The Peculiar Names of Some of Those in Attendance.

The Indian girls of the Crow Agency boarding-school in Montana gave a soirée dansante the other evening, and the following girls were present: Clara Spotted-Horse, Edith Long-Ear, Kittie Medicine-Tail, Lena Old-Bear, Clara Bull-Nose, Blanche Little-Star, Nellie Shell-on-the-Neck, Mary Old-Jack-Rabbit, Bertha Full-Mouth, Katie Dresser, Fanny Plenty-Butterflies, Bessie Crooker-Arm, Martha Long-Neck, Isabel Lunch, Flay Hairy-Wolf, Alice Shoots-as-She-Goes, Stella Wolf-House, Lucy Hawks, Beatrice Bead-on-Ankle, Susie Bear-Lays-Down, Louisa Three-Wolves, Anna Medicine-Pipe, Maggie Broken-Ankle, Ruth Bear-in-the-Middle, Helen Come-Out-of-the-Fog, Sarah Three-Irons, Ida Wrinkle-Face, Jessie Flat-Head-Woman, Julia Grandmother's-Knife, Esther Knows-Her-Gun, Minnie Nods-at-Bear and Daisy Young-Heifer.—New York Tribune.

His Record Kept Clean.

A tramp called at a well-known home in the city at about breakfast time, and asked for something to eat. The gentleman of the house informed the tramp that there was a pile of wood in his back yard, and that if he would saw up a quantity of it he would give him a breakfast.

The tramp agreed, and the gentleman of the house forthwith conducted him to the pile of wood and, after pointing out to him the saw, retired into his house.

A short time thereafter, wishing to see how the tramp was progressing, he went out into the yard. The tramp had disappeared, and not a bit of wood had been sawed. As he approached the pile of wood he noticed a piece of paper fastened to the saw, and on it were written these words:

Just tell them that you saw me,
But you never saw me-saw.
—Lynchburg News.

Soferteramouigo.

A gentleman stopped to listen to the tune played by a hand-organ, which happened to strike his fancy. When the air was finished, he approached the Italian, and asked the name of the music.

"Soferteramouigo!" answered the Italian, showing all his teeth in a smile of appreciation at the compliment to his melodies.

The gentleman walked on, and endeavored for many months to obtain the piece of music with the unpronounceable name. But he never could find it. At last one day he heard it played by an American, and again asked the name of the air he admired.

"Oh, that," said the player, "is an old thing—'Silver Threads Among the Gold' "—Harper's Round Table.

Wonderful Feats.

Hindoo acrobats are still ahead of their European rivals. One who moves about upon a long stick is the latest novelty. This performer is mounted on a bamboo pole about fifteen feet high, the top of which is tied to a girdle worn around his waist. A small cushion is fastened a few feet down the pole, which acts as a leg rest. The acrobat has found a large space in the liveliest way, uttering cheerful shouts and accompanied by the tapping of a curious drum. He also executes a sort of dance and goes through a little pantomime. It is a marvelous feat of equilibrium. To walk on a pair of stilts as high as this would be a performance worthy of exhibition on our variety stage. But to hop around on one is quite another thing, as you will find if you attempt it.

AN APRON FRONT DRESS.

In some respects an apron front is no novelty for a dress; but this particular one is very novel. The odd part is in the start. Instead of beginning at the waist line, as an orthodox apron would, it begins with a ruffled top, stitched to the skirt about half way down its normal length. The dress material is printed India silk.

The Kick of the Camel.

Most of us are familiar with the way in which a horse or a mule kicks, but the kick of the camel or camel colt passes his anger. The camel doesn't seem to be out of temper. He lazily chews his cud, with his eyes half closed, and those not familiar with his ways might fancy that he is half asleep. But dig him in the ribs, or let his hind legs up under him, and then, as soon as the object of his wrath is in range, he sends his hoof straight back like a shot. A writer says that he has seen a heavy man sent whirling several yards in a dense crowd by the kick of a camel.

Happy mother: "Oh, George, the baby's beginning to take after you!" Happy father: "After me! In what way?" Happy mother: "He's beginning to crow!"

CURRENT COMMENT.

Somebody has been drawing pay regularly for thousands of Spain's dead soldiers in Cuba. The whole Spanish campaign in that island has been a speculation in death, and its beneficiaries are probably to be found in officers' uniforms reveling in luxurious extravagance while their troops are famishing.

The Czar is said to be cultivating his speed. He runs a mile every day. The Emperor of Germany is becoming quite a scorcher on the bicycle. Now this is a sensible precaution for all Kings and Emperors, for they never know how soon they may be compelled to travel, or how fast. History is full of sprinting sovereigns, from Nero down to Napoleon, and they foolishly neglected to develop their wind.

The local council of Philadelphia continues to be smirched with scandal. Members of that municipal legislature are now accused of receiving money from policemen as an inducement to pass a bill raising police salaries, and other councilmen are charged with accepting railway passes and selling them. The bronze statue of William Penn may blush at one institution of which his descendants cannot be proud.

Of the $200,000,000 war indemnity which Japan is to receive from China it is expected that nearly 80 per cent will be expended in naval construction. It is therefore in order to ascertain what portion of this vast sum can be acquired by the enterprise of American shipbuilders, steel forgers, gunmakers and competitors in other mechanical industries. A country with that amount of money to spend deserves to be looked after by American manufacturers who have things to sell.

While the enthusiasm of the cyclist is perennial, it is subject to the change of degree, like other human emotions. Its maximum is experienced in the spring, when Nature dons her widest attire and picks up her skirts to dance from very exuberance of spirit. The enthusiasm of the wheel, when normal, is an extremely wholesome factor in maintaining the community's mental and physical balance. When first liberated from the bondage of winter it requires a little watchful restraint—a precautionary censorship of a few weeks, as it were.

Evidences multiply that the $5,000 fee promised to the ex-president of the United States Senate for reporting the Fitzsimmons-Corbett prize fight was grudgingly paid. For never did a much-advertised "feature" fail so flat as did Ingalls' ridiculous "report" of the bloody encounter in the New York Journal. It disgusted not only reputable citizens who deplored the prostitution to base uses of talents once admired, but the prize fight enthusiasts as well. They simply ignored the ex-Senator's pointless narrative, in spite of the brave display of scare and black headlines, and turned over to the simple description of the fight by a reporter who knew his business.

Professor Charles Howard Hinton, of Princeton University, has given an informal exhibition of an invention which seems calculated to revolutionize the whole sport of base ball. His contrivance, if generally adopted, would strip the game of its terrors, eliminate all the elements of uncertainty, and bring it right down to a mechanical basis. Briefly explained, Prof. Hinton's device is a gun. He proposes to place it in the pitcher's box, from which, with reasonable care in aiming and firing, balls may be delivered straight over the plate with any sort of curve, in-shoot, out-shoot, drop, or other fancy gyration which the evil genius of the gunner may conceive. The force and efficiency of such a machine are self-evident. Properly loaded with giant powder, dynamite or compressed air, and aimed by a gunner of ordinary experience in artillery operations, it should be able to send a baseball down to the man at the bat with sufficient warmth and precision to make him and his partisans weary indeed.

Aside from the question of manners, however, the tendency of the clergy to assail and criticise each other is an interesting waymark of the times. In the Middle Ages, and, indeed, until within a comparatively recent period, the clerical order was looked upon as a sacred caste, and its claim to the possession of special power and insight was conceded without question as part of the divine order of the world. In those days the clergy naturally stood by each other, and were ready at all times to defend the privileges of their order. The esprit de corps of the profession was as highly developed as is that of the army or navy today. But modern civilization is sweeping all those old ideas of clerical caste aside. Outside of the denomination of which he is a minister, no special sanctity or authority is attached to any beliefs or opinions that a clergyman may hold. People agree with him just so far as they think him right, and do not hesitate to disagree with him when they think him wrong. The fact that he is a clergyman cuts no figure in the matter at all.

BILLY BIRCH TO THE BAR.

The Once Famous Minstrel Answers to the Charge of Intoxication.

"William Birch to the bar!" called the clerk in the New York Jefferson Market Police Court recently.

An old man, bent under the weight of years, stumbled forward with the aid of a cane and stood before the Magistrate. The clerk whispered something to Magistrate Cornell, and the latter looked startled. Then he asked:—

"Are you 'Billy' Birch, the minstrel?"

The old man nodded assent.

"Well, you are charged with being drunk, and I am sorry for it 'Billy.' I saw you in your heyday, and you were my favorite minstrel. What have you to say for yourself?"

The veteran dropped his head. It did not reply.

"Well, Billy," said the Magistrate, "you seem to be thoroughly cast down by your misfortune, and for the sake of the fun you provided for me in the old days, I will discharge you. Be a good boy hereafter. Good-by."

The famous old minstrel tottered out of court with his aged faced wife holding one arm and a stalwart young man supporting the other.

"Mr. Birch is not quite clear in his head," said Mrs. Birch. "He has had two strokes of paralysis, the last about a year ago. Since then, at times, he has had trouble with his speech, and he has been very weak on his legs.

"Billy" Birch's home is a modest little place. The "King of Negro Minstrels," as he was called in the old days, has no money, although the famous combination of Birch, Wambold and Backus is supposed to have gathered in about $1,000,000 profits. "Billy" lost his share in Wall street. In speaking about it lately he said:—

"I was in the black-faced business as a funny man from 1844 to 1884, and, although I was never cut out for a humorous role, I made money. In the latter year, when I went into Wall street as a financier, a calling to which I was really born, they broke me."

His good wife keeps the wolf from the door by taking in lodgers.—New York Herald.

A BABY'S HAT.

Of Pale Green Velvet, Which is More Suitable Than White Headgear.

Infants' hats have been so exclusively of white material during the past ten years that it is a great relief to see a return to the brighter colors that were formerly in vogue. A most charming little hat is of pale green olive velvet. The hat was made by a

NORMANDIE HAT.

Washington establishment for the small child of Secretary Lamont. It was sent home a short time ago, and only yesterday the little one was seen in its baby carriage on one of the avenues with this hat upon its head. The top is of a peculiar pattern, turned back, in quaint Normandie style.

The only trimming is a double bunch of creme mousseline de soie at the sides, and over the ears is another bunch of the same goods. Plain cream velvet streamers are tied under the chin.

The cloak that was to be worn with this was of olive green velvet to match the hat, and profusely trimmed with cream-colored ribbon and elderdown. The lap robe was cream-colored, making a very pretty outfit for any baby.

It Bore Apples Ninety Years.

On a farm in Ohio stands an apple-tree that has been bearing fruit for ninety years. It is a yellow bell-flower, and was planted when this whole region was almost a solid forest. Five feet from the ground it measures nine feet six inches in circumference, and it would take a boy forty-eight feet wide to set under the tree to catch every apple that falls. The tree shows some signs of decay now, but it is thought the year 1900 will find it producing.—Cor. Cincinnati Tribune.

A Workingmen's Hotel.

The Workingmen's Hotel, which the Salvation Army has opened in Boston, charges five, ten and fifteen cents for lodging, three cents for supper, five for breakfast and eight for dinner. A bath is free, but not obligatory. The house will contain 100 beds.

Desired to be Taken at a Reduction.

A man who had been fined several times for drunkenness coolly proposed to the justice to take him by the year at a reduced rate.

MAN AS A MACHINE.

NATURE CANNOT BE BEAT IN HER LABOR SAVING DEVICES.

No Lost Motion or Excess of Parts in the Human Frame—Adam's Apple is Sort of Safety Valve, and the Liver Does Police Duty.

Few people are aware of the wonderful engineering skill and ingenuity with which their bodies are constructed. If patents were taken out for all the clever contrivances to be found there, they would probably keep the staff of the Patent Office going for three months.

Who would think that in his eye there is a block and pulley, or "tackle," as the sailors call it, as complete and efficient as that with which a ship hoists her mainsail? There it is, however, and whenever you look at the lip of your eye the muscle that moves your eye-ball works in it. There are several of these pulleys in the body.

Another clever dodge of Nature, shown in the bones of the face, accomplished something that is also always the smallest quantity of material sufficient for strength. In making the bones of the face, she wanted a large surface to which to attach the muscles; but, as she didn't wish to encumber us with heads as heavy as an elephant's, she hereon hundreds of little holes in the bone called air cells, and thus got strength, large surface and lightness.

When you get a severe cold you are apprised of the presence of another cute device—the Eustachian tube. It takes the air we breathe in and passes from the inside of the ear to the back of the mouth. It was put there to keep the air at the same pressure inside the drum as outside. Otherwise there would be no vibration of the drum, and you would be almost stone deaf. When you get a bad cold this tube becomes inflamed and blocked, and you are made quite deaf.

Adam's apple, if it was once that fruit that brought into the world all our woe, is now a useful organ. It serves as a sort of safety valve for the blood for the supply of the brain. When the heart sends up too much blood Adam's apple intercepts it, or part of it; and when the direct supply from the heart temporarily runs short Adam's apple gives up its store.

The liver is another wonderful organ, containing facilities of several kinds. But perhaps the most wonderful thing is it is that part set aside to look out for and arrest poisons.

All the food you eat except the fat, has to pass through the liver before going to the heart and body generally; and in the liver there appear to be stationed something of the nature of customs officers, who examine every bit of food and remove from it all substances dangerous to the body. But they are only capable of dealing with the small quantities in ordinary food; and when you are so foolish as to eat poisonous mushrooms of measles they are overpowered.

Another protection from danger is afforded you by the supply of a small quantity of hydrochloric acid to the stomach. There are little machines in the stomach specially designed for the manufacture of this acid, and when you are sick they are so regulated that they produce a quantity equal to one-fifth of 1 per cent of the contents of the stomach. Experiment shows that this is exactly the percentage required to destroy all microbes that we are likely to find in our food. But for this thoughtful provision of Nature we would probably get a new disease with every meal.

Most people know the use of the epiglottis, which saves us from the imminent danger of how we swallow a bit of food. At the back of the mouth the air passage and the food passage cross each other, and, whenever we swallow food, it would inevitably go into the windpipe and choke us only that the body pops down and covers the entrance. It is like the policeman who regulates the traffic where the streets cross.

The semi-circular canals, for centuries a physiological puzzle, are an exceedingly clever device for enabling us to keep our balance. They are little channels, hollowed out, in connection with the ear, in the bones of the head, and partly filled with fluid or lymph. As our head or body sways the fluid moves, acting like a spirit level, and informing the brain whether we are standing in the perpendicular or at a dangerous angle.

So inventive was Nature when constructing our body that the difficulty is to stop human nature's clever ideas. She saw that we would very soon grow tired if we had to hold up two heavy legs by means of muscular effort, so she made the hip-joint air-tight, and the pressure of the air always keeps the leg in place.

At the same time, although she had not discovered ball bearings, she made the ball of the leg bone and the socket of the hip so smooth, and oiled the joint so well, that the friction is practically nothing.

When the spinal canal in the backbone was made, great pains had to be taken, for, while it consists of many pieces and is freely movable, it contains the precious spinal cord, one nip of which would be fatal. The measurements are so accurate that there is no danger of such an event. Wherever there is much and free motion, as in the neck, the canal is large and open, and a nip is impossible, but in the most remarkable of all devices is that for splicing broken bones. The moment a bone is broken, a surgical genius is at once dispatched from the brain to the spot. He proceeds to surround the broken ends with a ferrule or cartilage. This is large and strong.

A FIGHT WITH A CONSTRICTOR.

An English Officer Attacked by a Fifteen-Foot Monster.

Of all the snakes in the world the snakes of Java are the most terrible, both in size and in venom. Some terrible stories are told of adventures with these scourges of the jungle. Two years ago, says the Chicago Record, an English naval lieutenant went to Java for the purpose of making a collection of Javan reptiles. His only attendant was an English sailor lad about sixteen, and these two, against all warning, went roaming around the forests without a guide.

In Chorea, the ruined city, the lieutenant found a rich harvest, but an adventure with a snake ended his sport. One day he and the boy were under an archway of the big temple, and, looking through the doorway of one of the dark chambers, he saw something yellow in the far corner. Without a moment's thought he entered and gave the mass a punch with his cane. A tremendous hiss that fairly shook the walls was followed by an assault swift as the leap of a tiger, and the man found himself seized by a huge Dari snake, the most aggressive and dangerous of Javan constrictors. His left shoulder was crushed in the brute's teeth, and quick as a flash a coil was around his body, and he felt the steel-like compression.

But the grit of the boy saved his master's life. He had a heavy, sharp wood knife, and he slit open the reptile two quick blows just back of the head, the most vulnerable part of its body, because the thinnest. Its backbone was divided. The coil relaxed, but the powerful tail lashed out, whipping the boy's legs in two terrific blows before they were found and brought up in a cart. The lieutenant's left shoulder was crushed beyond surgery, and the arm was useless. Both the master and the boy recovered after a spell of fever. The snake, a hideous object, black and yellow, was fifteen feet long. Such a brute would crush a horse.

A GEORGIA NEGRO PRODIGY.

Can Multiply Numbers Without a Moment's Consideration.

Robert Gardhire is a negro and an uneducated one, but when it comes to figures he can't be stopped by any mathematician in the world. He is as humble resident of Augusta, and is employed as a laborer at the Interstate Cotton Oil Company. In multiplication Gardhire is as quick as thought. Before the average person can set the figures down with a pencil Gardhire has given the correct answer, and yet he cannot say how he does it.

He was asked what was the sum total of 99 times 67, and without repeating the figures to himself, Gardhire answered off-hand. "6,633." "How much?" asked some one, "is 93 times 32?" Without stopping a second Gardhire replied, "16,082." And thus for over half an hour numbers were thrown at him, and he gave the correct multiplication like a flash. In the multiplication of fractions the man is equally proficient, and there seems no limit to his powers, which are almost occult.

Gardhire cannot remember when he first became aware of his power, and does not even know how he discovered it. He says that when the figures are given him he sees their answer immediately. Simply by glancing at a long line of figures he can tell immediately what the addition is. —Augusta Chronicle.

A Scotch Child.

I have a small cousin, aged eight, who has already contracted the very bad habit of smoking whenever he gets a chance.

The other evening, after he had been put to bed, his father went upstairs to the room where he was and began to search the youngster's pockets.

The boy lay watching him for a few minutes, then suddenly sat up and exclaimed:

"Oh, father, I clean forgot! I got a pennyworth of cigarettes the day for a present tae ye."

And just then his father drew four cigarettes out of one of the small pockets. Needless to say, he escaped that time.—From Answers.

Their Peculiar Aversions.

Most people have aversions of some kind or other, and some very strange ones. Napoleon did not like to see a white dog, and he could not bear to touch polished steel. The sight of the rising moon, when it was full, always made Mme. De Stael ill. Barefooted children made Louis XIV. nervous. John Swift has said that Bolingbroke would "act like one bereft should he eat his eye on a spoon, a harmless knife." Disraeli had an attack of vertigo when he saw anybody chewing gum. Dickens never liked a stiff shirt bosom, and Buffon would fly into a rage if any one put an egg on the dining-table at which he sat.—Golden Days.

Wholly Vindictive.

"It is shameful!" exclaimed the actress to whom the manager-star owed money. "But I will get even with him some time."

"What do you propose to do—sue him?"

"And give him the benefit of all that advertising? Never!"—Washington Star.

Cautious.

The example of the Scotch baronet who said he would be valuable as regards to only safe method of proceeding in arbitration. Sir John Innes, after discussing the preliminaries of an arbitration, was asked:

"But will Ye abide by my award?"

"Faith, I would like to ken first what it is," replied Sir John.

CANVAS IN PLACE OF MOHAIR.

Bodices More and More Elaborate—The Blouse Effect Still Reigns.

(By Special Arrangement with the N. Y. Sun.)

Tailor-built dresses are usually the first to blossom out in the spring, and here is a model in a pale tint of violet cloth. One handsome jeweled button fastens the bolero over a full vest of green silk, and dark violet velvet forms the belt. Applique embroidery of irridescent cord on green silk forms the trimming of the skirt and jacket.

In black gowns, which are always worn, there is a moire velour, with a plain skirt lined with pink. The front of the bodice is of embroidered black lisse, and the bolero of black glace silk, covered with black net richly jeweled with turquoise, silver and jet. Pale blue velvet finishes the edge of the revers, being put on in a narrow twist, trims the collar, and lines the bows on the top of the sleeves.

Eglantine barege forms the next costume, which is made with the fashionable accordion-plaited skirt. The yoke, epaulets and sleeves are tucked in groups, finished with small fancy buttons up the back. The epaulets and opening of the bodice up the side are finished with a kilted frill of mauve chiffon, and the belt is of Nile green satin ribbon. Pale blue and petunia and heliotrope and old rose are new combinations of color this season, which are very effective if the right shades are chosen, and pale green with brown is another popular contrast.

The bodice is becoming more and more elaborate all the time, and the art of making this tucked and trimmed and shirred combination a distinguished success is quite beyond the commonplace dressmaker. Whether the material is gathered or plaited, it is still good style to have the blouse effect in front, the fullness falling a little over the belt, which may be of any width most becoming to the figure.

Canvas, in all its varying weaves, striped, figured, and plain, is decidedly the leading material in wool for all sorts of plain and dressy gowns to be worn in the early spring and all through the summer. They have quite superseded the mohairs, which were so popular last season, and the only kind of mohair which is at all fashionable is a very fine and silky quality.

Health in Flute Playing.

An eminent medical man says that the instrument least detrimental to health of aspiring musicians is the flute. Its practice, he asserts, is not only free from risk, but it may also be indulged in with positive benefit to the health, flute-playing being a capital substitute for walking exercise.

A DECEIVING PICTURE.

A Clever Trick to Swindle the Unsuspicious Buyer.

One of the most barefaced swindles on record was perpetrated by a Western real estate agent. The field of his operations was in a "town" which never has amounted to anything and never will. He bought a run-down farm lying at the edge of the town, and cut up into lots. At one corner of the tract he built up a toy residence addition to the town. He laid out a little roadway about two feet wide, and stuck up little trees along each side of it. On this road he put some houses, each one inch high. He put in a factory building that was nearly three feet high, and laid water pipes about the size of pipe stems. He had the whole thing photographed, and after the photographer had touched up the picture it indicated a beautiful driveway at least sixty feet wide, with big houses on either side of it. He took these photographs with him when he went on the road to sell the lots. He would say, "Now, here is a picture of one corner of the addition. I have already built twenty houses out there. We have water pipes laid and the street is gravelled. Your lot is less than six hundred feet from the corner of the factory building here." You see he was careful to protect himself in case he was called for proofs. The photograph was genuine, and it was true, as he said, that water pipes were laid and houses built. Of course he did not take the trouble to explain that the houses were no longer than bird cages, and the street was no wider than a plow furrow. Well, he traded four of these lots to a farmer for a drove of young cattle. When that farmer went over to look at the lots he was the maddest man on earth. He had the real estate man arrested for perpetrating a fraud. The man who sold the lots insists that he told the truth, and backed up his statements with a photograph.

AN INVOLUNTARY SPONSOR.

A Young Englishman Unintentionally Became Godparent to a Bambino.

A pushing young Englishman, just home from a foreign trip, relates an amusing experience that he had in Rome. He was anxious to visit the Vatican, and, understanding that cards of admission were to be had at St. Peter's, he hurried thither.

Seeing a small crowd around a priest who sat writing at his desk, he jumped to the conclusion that this was his man, and at once elbowed his way through the crowd. In his hurry he pushed aside a woman with a baby in her arms, and the baby began to cry at the jostling.

A slight confusion resulted, under cover of which the stranger gained the desk. The priest, looking up from his writing, asked in Italian, which the Englishman took to be an inquiry for his name, and he answered, "Davis."

The priest, after writing the name, turned to the woman with the baby, and taking the child in his arms, held it over the head of the Englishman until then had not noticed. Dipping his hands in the water, and placing them on the child's head, the priest began a curious jargon of Italian phrases, in which the astonished Davis caught the words "Davis" and good English name, and saw with dismay, as he turned and fled, that he had given his name to the priest as godfather to the child.—Tid-Bits.

How Clever Pigeons Outwitted a Hawk.

H. S. Edwards owned a flock of pigeons which one day were cut off from their cote by a large hawk. The pigeons knew that if the hawk once got above them one at least of their number would go to make the hawk a meal, and so up they flew in circles, perhaps hoping to go higher than the hawk. In the rising game they were no match for the hawk. The latter kept under the pigeons and leisurely followed their laborious movements.

Then came a curious and unexpected sight to Mr. Edwards. Every pigeon closed its wings, when they appeared to be the size of sparrows, and down they came past the hawk at a terrific rate. That astonished the hawk. It actually dodged the dropping birds and missed half a dozen wing strokes before it got in full chase of them. When it got down to the barnyard not a pigeon was in sight. Some were in the cote, some in the porch, two in the well-house, and one was in the kitchen. The hawk had been outwitted completely. It is a question how the pigeons managed to check their fall, as they did not slacken up till they were about sixteen feet above the ground, when they scattered in all directions to escape the hawk.—Sportsman.

Crabs Know of the Coming Earthquake.

For some time previous to the day upon which the great earthquake of August, 1857, occurred, great swarms of crabs of an unknown variety were seen in the Bay of Payta, Chili. They all appeared to be greatly excited, and were literally climbing over each other in their efforts to escape an impending calamity. Evidently they knew that the earthquake was collecting its strength to desolate the coast is more than any man can say, but that they knew something unusual was about to happen there is no doubt whatever. That these animals had millions of them may be inferred from the report of Dr. Forbes, who says that "ten days after the earthquake the dead crabs were thrown upon the beach in a wall-line, three to four feet wide along the whole extent of the bay."

Did His Best.—Mrs. Toots: "Are you sure you came straight home from the office last night, dear."

Mr. Toots: "Well, as straight as I could, dear."—From Answers.

STRANGE COLOR PHOTOGRAPHS.

A Process in Which No Pigments or Colored Washes are Used.

The London Times says a private exhibition was given a day or two ago of some of the results obtained by the new process of color photography which has been devised by a Cornish man, Mr. Bennetto. The methods and indeed the principle employed, remain the secret of the inventor, and it is intended that they shall remain so until several more details and applications of the invention have been more fully worked out. All that is at present known is that the inventor, who has been occupied with the subject for the last eight years, claims to have discovered the first true and direct system of color photography by which can be transformed to a photographic negative and thence printed on glass or paper the exact natural colors of the object toward which the camera has been directed. He employs no pigments, his plates have not to be washed with various colored solutions, and it is not necessary to view his pictures through any combinations of tinted glasses. The colors are imprinted on the plate just as are the light and shade in an ordinary monochrome photograph and are directly visible to the eye. It may be mentioned that Mr. Bennetto in his earliest experiments could get no effects with a less exposure than three minutes; now he is able to work with exposures of sixteen seconds.

Whatever may have been the methods used, the pictures produced by them attain a high standard of excellence. One of the best specimens shown was a study of a sunrise, taken early one morning in the middle of June, 1895, in which the fiery orange of the dawn and the heavy masses of clouds were admirably represented. The clouds, again, were excellent in a typical picture of Cornish seashore scenery, and the tints of the sand and rocks and their reflections in the pools were faithfully reproduced. On the other hand, a room in which flowers were rather lacking in lustre. Possibly this is a question of exposure. Perhaps the picture which best illustrated the capabilities of the process was one of a champagne bottle standing on a white tablecloth and surrounded with various fruits. Here there were three or four different whites which were all distinguishable, but which it would probably have taxed the powers of any artist to represent by painting. The gold foil on the bottle was exactly rendered, and it was possible to tell that it was full by the prismatic gleam of the liquid. The one unsatisfactory thing in the picture was the spoon, whose sparkle was quite lost; it looked as if it might have been made of cardboard, covered with dull silver paper. The inventor looks forward, among other things, to revolutionizing by this process the illustration of books and magazines, and hopes to show in the future how to flash a picture on a screen so that a permanent copy may be left behind.

Hunting Down South.

The most patient man on earth and the most uncommunicative is the cracker of Florida.

I employed one to go with me and carry my traps on a deer hunt. I had been informed that there were plenty of the animals near a certain swamp. I accosted a native:

"I am informed that there are deer in this section?"

"Yaas."

"Are there?"

"Yaas."

"Can I hire you to carry my luggage?"

"Yaas."

We got ready, and I asked:

"What direction?"

"Don't know."

We tramped all day, cracker carrying the traps and not saying a word. We camped out at night, the cracker building a fire and cooking supper. The next day we found no indication of deer, and still the cracker said nothing. That night I asked:

"How soon do you think we will find any deer?"

"Never."

"I thought you said there were plenty?"

"Not hyar."

"Well, where are they?"

"T'other side swamp."

"Why didn't you say so long ago?"

I asked, angrily.

"Yo' never axed me."

The next morning we retraced our steps and two days later reached the other side of the swamp without another word from the cracker. We had not been there an hour before I killed a fine buck, and we secured four the first day. It was a beautiful hunting-ground, and I was surprised to suddenly come upon a large residence.

I could not understand how the deer remained so close.

"Who lives there?" I asked the cracker.

"Jedge Simmons."

"Who is he?"

"The man as owns this park and these deer."

I did not wait to interview the Judge, but paid the cracker and left that part of the State.—New York World.

A Misnomer.

The stage manager was thoughtful. "I think we'd better cut that line," he said.

"What line?" asked the leading man.

"The one that reads 'Apparel oft proclaims the man.'"

"I don't see why. It has come down to us without protest from the day that Shakespeare wrote it until now," said the manager, irritable, "of course it was all right when it was written. There were no girls in knickerbockers then, and very likely there was a good deal of truth in it."—Pearson's Weekly.

THE MIGHTY OCEANIC.

The New White Star Liner Will Exceed in Length the Famous Great Eastern.

The building of the Oceanic, the greatest of ocean steamships, has been begun. According to the advices received by New York officers of the White Star line, the longest of ship keels for their new passenger steamer is now being laid at Belfast, on the ways of Harland & Wolff, the shipbuilders who have the contract for the construction of the Oceanic.

When the Great Eastern, the conscienous wonder in shipbuilding, proved a signal failure as a practical and paying ocean carrier, it was said by shipbuilders that never again would such a monster be attempted; that the available length of steamships had been overstepped by her 680 feet, and that thereafter the length of both large freighters and passenger steamers would more nearly approach 500 than 700 feet.

They were wrong, for experience since that time has shown the practicability, in economy, speed and safety, of ships beyond 500 feet in length.

After the condemnation of the Great Eastern, with her length of 680 feet, there was for a time a tendency toward ships 200 feet shorter, and then a return to longer models. The City of Rome was built 561 feet long, and the Lucania and Campania each 620 feet.

The St. Louis and St. Paul are each 535 feet, and the Kaiser Wilhelm, now being constructed, will be 650 feet. Then comes the Oceanic, the largest of them all, measuring 704 feet, or twenty-four feet more than the wonder-inspiring Great Eastern.

After total depth will be about the same as the Great Eastern's, a little more than fifty feet, with the same mean draught of twenty-five feet. Her beam will be a little less than the eighty-three feet of her great predecessor.

As all needed preparation for the building of the Oceanic has been made, there is expected to be no delay, but the construction will go steadily on, and if present plans are carried out she will be launched next January, and in about one year from now will be stretching her great length over the Atlantic wastes on her first voyage.

In appearance and interior arrangements the Oceanic will be very like the Teutonic and Majestic, only on enlarged lines, which will add to convenience and comfort.

The steamship will have greatly enlarged engines, in consequence of which the broken and rebroken record of transatlantic time is expected to be greatly reduced. Just what this speed will be the officers of the line are not prepared to say, but there is a rumor that the Oceanic will go from Liverpool to New York inside of four days, and this without sacrifice to comfort or safety.

A great ship on the water, with half her bulk out of sight, does not impress the observer with the magnitude of her dimensions, but if placed on land beside familiar objects her size is better appreciated.

The Mahogany Tree.

It will undoubtedly be news to many that the vast mahogany forests of Nicaragua are controlled in Boston. The cutting and shipping of the immense exports from that country is a great enterprise in itself, to say nothing of bringing it here and manufacturing it into lumber. One steamer plies regularly between Boston and Central America engaged in this trade.

Employed in Nicaragua and the United States of Colombia are from 1,000 to 1,500 native workmen and lumbermen. These are under American bosses. The trees from which mahogany furniture is made vary in age and size. When cut they vary in age from twenty-five to thirty years, and some of them are even seventy-five years old. They average twenty-five inches or more in diameter, and run as large as four inches, and even more. For every mahogany tree that is cut two others are planted, and thus the forests are practically inexhaustible.—Boston Transcript.

The Cheese.

The proper degree of formality observed at the White House, so far as the officials are concerned, is sometimes in contrast with the procedure in earlier days. In recently published recollections of a long life, the author describes a scene he witnessed at the White House in President VanBuren's time. In honor of the inauguration, a cheese had been sent to the new chief magistrate. It was "the size of a full-sized round table." Pieces of it, together with crackers, were handed round to persons assembled. "The whole house and almost the whole city was redolent of cheese, fragments of it lying everywhere in the streets." All this may seem to have brought the President nearer the people, but the country can today quite appropriately dispense with that form of paternalism.

Language Lesson.

"Mamma, if I had a hat before I had this one it's all right to say that's the hat I had before it?"

"Certainly, Johnny."

"And if that hat once had a hole in it and I had it mended I could say it had a hole in it, couldn't I?"

"Yes, there would be nothing incorrect in that."

"Then it'd be good English to say that the hat I had had had had a hole in it, wouldn't it?"

"Johnny, you make my head ache."—Chicago Tribune.

A Quick Deduction.

"This boat seems pretty cranky. Is she perfectly safe for two?"

"Married or single?"

"Married."

"Yep."—New York Journal.

A GIANT IN TROUBLE.

Found that Earache Wasn't So Terribly Easy to Endure.

It was after the medical association had adjourned the other night that the genial old doctor called in several of his professional brethren into a corner and told his story.

"Never had a pleasanter case in my life," he chuckled. "You know what a big, powerful fellow Sems is. Never been sick a day, and has always derided those like that pain was a thing to make such a fuss over as is made by some people. Even his wife and children never got any sympathy from him, and he was always ready to give them a going over for not displaying more stoicism.

"Tuesday morning about 2 o'clock there was a terrific ringing at my telephone. On answering it I was urged by an agitated voice to hurry to Sems' house quickly as possible. It was a case of life and death. Getting there post haste, I found that great big fellow walking the floor in his night robe, groaning so that he could be heard anywhere in the block, crowding out doors the whole household, looking pale as a ghost, and stopping every few minutes to hold up one foot while he howled. His head was enveloped in towels, and one side of it steamed with hot poultices. He sailed into me for getting there so soon, said that half the people died while waiting for a doctor, jawed his wife because she hadn't sense enough to tell him that he had no slippers on, and then told me to call a lawyer so he could put his affairs into shape. I retoed this until we found out whether there was anything the matter.

"'Anything the matter!' echoed Sems. 'Great Heavens! man, the side of my head's coming off. I can't last the daylight in the morning. No mortal ever suffered such agony. If you're going to do anything, do it quick. My own opinion is that I'm done for,' and he let out the loudest howl of the night. What do you think was the matter with that big man? Earache; just common, old-fashioned earache. His little girl had had it worse and gone to school with a piece of cotton in her ear. I fixed him up, and then told him if he happened to prick his finger with a pin or bump his shin against a chair, not to hesitate to call me out of bed even if there was a blizzard."—Detroit Free Press.

A SHREWD TRICK.

Which Helped the Excavators in Digging Their Trench.

People in general cannot understand the doings of a student of nature. Especially quite ignorant persons are apt to conclude, when told that the objects of his search are fossils or minerals, that under this explanation is concealed the purpose of securing some buried treasure, for that is the only thing that would induce them to dig. Mr. A. L. Adams relates an amusing instance of this reasoning:

While excavating a large cavern on the southern coast of Malta, we had dug a trench in the soil on which some six feet in depth, in quest of organic remains. The natives in the vicinity, hearing of our presence, came in numbers daily to witness the proceedings. Interrogated by workmen with reference to the object of our researches, of which the workmen were about as ignorant as themselves.

One afternoon three stalwart fellows paid us a visit, and whilst they sat on the heaps of soil thrown down into the dark ditch below, I dropped a Spanish dollar on a shovelful of earth, and the next moment it lay with the soil on the heap. Picking it up in a careless manner, I put it into our luncheon bag, and, after a minute's conversation our friends disappeared, muttering to one another as they went.

Great was our amusement the next morning to find that our trench had been carried fully four feet below the level we had gained on the previous evening. Not only that; several other excellent sections of the floor had been made by the natives in expectation of finding buried treasure.

Accepted Her Suggestion.

She looked up into his eyes pleadingly.

"Algernon," she said, "I've a little favor that I should like to ask of you. I'm sure you will grant it; won't you, dear? It's about your farewell bachelor dinner."

"Certainly," replied Algernon Winkibidle.

"You won't think me silly, will you? Well, then, Algie, won't you please have it after we are married? The indigestion of the prospective bridegroom after the dinner always takes up so much room that the papers say hardly anything about the wedding at all."—New York Herald.

A Pleasant Exchange.

Joseph Gillott, the manufacturer of pens, once visited the artist, Turner.

"I have come to swap some of my pictures for yours," said he.

"What do you mean?" exclaimed Turner. "You do not paint."

"No, I do not, but I draw," said Gillott, unfolding a roll of Bank of England notes, "and here are some of my pictures."

The "swap" was effected.—Pearson's Weekly.

Profound Profundity.

The following interesting statement appears in the report of the Jefferson Laboratory of President Eliot of Harvard: "Professor Jackson, with Mr. M. H. Ittner, finished the work upon paranebenidinenitrotoluol, which was begun last year and continued with Mr. H. A. Torrey the study of the derivatives of chloranil, obtaining results which throw some light upon the constitution of the oxide of dibenzoyledihydroxyethoxyquinone."—New York Tribune.

The Constitutionalist.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

GREAT IS NEW JERSEY.

New Jersey is lying low and keeping mighty quiet. The New York State investigation of trusts and combinations resulted in a general scare, and when these big concerns talked of moving, the New Jersey Legislature straightway passed laws even more lenient than those now in force. When one of the large dry goods concerns threatened to move over there, New Jersey smiled and said: "We shall be glad to welcome you." The progressive inheritance tax is a progressive blessing to New Jersey, which, with outstretched arms, welcomes each New York millionaire, as he builds his country seat and gains a residence in that State. Ex President Cleveland has foresight and so he takes up his residence in New Jersey. I do not know how it is in Pennsylvania, but just now New Jersey is doing a roaring trade in millionaires and if the New York brewers and the New York agriculturalists look arms in a deadly struggle, the beer and cheese business of New Jersey may take an unheard-of boom. It is indeed an ill wind that blows nobody any good.—Philadelphia Enquirer.

FOR REED.

The Bound Brook Chronicle is advocating the nomination of Charles A. Reed for Congress when Congressman Howell's term comes to an end. The suggestion strikes us as a wise one. Somerset is entitled to the nomination next time, and who has a better fitted for the office than Senator Reed? His term in the Senate will end that year, so that he would have nothing to interfere with his going to Washington. Senator Reed made a good record in the Senate last winter, and he would, undoubtedly, get the support of the people of this county should he want the Congressional nomination. He also has numerous friends in Middlesex and Monmouth, who would gladly work for him. Then let it be Congresman Reed—Union-ist Gazette.

A FACT.

The publisher of a newspaper has one thing to sell and one thing to rent. He has the newspaper to sell and the space in his columns to rent. Can any one inform us why he should be expected to give away either the one or the other? He can if he so chooses, and he does as a matter of fact, furnish a great deal of space rent free. But it does not follow that he ought to be expected to do so. It ought to be recognized as a contribution, exactly as would be the giving away of sugar or coffee by a grocer. But, strange to say, it is not looked upon in that light at all, yet everybody knows that the existance of a newspaper depends upon the rent of its space and the sale of the paper, as a merchant's success depends on selling his goods instead of giving them away.—New Brunswick Home News.

A TARIFF COMMISSION.

Congressman Fowler introduced in the house Monday a bill to establish a tariff commission to investigate changes therein and to adjust any inequalities in the existing law. The bill provides for the appointment of seven commissioners by the President for a term of office of twenty-one years, at a salary of $7,500, the chief commissioner to receive $8,000. The terms of the first seven commissioners are to be twenty-one, eighteen, fifteen, twelve, nine, six and three years, respectively. Mr. Fowler states that agitation every four years on the tariff paralyzes public business, and if power were placed in the hands of a commission the tariff could be changed gradually without affecting general business.

NEW JERSEY'S PATRONAGE.

President McKinley is reported to have said the following in reference to New Jersey patronage:

"I have not done much for New Jersey yet. She wants something in the way of diplomatic and Consular patronage. She deserves something and I intend to give her something without any unnecessary delay. I don't think I can do anything more in that line for your State awhile, at least not till after New Jersey has been recognized."

According to the newspapers, an Ohio husband became the happy father of seven children not long ago. Of the seven all lived but one. It is to be hoped he laid in a supply of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, the only sure cure for croup, whooping cough, colds and coughs, and so insured his children against these diseases. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

COUNTY NEWS.

From the Clinton Democrat this week we cull these few items as evidence of the original and newsy work performed by some of its country correspondents:

Lewis Eick has had his wagon repainted.

John Bush lost a young horse one day last week.

Sons of Rest now hunt both sunshine and shade.

We had a very fine rain which made everything grow.

The old-apples are all gone. The Fitzsimmons talk now.

John has got a new bob-tail dog and expects to give free shows this season.

Several of our embryo young men are troubled with an ingrowing moustache. (Simply a case of out of sight.)

The crows came in large flocks and lighted on Jake's barn. Take you will have to chain fast that horse of yours.

We understand that Walter will soon begin to drive the mules from Lebanon to Parker. Good healthy job, Walter; but keep your feet in the wagon.

The young man who was spoken of in last week's issue as falling on a decayed apple is a prominent member of Charlestown Council. No. 95, I. O. S. of H.

The Beau Brummell of the town has attained such a degree of exactness in parting his hair in the middle that he is, he states at any moment prepared to wager on which side the odd hair is. Have you noticed him?

MANY BILLS KILLED.

Gov. Griggs has vetoed about forty of the one hundred or more measures in his hands. These have not as yet been filed with the State Librarian, as was always done by former governors immediately upon vetoing the bill. Gov. Griggs has had experience enough with politicians to know that when one of their pet measures is disapproved by the Chief Executive a great howl goes up and usually this is followed by a united effort to save some other fellow's pet. The pets are usually worst of all the measures passing the Legislature, and to escape the pressure and to have the clamor all at one time, the Governor has hit upon a new scheme.

AN IMPROVEMENT WITHOUT COST.

Mayor Wilson, of North Plainfield, is letting no opportunity pass by which the municipal government may be improved without extra expense to the taxpayers, and in line with this idea he has induced the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company to establish telephones in the Mayor's office and in the home of Chief Marshal Wilson as sort of a token of good will on the part of the telephone company towards a community that is treating them with considerable consideration and profits.

A Busy Congressman.

Representative Howell has recommended the appointment of postmasters at Gladstone, Somerset County; at Sewaren, Middlesex County; at Allentown, Monmouth County, and at Atlantic Highlands, Monmoth County. The postmaster at Gladstone had resigned. The terms of the postmasters at Sewaren and at Atlantic Highlands had expired. Mr. Howell has also applied for the reestablishment of a discontinued postoffice in Monmoth County. Representative Howell has presented petitions from citizens of Millstone, Seabright and Basking Ridge, in the Third District, favoring the passage of a bill restricting immigration.

Stepped on Good Luck Rice.

Miss Edith Titsworth, of Madison avenue, now carries her hand in a sling as the result of an accident received in a rather remarkable manner. Miss Titsworth is related to Mrs. Elfleda Taylor, nee Whiting, who was married last Thursday. Miss Titsworth was at the house after the wedding, and while walking down the steps to the piazza, she slipped on some of the rice that had been thrown at the bridal party and fell, spraining her right hand in two places. The injury will prevent her from using that hand for several weeks.

The Westfield (Ind.) News prints the following in regard to an old resident of that place: "Frank McAvoy, for many years in the employ of the L. N. A. & C. Ry. here, says: "I have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for ten years or longer—am never without it in my family. I consider it the best remedy of the kind manufactured. I take pleasure in recommending it." It is a specific for all bowel disorders. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

Stone Crushing Company.

Somerset Stone Crushing company, to quarry paving and crushed stones in the counties of Somerset and Morris, with a capital stock of $25,000 has been incorporated by Frank S. Tainter, Morristown; Julius Sturnberg, Bernardsville; A. Wright Post, Bernardsville.

Tired, Nervous and weak men and women find new life, nerve strength vigor and vitality in Hood's Sarsaparilla, which purifies, enriches and vitalizes the blood.

Hood's Pills are the favorite family cathartic, easy to take, easy in effect. 25c.

What Egotism!

Greater New York should inspire this city to annex Plainfield, Metuchen, Highland Park, Milltown and South River. Why not Greater New Brunswick?—New Brunswick Times.

Concentrated Vitality.

The Vital Element of Life—Dr. Campbell Succeeds in Charging Impoverished Blood With Natural Iron

Science has demonstrated that iron exists in great quantities in the Sun. It is not wonderful, therefore, that it is found in the soil. It is known that neither beast nor man can live unless their blood contains sufficient iron; it is therefore obvious that Nature has put it in the soil so that both animals and human beings may get iron from their food. We may live without salt, but we cannot live without iron. It is the iron, in the form of Hemoglobin or "Blood Iron," in the blood, which enables it to carry oxygen from the lungs to every part of the body. It is the iron and this oxygen which keeps the whole system pure. Together they kill off the germs of disease, and by enriching the blood maintain the health and vitality of people and animals through life without an ailment, and die merely from old age.

The only form of iron ever discovered which could be entirely taken up by the blood has just been produced by Dr Campbell, an eminent English physician. Working on the blood of animals and human beings secured their supply of iron from the same source, Dr. Campbell conceived the idea that iron must exist in the blood of animals in exactly the same form as in that of man. After much labor and tedious experiment he verified his belief by extracting the iron from a bullock's blood and subjecting it to the closest analysis. To demonstrate its efficacy it was necessary to prepare it in such form that it could be taken into the stomach by even the weakest infant.

This was accomplished by first fully dissolving it and then enclosing it in small pellets of the pure gelatine to which was given the name of Capsuloids. Close observation in various cases disclosed the fact that as soon as Capsuloids were taken into the stomache the gelatine covering dissolved and the pure natural iron was taken up by the blood restoring vitality, giving strength, curing sleeplessness, anæmia, dizziness, paleness, and the more serious diseases of the blood, such as scrofula, erysipelas, rheumatism, liver trouble and kidney complaint.

To fully establish the efficacy of this new remedy it has been decided to distribute a quantity of Capsuloids to the weak and ailing. This distribution will take place at L. W. Randolph's Drug Store, 108 Fulton street, on Monday, May 17th, between the hours of 1 and 8 p. m., when any adult presenting this notice will receive without charge, a box of Capsuloids.

Dr. Campbell's Red Blood Forming Capsuloids are sold by all leading druggists at 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, or sent direct, at the same price from the office of The Capsuloid Company, Room 1011, Downing Building, 108 Fulton street, New York city. 5 13 d,w

FOR A DAUGHTER'S LIFE.

$10,000 Wanted of Middlesex County as a Result of a Bridge Caving In.

Suit will be brought this week by Patrick Rodgers, of Bonhamtown, against the county of Middlesex for $10,000 for the loss of his daughter's life. His daughter was Mrs. Margaret Renney. On Sunday afternoon, May 2, she and her sister, Mrs. Martin, took a short walk near their home on the road from Piscataway to Bonhamtown. They stood a few minutes on the newly made arch span of a brick culvert over a small brook known as Mill Creek. Suddenly the earth and bricks began to give way under the women. Mrs. Martin jumped to a place of safety, but Mrs. Renney went down with the debris, the culvert having caved in. The earth and bricks dammed up the stream, and the rise of the water caused the drowning of Mrs. Renney.

The question of responsibility was at once suggested. Members of the Board of Freeholders, who had the building of this bridge in charge, said that it had not been accepted by the county and the contractor pronounced satisfactory by the County Engineer. The contractor who did the work declared that the county had accepted the bridge. Mr. Rodgers has retained as his counsel Swackhamer & Williams of Plainfield.

Part of Her Wheel Returned.

Miss Eleanor I. Vandeventer, of Washington Park, who had her wheel stolen last week, was greatly surprised on Saturday when a portion of it was returned to her. Everything except the two wheels were brought back by workmen who found it on the new portion of Sycamore avenue where they were working. Miss Vandeventer at once recognized the part returned and she was pleased to secure that much of her wheel.

Reward For an Incendiary.

The National Board of Underwriters have offered a reward of $250 to the person who shall produce evidence that will lead to the detection of the person or persons who set fire last month to the dwelling house situated on Mountain avenue and occupied by Mrs. Phillpitt. In the opinion of the Board it is thought that the house was set on fire and for this reason the above reward is offered.

Satisfied With Present Service.

A rumor has been started that the residents of Netherwood are anxious to have a postoffice established in their midst, as heretofore. The Daily Press is able, however, to state that the rumor is without foundation and that the residents of that section are very well pleased with the present free-delivery system.

CUPID'S COY SECRET OUT

FRANK LINBARGER MARRIED UNDER THE NAME OF DR. LEE.

The Bride, Miss May Sandford, of Red Bank, Knew the Secret, But Did Not Tell—Parents Are Indignant.

It was two years ago that Frank Lee Linbarger, formerly of this city, but recently of Elizabeth, was spending the summer at Asbury Park, and while there met and was introduced to a charming young woman whose name was Miss May Sandford. Almost from the start there seemed to be an affectionate regard between the two. They met frequently and took long walks together, and during their stay at the Park their love increased until finally they became engaged. Soon afterward Mr. Linbarger returned to Elizabeth, where he was practicing dentistry, while his fiance, together with her mother, returned to their home at Red Bank.

After that time Dr. Linbarger called on his betrothed regularly. Not a great while ago the day for the wedding was set. That time happened to be within the past two weeks. On neither side of the two families did there seem to be any objection to the marriage until after the ceremony was performed. It was then learned that Dr. Linbarger was not married by his right name, but instead he had given the name of Dr. Lee, the last name being his middle name. He had divulged the secret to his wife to be, and she advised him to keep the name he had given. She did not like the idea of having her friends know that she was introduced to her lover by a wrong name. The young man consented to keep the name and thus be married by it. The wedding took place at the home of the bride at Red Bank within the past two weeks and the couple are now residing there where Dr. Linbarger is practicing dentistry.

His wife is reputed to be worth about $75,000 and the doctor's friends are congratulating him. The latter is very popular wherever he is known and he has a large circle of friends in this city who will be surprised to learn of his marriage. The doctor's parents, who live in Elizabeth, are very indignant over the fact their son should be married under an assumed name and it is said that they have disowned him for doing so.

The news of the marriage was received in this city on Saturday and very few persons knew of it. It is now claimed that Dr. and Mrs. Linbarger are not legally married, owing to the fact that the doctor was married under an assumed name, and the friends of both parties are anxious that the ceremony should be performed a second time It is not known as yet whether the couple will be married a second time or not. Both are very well pleased with their choice and the prospects are that they will live happily together.

FAST STEPPING HORSES.

Saturday Races Held at the Gentlemen's Driving Park.

Saturday was a great day at the Gentlemen's Driving Park and many interested sporting men were present to witness the fine trotting. In all there were about four hundred people present and the fine weather, together with the fine condition of the track, resulted in several good exhibitions. Tom Brantingham's "Myrtle Twig" and J. W. Johnson's "Sydnutt," furnished a pretty race, which was run in three heats. The former horse won the first two heats, but the other horse made the best time, which was 2:25½. Horses owned by D. Darby and R. Gwynett participated in the second race, and the former won the three heats in 2:32, 2:37 and 2:39. The last race was given by horses owned by N. B. Smalley, Frank Hand, A. Lutkins and C. Brower. The first heat was won by Hand's horse in 2:42, and the second heat by Smalley's horse in 2:37. It was then so late that there was not time for the third heat. Next Saturday a very fine programme will be given and it is expected there will be a large attendance.

What We Inherit

We are not to blame for. We cannot be held responsible for the dispositions and tendencies which we derive from our ancestors, nor are we responsible for the germs of disease which may manifest themselves in our blood as a heritage from former generations. But we are responsible if we allow these germs to develop into serious diseases which will impair our usefulness and destroy our happiness. We are responsible if we transmit to our descendants the disease germs which it is possible for us to eradicate by the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla, the one true blood purifier. This medicine has power to make rich, red blood and establish perfect health in place of disease.

"It is the Best on Earth."

That is what, Edwards & Parker, merchants of Plains, Ga., say of Chamberlain's Pain Balm, for rheumatism, lame back, deep-seated and muscular pains. Sold by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, corner of Park and North avenues.

Careful experiments made upon a healthy person show that of ordinary oatmeals 83 per cent. alone is digested. Of H-O 99.75 is digested.

The process of preparation of H-O is "peculiar to itself."

Subscriptions Free to

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly
Illustrated American (Weekly)
Truth (Weekly)
New England Magazine
Chatterbox (Monthly)
The American Kinder Magazine
Home Magazine (Monthly)
Binghamton, N. Y.

WITH COUPONS FROM THE

H.O.Co.'s Goods

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS

For all Bilious and Nervous Diseases. They purify the Blood and give Healthy action to the entire system.

Cure DYSPEPSIA, HEADACHE, CONSTIPATION and PIMPLES.

SALESMEN WANTED

To sell our high grade Inspected Nursery Stock. Easy work, pleasant and profitable. Outfit free. First time, as well as the standard varieties of fruits and ornamentals. No previous experience necessary. Write for terms, stating age, etc.
Hooper, Brown & Sons' Nurseries, West Chester, Pa.

Dissolution of Partnership.

Notice is hereby given that the partnership heretofore existing under the name and firm of Terril & Cole, as Undertakers and Funeral Directors in the city of Plainfield, is this day by mutual consent dissolved, and all debts due and owing by said firm are to be paid by George W. Cole, and all claims and demands of said firm are payable to George W. Cole, who will continue the business at his place of business, No. 220 West Second street, in the city of Plainfield.

MOSES N. TERRILL.
GEO. W. COLE.

1 26 6

THE WINDOW MAN AGAIN.

An Attempt Made to Gain an Entrance to a Dunellen Home.

Dunellen seems to be a sort of haven for burglars. Sunday night they visited the residence of Mrs. Emily Apgar on Front street. About 1:30 o'clock a daughter of Mrs. Apgar, who is not a very sound sleeper, was aroused by a strange noise at what she supposed was her bedroom window. She got up and walked cautiously to the window and there in the bright moonlight she saw a strange man cutting away the putty from around a lower window pane. Mrs. Apgar was too frightened to give an alarm, so she stood almost motionless leaning against a large pane of glass watching the manouvres of the burglar. Presently, the glass she was leaning against broke and the glass rattled down on the head of the intruder, who immediately suspended operations and darted off toward the railroad.

Epworth League Anniversary.

The Epworth League of the First M. E. church will celebrate the eighth anniversary of the formation of the League at the church on Sunday evening. The address will be delivered by the pastor, Rev. Dr. Winfield C. Snodgrass.

Sylvester Randolph, of West Eighth street, is detained at home by serious illness.

Central Railroad of New Jersey

Anthracite Coal Used Exclusively. Double Track. Electric Block Signals.

Stations in New York foot of Liberty St. Time Tables in Effect JANUARY 26th, 1896.

PLAINFIELD AND NEW YORK.

Leave Plainfield for New York—5 00, 7 20, 8 00, 9 30, 10 30, 11 45 a. m., 12 00 (Limited), 1 30, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 15, 9 00, 10 00, 11 45 p. m. Sunday, 12 00 (Limited), 1 30, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 15, 9 00, 10 00, 11 45 p. m.

Leave New York for Plainfield—1 00, 2 30, 3 30, 4 30, 5 30, 6 30, 7 30, 8 30, 9 30, 10 30, 11 30 a. m., 12 30, 1 30, 2 30, 3 30, 4 30, 5 30, 6 30, 7 30, 8 30, 9 30, 10 30, 11 30 p. m. Sunday, 1 00, 2 30, 3 30, 4 30, 5 30, 6 30, 7 30, 8 30, 9 30, 10 30, 11 30 p. m.

Limited trains for Newark points only.

PLAINFIELD AND SOMERVILLE.

Leave Plainfield for Somerville—5 45, 7 30, 8 35, 9 55, 11 08, 11 45 a. m., 12 55, 2 30, 3 45, 4 55, 5 35, 6 45, 7 55, 9 05, 10 45 p. m. Sunday, 8 35, 9 55, 11 08 a. m., 12 55, 2 30, 3 45, 4 55, 5 35, 6 45, 7 55, 9 05, 10 45 p. m.

Leave Somerville for Plainfield—6 40, 7 50, 9 05, 10 20, 11 35 a. m., 1 25, 3 05, 4 15, 5 00, 6 10, 7 20, 8 30, 9 40, 10 55 p. m. Sunday, 9 05, 10 20, 11 35 a. m., 1 25, 3 05, 4 15, 5 00, 6 10, 7 20, 8 30, 9 40, 10 55 p. m.

PLAINFIELD AND ELIZABETH.

Leave Plainfield for Elizabeth—6 15, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 a. m., 12 00, 12 30, 1 00, 1 30, 2 00, 2 30, 3 00, 3 30, 4 00, 4 30, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 p. m. Sunday, 7 15, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 a. m., 12 00, 12 30, 1 00, 1 30, 2 00, 2 30, 3 00, 3 30, 4 00, 4 30, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 p. m.

PLAINFIELD AND LAKE HOPATCONG.

Leave Plainfield for Lake Hopatcong, 8 35 a. m.

WESTWARD CONNECTIONS.

At Junction for Bound Brook, Somerville, Flemington, Lambertville, Trenton, Bridgewater, Phillipsburg, Easton, Allentown, Bethlehem, Mauch Chunk, Reading, Harrisburg, Mount Carmel, Shamokin, Williamsport, Tamaqua, Pottsville, Hazleton, Shamokin, and principal points in Lehigh Valley and Wyoming Valley.

At Bound Brook for Flemington, Lambertville, Trenton, Bridgewater, Phillipsburg, Easton, Allentown, Bethlehem, Mauch Chunk, Reading, Harrisburg, Pottsville, Tamaqua, Shamokin, Williamsport, Mount Carmel, Hazleton, Wilkesbarre, Scranton, Binghamton, Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse, Oswego, Utica, Rome, Watertown, Ogdensburg, Lake Champlain, Montreal, Toronto, Niagara Falls, Chicago and all points West, Northwest and Southwest.

At Junction for Stations on D. L. & W. R. R.

At Junction for Flemington, Lambertville, Trenton, Bridgewater, Phillipsburg, Easton, Allentown, Bethlehem, Mauch Chunk, Reading, Harrisburg, Pottsville, Tamaqua, Shamokin, Williamsport, Mount Carmel, Hazleton, Wilkesbarre, Scranton, Binghamton, Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse, Oswego, Utica, Rome, Watertown, Ogdensburg, Lake Champlain, Montreal, Toronto, Niagara Falls, Chicago and all points West, Northwest and Southwest.

For Flemington

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

Celebrated for its great leavening strength and healthfulness. Assures the food against alum and all forms of adulteration common to the cheap brands. Royal Baking Powder Co., New York.

A FINE PIANO RECITAL.

CULTURED PLAINFIELDERS HEAR A TALENTED ARTIST.

W. H. Barber a Thoroughly Subjective Musician Who Played With a Feeling and Technique That Pleased His Hearers.

A musical event of more than usual interest to Plainfielders was the piano recital given at the Casino Monday by William H. Barber, of New York. A large audience, composed of the most cultured and music-loving people of the city, was present, and thoroughly enjoyed the charming programme, rendered by one of America's most eminent and accomplished pianists.

Mr. Barber's playing showed both magnificent technique and an unusual amount of feeling. A thorough subjective murician, he appeared equally at home in classical and romantic music; in the stately movement of Handel's Gavotte in B flat major, the dainty sprightliness of Stavenhagen's "Caprice," the passionate sweetness of Chopin's melodies, and the wild tragedy of the Schubert Liszt "Erl-King." Besides the composers already named, the programme contained compositions by Mozart, Rubenstein, Gdeg. Wagner, Schumann and Liszt. Perhaps the most popular numbers were Stavenhagen's "Caprice," the Schubert Liszt "Erl-King," and Liszt's Rhapsodie Hongroise No. 12, after all of which Mr. Barber was recalled, the lastnum ber receiving a double encore.

While Mr. Barber's execution was remarkably finished and brilliant, his most strongly marked characteristic was his thorough sympathy with the thought of the composer; to an unusual degree he might be said to live in the composition he was interpreting, thereby swaying the minds of his audience at his will from grave to gay, from joy to tragedy.

COULD NOT SURVIVE HIS INJURIES.

James Campbell, Hurt on the Railroad, Dies at the Hospital.

James Campbell, colored, who has been confined at Muhlenberg Hospital during the past two weeks suffering from a fractured skull, the result of an accident at White House, died at that institution this morning about 8:30 o'clock. During the past two days Campbell was unconscious and when he died he was partially so. He had nothing to say before he died, and was only able to partly understand what was said to him. His married daughter, whose home is in Hartford, Conn., has been in this city for several days, and has been in constant attendance at the bedside of her father. She took charge of the body and instructed Undertaker Cole to prepare the body for burial. Interment will probably be made at Hartford.

Plans for the New Trolley Road.

An enthusiastic meeting was held Friday night by the Union Township Committee over the petition presented by the Westfield and Elizabeth Traction Company to operate a trolley line across the county. The company was represented by Col. E. W. Hine and Mr. Headley, who were well received. By resolution of the committee notices of a public meeting, to be held May 26th, were ordered published. The traction company has more than half as many signatures of property-holders as are required.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo O., is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo O. Sold by druggists, 75c. Hall's Family Pills are the best.

TUMULT OF ELEMENTS.

FIRST REAL THUNDER STORM OF THE SEASON CAME MONDAY.

Accompanied by Vivid Lightning Which Struck Several Places in This Section But Did Not do Any Serious Damage.

The first re al thunder storm of the season visited this section, Monday afternoon. For nearly an hour, the rain poured down in a uninterrupted torrent accompanied by vivid lightning and heavy crashes of thunder. The damage done by the storm was comparatively light although a number of visitations of the lightning are recorded. Of course, the street car system was delayed during the heaviest of the storm, and several telephones suffered but those are the usual incidents of an electrical storm.

There was plenty of warning that a storm was at hand, yesterday afternoon. The western sky grew hazy and there was a stillness that betokened a tumult of the elements. Then a long row of dense black clouds appeared over the mountain and bore down on the city, rolling up the light slate colored clouds in front. There was a sharp gust of wind that preceded the rain which soon fell heavily, flooding the streets for the time. Although the ground was very dry, it was unable to receive all the rain that fell, and the puddles on the streets did not disappear until this morning.

The lightning was sharp and filled the air during the discharges. The thunder claps followed the flashes very closely.

The residence of P. C. Purdie, of Martine avenue, was struck. The bolt struck the chimney, splintering it and sending the bricks in all directions. A hole was torn in the slate roof and then the lightning continued its way downward. The laundress was working in the kitchen at the time and the lightning played about her. She was not injured although so dazed that she was compelled to stop work for some time.

The storm was also felt at Lincoln. About twenty people were assembled at the railroad station when a ball of fire passed out of the telephone across the room and out of the door, just grazing the head of S. D. Drake, who was standing in its path.

Daniel Dugan's house on LaGrande avenue was damaged slightly by the lightning. A bolt struck the roof and removed a number of slate but the lightning did not enter the house

The house occupied by Ralth Rigby, located on Stebbins place, was damaged to the extent of about $30 The lightning entered from the roof and descended in a zigzag manner to the cellar. On its way down it entered a closet and demoralized a large number of dishes. The plaster was torn from the ceiling and sidewalks and scattered about the rooms. The family was home at the time and all were thoroughly frightened. The house is insured by William Woodruff and this morning the loss was adjusted satisfactorily.

At the Pond Tool Works the lightning entered the rear part of the building and was attracted to the electric crane, which was in operation. Two men were working near it and they both received a slight shock The actual damage was very small. The electric fluid passed through other portions of the works but no damage is reported.

Mayor Brakeley of Dunellen had a thorough shaking up during the shower, Monday afternoon The Mayor was seated in his easy chair directly under the telephone, while on top of the 'phone lay some compressed cotton. The last heavy clap must have struck the electric wire leading to the store for it twisted the wire into an inextricable tangle, and passing into the store rung up the telephone and set fire to the cotton on top. The doctor was stunned for a minute or two and recovering himself noticed the fire in the cotton, which he hastened to extinguish. The doctor considers it a case, three in the Supreme Court and one in the lower court, and in all three of them counsel for the other side consented to judgment in favor of the defendants, discontinuing the cases with costs. Counsel on the other side were from Newark, Jersey City and Elizabeth. Probably no lawyer attending the Union County Court has a greater host of friends, and no counsellor has gained more respect and confidence with the presiding judges. Mr. Marsh's men in court is that of dignified intelligence, while his affability stamps him a gentlemen to the manner born. Mr. Marsh is never too busy to be courteous and agreeable.—New Jersey City.

Rev. Arthur Crane, of Kensington avenue, has returned from an evangelistic tour.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

FIGHT FOR U. S. SENATOR

GRIGGS AND KEAN ARE WORKING FOR THE HONOR.

The Republicans Win Next Fall Either One of These Men Will Probably Be Elected to the Highest Legislative Body.

Gov. Griggs and John Kean are the only candidates mentioned on the Republican side for United States Senator. It is safe to predict that either of these leaders will, in the event of Republican success next year, succeed James Smith in the highest law making body of the nation. Franklin Murphy as a candidate is not seriously considered. His health is poor and it is probable that during the heat of the campaign he will be found taking the sea in a foreign mission or else is traveling for recuperation. Even if Mr. Murphy became an active candidate it is not believed that he would cut much of a swath as against Gov. Grigg and Mr. Kean. When Mr. Murphy's adherents bolted the nomination of Gen. Sewell for Senator in 1894, his standing as a party man was irretrievably damaged. His appointment to a foreign mission, however, would not raise any objection.

Governor Griggs' friends would like very much to get Mr. Kean out of the way by inducing him to become a candidate for Governor. That would make plain sailing for the sturdy statesman from Passaic. But Mr. Kean says he does not want to be Governor, his ambition being to become a United States Senator. Twice already has he been balked while trying to reach the Executive chair, and he feels that it is unreasonable to ask him to make a third attempt. He has not yet had a chance at the United States Senatorship when his party was in power, and he asserts that the time is now ripe for the announcement of his candidacy. That is his ambition, and he will not be side-tracked for any consideration. By this time, no doubt, Governor Griggs is fully conscious of Mr. Kean's intention and consequently the battle between these rival leaders is already in progress.

Prospecting for votes has been going on since last fall, when eight State Senators were chosen, six of whom, it is stated, are committed to Mr. Kean. Those are Messrs. Miller, Stanger, Johnson, of Camden; Reed, Francis and Ketcham. If that is true then Mr. Kean has a very good start in the race. Next fall Senators will be elected in Cape May, Burlington, Middlesex, Sussex, Hunterdon. It is not so certain that the Republicans will retain control of all those counties, because Sussex and Middlesex are naturally Democratic, and Hunterdon is not much of a field for Republican campaigning. Burlington is about the only safe Republican county of the lot. Cape May is fighting ground, and Passaic is also debatable.

New Church Members.

The following additions to the membership of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church have recently been made: Elizabeth P. Bowen, 749 Watchung avenue; David Eastman, 135 Carlton avenue; Mrs. A. B. Eastman, 135 Carlton avenue; Lois A. Eastman, 135 Carlton avenue; Agustus A. Fisk, 211 West Seventh street; Charles W. Fisk, 211 West Seventh street; Susan E. Glass, 76 Fairview avenue; Elizabeth Goddard, 205 East Ninth street; Carolyn Kamaman, Sandford avenue; Marie L. Kampman, Sandford avenue; Grace M. Jones, 468 Kensington avenue; Wilhelmina M. Patton, West Fifth street; Daniel Runkle, 531 West Eighth street; S. L. Schoonmaker, Central avenue; Mrs. Mary L. Schoonmaker, Central avenue; Frank L. Schoonmaker, Central avenue; Henry M. Slauson, 215 East Ninth street; Helen D. Talmadge, 525 Belvidere avenue.

Lawyer Marsh's Good Fortune.

Craig Marsh has considerable good fortune at the opening of court at Elizabeth Tuesday. He was counsel for the defense in four important cases, three in the Supreme Court and one in the lower court, and in all three of them counsel for the other side consented to judgment in favor of the defendants, discontinuing the cases with costs. Counsel on the other side were from Newark, Jersey City and Elizabeth. Probably no lawyer attending the Union County Court has a greater host of friends, and no counsellor has gained more respect and confidence with the presiding judges. Mr. Marsh's men in court is that of dignified intelligence, while his affability stamps him a gentlemen to the manner born. Mr. Marsh is never too busy to be courteous and agreeable.—New Jersey City.

PAINT "FERINITE" COTTAGE COLORS.

the only

with the manufacturer — use

Save money and get the best. Send for a card of beautiful shades free.

THE TAYLOR PAINT & OIL CO.

20 DUNLING SLIP, N. Y. IT WILL PAY YOU.

Pure Blood

Every thought, word and action takes a vitality from the blood; every nerve, muscle, bone, organ and tissue depends on the blood for its quality and condition.

Spring Medicine

Therefore pure blood is absolutely necessary to right living and healthy bodies. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the great blood purifier and the best Spring Medicine. Therefore it is the great cure for scrofula, salt rheum, humors, sores, rheumatism, catarrh, etc.; the great nervine, strength builder, appetizer, stomach tonic and regulator.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is sold by all druggists. $1, six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass. Get Hood's and only Hood's.

Hood's Pills take easier dinner aid digestion.

Sweet Peas.

Do not delay planting them, our own mixture contains only the choicest and latest varieties.

LAWN & GARDEN SEEDS and FERTILIZERS. HARDWARE and HOUSEFURNISHINGS.

A. M. GRIFFEN,

119 East Front st.

Telephone Call, 6.

W. R. CODINGTON,

Counsellor-at-Law,

Commissioner of Deeds, Master-in-Chancery, Notary Public. Offices Corner of Park avenue and Second street.

SEEDS ... FOR THE ... Garden and Farm

Vegetable and Flower Seeds. All the newest and best varieties—quality unexcelled. Illustrated Catalogue FREE.

WEEBER & DON, Seed Growers and Growers of Cut Flowers, 114 Chambers St., New York City.

1 28 8m

What a Lot of Eggs the hens lay when fed on Green Cut Bone. With a dozen hens

Mann's Green Bone Cutter

will pay for itself in a short time in the increase of eggs. $5 BUYS ONE. Sent on trial. 180 highest awards received. Catalogue free if you name this paper. F. W. MANN CO., Milford, Mass.

2 3 4 9 10 11 12—7 mos.

SAVED

After years of suffering. It has at last been proven beyond a doubt that

NASALENE

Is a positive remedy for local diseases which are the result of cold and climatic changes. Cold in the Head. Hay Fever.

CATARRH

Deafness, (caused by catarrh), are instantly relieved.

It is pleasant to use, convenient to carry. Price 50c. and $1.00, at all druggists.

O. Y. GAGE, Warsaw, N. Y., Feb. 5ing. says: "Nasalene is very beneficial."

HUNTER MEDICAL CO.

54 E. 31st Street, N. Y.

DIED.

KIRK—Suddenly, in this city, Tuesday, May 4, 1897, Elizabeth P. Kirk.

WILLIAMS—In this city, Wednesday, May 5, 1897, Mary, wife of Julius Williams, aged 54 years, 1 months and 21 days.

O'CONNELL—In this city, May 6th, 1897, John O'Donnell, aged 28 years.

MILLINGTON—In this city, Friday, May 7, 1897, Milred M., son of Benjamin F. and Martha E. Millington, aged 20 years, 6 months and 7 days.

YOSSELLER—In this city, Saturday, May 8, 1897, Sarah E., wife of Oliver P. Vosseller, in the 54th year of her age.

Funeral services at her late residence, 215 East Second street, Tuesday, May 11, at 12 m. Interment at Somerville.

McCARTHY—On May 8th, after a tedious illness, Maria M., wife of the late Michael McCarthy, and second daughter of the late Lawrence O'Neil, in the 46th year of her age.

SOMERSET—In this city, May 10th, 1897, Florence May, youngest daughter of Lemuel and Martha Somerset, aged 3 months and 20 days.

YOUNG—At Fanwood, N. J., Monday, May 10, 1897, Myron Young, in the 23d year of his age.

JAS. M. DUNN

Dealer in

GROCERIES, PROVISIONS, VEGETABLES FRUITS &c

GARDEN SEEDS

fresh and carefully selected.

224 PARK AVENUE,

OPPOSITE NORTH AVENUE.

Everything usually found in a first class grocery.

Goods delivered free of charge.

PATENTS

CAVEATS, TRADE MARKS COPYRIGHTS.

CAN I OBTAIN A PATENT? For a prompt answer and an honest opinion, write to MUNN & CO., who have had nearly fifty years' experience in the patent business. Communications strictly confidential. A Hand-Book of information concerning Patents and how to obtain them sent free. Also a catalogue of mechanical and scientific books sent free.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice in the Scientific American, and thus are brought widely before the public without cost to the inventor. This splendid paper, issued weekly, elegantly illustrated, has by far the largest circulation of any scientific work in the world. $3 a year. Sample copies sent free.

Building Edition, monthly, $2.50 a year. Single copies, 25 cents. Every number contains beautiful plates, in colors, and photographs of new houses, with plans, enabling builders to show the latest designs and secure contracts. Address MUNN & CO., NEW YORK, 361 BROADWAY.

DIME

Savings Institution

Of Plainfield, N. J.

Is now receiving deposits payable on demand, with interest, allowed on all sums from $1 to $5,000.

J. FRANK HUBBARD, President.
GEO. W. ROCKFELLOW, Vice-Pres.
J. C. POPE, Treasurer.

Money deposited on or before January tenth will draw interest from the first.

GEORGE W. DAY,

General Auctioneer.

Sales of Personal Property solicited. P. O. Box 192, Dunellen, N. J., or address in care of Constitutionalist. Terms reasonable

Townsend's

Marble and Granite Works,

30

Somerset st., North Plainfield.

If you have not engaged your work I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to my self and satisfaction to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my business, and feel confident that I can give a large portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work. Years ago I went into this light, that good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for a business. Judgment of the Supreme Court and trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and as good stock any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage I am yours respectfully,

J. E. TOWNSEND, Manager.

Branch yard, Westfield, N. J.

NEW JERSEY SUPREME COURT

To Richard Garretson, defendant, or whom it may concern:

Please take notice that the following writ of Scire Facias has been issued out of the Supreme Court of the State of New Jersey, to wit:

STATE OF NEW JERSEY, ss.

The State of New JERSEY to our Sheriff of our County of Somerset, GREETING:

WHEREAS, at a term of the Supreme Court of Judicature, holden at Trenton, before the Justices thereof, in the Department of the said Court JOHN D. BARTINE recovered against RICHARD GARRETSON, of the county of five hundred and thirty dollars and eighty-three cents damages, which he had ascertained for execution, as certain promises and considerations to him, the said JOHN D. BARTINE, by the said RICHARD GARRETSON, defendant, and also thirty-one dollars and seventy cents for his costs and charges about which he had sued—as by the said writ and record thereof remaining in the said RICHARD GARRETSON is convicted, as appears to our Justices aforesaid. And whereas, the said JOHN D. BARTINE, we have been informed that although judgment by these presents, we command you that you cause to be made known to the said RICHARD GARRETSON, defendant, that he be and appear before our Justices at Trenton, aforesaid, on the thirtieth day of March next, to shew cause if he have anything to say for himself why the said JOHN D. BARTINE should not have his execution against him for the damages and costs aforesaid, according to the form of the statute in such case and record recovery, if it shall seem expedient for him so to do. And further to do and receive what our said Court, before the Justices aforesaid, shall then and there in this behalf consider. And have you then and there the names of those by whom you shall cause it to be made known to him and this writ.

WITNESS, MERCER BEASLEY, Esquire, Chief Justice, at Trenton, aforesaid, the seventeenth day of February, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-seven.

BEASLEY & MEEHAN, Att'ys.

BENJ. F. LEE, Clerk. 2 25 6w

POULTRY

We keep everything in the line of poultry business. Call or let us send you our illustrated catalogue—it's free for the asking. Prices low.

Excelsior Wire & Poultry Supply Co.

Factory at Hackettstown, N. J.

CARNEY BROS.,

MADISON AVENUE,

Between Front and Second streets.

Tinners,
Plumbers
Gas Fitters,

Grates and bricks for all kinds of stoves can be found here at Jobbers' prices. Bring your tinware mending to us. The best tinners, the best plumbers, and the best gas-fitters in this section. We use none but the very best of materials, and our work always gives satisfaction. Keys of all kinds are made here. Tinware made to order. Ranges, brick and portable furnaces. Sanitary plumbing.

Wm. A. Woodruff,

Fire and Life

INSURANCE AGENT,

OFFICE,

corner Front St. and Park Avenue,

Plainfield, N. J.

Real Estate for Sale and Exchange. Money to Loan on Approve Security.

Sanitary Plumbing,

Brick and Portable Furnace Gas Fitting, Tin Roofing, Etc., Etc., Etc.

I am prepared to do any of the above branches in strictly first-class sanitary and workmanship manner.

Having associated myself with the Master Members Association of New York City, I employ none but first class mechanics and non-union men. I believe in every man running his own business, at all times and in all cases.

D. W. LITTELL,

No. 112 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J.

ALBERT HEDDEN

Livery & Boarding Stables

FOURTH ST.,

between Watchung and Park avenues. First-class Livery. Horses boarded by week or month. Telephone call, No. 114.

A. WOLFF,

Manufacturer of

CIGARS.

And dealer in all kinds of Smoking and Chewing Tobacco, and smokers articles, has removed from 234 W. Front street, to 261 West Front street, one door east of Madisen avenue and solicits the patronage of his friends and the public generally.

P. P. VanArsdale,

PIANO TUNER.

Instruments put in thorough order. Terms reasonable. Pianos and organs for sale and to let. Orders by postal, P. O. box 160, or left at Willett's shoe store, No. 107 Park avenue, will receive prompt attention. Residence 301 E. Front street, corner Elm street. 9[17]

WANTED—AN IDEA Who can think of some simple thing to patent? Protect your ideas; they may bring you wealth. Write JOHN WEDDERBURN & CO., Patent Attorneys, Washington, D. C., for their $1,800 prize offer.

FRAZER

AXLE GREASE Next to the Best

Its wearing qualities are unsurpassed anywhere. Lasting three boxes of any other brand. Not to be excelled for Speed, Durability and Economy.

FOR SALE BY ALL DEALERS.

E. B. MAYNARD,

PRACTICAL

BARBER AND HAIR DRESSER

204 PARK AVE.

Ladies' and Children's Hair Cutting done at their residence. Shaving, Shampooing, etc., satisfactorily performed.

Woolston & Buckle,

PAINTERS,

Wall Papers, Painters' Supplies

141-145 North avenue.

17 YEARS' EXPERIENCE.

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS, DESIGNS, COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain, free, whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. Oldest agency for securing patents in America. We have a Washington office. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN,

beautifully illustrated, largest circulation of any scientific journal. Weekly, terms $3.00 a year; $1.50 six months. Specimen copies and HAND BOOK ON PATENTS sent free. Address

MUNN & CO.,
361 Broadway, New York.

A GAY FETE FOR SOCIETY.

THE TOWN IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION'S GREAT AFFAIR.

To Be Given on Mrs. Pierre Mali's Beautiful Grounds for the Purpose of Raising Money to Improve Park.

The ladies of the Town Improvement Association are planning a delightful fete champetre, to be held Saturday afternoon and evening, June 8th, on the grounds of Mrs. Pierre Mali's country home in this city, says the New York Herald. The property is familiarly known as the home, during the summer, of John Taylor Johnston, when he was president of the New Jersey Central Railroad. His prominence as a man of letters and patron of art made Mr. Johnston a conspicious figure in New York city, where he resided in the winter, until his death, about four years ago. He was the founder of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, its president for many years, and a liberal contributor to its art treasures. Mrs. Pierre Mali, his daughter, well-known in New York society circles as a resident of Fifth avenue and possessed of artistic tastes, has inherited the public minded spirit of her father, and is the president of the Town Improvement Association of Plainfield, where she spends her summers at the home of her childhood.

The newly elected officers of this association are: President, Mrs. Pierre Mali; vice presidents Mrs. A. S. Patterson and Mrs. L. V. F. Randolph; recording secretary, Mrs. S. R. Krom; corresponding secretary, Miss Elleth Stewart; treasurer, Mrs. Alexander Gilbert. The working committees for the new year are as yet incomplete, but will consist of many of the best women of the highest social position in Plainfield.

Funds being needed for the fitting up of a park, in the development of improvements in that charming suburban town, Mrs. Mali has given the use of the buesutiful grounds that surround her home for the coming entertainment. No more delightful spot could be found anywhere for a fete champetre. Broad lawns, shaded by fine old trees stretch out in verdant beauty, inviting to rest and comfort. Some of these trees were planted by Mr. Berkman, a former owner of the property, who came from Belgium and claimed his descent from Rubens. Carriage drives and enticing footpaths intersect the acres of greensward, counted by the hundred, and a beautiful brook courses through the whole in such a charming way that no word but picturesque will do, even if the word is hackneyed and hints of sentimental description. Boats under the care of competent oarsmen will sail upon this winding stream for those who wish to gratify at the same time two American ideas—ease and motion. Mr. J. Doull Miller has charge of these boatmen, and the decorations of the boats and illumination at night with Chinese lanterns will be under the control of Miss Edith Hyde.

An artistic rustic arbor to the left of the front entrance will be the centre of the fruit and flower department. It will be a veritable bower of beauty, with its floral decorations and twining green. Japanese lanterns at night will shed their tinted glow over the whole, making a scene fit for fairyland. Mrs. J. Parker Mason is in charge of this bower, and she and her assistants will wear wreaths of June flowers. Mrs. Mason's aids are Mrs. J. Doull Miller, Mrs. Barrows, Mrs. Pinto, Mrs. F. E. Andrews, Mrs. Fred Yates, Mrs. Edward Van Buren, Mrs. W. C. Delaney, Mrs. Marion Ackerman, Mrs. Joseph Reinhart, Mrs. F. G. Mead, Mrs. Clifton Wharton and the Misses Edith Smalley, Daisy Shepard, Edith Hyde, May Waring, Florence Waring, Marion Dumont, Elizabeth Stewart, and Katharyn Reinhart.

The dark old trees, with heavy foliage and masses of greenery, suggest gypsies, and here they will be, on an island in the stream—dark-browed, gaily costumed, artful and bewitching. Here gypsy songs and dances in Hungarian costumes will be given, to the sound of tambourine and stirring music. Here, too, Hungarian gypsies, dark of eye and wild of blood, will tell strange fortunes for the crossing of their palms with a "bit o' siller." In the evening the gypsy encampment will be illuminated by flaming torches and a genuine campfire, around which gypsy youths and maidens will be clustered with banjos and mandolins, singing their wild glees. A special feature of this part of the entertainment will be the serving of flapjacks, baked over the campfire and served in the true Adirondack style, with maple sugar and butter. The committee in charge of the gypsy encampment include Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen, Mrs. A. Walter Haviland, Mrs. William L. Saunders, Mrs. B. A. Hegeman, Jr., and Mrs. William J. Roome. The uncompleted list of aids has among their number the Misses Annie Murphy, Emma Schoonmaker, Mabel Vandeventer, Alice Barlow, Elizabeth Hull, Mary Hull, May Tracy, Elizabeth Van Boskerck, and Messrs. Willis West, Harry Curtis, Arthur Murphy, "Jack" Dumont, Laurens Van Buren, Harry Patton and William N. Runyon.

Adjoining the gypsy encampment a band of music will discourse sweet strains, in the rear of the lawn devoted to refreshment tables, where, in addition, a supper will be served from 6 to 8 o'clock. Mrs. O. T. Waring and Mrs. VanBoskerck are at the head of the supper committee. The ice cream tables will be in charge of Mrs. Henry Lapsley and Miss Kate Martine. Their aids will be the Misses Ethel Plummer Bowen, Beatie Bowen, Lena Steward, Margaret Macready, Jessie Bushnell, Josephine Lapsley, Florence Patterson, Stephanie Krom, Margaret Goddard, Harriet Goddard, Mary Anderson Reinhart, Martha Wadsworth, Constance Patton, Sarah Richards, Edmee Corlies, Florence Curtis, Clara Case, Helen Brown, Helen Martin, Elsie Martin, Elsie Harmon, Ida Strong, Ethel VanBoskerck, Ethna Strong, Agnes Strong, Sallie Schuyler, Mary Mann, Blossom Randolph, Dorothy Wells, Margaret McCutchen and Virginia Hegeman. These waitresses will be costumed as Swiss peasants, with large straw hats, white waists, with velvet bodices and colored skirts.

In the evening the entire lawn will be illuminated by electric lights and Chinese lanterns, under the care of J. Parker Mason. A place where nature has done so much and inventive and ingenious minds have added more cannot but make a charming rendezvous for bicyclists. A beautiful fete with charming hostess and attentive aids, the gathering of the "beauty and chivalry" of Plainfield, the possibility of securing delicious viands and refreshing drinks, the hope of meeting old friends and making new ones, and the variety of entertainment provided supply motives for bicycle riders that do not often fall to the lot of residents in New Jersey. Already there are rumors of bicycle parties forming in towns adjacent and remote. Without doubt the Oranges, Montclair, Elizabeth, Rahway and towns on the line of the Central Railroad of New Jersey will send delegations from the east; riders from Somerville, Bound Brook and Raritan will represent the west, cyclists from Morristown, Sterling, Summit and Bernardsville will ride down from the north, and the south will send delegations from Metuchen and New Brunswick.

If June 5th should prove a rainy day the fete will be postponed until Saturday, June 12th. Many of the committees are necessarily incomplete at this date. Among those partially formed are:

Finance—Mrs. Alexander Gilbert. Music—Mrs. J. Kirtland Myers and Wm. E. Cook. Bicycles—Mrs. D. W. Pond. Tickets and menus—Mrs. S. B. Krom. Omnibuses from the railroad station to grounds—Mrs. M. H. Eaton. Decoration of entrance—Mrs. Craig Marsh. Press—Mrs. Benjamin J. Shreve, Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, Miss Harriet R Shreve and H. P. Reynolds.

Among the patronesses are: Mrs. A. D. Shepard, Mrs. Edgerton, Mrs. Charles Hyde, Mrs Lawrence Myers, Mrs. J. Parker Mason, Mrs. William Palmer Smith, Mrs. D. P. Hall, Mrs. Bowland Cox, Mrs. Craig Marsh, Mrs. Walter Stewart, Mrs. J. T. Baker, Mrs. S. A. Ginna, Mrs. Chas J. Fisk, Mrs. Ernest L Walz, Miss Isabel Tweedy, Miss Florence Tweedy, Mrs. George H. Frost, Mrs. S. Haff, Mrs. Emma S. Brown, Mrs. C. Schermerhorn, Mrs. Orville T. Waring and Mrs. Charles Reed.

DOWN CAME BABY AND ALL.

A Twelve-year-old Girl of John Ammon Took a Tumble of Ten Feet.

Mr. and Mrs. John Ammon's daughter, twelve years old, of Elm place, had a narrow escape from fatal injury late Friday afternoon. Together with several playmates, she was having a good time in an open field close to the house where Miss Ammon lives. The latter started to climb a tree, and her friends thinking it was great fun, cheered her on. The little girl had reached a distance of about ten feet when a limb broke and she fell the entire distance to the ground.

Her associates were frightened and at once went to the injured girl's home to tell her mother.

The latter hastened to the scene of the accident and found her daughter in an almost helpless condition. She picked the girl up and carried her to the house where she was properly treated. An examination showed that there were no bones broken, but that the body was severely bruised and scratched, and that the girl was suffering a great deal from fright. In a little while the girl recovered from her scare and aside from the bruises and a few other injuries she is doing nicely.

Officers of the State Missionary Society.

At the annual State meeting of the Woman's Baptist Foreign Missionary Society, held at Freehold, on Thursday, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Alonzo Pettit, of Elizabeth; president of junior work, Miss Ida E. Slater, Matawan; recording secretary, Mrs. J. J. Jones, East Orange; corresponding secretary and treasurer, Mrs. B. J. Shreve, Plainfield.

The Misses Schooley, of Elizabeth, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Smith, of Central avenue.

FOUGHT TO ESCAPE LAW

JOHN BENFORD GAVE POLICEMAN TOTTEN A TUSSLE.

He is a Well-Known Character in the Police Court and is Wanted This Time for Appropriating a Fence.

A fugitive from justice, John Benford, took refuge in his own home on Paradise alley, last Thursday, and when surrounded by police he made a vigorous resistance and tried to brain Patrolman Totten with a large wooden bowl. The officers finally arrested him and carried him away from his weeping mother and locked him up in the station house. This morning, City Judge De Meza gave him a sentence which will result in a three months' visit in the county jail.

John Benford is a well-known character of the alley. Four times has he appeared before City Judge De Meza on various charges, usually for "jumping" coal trains. There is something to the matter with John. The police think that his mind is affected. At any rate, he acts very queerly at times, but only becomes violent when the police are after him. His escapades have become famous; he thinks nothing of jumping from the window, taking sash and all, to escape the blue coats.

Of late somebody has been going to the rail fence around the property of Henry Hanson, on Berckman street, and carrying away the fence. The crime was laid to Benford's door, but the evidence was lacking. Several days ago John was seen to help himself to the fence and take it home to cut up for fire wood. A warrant was then issued for his arrest.

Last night Roundsman Frederickson and Patrolmen Totten and Fraleigh went up to Paradise alley to serve the warrant. John is the son of "Maggie" Benford, famous in the city court annals as one of the leading characters of the alley. She was home and told the officers that her son was upstairs. She then offered them a lamp so that they might search. Now this was so contrary to her usual custom that the police suspected something at once. A closet door was seen to move and Totten investigated to find the recreant John crouched in the corner. He was was dragged forth by the pedal extremity and retaliated by kicking the officer in the chest. The other officers started to take a hand in the game when John made a dive for the table.

On the table lay a wooden pudding bowl, large and heavy. John seized the bowl and waved it over his head, with a drive for Totten's head. Totten ducked the missile and jumped at the culprit while the bowl grazed the hair of Fraleigh's mustache and crashed against the wall. Totten and Benford were struggling on the floor when the other police came to their officer's assistance and secured the prisoner. He was taken to the station house and locked up.

Maggie Benford was on hand this morning, bright and early with a morning meal for her son. She talked to him but the young man turned cough in disgust. Then she pleaded that the judge might be merciful to him and not take away her only support. As it seems that she supports him most of the time, the Judge ordered her to be still.

Benford was not inclined to talk but hung his head morosely and paid little attention to the trial. He was sentenced to pay a fine of $25 and go to jail for sixty days. As he cannot pay the fine, it will amount to an imprisonment of three months. It is the belief of the Judge that the jail authorities should commit Benford to Morris Plains Asylum.

JACOB KIRKNER HONORED.

Made an Honorary Member of Clinton Commandery in Brooklyn.

On January 27th, of this year, Eminent Sir Jacob Kirkner, of Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., was accorded the distinguished honor of being elected an honorary member of Clinton Commandery, No. 14, K. T., of Brooklyn. This Commandery, though not quite so old, is the equal of Palestine Commandery, of New York. In recognition of this honor Mr. Kirkner was presented last Wednesday evening with a beautifully engrossed honorary membership certificate in album form. On this occasion about thirty members of Clinton Commandery were in attendance at a meeting of Trinity Commandery, in this city, and Eminent Sir J. C. Reed, of Clinton Commandery, made the presentation of the certificate. The response made by Mr. Kirkner was evidence of a feeling of appreciation for the very high honor bestowed by so worthy a Commandery.

Whitaker Now Performing in Germany.

Robert Whitaker, the well-known bareback rider, of this city, who sailed for Germany some time ago, arrived at Hamburg on April 27th, after a thirteen days voyage. He writes to a Press man that he is feeling well, and that Dolman, his horse, stood the voyage well. He is now performing in Shumman's circus at Chemnitye, Saxony, where he will remain to June 1st.

A WORTHY CHURCH AID.

SIXTEENTH ANNIVERSARY OF LADIES' CHRISTIAN WORK SOCIETY.

Celebrated in Trinity Reformed Church Sunday Night by the Reading of Favorable Reports and a Good Sermon.

The sixteenth anniversary of the Ladies' Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed church was celebrated last Sunday in a very interesting and appropriate manner. There was a good-sized audience present to enjoy the service in commemoration of the anniversary.

The pastor, Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph.D., read the reports of the society, both of which were exceptionally interesting. The report of the treasurer, Mrs. O. W. Dunham, was read first, and it gave evidence of excellent work in the financial department. The report of the secretary, Mrs. B. D. Newell, followed, and this also was an excellent statement. Both reports give in detail what has been done during the past year, and they are as follows:

TREASURER'S REPORT.

General fund receipts	$70.39
Disbursements	$70.14
Balance	$25.09
Poor Fund.
Receipts	$24.81
Disbursements	$17.66
Balance	$ 7.13
Sewing Fund.
Receipts	$16.25
Disbursements	$12.54
Balance	$ 3.67
Sinking Fund.
Receipts	$23.72
Disbursements	$20.96
Balance	$ 4.84
Temperance Fund.
Receipts	$5.01
Disbursements	$5.00
Balance	$ .01
Missionary Fund.
Receipts	$98.90
Disbursements
Foreign	$54.07
Domestic	$42.97
Taken from fund for Indian Parsonage	$1.86
Total	$97.52
Balance	$ 1.38
Carpet Fund.
Receipts	$276.89
Total receipts	$526.05
Total disbursements	$521.86
Total balance from all accounts	$204.19

REPORT OF SECRETARY.

The sixteenth anniversary of the Society finds it with an enrollment of fifty-five active and four honorary members. Not one has been lost by death during the year. Two have resigned and three new members have been gained. Ten meetings have been held with an average attendance of eighteen.

The work of the society compares favorably with that of preceding years. Much credit is due each committee for the faithful manner in which the work has been done. Our missionary collectors have gone from house to house asking from each family in the congregation the sum of one cent a week. From this source has been obtained $74.14, which has been equally divided between our two Woman's Boards of foreign and domestic missions. Other mission work has been the donation of $9 to Rev. Mr. Cantine for work in Arabia; and $12 towards enabling missionaries to return to their work in foreign lands. In response to an appeal from the Woman's Executive Board of domestic missions $5 was sent to be used towards completing the parsonage for Rev. Frank Wright, our Indian missionary in Oklahoma. According to the society's usual custom of sending a box away Thanksgiving, one was prepared and sent to a minister's family in Northern New York, valued at $68.55. Those nearer our doors were also remembered. A barrel of flour was sent to the children's Home, and $6 donated to the W. C. T. U. of our city. The poor of our church have been looked after by the visiting committee; and the stranger among us visited and welcomed by this committee. In all 225 calls have been made. $28.05 the proceeds of an entertainment given by the sinking fund committee, was donated the musical fund of our church. From a supper given by the same committee, $141.35 was realized. This sum was placed to the credit of the fund for a new carpet for the church. Miss Dunn's class of the Sunday school raised $63.87 for this fund; two individual donations of $5 were made, and though the "Tithe Gleaners," $12 have been received for it.

Twenty-two garments were made and sent to the Needle Work Guild. These garments were kindly returned to the Society and used in the Missionary box.

Our sewing meetings have been held each month. Many garments have been made; some were used in the Missionary box and some were sold; the proceeds going into the carpet fund.

A new feature of the sewing meetings is the discussion of church matters of interest to all. This is found to be very enjoyable.

Special credit is due the floral committee for the pains-taking manner in which the floral decorations of the church have been looked after.

All members have worked together in harmony; each one giving of her mite and means ungrudgingly.

May the coming year find each one in her place in the society, doing whatsoever the Master calleth her to do.

After the reading of the reports Mr. Schenck announced that the evening offering would be used to help defray the expenses of Mrs. J. W. Schenck, of New Brunswick, who was going to Japan as a missionary. Following a selection by the choir, Mr. Schenck introduced the speaker of the evening, Rev. Eugene B. Booth, a returned missionary from Japan. Mr. Booth expects to return to his mission field in a short time. His remarks were instructive, and gave all more enthusiasm for mission work.

The number of missions and schools being conducted by the Reformed church were spoken of and the speaker told what a good work was being accomplished in the foreign fields including Arabia, China, India and Japan. He cited an instance where a few missionaries had a parish of four and a half millions of people to which they were supposed to carry the Gospel. Mr. Booth then preached a short sermon regarding the reconciliation of the Word of God.

MISS MARSH'S MUSICALE.

PIANO PUPILS SHOW PROGRESS MADE FOR A YEAR.

Students Acquitted Themselves Creditably and at the Conclusion the Prizes for Excellence Were Awarded.

The drawing-rooms of Miss Ada Marsh's charming home on Franklin place were filled at 4 o'clock, Saturday afternoon, with the relatives and friends of Miss Marsh's piano pupils to attend their annual musicale, and to witness the progress they had made in the study of music during the past year.

A pleasing programme had been prepared, and compositions of Schubert, Greig, Mendelssohn and others of the best composers, were well rendered by the dainty young girls in their pretty light summer gowns. The pupils who took part in the musicale were the following: Clinton Ivins, Hartley Mellick, Anna Fiske, Marion Grace Marsh, Nathalie Work, Anna Richards, Louise Booth, Henrietta Work, Miss Isabella Scott, Miss Florence Taylor, Miss Elma Thayer, Miss Emily Gould, Miss Helen Martin, Miss Helen Drake, Miss Mary Anderson Reinhart, Miss Frances Weir and and Miss Edith Arens. The six girls first mentioned were all under eleven years of age. Marion Grace Marsh being only six and Annie Fiske seven.

The students all acquitted themselves well, showing careful training both in technique and in playing with expression. Nearly all played without notes, and very difficult music was skillfully and tastefully rendered by the older girls, their playing bearing witness to Miss Marsh's unusual ability to develop the very best powers of her pupils. Miss Frances Weir's playing was so heartily encored that she was obliged to return to the piano, and gave a very clever little composition of her own.

At the close of the programme, Miss Marsh announced that there were two prizes to be awarded to her pupils. The first, two volumes of Chopin's Waltzes and Nocturnes, was offered for diligence in study during the last three months, and was given to Miss Edith Arens. With regard to the second, Miss Marsh had slips of paper distributed, and asked those in the audience to vote as to which student had best pleased them by her playing. Miss Edith Arens was excluded from this contest, as both prizes could not be given to one pupil. The prize was Mendelssohn's "Songs Without Words." Miss Francis Weir was the winner, receiving fifteen votes. Miss Louise Booth and Miss Helen Drake received the next largest number of votes, the others being given to Miss Reinhart, Miss Thayer, Miss Gould, Miss Martin, Miss Fiske and Miss Work.

Dainty refreshments were now served by the young girls, and the guests crowded about Miss Marsh and her pupils to thank them for the very pleasant entertainment they had given, and to congratulate them on the successful close of their winter's work.

DIED SUDDENLY.

Mrs. Oliver P. Vosseller Passed Away Saturday Night.

The sudden death of Mrs. Oliver P. Vosseller, of 219 East Second street, which occurred Saturday night about 12 o'clock, will be a great shock to her many friends and acquaintances who were not conscious of her serious illness. Mrs. Vosseller has been ill for a long time past, and while her disease was considered could not be cured, it was not thought that the end was so near. Everything possible has been done to prolong her life, but all efforts failed, and the end came peacefully.

Mrs. Vosseller was a faithful Christian woman and a member of the Trinity Reformed church. Whenever possible she always identified herself with the work of the church, and she will be missed by those with whom she was associated. In the home she was a loving mother and wife, and her place can never be filled. The husband and children have the sympathy of all in their bereavement.

The deceased was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Veghte, of Somerville. She leaves a husband and three children.

SUNG THEIR DIALOGUE

A MUSICAL ENTERTAINMENT AT GRACE M. E. CHURCH.

The Story of Bobby Shaftoe Told in Melody by Clever Young People—Followed by Another Novel Amusement.

The literary and social committee of the Epworth League of Grace M. E. church arranged and gave a pleasing and novel entertainment in the church Thursday. The forepart of the evening was devoted to the presentation of a musical dialogue, in three parts, entitled "Bobby Shaftoe." It was finely given and every character was taken with credit. The musical part was attractive and the audience showed its appreciation by frequent applause. Miss Mamie Stelzer was the accompanist. The cast of the dialogue was as follows:

CHARACTERS.

Bobby Shaftoe.....John A. Bolen
The Earl of Micklemuckkin.....Chas. Runyon
Dowager Countess of Micklemuckkin, Miss Carrie Taylor
The Earl's Grandmother, aged 97, Jeems.....Fred Hood
The Ancestral Valet.
Betty Lobscrpot.....Miss Alice Carroll
The Belle of the Village.
Solomon J. Lobscrpot.....Dyckman Vrooton
Betty's father, an old fisherman.
Fisher Girls, Lizzie Hoagland, Mary Rose Land, Annie Boeringer, Mae Conover, Grace Clark, Bertha Stevens, Minnie Lee, Addie Marsh and Margaret Schenck.

The second part of the entertainment was called a "Canary Tea," and to carry out the idea the room back of the main auditorium was very prettily decorated in yellow, while a number of canary birds announced their presence by warbling. Yellow lemonade was used chiefly, and this, together with a choice display of yellow flowers, gave the room a bright and cheerful appearance.

Those who presided at the chocolate table were Mrs John Valiant and Mrs. G. W. Smith, and they were assisted by Mrs. Mast, Miss Alice Carroll, Miss Clara Steiner, Miss Elizabeth Valiant, Miss Della Yoehl and Miss Mary Steiner. At the table where coffee was served Mrs. Mead, M. K. Carroll and she was assisted by Miss Marguerite Schenck, Miss Grace Carroll and Miss Elizabeth Kirch. In addition to chocolate and coffee, wafers and bon-bons were served to all.

The object of the affair was to raise $35 for the benefit of the church to help meet a certain indebtedness, and it is thought that the desired amount will be realized. The whole affair was a great success, and those who assisted are to be congratulated.

A BRUTE SAID THE JUDGE

SEVERE ARRAIGNMENT OF A POLICE COURT PRISONER.

Judge DeMeza Says That John Neuman Causes the Police More Trouble Than Any Other Man—To Jail in Default of $25.

A young man, whom Judge De Meza characterized as one of the toughest residents of the West End, went to the County Jail Saturday for sixty days in default of a $25 fine. The young man was John Neuman, who was accused of assaulting a policeman Nicholas Kelly, and quarrelling and fighting.

The story of the alleged assault was told at the time in The Press. The case was to have come up for trial May 1, but in the absence of Kelly, the case was adjourned for one week.

Warrants had been issued for Kelly and James Barry as well as Neuman. All three were tried together. Neuman and Barry were represented by ex-Councilman W. L. Heidt.

Kelly's story was that he had been jumped upon from behind one Monday evening, just after leaving Willis's saloon, and that the only one of his assailants that he could see was Neuman. He claimed that he was kicked and beaten and might have been killed had not James Barry come and dragged off his assailants. He had several witnesses to prove that he had received several bad wounds, and also that he was not intoxicated at the time.

The other side brought witnesses to prove that Neuman had been walking along the street, when he had been assaulted by Kelly, who was said to be fighting drunk, and knocked down. Barry said that he had dragged Kelly off Neuman. The testimony was very contradictory on both sides. There were a number of witnesses sworn who proved to know nothing about it.

After hearing the testimony, Judge DeMeza discharged Barry as being not guilty. He found the other two guilty, however. Kelly, he thought, had received all the punishment he needed, but Neuman he censured severely.

"You are known to the court," said the Judge. "You are a brute. You delight in mangling people's faces. You have caused the police more trouble than any man in that section of the city."

Neuman was sentenced to pay a fine of $25 or go to jail for sixty days. He chose the latter.

Miss Louise Wilbur, of East Front street, spent Sunday with her grandparents at Avon Park.

Miss Mabelle Force, of West Fourth street, spent Sunday at the home of Councilman David Hastings, of Bound Brook.

A NEW BOROUGH SOLON.

GEORGE T. ROGERS APPOINTED TO SUCCEED H. B. LOUNSBURY.

Under the New Borough Law, H. S. Thomas is Appointed Recorder—Final Report of Watchung Avenue Opening.

The first business considered by the Borough Council last Friday was the resignation of Councilman H. B. Lounsbury. After the clerk read the resignation Mr. Burtis moved that it be accepted and it was so ordered. Mayor Wilson then appointed George T. Rogers, of Washington Park, to fill the unexpired term of Mr. Lounsbury. The appointment was confirmed by the Council, and after the Mayor administered the oath of office Mr. Rogers took his seat. He will fill the same positions on the various committees that the retiring Councilman held.

The regular order of business was then taken up and after Clerk Arnold read the minutes of the previous meeting he read his financial report, which was as follows: Borough bills, $1,880.38; fire department, $1,099.17; light, $764.45; road, $1,130.; poor deficit, $378.87; total balance, $4,307.12; paid State and county, $3,-876.35; total cash, $521.77. There was reported from fines, licenses, etc., $212.64. Tax Collector Spencer reported $40,603.99 collected for 1895, and $38,879 04 for 1896.

A communication was received from the G. A. R. in which they asked the Council to make the usual appropriation for the observance of Decoration Day. The same was granted and the sum of $25 was voted for that purpose.

The following officers were reported as having been elected at the last meeting of Warren Engine Company: Foreman, B. F. Conover; first assistant, H. G. Adams; second assistant, W. B. Bennett; recording secretary, J. J. Stahl; financial secretary, W. T. Newman; treasurer, J. M. Higgins; first assistant engineer, A. Brokaw; second assistant, J. Newman; stoker, J. Shepherd; representative to Firemen's Relief Association, three years, L. B. Woolston, and G. H. Fairchild in place of W. Newman.

The following officers were also reported from West End Hose Company: Foreman, Charles Keller; first assistant, W. Demarest; second assistant, F. B. Perry; secretary, Frank Perry; financial secretary, D. Begley; treasurer, Herman Hansen. J. Higgins and S. Peterson were also reported as having recently been elected to membership. All of the above were confirmed by the Council.

A final report was made concerning the opening of Watchung avenue and it was stated that there was a balance yet to be paid of $707.83 to the Contractor David Bowden, also $125 to the same person on the completion of the bulking of the storm sewer on the above avenue. The final estimate showed that $2,411.75 had been received, $1,703.92 expended, leaving a balance of $707.83 yet to be paid. The same was adjusted and the latter amount will be paid to the contractor. It will be noted that the price for the storm sewer is $10 less than called for in the contract. This is explained for the reason that Mr. Bowden left some work for the borough street commissioner to do and for that work Mr. Bowden agreed to give him $10.

A short report was presented by the street committee showing the amount of work done in the borough during the past month.

At this time the Mayor appointed H. S. Thomas as borough recorder, under a recent act passed by the Legislature. This gives Mr. Thomas the power to try all cases and to send prisoners to the County Jail for ninety days if the complaint will warrant it. It also abolishes the office of borough magistrate. After the meeting Mr. Thomas was sworn in as borough recorder. Another appointment by the Mayor was that of pound-keeper and that office was given to John Stein.

Mr. Woolston offered a resolution that a crosswalk be laid on Grove street at the intersection of Craig place. A resolution offered by Mr. MacLoughlin called for the drawing of a warrant in favor of F. A. Dunham for the sum of $200 on account of the tax maps.

Mr. Carey stated that the sum of $45 would not be sufficient to place an iron door at the the borough lock-up and he asked for an increase of $35 making in all $80. He offered a resolution to that effect and the same was granted. A resolution by Mr. Rogers was to the effect that $1,500 be borrowed and charged to the light account.

The following persons were granted exemption papers: G. B. Stewart, P. Kelleher, W. V. Krewson, and F. B. Perry, W. Demarest, George Smith and D. Begley were confirmed as members of West End Hose Company, while F. Seader was confirmed as a member of Warren Engine Company. Mr. Schutt offered a resolution that the action of Collector Spencer in paying the monthly pay roll to the amount of $190.99 be confirmed. Mr. Burtis called up the telephone ordinance and asked that it be placed on its third reading. There was a desire on the part of Mr. MacLoughlin to have the ordinance amended so that the telephone company would place its wires under ground. Mr. Reed stated that the company was anxious to place their wires under ground but they were desirous of doing the work in the city and borough all at one time. Mr. MacLoughlin withdrew his amendment to the ordinance and the ordinance was adopted as a whole after being read by sections. The members then went into executive session, supposedly for the object of settling the Watchung avenue matter, and the council interviewed both Engineer F. A. Dunham and Contractor Bowden while in session. All matters were amicably adjusted and the money due will be paid over by the council.

When the council returned to the regular order Mr. Rogers was made president of the council in accordance with a resolution offered by Mr. MacLoughlin. Mr. Rogers thanked the members for the honors bestowed and stated that he would do his best to work for the interest of the borough.

Mr. Rogers then offered a resolution that the West End Hose house be accepted by the council and that the Fire, Water and Lamps Committee be given the power to have the necessary apparatus placed in the house and everything put in order for business. The authority was granted and the house was accepted, after which the council adjourned.

MORE THAN SUCCESSFUL

WELL MEANING BOYS RAISED MORE MONEY THAN WAS NECESSARY.

A Fair Given to Secure Money to Buy a Surgical Bed for the Hospital—Given at the Home of Master Pinto—$115 Raised.

The efforts of Effingham Pinto and his young friends were even more successful then they had hoped for, and the fair that the lads gave at the home of Master Pinto, at 731 West Eighth street, Friday afternoon, netted $115, more than enough to purchase the surgical bed for the Muhlenberg Hospital, which was the object for which the affair was given.

All winter the promoters of this fair have been preparing for it, especially Effingham Pinto, who has either made or solicited a great number of the articles which were placed on sale. The booths were arranged about the drawing room, quite tastefully decorated. On the fancy table, draped in green, were a number of fancy articles. There were lamp shades with the figures of Brownies painted on them by the boys. The Brownies seemed to be the favorite object for decorating and were used in various happy combinations. Effingham Pinto looked after that table. Another table, decorated in purple, contained some fancy candies, and a portion of the stock of the flower table which was next in line, decorated in yellow. Miss Dorothy Finch and Miss Charlotte Finch presided over the flowers.

In the front hall was a table with a goodly supply of homemade candies, made for the occasion by Miss Tracy and Miss Gertrude Rushmore. Miss Marjorie Fleming and Miss Marie Finch were in charge. Owen Fleming collected the tickets at the door.

Upstairs a successful "Punch and Judy" show was conducted by the Misses Eleanor T. VanDeventer and Grace E. Overton before an appreciative audience. Ray Harman had charge of the tickets to this successful feature.

A fish pond flourished in another room until all the "fish" had disappeared. Refreshments were served in the dining room.

The mothers of the youthful participants were present and exercised a general supervision over the affair, but the young promoters looked after the details and managed it very successfully.

JOHNSON'S WORDS OF FAREWELL.

The Executed Murderer Said He Was Happy to the Last.

Jacob Johnson's last request to Sheriff Wyckoff was that he should come to his cell. This was about 8 o'clock Wednesday morning. When the Sheriff arrived there Johnson said to him: "I want you to write a letter for me to my wife." The Sheriff consented, when Johnson dictated the following letter, word for word as we give it. The Somerset Democrat took the trouble to secure a correct copy of it, which is as follows:

Somerville, N. J., May 8, 1897.

Dear Wife—As this is my last word and letter to you, I hope you feel as happy as I do. I feel in my inmost soul that I am going into the arms of my blessed Saviour, in whom we have so long trusted and lived together so happily. I hope that you are enjoying good health, and that the blessing of God will rest upon you and our dear children, and that you will strive to meet me in heaven with our dear children who have gone before us.

I feel that I am prepared to go to my Lord and Saviour.

I feel that Sheriff Wyckoff and Mr. Ammerman and his wife have been a father and a brother and a sister to me. They have provided me with all the things needful for my bodily health, and the Sheriff's kindness is beyond the love of my heart to thank him. I will send you one of my pictures by the Sheriff.

From your loving husband.

JACOB S. JOHNSON.

KNELT ATHYMEN'S ALTAR

FASHIONABLE WEDDING PERFORMED IN CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

The Edifice Beautifully Decorated for the Nuptial Event—Rev. C. L. Goodrich Officiated.—A Beautiful Bridal Party.

Very happy was the opening ceremony in the wedded life of Miss Elfleda Alberti Whiting, of this city, and Rev. Charles Francis Taylor, of New York. Thursday afternoon at 5 o'clock, they were united in matrimony at the Congregational church before a gathering of friends and relatives, who came from far and near to witness the happy event.

Everything combined to make the ceremony a charming and impressive one. The church never looked more beautiful, while the day was a perfect one. Miss Whiting is the daughter of Mrs. E. Alberti Whiting, of East Sixth street, and has a large circle of friends in this city. Rev. Mr. Taylor, once a resident of Plainfield, but now of New York, has recently been called to the pastorate of the Second Presbyterian church of Cranbury, N. J.

The wedding was held at the church of the bride, the Congregational church on West Seventh street, which was crowded with the many well-wishers of the couple some time before the bridal party entered the sanctuary.

The ceremony was to begin at 5 o'clock, and at that hour the groom was escorted to the front by the best man, his brother, Irving A. Taylor, of New York. Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, pastor of the church, followed. A few minutes later, the organ pealed forth the beautiful Lohengrin wed ding march and the bride entered at the side door, leaning on the arm of her grandfather, Thomas S. Alberti, of New Brunswick, and marched slowly to the front of the aisle.

The bride was attired in a rich gown of white chiffon over cream silk, with an old lace bolera which had formed part of her mother's wedding gown. She wore a long tulle veil fastened with sprays of lilies of the valley and a diamond brooch, the gift of the groom's father. She carried a magnificent bouquet of white roses.

Miss Elmma Titsworth, of New Brunswick, a cousin of the bride, was the flower girl and followed closely the bride. Her gown was of pale pink organdie. She carried a fancy basket of pansies, forget-me-nots and other flowers.

Following the flower girl was the maid of honor, Miss Edna Minita Howell, of Chester, Pa., another cousin of the bride. She was prettily gowned in pale green organdie trimmed with white lace and with a butterfly of brussels lace on the left shoulder. Her bouquet was of large pink roses.

Then came the four ushers, John C. Whiting, of New York, and William A. Whiting, of Plainfield, brothers of the bride, Edwin A. Howell, of Chester, Pa., a cousin of the bride, and Albert D. Taylor, brother of the groom.

The bride and groom met at the chancel and then the impressive Episcopal service was conducted by Rev. Mr. Goodrich. The bride was given away by her grandfather and then the ring was placed on her finger and the newly wedded couple knelt in front of the minister for his blessing.

Very softly had the sweet tones of the organ floated outward as the ceremony was in progress but, as Mr. and Mrs. Taylor started down the aisle, preceded by the flower girl who scattered flowers in the path of the approaching couple, the organ burst into triumphant strains and all was over. Mrs. B. T. Barnes was in her usual position as organist.

The newly-married couple were followed by the maid of honor, the best man, the ushers and the near relatives of the bride. The bridal party went to Mrs. Whiting's home on East Sixth street, where the relatives gathered to congratulate the happy couple.

The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion. Palms were on every side and the platform was banked with them and other potted plants, while sprigs of apple blossoms were massed in the centre. An immense bouquet of white bride roses stood on either side of the pulpit.

After a family dinner, the couple drove to Netherwood station, followed by a party of relatives who gave them a rousing sendoff as they boarded a New York train. Rice, old shoes and all the accompaniments of a bridal tour were bestowed with a generous hand Mr. and Mrs. Taylor went to New York and are expected to take a short trip up the Hudson river and then return to Plainfield, ere taking up their charge at Cranbury.

Among the out-of-town guests present at the wedding were William B. Taylor, father of the groom, Irving A. Taylor and Albert D. Taylor, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Lovell and daughters, of Brooklyn; Miss Turner, of Brooklyn; Mr. and Mrs. Crumble, of New York; Miss Dey, of Newark; Prof. and Mrs. A. A. Titsworth and daughter, of New Brunswick; Thomas S. Alberts, of New Brunswick; Captain and Mrs. George D. Howell, Edwin A. Howell and Miss Edna Minita Howell, of Chester, Pa.; Mrs. James E. Crane, Miss Anne Winslow Crane, and Spencer Crane, of Brooklyn; W. A. Taylor, of Brooklyn; William M. Alberti, of New York; and Miss Haddon, of Jersey City.

The gifts were numerous and costly. A handsome desk was the gift of the Christian Endeavor Society to which the bride belonged. An upright grand piano came from the elder brother of the bride. An elegant dining room set, including table, chairs and buffet, was the gift of an uncle of the groom. There were many other remembrances from relatives and friends.

ODD FELLOWS GATHER.

A DISTRICT MEETING OF THE ENCAMPMENT DELEGATES HELD.

The Unwritten Work of the Order Exemplified for the Benefit of the Members—A Banquet Held After Lodge Work.

For the first time in five years a district meeting of District No. 5, I. O. O. F., was held in this city in the rooms of Noah Dove Encampment, No. 28, I. O. O. F., Thursday. The meeting was called for the purpose of exemplifying the unwritten work of the order for the benefit of the members and to instruct them in the grand principles of the order. There was a large attendance from every encampment in the district and the meeting was eminently successful in every particular. All of the Grand Lodge officers were present as follows:

Grand Patriarch, W. H. Blake, Vineland; Grand High Priest, W. V. D. Roth, New Brunswick; Grand Senior Warden, J. M. Walling, Keyport; Grand Junior Warden, L. R. Blackford, Plainfield; Grand Marshal, E. C. Mulford, Trenton; Grand Representatives, J. Barton Smith, Newark; George N. Nutt, Trenton; Past Grand Patriarchs, Albert Bunn, German Valley; J. Dodge, Jersey City.

District Grand Patriarch Charles Berry, of Elizabeth, presided over the meeting and made a few remarks appropriate to the occasion. Remarks were also made by other prominent members present, and the exchange of ideas was very helpful. Every encampment in the district was represented, and as the various reports were called each showed a notable increase. All of the reports were encouraging and the prospects are that the coming year will be very successful.

Following the business of the evening a very fine banquet was served in the banquet hall, where the members enjoyed a feast of good things. It was admitted by all the visitors present that the meeting was one of the most successful ever held.

SIMPLE, BUT IMPRESSIVE.

Friends' Service Conducted at Mrs. Kirk's Funeral.

Very simple, but impressive, were the funeral services of the late Mrs. Elizabeth T. Kirk, which were held last Thursday from the home on West Seventh street. The services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Haynes, of New York, who is a member of the Friends' Society, of which Mrs. Kirk was also a member. He spoke from the text "Be Still and Know That I Am God," and from those words a deeply impressive talk was given. The next speaker was Aaron M. Powell, of this city, who dwelt on the words—"Sleeping and Waking." A beautiful picture was presented by Mr. Powell and the words of comfort and help spoken reached the heart of everyone present.

A beautiful tribute to the memory of the dead and her living son was the presence of the twenty-four members of the Grand Jury, who attended in a body.

There was a profusion of the choicest floral tributes, gifts from loving friends. Announcement was made at the close of the service that interment would be made Saturday at Cornwall-on-the-Hudson. The body was removed in a special car to the place of interment.

A SMALL BLAZE.

Extinguished by the Heroic Action of Two Passing Trackmen.

A small blaze on the roof of Kenyon's machine shop, corner of Richmond and East Third streets, was discovered Friday afternoon, shortly before six o'clock, and extinguished without much damage.

A. L. Dunovan's truck was passing the machine shop, and on the truck were Dunavan and John Morcraft. They saw a shoemaker living nearby trying to extinguish a small fire that had started on the roof, but he was having poor success. Dunavan and Morcraft sprang out and placed a ladder against the side of the building and Morcraft climbed to the roof. He tore off the blazing shingles with his bare hands, burning them severely, but prevented the fire from spreading and consuming the structure.

Two Bright Graduates.

Plainfield Business College has just graduated two more shorthand students who are bound to succeed. Adelaide G. Ball completed the course in three months, day session; and Charles A. Coriell, Jr., in four months, evening session. Beat that!

CAPTURE OF AN ASSASSIN

C. G. SHEPARD TELLS HOW LINCOLN'S SLAYER WAS CAUGHT.

He Was One of Those Who Assisted in Taking Booth Into Custody—His War Experience One of Excitement.

The audience that filled Vincent chapel last Thursday was one of the most appreciative and patriotic that ever assembled in Plainfield. The war story, including the capture of John Wilkes Booth, the assassin of Abraham Lincoln, was the feature of the evening, and the speaker, Cyrus G. Shepard, of the 16th N. Y. Cavalry, was one of the most entertaining that was visited this city in a long time.

The platform and the wall directly back of it was very appropriately decorated with large American flags, with here and there an arrangement of flowers. Rev. Dr. Snodgrass made a few remarks at the opening, and said that the women of the church, under whose auspices the entertainment was given, had very wisely selected Dr. Whitney to preside, as he had known Mr. Shepard had been secured to come to Plainfield and give his lecture. Dr. Whitney introduced Miss Clara Northup, of New York, who rendered a beautiful piano solo. She was accompanied on the piano by Miss Whitney.

Dr. Whitney made a few appropriate remarks by way of introduction, after which Mr. Shepard was received with hearty applause. He spoke in substance as follows:

"In the spring of 1863 I, together with two schoolmates, sat in a school room in Franklin Academy, in the central part of New York State, and we were reading the call of Abraham Lincoln for troops. After school we three boys decided that we would enlist, and we did so, becoming members of Sprague's Light Cavalry. I shall never forget that time. It took me two hours to reach home and tell my mother what I had decided to do, and, when I did, she replied "The Government wants men, not boys." I had made up my mind, however, and on April 16th, 1863, I enlisted as a soldier. That memorable day as I left my home I shall never forget my feelings. I had gone but a short distance from my home when I looked back. There stood my mother in the doorway. There were tears in her eyes as she bade me an affectionate good-bye.

"After three months of drilling and preparation we were ordered to the front. The first battle we were engaged in was one never to be forgotten. If I could have escaped easily I would have done so. I was really frightened, as one after another was shot down in front of me. As I sat mounted on my horse my feet, legs, hands and teeth chattered so that I was unable to keep them still. If anyone had asked me my name I doubt whether I could have told it. When the fighting was over I was heartily glad."

Throughout Mr. Shepard's talk he related a number of amusing incidents in connection with scouting expeditions and picket duty, and at times the audience would burst forth into applause. The latter part of the lecture was devoted to the capture of Booth, and in the company numbering twenty-five was Mr. Shepard, who assisted in the capture. The story as related by Mr. Shepard was somewhat as follows:

"It was on the evening of Good Friday, April 14th, 1865, that Abraham Lincoln attended Ford's Theatre, in Washington, and witnessed the performance of "Our American Cousin." The President occupied a private box, and in some way John Wilkes Booth, the actor, had arranged to enter the theatre from the rear. He crept stealthily along until he reached the box where the President sat, and suddenly he placed the revolver in position and sent a bullet on its deadly mission. In an instant the slayer rushed through the box and leaped therefrom to the stage. In doing so his foot caught in the American flag, which draped the box, and he fell on the stage. As a result a small bone in the leg was fractured. As the assassin left the theatre he exclaimed: 'Sic Semper Tyrannis,' which means, 'Ever So to Tyrants.' How he was ever able to leave the place without being caught is a mystery.

"A short distance from Washington we were in camp, and early Saturday morning we heard the call 'boots and saddles,' and 'to arms.' The sad news was imparted to us and we were ordered to join other cavalry in an attempt to catch the slayer of the President. Later, twenty-five of our number, of which I was one, were ordered to Washington and told to be ready to move at a moment's notice. At the proper time we were sent down the Potomac river in charge of Lieutenant Dorrity. Just previous to this time three rebels were about to cross a ferry when two men appeared in a wagon.

"They alighted and informed Major Reggles, who was one of the three, that they were rebels and wanted to get back to join their army. Major Reggles said he would help them. Just before the two men left one of them said: 'I am John Wilkes Booth, the slayer of Abraham Lincoln, and I am worth $150,000 to anyone who will deliver me to the authorities.' Major Reggles was very much surprised, but did not care to accept blood-money, and he assisted Booth and Harold, his partner, across the river to a house occupied by a man named Garrett. It was very soon afterward that our company tracked the two men and we were informed that the man at the ferry was in possession of the information we wanted. Lieut. Dorrity had with him a photo. of Booth and he showed it to the ferryman and at the point of a revolver made the latter tell where Booth and his companion were. He did so and we found the two hiding in a barn on the premises occupied by Garrett. We surrounded the house and barn and told Garrett what we wanted. A son of the latter told us that the two men were in the barn. We went to the barn and our lieutenant called to the men and told them if they did not come out the barn would be burned. They showed no disposition to come out and the barn was set on fire. It was then that the two in hiding made their appearance. Every man was given orders not to shoot, but Austin Corbett, of our number, saw Booth make an attempt to shoot Lieut. Dorrity. Quick as a flash Corbett pulled his revolver and a bullet was sent into the body of the cowardly slayer. It entered the neck in about the same place as the bullet which was used to kill Abraham Lincoln, and like the latter he lived until 7 o'clock the following morning. His body was taken to Washington and buried in the jail yard."

Mr. Shepard spoke of an article published recently in McClure's Magazine telling the above story. He said that it was false and misleading. It gave the credit of the capture to a man who should not have it, and he thought that it was especially cruel in view of the fact that only a few weeks ago Lieut. Dorrity died, and he could not defend the unjust wrong which was done him.

At the close of the lecture nearly everyone remained and met Mr. Shepard personally.

A DISTRICT JUDGE PROBABLE.

Justices of Peace Likely to be Done Away With in This City.

Among the many changes which are likely to occur in Plainfield, now that she is a second-class city, is the abolishment of all Justices of the Peace. It is understood that next year application will be made to Governor Griggs asking for a District Judge. If the Governor makes the appointment this will do away with the Justice. For some time past people interested in law matters have felt that there should be a District Judge in the city who could handle all cases that would naturally fall to the City Judge or the Justice. If Plainfield should secure a Judge it would be his duty to sit on the bench during stated hours every day, whether there were any cases or not. The point is that he would be within easy reach and would have all the necessary power to deal with court cases and be could dispose of them with more dispatch than the average Justice.

Such a change would no doubt cause much displeasure among the Justices, but it would be more metropolitan and would do away with a great deal of red tape. It is understood that nearly all of the lawyers in the city are in favor of such a change.

Mrs. Booth to Talk Here.

Mrs. Ballington Booth, of the American Volunteers, will address a meeting at Grace church, Seventh and Sycamore streets, on the evening of May 18th. Mrs. Booth, who has been giving most of her time to work in certain state prisons, will probably have for her subject the reformation and protection of the convicts, both while in prison and when discharged. A meeting of the Defenders and those interested in the Volunteers will be held early next week at the Y. M. C. A. building to make arrangements to secure the success of Mrs Booth's meeting. The evening for this smaller meeting has not been definitely decided upon, but will be announced in due time.

Teachers' Cycling Run.

Fifteen of the teachers and pupils of the Plainfield High School went out for their usual afternoon run, Friday. The party went to New Market, then out to Stelton road, returning by the way of Metuchen. Principal I. Winthrop Tewksl and Prof. A. J. Knowlton were in charge. In attendance also Miss Whitney and Mr. Knowlton came to grief. The rim of Mr. Knowlton's wheel was smashed. He took Miss Whitney's wheel and she returned home in a passing wagon. Miss Beatrice Miner and Jessie Pruden collided and several spokes in Miss Pruden's front wheel were snapped. These were the only accidents and the rest of the run was greatly enjoyed.

Informal Tea for Miss Tyler.

Thursday afternoon, Miss Mason W. Tyler, of West Seventh street, gave an informal and delightful tea for her niece, Miss Tyler, of Amherst. The assistants in the dining room were the Misses Von Boskerck, Miss Mabel Pierson and Miss Annie Stewart, who served chocolate and ices. Mrs. Deafel Ginna and Mrs. Webster Wright presided at the table.

CLAWSON'S EXECUTION

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1.

VanHise caught hold of the pinioned legs and brought the body to a standstill, where for nearly a minute it remained motionless.

Then the hands commenced to clutch and grasp and the legs convulse a trifle. The convulsions of the hands and feet continued intermittingly for about four minutes, during which a slight gurgling sound could be heard coming from the throat. After that the suspended body hung there without a sign of agitation or the sickening throes of a healthy system fighting against the inevitable.

After six minutes had elapsed VanHise lowered the body to within six inches of the floor while the assembled physicians made observations of the effect on the heart and pulse. The physicians were Drs. Taylor, McWilliams, Cooper and Swinton.

In just eight minutes after the trap had been sprung they pronounced him dead. Some of the doctors wanted VanHise to take the body down then, but he refused to do so, as, he told The Press representative, he had never known an executed murder's body being taken down in that short space of time, and there ought to be no chance of life reviving.

At 10:27 a plain hardwood casket was brought out of one of the cells and set down under the gallows. Deputy Totten buttoned up the coat worn by the dead and the body was placed in the casket, after which the jurors and the reporters were dismissed.

After the jurors had been dismissed the doctors were permitted to make a further examination of the dead man's body, but they were unable to determine whether or not the neck was broken. Hangman Van Hise told the writer, however, that he thought it was.

After the examination had been made the physicians and other witnesses, who were permitted to remain, made their exit and a few minutes later the undertaker came and took charge of the body.

At 3 o'clock p.m., Wednesday, a short funeral service was held in the jail building, conducted by Revs. Winner and De Hart.

The remains will be interred at Fox Hill, Hunterdon county.

Clawson's last hours were spent in receiving visits and hearing words of consolation from his spiritual advisers, Rev. J. O. Winner, of Somerville, and Rev. John DeHart, of Neschanic.

He went to bed at 9 o'clock in an apparently composed state of mind and soon fell asleep. Firman Lowry and Charles Hetfield, the guards who were on duty last night, noticed that he awake at 3 o'clock, but he went to sleep again for some time, and arose at 5 o'clock in the morning. He ate a light breakfast of strawberries and cake and drank a glass of milk.

At 8 o'clock Sheriff Wyckoff performed the unpleasant duty of read*ing the death warrant to him.*

After this Dora Barkalew had a talk with Clawson, during which the latter requested that the bicycle and sweater which he rode and wore at the time he killed Hodgetts, and which has since been in the possession of the court officers, be given to his brother Charles, who works for Gilbert Hoffman, near Somerville.

At 9:30 o'clock Revs. Winner and DeHart went to the cell to spend the last hour with Clawson. During this time the former read the Scripture and the latter offered prayer.

*Rev. Mr. Winner told the writer af*ter the execution that Clawson was a thoroughly changed boy from the time he was first committed to the jail. He said that it was about ten days ago that Clawson first showed signs of a change in his attitude towards things of a religious nature. Just before the death walk was commenced Clawson said that he was ready to meet his God "now that he had confessed his sins, and he was ready to give his life in atonement for the one he had taken. He believed that God had used his offense for his own benefit.

During the time the execution was in progress there were about 1,000 people congregated in the court house yard and along the side of the jail where the death chamber was located. Through the open windows a few saw the body shoot up after the trap had been sprung, and many heard the noise of the falling weight.

George Clawson, an older brother of the condemned man, was among the crowd outside of the jail, but he was watched by two officers who had instructions to arrest him if he made an outbreak, as he threatened a few days ago.

CLAWSON'S CRIME.

Killing of Harry Hodgetts Was Peculiarly Brutal and Inexcusable.

Clawson's crime was peculiarly brutal and inexcusable and the only hope ever had of a commutation of his sentence lay by his possible moral irresponsibility at the end of his first trial last September, when the verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree was brought in by the jury, so great was the doubt on this point that many influential persons seriously thought of making a plea for mercy in his behalf before the Court of Pardons, but certain things that developed after the trial convinced them that the verdict was just and they made no recommendation to the Court of Pardons.

The case of Clawson and the sentiment of the people of Somerset county toward him are interesting. Clawson was a boy of twenty of a type frequently found in the inland counties of New Jersey. He has had practically no upbringing. Three months was sufficient for all his educational needs, and since he was ten years old he had supported himself, chiefly by doing work about the neighborhood. He not only managed to exist by doing this, but he saved up money to buy a bicycle.

Among the farmers who employed him at times was Harry Hodgett, a young Englishman, who several years ago bought a little farm in Pluckamin township in Somerset county. Last spring Hodgett had his wife and three small daughters come from England to rejoin him. He was well liked and respected. On August 29th last Clawson took his bicycle and rode over to Hodgett's farm to get work. Hodgett told him he had none. Then Clawson asked him how many cows he milked each morning. Hodgett said he milked four. Then Clawson, with*out any more words, drew a revolver,* and, in the presence of Hodgett's wife and children, shot the young Englishman four times. Hodgett fell dead. Clawson jumped on his wheel and rode away, but was caught later in the day by a posse of farmers.

Absolutely no motive for the crime was ever found. The murderer's history revealed no characteristics that would tend to the belief that he would do such a deed. The sentiment of the community was against him, but it is possible that if certain other circumstances had not arisen he would have had its support in an appeal for mercy.

Since 1787 there has not been an execution in Somerset county. There have been murders, but in no other case except one had the evidence led to a sense of death. The exception is the case of Johnson, who was hanged on May 5 for the murder of a woman named Annie Rogers in 1895. He was convicted upon circumstantial evidence, but it was of such a nature that when the appeal was carried to the Supreme Court that body unanimously affirmed the sentence.

When the verdict against Clawson was brought in there was considerable sympathy for him. He was young, and his moral responsibility had not been fully established. His counsel, who had been assigned to his case by Judge Magie, did everything in order that when they went to the Court of Pardons they might take with them a substantial petition for mercy from the county people.

The case was taken to the Court of Errors, March 1st, but a failure was made to get a new trial. Then the case was taken to the Court of Pardons. This was a few weeks ago, and there had happened in that time certain things that had banished any sympathy that might have existed for the man. In the first place certain few things had developed in his case that made it look blacker, and he had made an attempt to kill one of his jailers. Moreover, there had swept over Somerset county a wave of crime. Since the first of the year there have been two murders and two attempted murders there.

These crimes made the people think that heroic measures must be taken, and a sentiment against Clawson set in very strongly. The belief that he was justly sentenced became universal, and the desire to have him pay the full penalty of his crime became stronger and stronger. When the case reached the Court of Pardons there were no petitioners for mercy except Clawson's counsel, and on the other hand a great deal of wild talk was indulged in as to what would be done if his sentence should be commuted to life imprisonment. The Court of Par*dons refused to grant the petition*, it is said on good authority, unanimously. March 29th he was sentenced to be hung by Judge Magie.

AN EXECUTION IN 1779.

For Over a Century No One Had Been Hung in Somerset County.

The date of the last execution, previous to that of Johnson's, last week, in Somerset county, is not definitely known, but was probably in the early part of the year 1786. The only authentic records of executions are to be found in the minutes of the Board of Freeholders, from which is quoted all that refers in any manner to such events. At a meeting held December 31, 1779, it was "agreed that the sum of 24 pounds, 14 shillings, be paid unto Peter Dumont, late Sheriff of said county, for executing the sentence of death on a negro convicted of murder, and for sundry expenses attending the same, and for sundry other expenses conveying prisoners from Yorktown to Somerset."

Again, at a meeting held Jan. 14, 1782, we find "an account was also produced by the said Sheriff" (Peter D. Vroom) "for an additional allowance for making a coffin and gallows for negro, Toby, for which one dollar and a half, State money, had been allowed, and was not enough. Ordered paid."

The last reference is as follows: "At the annual meeting of the Justices and Chosen Freeholders, for the county of Somerset, held the 10th day of May, 1786, at the Court House for said county, John Hartenburgh, Esq., Sheriff of Somerset, presented an account for guards, ammunition, etc., at the time of Samuel MacDonald's imprisonment, and others charged with the murder of John Connet, amounting to 136 pounds, 7 shillings."

"John Hardenberg presented two other accounts for execution fees, etc., of Samuel MacDonald, amounting to 8 pounds, 9 shillings; the other for the State's Attorney and Clerk's fees at the same trial, amounting to 11 pounds, 1 shilling, 2 pence, both of which sums are allowed."

The court records in the County Clerk's office show that at the October term, 1788, Dine Sam, the elder and Sam, the younger (negro slaves) were indicted for arson, pleaded guilty, and were sentenced to be hanged—the two first named on October 17th and the latter on November 14th. There is no record that their executions ever took place, but tradition indicates that some, at least, of the condemned suffered the death penalty.

TO MEET IN A TENT.

AMERICAN VOLUNTEERS PLAN FOR THEIR SUMMER CAMPAIGN.

Mrs. Booth, Wife of Commander Ballington Booth, Will Speak in Grace P. E. Church Next Monday Night.

A meeting of the Defenders and others interested in the work of the American Volunteers was held last Tuesday, at the Y. M. C. A. building. On account of the cloudy evening, with every chance for rain, and a concert, besides other attractions, the room was not entirely filled. The first question discussed was how to make the meeting at Grace P. E. church, next Monday evening, to be addressed by Mrs. Booth, a success. It was urged that each Defender make an effort to bring some one to the meeting who will become actively interested in this work. Other arrangements were also decided upon to ensure the success of Mrs. Booth's meeting. The next subject brought up was about a tent for the meetings in various parts of the city and also the locations of it. What is desired especially is to secure a good location for a tent about 40 by 60 feet. It was proposed that the tent be located in one place for a month or so and then moved to another location where it would remain for the same length of time. In four months it would be around to the same place from which it started originally. This plan was urged as it would bring the Volunteers in contact with the people of the various localities of the city. Committees were appointed to see about securing a tent and another one in connection with a location. Captain and Mrs. Fisher, the officers in charge of the local post, were present. They spoke of the usefulness of a tent and also of the price one, such as needed in this city, would cost. The question of securing a regular subscription each month from those interested was fully considered. It should be remembered that the expense of running the organization in this city was considerable, all of which must be collected by collection at the evening meetings. It is hoped to form a Rent League; that is, a person subscribes 50 cents or less, or more for *that matter, a month, for which a col*lector will be sent and a receipt given. Any one who wishes to join this Rent League can do so by addressing Captain Fisher, Central avenue and Second street. A few other plans were considered.

In five weeks the Captain and his wife have made about sixty visits to homes of almost as many families. This shows only part of the work to be done by these people in this city. This work can only be extended if earnest and substantial support can be given.

It is hoped to call another meeting of Defenders and friends, ere long, at which plans for organizing the members so that they can do a little with the Volunteers will be decided upon. At about 9:30 o'clock the meeting came to a close.

Lightning Struck the Cable Four Times.

The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company suffered considerably by Monday's storm. A number of telephones were burned out and the new cable which is being strung along North and Park avenues was struck in four places. A great rent was torn in it by lightning at the corner of North and Park avenues when one of the linemen was working near it.

—Now that a temporary foot-bridge has been placed across the brook at Watchung avenue it is highly important that an electric light should be placed at that point, and it is certainly the duty of the city to see that such a light is loonted, for the street has been accepted.

WOOING SLEEP 'MID BUGS

UNMARRIED PATROLMEN TO SLEEP IN THE ROOKERY.

The New Edict Causes a Good Deal of Dissatisfaction—Reserve to Act in Case of an Emergency, as a Fire, Riot, Etc.

The latest edict to go forth from the Police Board is one that has caused a great amount of dissatisfaction. It *is to the effect that three of the patrol*men are to make their headquarters at the police station, otherwise known as the "rookery." This action was decided recently by the Board. Last Saturday Sergeant Kiely and his family moved from the station to a house on West Fourth street where they will reside in the future. The plan is that the three unmarried patrolmen, Morris Higgins, Florence McCarty and John Watson, shall take up their residence at the station so that there will always be some one on duty in case of fire, riot, etc. It practically keeps the three men on duty continually, for while at the station house they will be subject to call at any time.

The objection to the plan is that the station is not a fit place for even a prisoner, and on the floor of the City Council it has been stated that it was a disgrace to the city of Plainfield. The interior of the building is almost alive with animals that crawl and with such unmistakable evidences of life it is far from being pleasant for one to think that he is obliged to make the place his home. The officers who will sleep in the day time will necessarily be disturbed by the prisoners who will be locked up, and the same trouble will be experienced at night. It is not known whether the officers will make any serious objection to the plan or not, but it is thought that they will.

FIRST PLACE GONE NOW.

HIGH SCHOOL BALL TEAM LOSE AN IMPORTANT GAME.

East Orange Boys Came and Defeated the Local Players by a Score of 6 to 2—No Chance in View for the Championship.

All chances for the baseball championship of the New Jersey Interscholastic Athletic Association as far as the Plainfield High School is concerned, disappeared Saturday afternoon when the crack team from the East Orange High School came to this city and defeated the High School boys in a hotly contested game. The final score was 6 to 2.

The visitors were a gentlemanly lot of fellows and they put up a good clean game of ball. The principal factor in the result was Mamie, pitcher for the East Orange nine. The Plain field players did not understand his curves and did not seem able to bat him safely. There were few errors on the part of the visitors, but quite a number on the part of the local nine. The runs made by the East Orange team were the result of combined hits and errors.

Sutphen had good control of the ball as pitcher for the Plainfield team, but he was hit more freely than his opponent.

The game was witnessed by a large crowd, a few of the fair sex being present. The crowd was not partial and applauded the brilliant plays on both sides.

Plainfield took the lead in the first inning, but the East Orange boys tied in the second and forged ahead in the third. The local team did not score again until the sixth inning when Smith managed to get around the circuit of the bases with the assistance of his fellow school mates. East Orange scored in the fifth and sixth innings also. Only six-and-a half innings were played.

While the High School team were somewhat disheartened at the defeat, yet they have a record to be proud of and after being absent from the diamond for so long and the chances of having a winning team next year are very strong. None of the team graduate this year, and there will be another class entering from which material may be selected. The score by innings was as follows:—

East Orange,	0	1	3	0	1	½	x	6
Plainfield,	1	0	0	0	0	½	0	2

COUNTRY CLUB ELECTS.

The Annual Meeting Held and But Little Business Transacted.

The annual meeting of the Union County Country Club was held at the club house, last Tuesday. The polls for the election of the members of the Board of Governors were open from 8 until 10 o'clock, but there was little excitement, as there was but one ticket in the field.

There were twelve members of the Board of Governors, six of which are elected every year. Those elected last evening were H. G. Runkle, E. H. Booth, C. F. Abbott, C. E. Brooks, A. F. H. Streuli and O. G. Waring.

Printed copies of the treasurer's report showed that the club had been run during the last year with less loss than in previous years.

It was decided by a vote of 27 to 12 to continue the regulations at the club-house.

Ernest Conover, of Elmwood place, is confined to his home by illness.

9 DROPS

CASTORIA

A Vegetable Preparation for Assimilating the Food and Regulating the Stomachs and Bowels of

INFANTS CHILDREN

Promotes Digestion, Cheerfulness and Rest. Contains neither Opium, Morphine nor Mineral. NOT NARCOTIC.

Recipe of Dr. H. C. Fletcher

A perfect Remedy for Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea, Worms, Convulsions, Feverishness and LOSS OF SLEEP.

Fac Simile Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher NEW YORK.

At 6 months old 35 DOSES—35 CENTS

EXACT COPY OF WRAPPER.

SEE THAT THE FAC-SIMILE SIGNATURE —OF— Chas. H. Fletcher IS ON THE WRAPPER OF EVERY BOTTLE OF CASTORIA

Castoria is put up in one-size bottle only. It is not sold in bulk. Don't allow anyone to sell you anything else on the plea or promise that it is "just as good" and "will answer every purpose." Be sure that you get C-A-S-T-O-R-I-A.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

REPAIRING THE STREETS

THE STREET COMMISSIONER'S MEN WORKING ON CENTRAL AVENUE.

That Thoroughfare is to be Improved from Randolph Road to West Front Street—The Method of Repairing Roads.

There has been lots of work for the street department of Plainfield to do this spring and the entire gang of men from that department has been kept busily at work. Front street, from Watchung avenue to Grove street, is now in excellent condition. Now Street Commissioner Gavett has turned his attention toward Central avenue and a large gang of men and the steam roller have been busy there for several days.

The work in that part of the city was started on Central avenue and Randolph road and the repair of the road was continued down Central avenue to Seventh street. Central avenue below Seventh street is greatly in need of repair, and the work is to be continued to Front street. The method of repairing the road is similar to that used on West Front street, the large stone being rolled in with sand and then a layer of fine stone put over the rest. Of course, it puts an end to most of the wheeling in that thoroughfare for several weeks but, as soon as the road becomes completely cemented together, its surface will be fine for cycling or driving.

While the major-part of the force of men under Street Commissioner Gavett are now working on Central avenue, there are several small gangs of men working about the streets of the city. A number of rough spots on Watchung avenue, East Fifth street, East Seventh street and LaGrande avenue have been repaired by the use of crushed stone and sand. Many of the unmacadamized streets have been made much smoother by the use of the scraper. Such improvement is but temporary, however.

—The concert to be given at the Y. M. C. A. Tuesday evening, May 18th, under the direction of P. Ludwig Conde, will be one of the best of the season. A number of talented people have been secured to assist Mr. Conde, and the programme is a fine one.

Ask Your Druggist for a generous 10 CENT TRIAL SIZE.

Ely's Cream Balm

CATARRH

contains no cocaine, mercury nor any other injurious drug. It is quickly absorbed. Gives Relief at once. It opens and cleanses the Nasal Passages. Allays Inflammation. Heals and Protects the Membrane. Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell. Full Size 50c.; Trial size 10c. at Druggists or by mail.

ELY BROTHERS 56 Warren Street, New York

COLD IN HEAD

STONE CARTERS IN TROUBLE.

John C. Cooper and Jacob Biermann of Warrenville, Had a Fierce Encounter.

John C. Cooper and Jacob Biermann are both residents of Warrenville, and until recently they were in partnership in the stone carting business for the township. Last Saturday the two men were carting stone as usual, when a dispute arose between the two regarding the selection of a certain place which was being used to dump the stone. At the time Biermann was riding on the wagon with Cooper, and the war of words became so fierce that a fistic encounter followed. The former attempted to get off of the wagon and fell down behind the horses. For a few minutes he was fast, and while he was trying to extricate himself Cooper took advantage of his position and struck his opponent several times in the face. As soon as Biermann could make his way out he pulled Cooper off of the wagon and began to strike him. This made Cooper angry and he secured a club and pounded his antagonist into insensibility. This frightened him somewhat and he made his escape, leaving his partner in the road. Later some friends of the injured man happened along and took him to his home. His face was covered with blood, and he seemed to be injured otherwise.

As quickly as possible a warrant was issued by Justice Austin for the arrest of Cooper, but the latter has not been seen, and the officers of the law have been unable to find him. Biermann is confined to his home and will not be able to work for some time.

—Dr. Jenkins, of East Front street, is having his house painted an attractive color.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL XXX. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, MAY 20, 1897. NO. 20

"Support the Constitution, Which is the Cement of the Union, as Well in Its Limitations as in Its Authorities."—Madison.

GREAT FETE IT WILL BE

TOWN IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION EVENT WILL SATISFY EVERY TASTE.

A Multitude of Attractions will be Offered to Those Who Attend—Mrs. Mail's Grounds to be Almost Fairy Land.

Anent the Fete Champetre of June 5th. Call it what you will—outdoor entertainment, open-air party, plain picnic; but if you fail to go you will always be sorry. It will be an event to talk about, to remember, the like of which Plainfield—perhaps, even, New Jersey—has never known. It will have features appealing to every taste, cultured or crude; to all conditions; to every age. It will be amusing, instructive, and always and everywhere interesting. Moreover, it will be thoroughly democratic. One entrance fee for all will level distinctions. Plain folk may gaze at the swell—if he be there to swell—as at a new variety of fella. The swell may study the plain folk, perhaps to his own advantage. Music and dancing; fun and frolic; food and drink; all these and other good things will offer themselves at every turn within the Elysian field which lies in the very shadow of the Watchung mountains.

The country home of John Taylor Johnston—so widely known for its beauty—is a fair memorial of the refined taste of its lamented master. And, for this one fete-day, the resources of art and nature will be combined to produce a picture never to be forgotten, a picture of many different phases which our knights of the camera (anglice, kodak-fiends) will surely not neglect.

For example, the southerly entrance, with its fine granite work, will, by the cunning art of George Wharton Edwards, become a mediæval Flemish gateway, gay with colored pennants and with gilded weather vanes. Again, faring on by circling drive or winding path, the visitor will come upon another mediæval picture, the May pole, garlanded with flowers and streamers, with a merry group of youngsters (already in training) "winding a dance" about the pole—perchance "winding" themselves up against it.

Passing further on you will come to running water; to the lake, with its boats and gondolas. Or, crossing by the rustic bridge, you are captured by a dark skinned, red-shawled gypsy maid, (perhaps a demure member of your Sunday-school class,) whose hand you will cross with silver in expectation of a fortune told. Or you may sit in the gypsy tent and have audience of the Queen, the while a witch broth is brewing in a big pot hung from the regulation tripod of stakes.

Do the children want a pony ride, in the saddle or phaeton? Here are the ponies, with careful men in charge. Are you an-hungered? Or is you whistle dry? You have not far to go for creature comforts, served, too, at reasonable prices, in dainty form.

Perhaps you have come a-wheel from Morristown, from Trenton; you expect a bask in your old way. Moreover you would not have your wheel out in the evening dew; all the while your mare can graves food. Go to, now; follow the signs to the place of wheels; explain to friend Rogers or to friend Lizar what your wheel needs; receive from them a numbered coupon, and pass on to the supper tent where, with mind at ease, you may sip your hot coffee and munch your salad, your beef or mutton, with pastries and creams to follow, and later, you may even smoke yourself with a cigar while you watch the electric lights as they begin to gleam out of the shadows.

Have you brought along the family, the wife and children or, perhaps, a sweetheart? Have the roads been dusty, the sun warm? Well, here are soap, water and towels; combs and brushes; all the toilet-requisites of the civilized man and woman, close at hand.

Perhaps you have driven across country, with the whole household. In that case you may find a place for the team, with feed and water, and later a hearty supper for yourself and your folks. If, however, you come from "the city" with dress-suit case or grip-sack, you need no advice from a newspaper man. 'Tis enough to say that you will find accommodations: that you are sure to have a good time, that there are trains by which you may return to New York throughout the evening and up to midnight. Or, on the other hand, you may find good lodging over night at the inns of Plainfield.

From time to time The Press will have more to say of this "coming event," whose shadow will grow from day to day. We confidently assure our readers that all news of the Fete Champetre printed in these columns may be accepted as authentic and reliable, and will appear as promptly as

CONTINUED ON PAGE 8

ADAM BEEK'S PINK TEAS

FREE BEER IS SAID TO BE ON TAP THERE.

Two Roisters, Returning From the Tea, Were Captured by Patrolman Mattox, and Disclose a Very Wonderful Story

City Judge DeMeza was not favorably impressed with what he heard of Adam Beek's "pink teas" in city court Monday morning, neither were the police. Sunday morning, at 3 o'clock, Patrolman Mattox was attracted to Richmond street by sundry shoutings and howls. He found four men in the midst of what he declares was a drunken brawl.

The patrolman made a rush into the crowd and grappled the first one that came handy. There was a general scattering on the part of the participants. Mattox had a firm grip on the arm of one of them and had another by the necktie. The latter individual departed in a hurry leaving his necktie behind, but his short stay had been long enough for Mattox to recognize him. It was James Kearns and he was arrested at a later hour that morning. The prisoner was John Boantree.

The culprits explained that they had been down to one of the "pink teas" conducted by Adam Hubler, better known as Adam Beek, and were just coming home when they got into an altercation over some point and started to settle it among themselves.

They were arranged before City Judge DeMeza, Monday morning, as has already been told, and pleaded to the charge of being drunk and disorderly and fighting. They also explained some of the peculiarities of the already noted "pink tea." Beek, or Hubler, lives near Netherwood on the north side of the track. Sometimes he gives dances at his home, which the young men may attend by the payment of the sum of fifty cents. These dances have become known as Beek's "pink teas."

The prisoners said that the fifty cents not only entitled them to dance all the evening and part of the following morning, but it included an unlimited number of visits to the spout of the keg of beer that stood in the hall The cups were free and all the guests had to do was to turn the spigot and drink.

The two offenders were fined $8 each and told to beware of "pink teas" hereafter.

There promises to be an investigation in this matter of "pink teas" with the accompanying free beer and more arrests are likely to follow.

The other two men who were in the scrap on Sunday morning are alleged to be John Staats and a man named Pize. Staats appeared at a late hour, and his trial will be held on Saturday morning.

CUPID CHEATED DEATH.

FREDA PETERSON AND NELSON GRAVE MARRIED AT LAST.

The Bride Became Despondent Over the Delay in the Nuptials and Tried to Commit Suicide Last Week—Now She's Happy.

Two of the happiest persons in Plainfield are Miss Freda Peterson, of Perth Amboy, and Nelson Grave, this city, for last Tuesday they were united in marriage, after an episode which nearly caused a life separation.

About a week ago Miss Peterson came to this city for the purpose of becoming the wife of Nelson Grave, the young man who had promised to marry her. Grave was not quite ready to be married and desired that his bethrothed should wait two weeks. This she did not want to do, and when she learned that he would not consent to the wedding at that time she drank a quantity of carbolic acid. She was removed to the hospital where for a short time she remained in a critical condition. She soon began to get well and finally was pronounced out of danger.

In the meantime Grave arranged his affairs so that he could plan for the happy union, and the date was set for last Tuesday at 7 o'clock The ceremony was performed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Claassen, of Liberty street. Miss May Thompson, of the latter street, acted as maid of honor, and Peter Hansen, brother of Mrs. Claassen, was the best man. The officiating clergyman was Rev. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church.

Mr. and Mrs. Grave will reside in this city where the groom has a position as painter with Rushton & Hansen.

The bride wore a gown of steel gray trimmed with white lace, and the maid of honor was gowned in blue satin trimmed with white lace.

Following the ceremony, supper was served to those present and an evening of sociability was enjoyed.

FOR MORE SCHOOL ROOM

OLD SEVENTH DAY BAPTIST CHURCH LEASED FOR THAT PURPOSE.

To be Refitted, at a Cost of $3,700, Especially for Study Purposes.—The Structure Will be Leased for a Term of Five Years.

The old Seventh Day Baptist church is soon to be converted into a school house for the use of the children of the city of Plainfield. The steeple will probably be removed and such changes made in the interior as will fit the building for educational purposes. Such was the decision of the Board of Education of the city of Plainfield at a special meeting held at the High School building, Monday evening.

Ever since the completion of the new church edifice of the Seventh Day Baptist church society, the old wooden building, which was moved from the site of the new church to the corner of West Fifth avenue and Madison avenue, has remained unoccupied. When the Board first looked about for a suitable building in which to relieve the overcrowded condition of the school buildings in the Third ward by establishing several classes, their attention was called to the old church, which the Seventh Day Baptist society offered at a very reasonable rate.

A kindergarten was started in the old Rogers building on West Fifth street, near Central avenue, after the spring vacation, but it was plain that something more must be done before the opening of school in the fall. Monday evening, a special meeting of the Board was called to take action on the matter and hear the report of the building committee regarding the proposed sanitary changes to the Stillman school.

Mr. Lounsbury, as chairman of the building committee, reported that the committee thought it advisable to to lease the old Seventh day Baptist church for a term of five years to accommodate the pupils who are crowded out of the other schools. His plan concerning the alterations necessary to the building were that the first floor should be divided into four class rooms and that arrangements should be made so that four more rooms might be fitted up on the second floor when the increase in pupils made it necessary. The heating apparatus, he advised, should be put in so as to heat the first and second floors.

Mr. Hubbard was present and brought with him plans of the proposed changes, which, it is estimated, would cost $3,700. It is understood that the church society will remove the steeple.

After a thorough discussion, the president and secretary were authorized to consummate a lease with the society of the Seventh Day Baptist church for the property for a term of five years. The building committee was instructed to make such necessary alterations, according to report, after the lease had been signed.

The Board next talked over the question of putting a small addition on the rear of the Stillman building to accommodate two sets of toilet rooms. The present rooms in the centre of the yard will be removed and new sanitary ones, connecting with the sewers, put in place. The Board received a notification some time ago that connection must be made with the sewers and it was in compliance with this that the new toilet rooms were planned.

Plans for the proposed extension, drawn up by Architect Carr, were presented and the Board virtually decided to accept them and have the extension built during the summer vacation. Bids for the same were received and opened. The lowest bid for the sanitary plumbing was by D. W. Littell, of $850. For the mason and carpenter work and painting, the bid of J. P. Emmons of $1,409 was the lowest

Cyclists Collide.

Walter G Williams, of East Front street, met with an accident while returning from Metuchen, Saturday afternoon, on his wheel. He had just reached the corner of Park avenue and Seventh street when he was compelled to turn out to avoid a little girl who was walking across the street and then to prevent a collision with another cyclist. John Arden, of Morris avenue, was close behind Williams and unable to stop. A collision was the inevitable result and Williams' front wheel was ruined. Arden offered to pay for the damage.

A Benefit Entertainment.

An entertainment for the benefit of the athletic association of Leal's School will be held on Monday evening at the Y. M. C. A. hall. The entertainment will be a lecture on Cuba and the war by one who has travelled extensively there. The subject is "Under the Cuban Star."

August Bloom, a former resident of Plainfield, but now of New York, spent Tuesday with friends here.

BRIDGES TO BE BUILT.

UNION AND SOMERSET FREEHOLDERS DECIDE THE MATTER.

A Joint Meeting of the Bridge Committees of the Two Boards Held Tuesday—Discussion About Sycamore Avenue.

As stated in The Daily Press Tuesday, the members of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders together with the Bridge Committee from Union County Board of Freeholders met in this city for the purpose of considering the erection of two bridges, one across Watchung avenue and the other across Sycamore avenue. The members met on Watchung avenue first and discussed the question of a bridge thoroughly. Some were of the opinion that a plank bridge ought be erected. The members of this opinion were all from Somerset county. The Union county members were all of the opinion that the bridge should be a concrete one. The question required considerable discussion and it was finally decided to have plans and specifications drawn for three different kinds of bridges, the same to be submitted at a meeting to be held two weeks from yesterday. It is the general opinion that the bridge, if a concrete one, will cost about $10,000. Following this the members adjourned to Sycamore avenue, where the question of erecting a bridge across the brook at that point was discussed. In this case the Somerset county members wanted to practice economy by erecting a bridge forty feet wide, which is not the full width of the road. The Union county members thought that the difference in the cost would be so small that a full width bridge should be built.

Former Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., Senator Reed, George F. White and William J. Roome, interested owners of the property on the avenue, were present and used their influence with the Freeholders to secure a full width bridge. Mr. Hegeman made a speech before the assembled members in which he urged them to provide for the future and not only for a few days.

The Somerset county members discussed a great deal and for a time it looked as though the bridge would not be granted. Captain Hubbard finally called the members together and the question was called for. Every member, except Director Logan, voted to make the bridge full width. This bridge will cost about $4,000, and will be a low truss plank structure. In this case the members decided to have plans and specifications made and submitted at the meeting to be held in two weeks.

Plainfield and the borough are now assured of having two new bridges for the Freeholders so decided yesterday. The only question that remains is as to what kind of a bridge will be erected on Watchung avenue.

Among the interested persons present in addition to those named were Mayor Wilson, Councilmen Woolston and Carey, of the borough, J. Fred MacDonald and Sheriff Kirk, of this city.

The Bridge Committee of Union County consists of Captain Hubbard, chairman; John H. Tier, Sr., of this city; J. Robinson, of Fanwood; A. S. Clark, of Westfield; J. Martin Boll, of Springfield; J. C. Ogden, of Elizabeth, All of the above were present and the full membership of the Somerset County Board was present.

Somerset County Teachers to Meet.

The annual meeting of the Somerset County Teachers' Association will be held in the North Plainfield Public School building, Saturday next, at 10:30 a. m.

Miss E. Kiernan, of North Plainfield, will present a Mary Mapes Dodge literary exercise with class. An exercise in botany will be given, if suitable plants can be procured. Principal W. B. Wells, of East Millstone, will present a paper on "Herbart." Dr. A. D. Warde, of North Plainfield, will present a paper on "The Physical Causes that have Influenced the Location and Development of Cities." Officers for the ensuing year will be elected.

A Birthday Party.

A birthday party was enjoyed last Tuesday at the home of Christ Church under the auspices of the Sunday-school. The programme consisted of vocal and instrumental selections, recitations, and an address by the superintendent, Mr. Staats. Those who took part in the programme were members of the Sunday-school, and every number was given with credit.

Judgment for the Plaintiff

The contract case of W. H Smith against Charles Burnett was tried Monday befor Justice Spier at Washingtonville. The plaintiff was represented by Lawyer Poppe, while Lawyer Robert Clark appeared for the defendant. Judgment was given by the Justice for the plaintiff for full amount, $25 and costs. The case has been appealed.

WANTED TO END HER LIFE

ANNA WILSON CHOSE A PENKNIFE AS THE MEANS.

She was Employed as a Servant at the Residence of F. E. Knight, of Woodland Avenue—Wounds Will Not Prove Fatal.

A young woman, despondent after a long period of ill health and other troubles, attempted to take her life in a Netherwood residence, last Tuesday, and might have succeeded but for her ignorance of the location of the most important blood vessels in the body.

Miss Annie Wilson, a young American woman, of twenty-five years of age, has been employed at the residence of F. E. Knight, of Woodland avenue, near South avenue, as a servant for some time. She has been in ill health for over a year and as gradually grown despondent over the fact. Tuesday, she acted so queerly that the members of the family noticed it and kept a watch on her fearing she might attempt violence to herself. A few minutes after 5 p. m., last Tuesday, she retired to her room on the third floor and locked the door.

When Mr. and Mrs. Knight learned that she had gone to her room, they went to the door to see what was the matter. The young woman refused to admit them. Her voice sounded weak and trembling and it was feared that something was the matter.

After long persuasion, the door was finally opened and the excited inmates of the house admitted. Their fears were by no means dispelled when they found the young woman covered with her own blood which was flowing freely from wounds at the neck and wrist.

It is supposed that Miss Wilson became temporarily demented and tried to take her life. There was a deep cut in the left wrist, three inches long, and two more cuts in the side of the neck, each an inch and a half long. These wounds had been made by Miss Wilson with a pocket knife with a comparatively small blade. The knife was found on the floor, covered with blood.

The would be suicide became hysterical after her condition was discovered, while all the family were much excited over the unwonted happenings of the night. Dr. Endicott was summoned and dressed the wounds of the woman.

The wounds were not of a serious character, although she lost much blood. No main arteries or veins are cut, although such was apparently her object.

Her sisters in New York were telegraphed for and came to town next morning. They took the young woman with them to New York.

SURPRISED AN OLD SCHOOL CHUM.

Ray Snodgrass Visited by a Number of Newarkers, Who Came Awheel.

A very pleasant surprise was given to Ray C. Snodgrass, son of Rev. Dr. Winfield C. Snodgrass, the new pastor of the First M. E. church, Monday evening. Rev. Dr. Snodgrass came to this city from Newark where Ray Snodgrass attended the Newark High School, where he was a member of the Senior class.

Monday evening, soon after 9 o'clock, Ray Snodgrass was surprised to hear his familiar class yell given in front of his home on Central avenue. Knowing that only his friends of the Newark High School were capable of giving it, he hurried out to find twenty of his class-mates who had ridden over from Newark on their wheels to see him.

The party then spent a pleasant hour with their old class-mate and then departed for Newark. Among the party were George E. Pister, president of the class, S. M. Riker, manager of the Newark High School base-ball team, and Arthur E Hill and P. W. Muller, two especial chums of Ray Snodgrass.

In Court of Chancery.

The printed list of cases in the Court of Chancery which opened Tuesday shows the following cases in which Plainfield parties are interested: Hannah J. Beaver vs. Joseph B. Cleaver, William M. Stillman for complainant, C. R. Cushman for defendant. Also three cases in which William C. Stanbery is complainant and Eve M. Baker et als., defendants. The latter three cases were all decided by the court in favor of Mr Stanbery, who was represented by W. B. Codington. The defendant Eva M. Baker was represented by Mr. Angleman.

Senator Reed had eight cases in which his firm appeared as counsel. They were referred to the vice-chancellor for hearing.

Clarkson Mundy, who is now employed by Smalley Brothers, the North avenue butchers, has been taken into partnership with J. A. Blatz, the Front street butcher. Mr. Mundy will make the change next Monday.

ALL WENT UP IN SMOKE

CADMUS' STOREHOUSE AND ITS CONTENTS DESTROYED TUESDAY.

The Fire Supposed to Have Been Started by Three Small Boys Who Were Playing With Matches—Loss is About $2,500.

A large building located on South Second street, owned by Abram L. Cadmus, and used as a store-house for straw, wood, hay, etc., was totally destroyed by fire Tuesday noon. There is good reason to suspect that the building was set on fire by boys.

It was nearly 12 o'clock when Mrs. John Kneeland, who lives back of the store house, looked out of her back window and saw William McGrath, George Lindzer and Edward Honney, between the ages of 6 and 7 years, standing by the building which was burned. She told a Daily Press reporter that she saw a match lighted but she did not know which one of the boys did the act. Immediately afterward she saw the boys run away and almost instantly she saw the flames leaping forth from the building. The fire started in a quantity of straw and in a few seconds the whole contents were in a blaze.

The fire had made great headway by the time the department reached the scene and it was impossible to save the building. The best that could be done was to save the adjoining buildings. Several streams were used and the firemen did good work.

Charles Drake, who is employed by Mr. Cadmus, was present and rescued the wagons from the burning building, and while doing this both of his hands were badly burned. He was take to his home and a doctor was called to dress the wounds.

About this time George Zeiss, an employe of the Potter Press Works, was passing and he saw that the building was on fire. He hastened to the spot and secured a private hose and fastened it to the hydrant. In this was water that was used on the fire when the fire department arrived in response to an alarm sent in from box 43 by James Whalen, also an employe of Potter's.

Mr. Cadmus had the building insured for $250, and J. T. Vail is the agent. There was no insurance on the contents which is a complete loss. Mr. Cadmus estimates his loss at $2,500.

It was nearly two hours before the firemen entirely extinguished the fire, and during that time it was hard work owing to the dense smoke caused by the burning hay and straw.

Chief Doane was in Hobo'en attending the meeting of the Exempt Firemen's Association, and First Assistant James Martin was in charge.

Sergeant Kiely was present and he made a thorough investigation of the facts concerning the fire. He took the boys names and they will be found and closely questioned as to their presence at the building. The boys were not found while the fire was in progress.

SWEET MUSIC DISCOURSED.

Prof. Conde's Concert Was a Successful One in Musical Circles.

A very successful event was the annual concert of P. Ludwig Conde, Plainfield's well-known violinist, which was held in the Y. M. C. A. hall, last Tuesday. From an artistic point of view the concert was very creditable. Mr. Conde was assisted by a number of his pupils, who showed the skill of their teacher as well as their own talent by the excellent rendition of the numbers to which they were assigned. There were also present two of Mr. Conde's professional friends, who took part in the programme and greatly pleased the audience by their ability on the instruments they had chosen. The orchestra, which was largely composed of Mr. Conde's pupils, was led by Mr. Conde. The selections were well received and deserved to be.

W. Paulding DeNike showed himself a master of the 'cello and he made the full rich tones of that instrument seem unusually sweet. The trio by Mr. DeNike, Mr. Conde and Clarence Lester Eick, on 'cello, violin and piano, "Pizzicato Gavotte," by Pache, found great favor with the audience, so that the musicians were called back by the loud applause to repeat it. Mr. Conde was at his best in his solos and showed what a wonderful master of the violin he is. His selections were much enjoyed.

Enough Money Pledged

The subscription committee of the East Third Street Mission held a meeting a few days ago and learned by comparison that the entire amount of money needed to erect a new chapel had been pledged. Next week a meeting of the trustees will be held and the committee will at that time make a report of their work. It is expected that the work of building the chapel will be started in a very short time.

SILVER LAKE'S FAMOUS SERPENT.

A Joke Which Helped a Friend and Did No One Any Harm.

Faxon was happiest when doing something to relieve the distress of another, and he was, moreover, greatly given to practical joking. These two characteristics in him produced a hoax one morning that became famous at the time, and it was near about the same time that he caused Blondin to walk across Niagara.

Faxon had a friend who went to Silver Lake, a beautiful body of water a few miles south of Buffalo and Rochester, in what was then a wild and picturesque country, where he built a superb hotel, hoping to make the place a popular resort. This man's fortune was expended in building and outfitting the hotel, but as people did not resort to the place in considerable numbers it failed of becoming much of a resort, and the man was about to be financially ruined. Faxon went to the place for a few days' relaxation, and, seeing the condition of affairs, he invented a scheme which his friend dubiously fell into, and the investment was saved.

At Buffalo lived a young German tinsmith of an ingenious turn of mind. To him Faxon went, and under Faxon's direction an immense tin snake was concretly made, and so contrived that by the use of wires it would, under proper arrangements, go into serpentine writhings and open and shut its enormous mouth. This "contraption" was packed in Silver Lake and so fixed in the water—which was very deep—that by wires worked from the cellar of the hotel it would show itself on the surface, snap its terrible mouth and dive down again.

The snake being arranged in working order, Faxon went back to Buffalo, and in his paper printed, under great "scare heads," the story of the discovery of an enormous snake in Silver Lake. People visited the place by hundreds and then by thousands. The hotel and its barns and outbuildings at all kinds were filled with guests, and many people went there and camped on the shores of the lake, his snakeship coming to the surface at satisfactory intervals and doing his share of the work. So the fame of the Silver Lake snake went abroad.

There came a body of savants of the school of Europe to see the famous terror, and they saw it and pondered over it—but at a most respectful distance.

Finally one day the wires broke, the snake floated to the surface and turned his white belly toward the sky, just like any other dead snake, and the great hoax was exploded. But Faxon's friend had saved his fortune and added to it, and Silver Lake became quite a resort after all.—Chicago Times-Herald.

Useful Indian Lore.

"People out West," observed a Kansas Congressman, "have learned a number of things from the Indians, and many of them are of value. Probably the most valuable has been in the matter of cyclones. We have learned that whenever a city or town was built on the site of an old Indian settlement, it has been free from any of the cyclones that have come and then come along in the Western country. How the Indians were observant and smart enough to select sites for settlement which have always escaped cyclones is more than we have been able to learn by study or investigation, but the fact remains that the towns or cities on original Indian settlements are cyclone-proof.

"These towns which are located thus fortunately use their Indian origin as an advertisement as a guarantee for settlement. Thus lots in an original Indian settlement town are sold for a higher price and are in greater demand than in towns laid out by white men. It is rather rough on our intelligence, but it is dollars to pennies that it is right. The cyclone insurance company will insure a policy on houses in an Indian settlement for one-third the prices they charge for similar policies in other sections. They have found that it pays them better to issue the low-rate policies than other policies at the higher rate."—Washington Star.

The Word "People."

There is one word which is misused by every journalist and every author wherever the English language is written—the word "people." Mr. Howells for instance, in one of his delightful novels speaks of "three people" sitting in a room. Now, if three of these "people" were to withdraw, one "people" would be left—and very much left! It seems unnecessary to state—and yet it is necessary to state it—that "people" is a collective noun, and can properly be applied only to a nation, a tribe, a class, a community. It is quite admissible to say, "How are your people?"—meaning your family, your clan; but such a phrase as "Fifty people were injured," or "a hundred people were present," are not convertible terms. For twenty-five years or more I have kept my eye on this little word "people," and I have yet to find a single American or English author who does not misuse it. In the course of 200 or 300 years the correct employment of it may possibly become general.—New York Critic.

A Large Order.

A herculean Scots Grey passing along Princess Street, Edinburgh, one day, stopped at the post-office, and walked on a shoeblack to shine his shoes.

The feet of the Dragoon were in proportion to his height, and, looking at the tremendous boots before him, the arab knelt down on the pavement and called out to a chum near by:

"Jamie, come ye're and gie's a hand. I've got an Army contract!"—Answers.

WHY NAPOLEON LOST WATERLOO.

Owing to an Insidious Disease He Slept During the Battle.

In a recent English book on Waterloo there is a curious reason given for Napoleon's defeat, which seems to have escaped other historians.

Others, bringing forward many particular examples to prove this contention, urge that throughout the campaign Napoleon was incapacitated by disease and a semi-comatose condition at the moment when energy was of all things the most needful.

The truth seems to be that Napoleon was suffering under the influence of a strange and mysterious malady, the nature of which has not yet been accurately defined.

What is certain is Napoleon's case is that his malady had been growing upon him with increasing force since 1806, that its attacks were modified by a sudden lethargy, amounting to complete prostration, and that its effects were that, at some critical moment of a battle, his wonderful power of quick and correct decision seemed to desert him—so much so that, for the time being, he almost abandoned the reins to chance.

At Wagram and at Bautzen he slept, while the noise of battle was rolling around him. At Waterloo, seated on a wooden chair, his head resting upon his arms, he rested on a table stretched out to accommodate his maps and papers, he slumbered heavily, oblivious for the moment, even at this crisis of his fortunes, of the events which were deciding his destiny.—Golden Days.

ANIMALS SHAM DEATH.

A Clever Fox That Came to Life, Bit His Captor and Escaped.

Two cases are on record of foxes being discovered in hen-houses. In each case the fox not only completely destroyed the fowls, but allowed himself to be dragged out by the brush and thrown down, in the one case in a field, and the other on a dung hill. In each instance the fox then jumped up and ran away. Another example is that of a fox which dangled across a man's shoulder as it allowed itself to be carried along a road for more than a mile. At last it bit the man and was promptly dropped. A cat was observed to carry a wounded bone in its mouth, the wounded dangling helplessly. The door of the house was closed, and the cat, in conformity with its usual habit, mewed to gain admission. To mew, however, it had to set down the wound, which jumped up and fastened on to it.

The following instance was observed by the late Prof. Romanes: A corncrake had been retrieved by a dog, and, having every appearance of being dead, was put in a man's pocket. Presently the struggles were felt, and the man drew the bird out. To his astonishment it again hung in his hand limp and apparently lifeless. It was then set upon the ground and watched from behind some cover. In a short time it rose on its head, looked around and decamped at full speed.—From the Scotsman.

A Curious Wooden Watch.

The most curious timekeeper, perhaps, that has ever been made in this country, was the work of one Victor Doriot, who lived in Bristol, Tenn., about twenty years ago. This oddity was nothing more nor less than a wooden watch. The case was made of briar root, and the inside works, except three of the main wheels and the springs (which were of metal) were made from a piece of old boxwood rule. The face, which was polished until it looked like a bit of finest ivory, was made from the shoulder blade of an old cow that had been killed by the cars. "Doriot's queer watch," as it was called, was an open-faced affair, with a glass crystal, and was guaranteed to run a year. It is now owned by all the watchmakers in East Tennessee.

Use for Nickel Steel.

Nickel-steel is considered by some as the building material of the future. It is produced by the combination of iron and nickel, the success of the alloy depending upon the quality of the nickel. Quite recently nickel-steel has also been employed in the manufacture of bicycles, and a German wheel of this material, weighing but thirteen pounds, is said to have compared favorably with bicycles made of common steel.—New York Sun.

Danger Signal for Drunkenness.

The Ashantees hold that drunkenness forms no excuse for crime; but by way of preventing as far as possible any untoward results happening through intoxication, any one who feels that way disposed is under an obligation to streak his forehead with dashes of red paint. The danger signal warns quiet people to keep clear of the decorated one.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Sad Indiscretion.

Business in the Japanese Parliament seems of a rather frivolous character. A whole recent sitting was devoted to considering whether a member had not violated Parliamentary etiquette by appearing opening in a frock coat, instead of the regulation dress suit. Finally the offending member was solemnly warned of his "indiscretion," narrowly escaping being handed over to the Disciplinary Committee for punishment.—New York Tribune.

The Little Cape Holds Its Own.

Despite all the predictions to the contrary, the doom of the little cape has not yet come, and it still holds its own in the rank and file of outside garments. To be sure, it is very short, very full, elaborately trimmed, and sometimes decorated with scarf ends of lace chiffon or ribbon, but it is a cape all the same.

BAGPIPES FOR THE SULTAN.

He Has Engaged a Scotchman to Perform on the Instrument.

His Majesty the Sultan of Morocco is passionately devoted to the music of the bagpipes, and he has engaged a renowned master of that instrument to play for him.

Robert Mortimer, of Aberdeen, formerly a pipes in a Highland regiment is the man who has been honored by the Sultan. He is to receive a salary of $3,000 a year, a very large one for Morocco, and a liberal allowance of expenses, enabling him to buy all the bagpipes and all the costumes he desires. He is supported in good style by the Sultan, and is no doubt able to enjoy most of the luxuries of a Moorhamedan court, absolutely untainted by European civilization.

His Majesty, who is watched with keen interest by many representatives of foreign powers, is reported to be delighted by his new Court Musician. He lounges on his divan, smoking his hookah, and drinks in the wild Caledonian melody. He would rather listen to it than watch his coochee coochee dancers. He has the pipes played to reviews of the army to instill courage into the soldiers and cultivate their musical taste.—New York Journal.

Successful Failures.

Columbus discovered America through his failure to reach India, as he hoped and intended to do. Afterward, Livingstone studied for three years with the sole aim of being a missionary to China. It was only because his hopes were crushed by the "opium war," which made it impossible to enter China, that he thought of going to Africa, and was the means of opening up a whole continent to Christianity and civilization.

Some years ago an ingenious plan was proposed by a man named Joggins for sending logs from Canada to New York by rafting them, bound together by cables and iron girders, as rafts. The plan failed, as the first raft sent out met with a storm near the end of its voyage, the iron girders snapped, and the logs were scattered far and wide. Captains of sailing vessels in the Atlantic, the Mediterranean and the South seas noticed these logs and reported on them. The reports were collected and systematized, and deductions made from them as to the courses of ocean currents. So the failure of the Joggins raft led to one of the greatest discoveries in modern maring geography and navigation.

Royal Right of Pardon.

As a result of the visit of Czar Nicholas to France 402 persons were released from prison. When Francis I. ruled over France, Charles V. of England passed through the country. The French ruler extended the royal prerogative of mercy to the latter, looked around and decamped at full speed.—From the Scotsman.

A Curious Wooden Watch.

The most curious timekeeper, perhaps, that has ever been made in this country, was the work of one Victor Doriot, who lived in Bristol, Tenn., about twenty years ago. This oddity was nothing more nor less than a wooden watch. The case was made of briar root, and the inside works, except three of the main wheels and the springs (which were of metal) were made from a piece of old boxwood rule. The face, which was polished until it looked like a bit of finest ivory, was made from the shoulder blade of an old cow that had been killed by the cars. "Doriot's queer watch," as it was called, was an open-faced affair, with a glass crystal, and was guaranteed to run a year. It is now owned by all the watchmakers in East Tennessee.

Use for Nickel Steel.

Nickel-steel is considered by some as the building material of the future. It is produced by the combination of iron and nickel, the success of the alloy depending upon the quality of the nickel. Quite recently nickel-steel has also been employed in the manufacture of bicycles, and a German wheel of this material, weighing but thirteen pounds, is said to have compared favorably with bicycles made of common steel.—New York Sun.

Danger Signal for Drunkenness.

The Ashantees hold that drunkenness forms no excuse for crime; but by way of preventing as far as possible any untoward results happening through intoxication, any one who feels that way disposed is under an obligation to streak his forehead with dashes of red paint. The danger signal warns quiet people to keep clear of the decorated one.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Sad Indiscretion.

Business in the Japanese Parliament seems of a rather frivolous character. A whole recent sitting was devoted to considering whether a member had not violated Parliamentary etiquette by appearing opening in a frock coat, instead of the regulation dress suit. Finally the offending member was solemnly warned of his "indiscretion," narrowly escaping being handed over to the Disciplinary Committee for punishment.—New York Tribune.

The Little Cape Holds Its Own.

Despite all the predictions to the contrary, the doom of the little cape has not yet come, and it still holds its own in the rank and file of outside garments. To be sure, it is very short, very full, elaborately trimmed, and sometimes decorated with scarf ends of lace chiffon or ribbon, but it is a cape all the same.

A LUMINOUS LIFELINE.

Of Sufficient Luminosity to be Visible for A Long Distance.

In spite of the magnificent work of the Life Saving Corps of the Government, and regardless of the apparatus for the rendering of aid to the ship wrecked which is at their command, many a life has been lost by the inability of the persons who are clinging to a wreck to see the line shot at them from the shore, or, if it reaches the rigging to tell just where it might be seized upon. As, in such cases, minutes mean lives, the inability to see and grasp the lifeline without the delay of a second, has lessened the population of the earth by several in many, many instances.

The idea evolved is to provide a lifeline which emits a phosphorescent light of sufficient luminosity to be visible for a long distance immediately it leaves the mortar's mouth and is shot through the gale and across the waves from the wreck to the coast. If it happened to be daylight when the life-savers were at work, they could by means of their glasses tell whether or not they had landed a lifeline aboard the wreck. It unfortunately happens, though, that the majority of wrecks occur at night, and, therefore, a luminous lifeline becomes an invention of the first importance. By its use the life-savers can tell exactly what has happened to the line. There need be no more uncertainty.

It is contended that the luminous line will be visible with as much distinctness as if the light were emitted from a 56-candle power electric bulb. In that way, unless the storm were too dense, the line would be visible its entire length between wreck and shore, and the watchers on the beach could tell just what progress toward safety was being made by those whose lives they were trying to save.—Austin Statesman.

Johnny Wasn't Quite Up On America.

The teachers in the kindergarten find a perpetual fund of amusement in the funny little remarks committed to their charge. One of them—one of the teachers—is responsible for this story of a mite of a lad, who possesses a high, shrill voice, and uses it on every possible occasion. She had been teaching the class in "America," a slow and somewhat painful operation. Over the verse, "Land where our fathers died, land of the pilgrims' pride," she labored long and earnestly, and when at last they seemed familiar with the words—they picked up the air amazingly quick—her attention was particularly drawn to the shrill-voiced youngster just mentioned. He was certainly introducing a variation on the text, but just what it was she couldn't make out. High rose the thin voice above the chorus, the little fellow singing with the utmost confidence something which certainly wasn't in the original version.

"Now, scholars," said the teacher, "we'll all stop and let Johnnie sing his verse alone. Johnnie is such a nice singer. Now, Johnnie."

So Johnnie, with an amazing grin, lifted up his razor-edged soprano after this fashion:

"Land where our fazers dies,
Land of the pills and pies."

And it took Johnnie a great deal longer to unlearn this extraordinary combination of nonsense than it did for him to pick up the entire song originally.—Detroit Free Press.

He Took Them at Their Word.

E. S. Willard gives an idea of English humor in the following: Two cockneys passing a burning house saw a man sitting in an upper window reading a book, apparently oblivious of all danger. They yelled to him to jump several times, but he paid no attention.

With a final effort one of the cockneys shouted: "Jump! Me and me pal will catch you in our blanket!"

"You see," he said later to a friend, "the joke was that we 'adn't no blanket at all, and the bloomin' guy jumped and broke 'is bloomin' neck."

Another of Dockstader's stories is apropos of the Moody revival. A small boy was questioned by the preacher, who asked, "Who made you?"

"Why, ma and pa have a lot of scrapping about," was the unexpected reply.

Jokes Spoiled in Telling.

Many instances have been recorded of how jokes are spoiled in the telling. The latest to come under my observation is that of the effort to frighten an Irishman who boasted of his fearlessness. Friends persuaded him to enter a graveyard at midnight, and arranged matters so that he fell into a newly made grave. At the same instant one of the conspirators, wrapped in a sheet, appeared from behind a tombstone and inquired, in a sepulchral tone of voice:

"What are you doing in my grave?"

"What are ye doin' out of it?" was the quick retort.

This antiquated tale was retold me the other day by an acquaintance, who recruited it in the following fashion:

"Just as the Irishman entered the graveyard, one of his friends, wrapped in a sheet, stood before him. 'What are ye doin' here?' asked Pat, nowise abashed by the sudden apparition."

Yet he expected me to laugh.

She Wouldn't Take Chances.

A Boston young woman broke a marriage engagement because her intended nibbled while riding a wheel. She argued that a man who could not ride straight on a wheel would wabble while treading the matrimonial path, and she wasn't going to take any chances.

When the North Seceded.

Says a correspondent: "Our ten-year-old girl, after listening to an account of what an earthquake was, said she guessed an earthquake was when the earth seceded."—Boston Transcript.

THE DRUM MAJOR.

For Show and not for Use as Generally Supposed.

"The drum major as he used to exist, the pride of the band and the glory of the procession, is a thing of the past," remarked a bandmaster. "In his place flunkies of all kinds are now popular, from small boys with their twirling batons to fellows who carry a musket so as through all kinds of parades evolve while the band plays on. The drum major now has little part in a band except for show. Though the small boys thought he led the band in its music as well as otherwise, he has no more to do with the music than has the letter P as far as sound goes in the word pneumatic. The brass band is led by its leader, and the only thing that was expected of the drum major was to look as important as he could. The fellow who led the Pittsburg Band in the inaugural parade drew a larger salary for his ability and skill at handling a musket he carried than did any of the players in the band outside of the leader, who is always the financial as well as the musical manager of the band."—Washington Evening Star.

Starting to Please.

"One of our oldest subscribers," said the foreman, mailing clerk and advertising solicitor of the Plunkville Bugle, "has written to say that he wouldn't be found dead with our measly sheet in him."

"We've got to win him back," said the editor. "Put in an ad. to the effect that we will give $8 accident insurance to the heirs of any man who dies with a current copy of our paper about his clothes."—Indianapolis Journal.

Undesirable.

"A woman doesn't really have any brains until she is over twenty-five years old," said the man who knows it all.

"She would have if she needed them," said the admirer of the sex, and none could say him nit.—Indianapolis Journal.

A Tenner.

"Yes," she said to the young man, "I have been present when you acted."

"Indeed?"

"I think you were with an opera company. Your voice is a tenor, isn't it?"

"No," he answered, "I guess you are thinking about my salary."—Washington Star.

Gets Home Earlier Now.

"The days are getting longer," remarked Mr. Tivvies whose habits have developed a vein of sarcasm in his wife.

"Yes. The sun rises much earlier. And I'm really sorry for your sake."

"I don't see why."

"It compels you to hurry so to get home before daylight."—Washington Star.

There is Danger.

"It seems odd," remarked Mrs. Tenspot, "that with only the words in the English language an ordinary person's vocabulary is only 2,500 words."

"It is odd, my dear," replied her husband, "and it behooves you to be careful."

"Me careful? Why?"

"You go through your vocabulary so many times a day there is danger that you will wear it out."

One to Dudley.

Nellie Chaffee—Why, Mr. Canesucker, what has caused the change in your appearance?

Dudley Canesucker—I pwesume it's my glasses, deahchwow. I've been a wee bit sick.

Nellie—Well, you should always wear them. You've no idea how intelligent they make you look. I scarcely knew you.—Tammany Times.

An Infallible Rule.

Brobson—Uncle Stayles is a man from whom I have expectations, you know; but I see I'm alienating him by not laughing at the right place in his stories. Is he a man to manage?

Crair—Why, it's dead easy; get close enough to him so he can nudge you.—Puck.

Not Afraid of any Interference.

"What is the distance of the sun from the earth?" was the question that was lately put to a candidate for the Civil Service. The reply made was that he couldn't tell the exact distance, but he didn't think it was near enough to interfere with his duties of post-office clerk.

Unfortunate.

Pat—Shure, Mike, an' this is a strange country.

Mike—Why, Pat?

Pat—While Oi came into it Oi hadn't a rag to me back. Now look at me! Oi'm all rags.—New York Journal.

Likely Enough.

Visitor (in dime museum)—Where is that "forty-day faster" that you advertise?

Manager (absent-mindedly) — He's gone out to his dinner.

As It Seemed to Him.

"Do you think Othello had any right to kill Desdemona?"

"Certainly. Any woman who sobs in bed ought to be killed."—Philadelphia Press.

Hobbs: "Why did the cashier leave the country?"

Dobbs: "The only reason was because he couldn't take it with him."—Twinkles.

"You think Noah had a pair of every kind of animal and insect in his ark, do you? Where did he keep his bees, for instance?"

"He kept them in the ark hives."—Chicago Tribune.

QUEER RAILWAY ECONOMIES.

Even Make Artificial Limbs for Those Who are Injured.

Railway economy has taken some curious forms. "Every line of any manufactures," says the London and Northwestern Railway, and hardly a thing that it needs, whether a locomotive or a printed label, is made for it by people not belonging to the company.

It is its own artificial-leg maker. When an employe has the misfortune to lose a limb on the line, a wooden arm or leg, as the case may be, is sent to him from the carpenter's shop at Crewe. The leg-making department of the North-western employs a couple of expert instrument-makers who are continually to supply the demand.

At Wolverton, on the same system, you will see in the carriage works a man engaged in etching fancy designs upon the panes of the ground glass used in first-class compartments and saloons.

The Midland company has found it advantageous to have a "photographer in-ordinary." If a bridge shows signs of decay or embankment is likely to slip, the engineer-in-chief reports, sends him to photograph the "accident" (they call everything an accident on the railway) thus saving a personal visit.

In the case of a "smashup," the photographer immediately takes several photos of the train or tram from different points of view, so that when the Board of Trade inquiry comes on there can be no dispute as to how the engines and carriages were lying.—Answers.

Equal to the Occasion.

She was from Boston, and was on her way to the geysers. She had rendered the stage driver thoroughly uncomfortable by throwing gems of wisdom of botany and geological information at his head, and she had about reached the determination to frighten her with stories of high-waymen until she would get inside the coach, when some married and twisted oaks attracted her attention.

"Do you know how old those trees are?" she asked, and was preparing to launch a whole row of figures at him, when he surprised her by answering promptly:

"Yes'm."

"How old are they?"

"Three thousand and six years."

"How do you arrive at such accurate results?"

"Well, a smart young woman from Boston what knows all about it told me they were 3,000 years old, an' that was six years ago, so they must be 3,006 now—goin' on 3,007."—San Francisco Post.

One Live Town in the West.

There is but one genuinely live town in the West," says W. W. Lyman, of Denver, Colorado, and that is Butte. The Anaconda copper mines, that vast concern which makes a profit of from $5,000,000 to $6,000,000 a year, explains the status there. It is employing more men and has a bigger payroll than ever before, and the employes get the highest rate of wages paid anywhere. No wonder that Butte is prosperous, for where several thousand men get steady work and high pay there can be no stagnation. Life is power in Butte, the copper camp. The street cars run all night and likewise the saloons, and if a man wants a shave at 2:30 a. m., he will find several barber shops open."

He Only Was to Whisper.

"Mandy," said Farmer Corntossel, "I see in the paper that our new Congressman has the confidence of the executive department."

"Yes," she replied. "We've been terrible lucky that way. Every one we sent to Washington had that printed about him purty soon."

"Seems to me, though, that he don't do much talkin' in public. I don't hear his voice in debate like it ought on the questions of the day."

"Never mind, Hiram. It's probably all right. I reckon he's got so clus to the President that he jes' has to whisper."—Washington Star.

Convincing Evidence.

"Somebody told me that that young man who was just introduced to us is an actor," remarked Maud.

"No," replied Sallie, positively; "I'm sure he is not."

"He looks like one."

"I don't care. He isn't."

"How do you know?"

"We were talking about the stage, and he named actors as five or six people whose acting he admired."—Washington Star.

[A Distinction.

Fond Mother—Ah, Peter, Peter, I thought I told you not to play with your soldiers on Sunday.

Peter—But I call them the Salvation Army on Sunday.—Pick-Me-Up.

The Way to Live.

Be a lamp in the chamber if you cannot be a star in the sky.

Just wait quietly and things always do come round in the end as well or better than if you worried.

Never bear more than one kind of trouble at a time. Some people bear three kinds: All they have had, all they now have and all they expect to have.

There are no royal roads to anywhere worth going to.

Life is a half-way house, and each guest should take contentedly the room to which he is assigned.

There is no good in arguing with the inevitable. The only argument available with the east wind is to put on your overcoat.

There is not only fun, but there is virtue in a hearty laugh—animals can't laugh and deceive, won't.—New York Tribune.

PURIFIES POISONED AIR.

Pneumatogen" or Firearm May Go Into Hotels and Calling Houses.

Firemen who have to enter smoke and miners who have to breathe after damp will not need to fear these dangers when a recent Viennese inventiou comes to be used by them. It is called "pneumatophore," and enables a man to inhale noxious fumes with impunity. Chevalier de Walcher-Uysdal and Dr. Gaertner, professor at the University of Vienna, are the inventors.

It consists of an air-tight India rubber bag, containing first, a steel bottle holding sixty liters of pure oxygen at a pressure of 100 atmospheres, and secondly, a glass bottle (protected by a metal one) containing 425 cubic centimeters of 5 per cent solution of caustic soda. By means of a handscrew the oxygen can be let outside the bag at intervals, as required for breathing, while the turning of another handscrew breaks the glass bottle inside and allows the caustic soda to flow out and be absorbed by a network of knitted strips of flannel in the bag. Then there are an india rubber breathing tube, with a mouthpiece, and two nose clips (one a square one.)

After strapping the apparatus on to his chest, the user lets some oxygen into the bag, soaks the caustic soda bottle, takes the mouthpiece between his lips and puts on a nose clip, so as to breathe only through his mouth. He inhales pure oxygen, while the caustic soda absorbs the carbolic acid he exhales, and thus keeps the oxygen free to be rebreathed. This makes it suffice for more than half an hour if he is moving, and about an hour and a half if at rest.—New York Press.

ELEPHANT FLESH A DELICACY.

The Best Part is the First Joint of the Leg Below the Knee.

The flesh of the elephant is eaten in its entirety by several of the African tribes. The Philadelphia Lancet says that a detail of the process of butchering the animals is not pleasant reading. The tools used are the assegai and hatchet. The rough outer skin is first removed in large sheets. Beneath this is a subcutis, a pliable membrane, from which the natives make waterskins. The elephant yields large quantities of fat, used in cooking the natives' sun-dried biltong, or dried strips of the muscular flesh, also in the preparation of vegetables. African explorers of the Caucasian race agree that one part of the elephant's carcass, when properly cooked, is a succulent dish that will regale the most delicate taste. This part, very strangely, is the first joint of the leg below the knee, which one would suppose to be the very toughest portion of the animal. To prepare the joint a hole three feet deep in dug in the earth, and the sides of it are baked hard by means of large live oak. Most of the wood is then taken out, and the elephant's foot is placed in the rude oven. The hole is then filled with dirt, tightly packed, and a blazing fire is built on top, which is kept replenished for three hours. The foot is then evenly cooked, and when done, instead of strong, tough meat fibre, it is of a gelatinous consistency that may be eaten with a spoon.

Poe and His Raven.

Poe's fame as a poet rests for the most part upon three poems, "The Raven," "The Bells," and "Annabel Lee." When Poe composed "The Raven" he was on familiar terms with William Wallace, author of "The Sword of Bunker Hill," and the two poets were in the habit of reading to each other their verses. It is said that at one time the following conversation took place between the two:

"Wallace," said Poe, "I have just written the greatest poem that ever was written."

"Have you?" said Wallace. "That's a fine achievement."

"Would you like to hear it?" said Poe.

"Most certainly," said Wallace.

Thereupon Poe began to read the soon-to-be-famous verse in his best way, which I believe was always a captivating way. When he had finished he turned to Wallace for his approval of them, when Wallace said:

"Poe, they are fine, uncommonly fine."

"Fine?" said Poe, contemptuously. "Is that all you can say for this poem? I tell you it's the greatest poem that was ever written."

And then they separated, not, however, before Wallace had tried to placate, with somewhat more pronounced praise, the pettish poet.—Forum.

But the Old Man Remained.

Secretary Carlisle once learned an order that no two members of a family should be employed in the United States treasury Department at the same time. This order caused several dismissals and forced resignations, and one young woman, whose mother had been forced to leave, entered an indignant protest with Logan Carlisle, the Secretary's son and chief clerk of the department. She pleaded, she cried, and finally said: "Well, Mr. Chief Clerk, it's a poor rule that won't work both ways. Both your father and yourself being here, the rule is violated, and I think it a shame that such favoritism should be displayed!" Logan drummed on his desk with his pencil, and assumed a far-away look. Finally he said: "Well, I guess the old man will have to go."—San Francisco Wave.

Queen Victoria's Windsor Boudoir.

It may be interesting to know that Queen Victoria's boudoir at Windsor is furnished in red and gold, that every article was selected by the late Prince Consort, and that her Majesty keeps the first bouquet given her by Prince Albert, with her bridal wreath, under a glass case in her bedroom.

GIUSEPPE GARIBALDI

Personality of the Most Romantic Hero of the Century.

Well might an English writer of the time call him "the most romantic hero of our century, a living man whose legend is already as firmly implanted as that of Wallace or William Tell, whilst the several historical critics of the future will be unable to deny either the reality of his exploits or the originality of his character.

"This legend, this superb soldier and worshipped leader, was quite a different being in person and attainments from the popular notions of him that are still prevalent. People think because he was a man of action and loved the people that he must have been ignorant, peasant-like, and with popular free and easy manners; not at all; he had been a professor of mathematics.

This is what M. Dupont says of his appearance at their meeting: "The man is small, delicate, nervous, but his small gray eye flashes like polished steel; he has a kind voice; he wears eyeglasses, owing to his short sight."

Here this little, delicate, short-sighted mathematician, who was a suffering invalid long before he ceased to be a soldier, was not only the greatest personal hero of his century, he was a poet as well; his proclamations and public letters to his beloved Italians are full of poetry, and here is a fragment from one call to arms at the darkest hour of the Italian struggle for liberty, which shows how sublime and profound that poetry could be: "In return for the love you may show your country," he wrote, "I offer you hunger and nakedness, fatigue and weariness and death; whoso accepts these terms let him follow me."

When, in the history of nations, was there ever so consummately daring, noble, and sagacious an appeal as that? No wonder a General who so understood the human heart and human nature was never disappointed in his followers.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Cost of Tunnels.

A recently published item relative to the comparative cost of the world's four great tunnels places the cost of the Hoosac tunnel in the United States, the oldest one of the lot, at about $380 a foot. The St. Gothard cost $230 a foot, and the Arlberg, the latest in date, cost only $155 a foot. The rapid decrease in cost within comparatively few years is cited as a marked indication of the great progress in mechanical methods and improvements in rock excavating tools. A still more striking result exists in the case of a tunnel through the Cascade Mountains, on the line of the Northern Pacific Railroad in the United States. This, unlike those named, which were excavated in old, settled countries, with the terminal easy of access, was in a peculiarly difficult location, so much so that it took months to convey the machinery to the spot. Rivers had to be turned aside, bridges built, and material transported over improvised roads through nearly 100 miles of forest, mud and snow fields; yet the tunnel, which is sixteen and one-half feet wide, twenty-two feet high, and 8,050 feet long, was bored through the mountain in twenty-two months, at the rate of 413 feet a month, and at a cost for the completed tunnel of only about $120 a foot.—New York Times.

The Japanese Spaniel.

The most valuable of small dogs is the Japanese spaniel. A dog a year old, weighing three and one-half pounds, is worth $200. The dogs seldom weigh more than three and one-half pounds, but as they decrease in weight they increase in value. A three-pound spaniel is worth much more than one weighing three and one-half pounds, and one weighing two and three-quarters or two and one-half pounds very much more. Japanese spaniels have been sold for as much as $500.

There are large Japanese spaniels that are not imported and have no value whatever, but such dogs are very rare, and their rarity doubtless adds considerably to their value, but they are highly prized otherwise. They are good-natured and lively little creatures. Their markings are black and white and tan and white, and some dogs are marked with all three colors. The Japanese spaniel lives about ten years.—New York Sun.

Princeton's Most Valuable Books.

The library at Princeton has two books so very extraordinary that they are not trusted to the library building, but are kept in a safety deposit vault in New York City. They are said to be the most valuable copies of Virgil in existence, and were part of the famous collection of rare books presented to the college by Junius Morgan. An idea of the value placed upon these two volumes can be had from the fact that an insurance of $12,000 is carried on them. The librarinan of Princeton College is authority for these figures. When the new wing of the library building is finished such arrangements will be perfected that the safe keeping of these two valuable books that they may be transferred to Princeton and kept in the library.—New York World.

He Preferred the Mortgage.

A Swede went into a lawyer's office at Sigourney the other day to get him to make out a conveyance for some land which he had purchased. He said he wanted a mortgage, but the lawyer said he should have a warranty deed. "No," replied the Swede, "I once had a warranty deed to a farm, but another man held a mortgage and got the land. I want a mortgage."—Washman, Iowa Advance.

LEGISLATING BACK HIS CHARACTER.

Necessary to Recind a His Prestige as a Temperance Lecturer.

Sam Davis in discussing the subject of Indians, told of the rehabilitation of Johnston Sides. Johnston Sides was a chief of the Nevada Indians who made quite a name for himself as a temperance lecturer among his own people. But one day, "being sick," he took a drink of whiskey in the Magnolia saloon, and was observed by some wicked white men, who straightway started the report in full circulation, and Mr. Johnston's reputation bade fair to be gone. But he was an Indian of influence, and, appealing to his whiter friends, he represented that something must be done, else he would become an outcast from his tribe. He acknowledged drinking the liquor, but told the sick-man story. Sides had always been a fair sort of an Indian, so, as he pleaded and begged, two or three good fellows in the Legislature agree to fix things so that he could go back to his people in pride of conquest. Accordingly this concurrent resolution was drawn up:

"Resolved, by the Legislature of the State of Nevada, the Governor concurring. That the drink of whiskey taken by Johnston Sides in the Magnolia saloon, July 11, 1887, be and is hereby annulled."

Several speeches were made, and old Sides, surrounded by a big gathering of his tribe, sat in the lobby and heard all with profound interest. When the resolution was announced the Indians set up a weird war cry, which was understood to be applause, and, headed by Johnston, the exculpated, they walked out into a sunshine of great happiness.—Chicago Record.

Towed By a Fish.

A great jewfish was caught off La Jolla deep beds lately. Two men were out in a small rowboat. Gazing into the limpid waters of the ocean they could easily distinguish six or eight monster jewfish idly cruising thirty or forty feet below searching for a luncheon. A hook baited with a tempting whitefish was lowered before the noses of the hungry monsters and watched closely by the anglers, who could easily see every movement of the finny game. One big black fellow after another would paddle up to the innocent looking bait, smell of it and back away. Something seemed to arouse their suspicion.

Finally one old veteran, the largest of the school, advanced to the lure. The huge mouth opened. The jaws snapped down on the bait. The anglers were delighted. Waiting for half a minute until the fish had the bait well in hand they gave the line a sharp jerk. The steel hook penetrated the vitals of the fish. The agonizing shock stimulated the creature to a fierce plunge into the lower depths of the sea. Twenty fathoms of stout line paid out from the bow of the boat in a twinkling. So rapidly did the line pay out that water was thrown on the smoking coil to prevent it burning. The fish hit the floor of the sea and then sped toward Japan like the wind, dragging the hapless boat under in its wake. Half a mile ran ran the fish. Then, partially exhausted, it sulked, made a few feeble efforts to escape, was drawn to the surface and dispatched. It weighed 453 pounds, was 6 feet 2 inches long, 19 inches from tip to tip of the tail, and of 5 feet girth.—SanFrancisco Call.

A Vegetable Sea Rope.

The largest plant in the world is believed to be a gigantic sea weed, the nereocystis, which frequently grows to a height of of more than three hundred feet. The stem of the plant is as strong as an ordinary rope, and large quantities of it are used as rope by the inhabitants of the South Sea Islands, where the curious vegetable ropes are found. This sea weed usually grows at a depth of from 200 to 300 feet. As soon as the plant takes root a pear-shaped balloon is formed, which grows with the stem towards the surface of the water. This balloon frequently has a diameter of six feet or more. It has, of course, an upward tendency, and therefore keeps the stem growing until it floats on top of the water. This enormous weed grows in such quantities that large meadow-like islands are formed, which frequently impede navigation. The ropes made from these stems are used for building purposes, and the balloons when dried make very serviceable vessels.—New York World.

A Lesson in Arithmetic.

Elphalet—Uncle Ephrim, if yo' kin meck fow shirts outen three yahds, how many kin yo' git from one yahd?

Uncle Ephrim—Well, honey, bit depen's on whose yahd yo's in.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

The Step from the Sublime.

The poet—I am working for posterity.

The Poet's Wife—Well, I wish that posterity could advance a little on account. We need a peck of potatoes, and the grocer says that he won't trust us for another cent.—Cleveland Leader.

Too Young to be Discouraged.

"There's one thing," remarked Willie Washington, "that I have made up my mind to do."

"Really?" responded Miss Cayenne, with languid interest.

"Yes. I shall never be a man of one idea."

"Don't say that. You are still too young to be discouraged."—Washington Star.

Critic: "The hero and the villain had a duel last night on the stage."

Friend: "Who got the worst of it?"

Critic: "The audience."—Twinkles.

DANCING IN COURT LIFE, IN EUROPE.

Waltzing forbidden at State Balls at Berlin and Potsdam.

Dancing plays a great role in the court life of Europe. The chief thing at a court ball is to avoid tumbling when dancing. This is more difficult than may appear at first sight. For those walking—let alone dancing—on the highly-polished and parquetted floors of the royal palaces of Europe is attended with some danger. It was owing to a tumble sustained by a royal princess while dancing with a cavalry officer of the guard at a court ball at Berlin some twenty years ago that waltzing has ever since been been strictly forbidden at all the state balls at Berlin or Potsdam; nor are waltzes permitted to figure on the programme of any private ball that may be honored with the presence of princesses of a reigning house.

The only exception to the rule in Germany is at the court of Wurtemberg, where, thanks to the influence of the beautiful young Queen, who is passionately fond of waltzing, but who is inditing of pain, or the exercise of despotic power to injure any one bodily, is antagonistic to the present Shah's desires. Indeed, Mr. Fraser thinks he might almost go so far as to say that he is opposed to Socialism. Some time ago a gang of hill robbers was captured and taken before him to receive sentence that their heads be chopped off. He inquired into their case, and found they had been leading lives of complete idleness. "Poor men," he observed, "I suppose they robbed because they wanted something to eat," and then he ordered their release.—New York Journal.

CURRENT WIT AND HUMOR.

"Isn't it awfully annoying to be near sighted?" asked the man who delights in personal questions.

"If you had waited as I have," answered the afflicted one, "nearly ten minutes for a blamed little lightning bug to get by, under the impression that it was a bicycle beginner coming down the street, you would know that it was annoying."

Dr. Prim: "I haven't seen you at church, Sister Perkins, for three or four weeks. I trust your piety is not growing lukewarm."

Sister Perkins: "No, Dr. Prim, but the sexton keeps the window raised in front of our pew, and my doctor says I must not sleep in a draught."—Twinkles.

Hell think Dr. Jenkins will very soon have a large practice.

She—Why so?

He—He has just had a case in which he prescribed millinery for hysteria.—Puck.

Rude Foreigner (meeting British tourist). "Ah! I see it is true that no one but a pig and an Englishman can face the hot winds."

British Tourist. "Evidently, for you and a are the only living things abroad."—Harper's Bazar.

Yeast—That man Styles always does the right thing at the right time.

Crimsonbeak—He's a fool, though, that he's never arrived at the time when he considers it proper to pay his debts.—Yonkers Satesman.

Tommy—Pop, what is a misanthrope?

Tommy's Pop—A misanthrope, my boy, is a man who thinks life isn't worth living and who kicks like a steer when he has to die.—Cleveland Leader.

Willie—I told her my love was so great that my brain was on fire.

Charlie—What did she say to that?

Willie—Told me I had better blow it out.—Yale Record.

"Don't cry!" he entreated.

Then he perceived that her handkerchief was edged with the most exquisite lace.

"Don't weep!" he said, correcting himself.—Detroit Journal.

"Going to your mother-in-law's funeral, old man?"

"No. Business comes before pleasure with me every time."—New York Journal.

The office at the police station. Inspector (in desk)—"What's your name?" Prisoner—"Patrick McGreer, sir." "What countryman are you?" "An Orishman." "What's your business?" "An Italian organ grinder."—Spare Moments.

Mrs. Nagwed—Why did you bring the pie back? I said you could eat it if you would saw that cord of wood.

Hungry Henry—I cum back ter tell yer, mum, of it's jest de same ter you, dat I'll eat de wood and saw up de pie.

"Hear about Casey givin' th' Dootchman de black eye?" "Of did not. They was fightin' in Dootchman's place ter sell Casey a peach, but told him he was an orange."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Mr. Ringgerford—I wonder why love and war are so frequently associated in proverbs.

Miss Wallingford—I suppose it is because engagements are common to both.—Judge.

Lew Dockstader, at Koster & Bial's, says his girl is so tall that if she wets her feet on the Fourth of July she doesn't catch cold until Christmas.

"What does your papa like for breakfast," asked the new girl.

"He always likes most anything that hasn't been cooked," said Mabel.

"Great Scott, Eph! what's the number of your boots?"

"Two, sah; one for each foot, sah."—Harper's Round Table.

A QUEER SHAH.

He Threw His Crown on the Floor and Promised to Behead Some Robbers.

The new Shah of Persia has some qualities which make him a very piquesque character, and perhaps he may prove a modern Haroun-al-Raschid.

Sir Foster Fraser, an Englishman who has spent some time with His Majesty, says that the coronation ceremony took place on a very hot day, and as soon as His Majesty could escape he hastened off to his private rooms. Some one found him ten minutes afterward, sitting in a draught, and in his shirt sleeves, on some steps in the corridor, the crown still on his head, though pushed somewhat awry. "Your Majesty will be ill if you sit there," was said. "Oh, I am so warm, and this thing," he answered, taking off the crown and pitching it on one side, "is so heavy; I hope I shall never have to put it on again."

The Shah's predecessor, so it used to be said, had a summary way of getting rid of disgraced Ministers, but the Shah is averse to the exercise of despotic power to injure any one bodily, is antagonistic to the present Shah's desires. Indeed, Mr. Fraser thinks he might almost go so far as to say that he is opposed to Socialism. Some time ago a gang of hill robbers was captured and taken before him to receive sentence that their heads be chopped off. He inquired into their case, and found they had been leading lives of complete idleness. "Poor men," he observed, "I suppose they robbed because they wanted something to eat," and then he ordered their release.—New York Journal.

CURRENT WIT AND HUMOR.

"Isn't it awfully annoying to be near sighted?" asked the man who delights in personal questions.

"If you had waited as I have," answered the afflicted one, "nearly ten minutes for a blamed little lightning bug to get by, under the impression that it was a bicycle beginner coming down the street, you would know that it was annoying."

Dr. Prim: "I haven't seen you at church, Sister Perkins, for three or four weeks. I trust your piety is not growing lukewarm."

Sister Perkins: "No, Dr. Prim, but the sexton keeps the window raised in front of our pew, and my doctor says I must not sleep in a draught."—Twinkles.

Hell think Dr. Jenkins will very soon have a large practice.

She—Why so?

He—He has just had a case in which he prescribed millinery for hysteria.—Puck.

Rude Foreigner (meeting British tourist). "Ah! I see it is true that no one but a pig and an Englishman can face the hot winds."

British Tourist. "Evidently, for you and a are the only living things abroad."—Harper's Bazar.

Yeast—That man Styles always does the right thing at the right time.

Crimsonbeak—He's a fool, though, that he's never arrived at the time when he considers it proper to pay his debts.—Yonkers Satesman.

Tommy—Pop, what is a misanthrope?

Tommy's Pop—A misanthrope, my boy, is a man who thinks life isn't worth living and who kicks like a steer when he has to die.—Cleveland Leader.

Willie—I told her my love was so great that my brain was on fire.

Charlie—What did she say to that?

Willie—Told me I had better blow it out.—Yale Record.

"Don't cry!" he entreated.

Then he perceived that her handkerchief was edged with the most exquisite lace.

"Don't weep!" he said, correcting himself.—Detroit Journal.

"Going to your mother-in-law's funeral, old man?"

"No. Business comes before pleasure with me every time."—New York Journal.

The office at the police station. Inspector (in desk)—"What's your name?" Prisoner—"Patrick McGreer, sir." "What countryman are you?" "An Orishman." "What's your business?" "An Italian organ grinder."—Spare Moments.

Mrs. Nagwed—Why did you bring the pie back? I said you could eat it if you would saw that cord of wood.

Hungry Henry—I cum back ter tell yer, mum, of it's jest de same ter you, dat I'll eat de wood and saw up de pie.

"Hear about Casey givin' th' Dootchman de black eye?" "Of did not. They was fightin' in Dootchman's place ter sell Casey a peach, but told him he was an orange."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Mr. Ringgerford—I wonder why love and war are so frequently associated in proverbs.

Miss Wallingford—I suppose it is because engagements are common to both.—Judge.

Lew Dockstader, at Koster & Bial's, says his girl is so tall that if she wets her feet on the Fourth of July she doesn't catch cold until Christmas.

"What does your papa like for breakfast," asked the new girl.

"He always likes most anything that hasn't been cooked," said Mabel.

"Great Scott, Eph! what's the number of your boots?"

"Two, sah; one for each foot, sah."—Harper's Round Table.

A POISON FACTORY.

A Terrible Place Where Deadly Drugs are Manufactured.

In London and a strange establishment behind a wilderness of warehouses and tumbledown tenements, in a remote suburb. Its massive gates are locked and jealously guarded. A visitor must not only be careful where he steps and refrain from touching, he must also breathe with great caution. One of the terrible poisons manufactured here is pure anhydrous acid, a drug seldom seen outside a chemical laboratory. This is the deadliest of all known poisons. The discoverer was stricken dead from inhaling its fumes. From 3 to 5 per cent of this chemical added to 95 or 97 parts water makes prussic acid. This diluted poison causes instant death, even when taken in minute quantities.

Next to anhydrous acid, the worst poison they make is cyanide of potassium. Of this deadly drug they turn out 1,000 tons of it. Five grains being a fatal dose, the annual output would be sufficient to kill 2,500,000 people. In the work room, where men are gathered around a witch's caldron containing five or six tons of the deadly cyanide, a strange picture is presented. The seething mass of white-hot liquid poison, with the lambent play of the furnace fires, the phantom faces of the workmen enveloped in an uncanny light, and peering into the heart of the dreadful mixture through the thick atmosphere, are a terrible sight. In another room, where are tons of the finished product, looking like crystalized sugar, "good enough to eat," one man is employed alone. For some inexplicable reason he exercises a strange fascination for the men who inhale its fumes. They are haunted by a desire to eat it. But, knowing that satisfying the craving means instant death, most of them are able to resist it. Aside from this fascination its manufacture is not considered unhealthy. The same cannot be said of corrosive sublimate. Its fumes are deadly.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

MONEY IN WASPS.

The Value They Built Their Homes of Brings to a North Carolina Farmer.

Along the banks of the Cape Fear river, in North Carolina, are lowlands, behind which lies a higher level, or bench. The lowlands are subject to more or less frequent overflows by freshets, which have destroyed the crops planted therein. A number of years ago a farmer, resident in the vicinity, made a very comfortable sum of money by insuring his neighbors' crops against these freshets. His unvarying success as an insurer for many years a profound mystery to the people of the region. The years when he declined to insure were invariably years of destructive overflow. The years when he was willing to insure were equally certain to be seasons of exemption from freshets.

Observation had shown him that a certain species of wasp, which built its homes in the ground, built some years on the lowlands, and other years upon the higher levels. Experience taught him that when the wasps built on the lowlands there were no freshets, and when they built on the higher ground, the lower would, some time during the season, be submerged. The man had simply noted an instance of that little understood prescience manifested by certain insects and animals, a better knowledge of which might even be of service to our national weather bureau. It was only at his death that he revealed his secret.—New York Post.

Cut Those Out.

The greatest difficulties lie where we are not looking for them.—Goethe.

The lives of some people are open books; the lives of others blank books.—Selected.

We never realise how much we are capable of enduring until the test comes.—Selected.

We could all be great men if we could be measured by the great things we intend to do to-morrow.—Selected.

How much you read is of less consequence than how much you think about what you have read.—Selected.

Great parties represent in their beginning great principles; in their old age great prejudices.—Ignatius Donelly.

Education is the knowledge of how to use the whole of oneself. Men are often like knives with many blades; they know how to open the one; all the rest are buried in the handle, and they are no better than they would have been if they had been made with one blade only. Make then not one or two faculties out of the score with which they are endowed. A man is educated who knows how to make a tool of every faculty—how to open it, how to keep it sharp, and how to apply it to all practical purposes.—Beecher.

The Queen of Greece.

It is said by a lady who recently visited Greece and had the honor of meeting the royal family, that perfect harmony existed between the King and Queen are devoted to their children. The Queen is still a very beautiful woman, and the only lady Admiral in the world. She holds this rank in the Russian army, an honorary appointment conferred on her by the Tsar. Hence it is further held the rank of High Admiral, and for the reason that she is a very capable yachtswoman. The King has a very remarkable memory, an interesting personality, and is a brilliant conversationalist. He goes about the streets of Athens without any attendants, and talks with any friend he chances to meet. Prince George is very attractive, and his feats of strength, shown often in the games of chivalry, are a continuous subject of conversation among the people.—New York Sun.

The Constitutionalist.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY,

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

JERSEY AND THE TARIFF.

New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey are trying to have continued the provision of the Wilson law which permits the makers of perfumery bottles to manufacture that article for export in bond. According to letters received from leading firms, this feature of the existing tariff is repealed. Senator Platt, of Connecticut, has stated that there is an entire misapprehension about the matter; that the action of the finance committee does not repeal the provision as to manufactures for export in bond. Another topic of complaint on the part of New Jersey manufacturers is linoleum. The oil-cloth makers say that the House was right in imposing a specific duty of 20 cents on the square yard and 20 per cent. ad valorem on imported linoleums, but that the finance committee inflicted an injury on an important industry when it reduced the specific duty to 16 cents on the square yard. They ask that the House specific duty be substituted and that no other change be made in that item

THE Y. M. C. A.

Be it said to the credit and liberality of Plainfielders that so worthy and desirable an institution as the Young Men's Christian Association has passed its third decade among them. The local Association is one particularly thrifty for a community the size of this, and now that it has reached a point in its growth and influence that makes it possible to hold out the inducements that it does to the young men of the city and borough, the natural consequence is that it attracts many by the simple fact of possessing these things. But this does not deter its executive and administrative officers from expending every effort that is possible to extend further its usefulness, as well the reports presented at the annual meeting last night, and summarized in this paper today, show. The Association is a public institution that Plainfield could ill afford not to possess.

RIGHTS OF A NEWSPAPER.

Those New Jersey judges who are want to look upon their courts and persons as sacred objects, regarding which it is sacrilegious to say anything that is not reverential or complimentary, say the Tribune, may study with interest a decision given in the Cleveland Circuit Court this week by Judge Hale. In reversing the decision of a Common Pleas Judge who had fined an editor $200 and sentenced him to imprisonment for ten days for contempt, Judge Hale said: "Newspapers have a perfect right to criticise courts and judges with reference to cases which are past. There are two classes of newspaper articles which are contemptuous—first, those tending to affect the decision in pending cases; second, those purposing to bring the court into discredit. The article in this case has reference to a transaction, in our judgment, wholly past."

A PROPER SELECTION.

It was manifestly proper that the Union County Board of Freeholders should again honor J. F. Hubbard, of this city, by selecting him as their Director. Mr. Hubbard has filled that position for several years with credit to himself and benefit to the county. His executive and administrative qualities are well-known in a busines way, and it has always been his aim to exercise the same careful attention in matters of a public character that he does in private life.

FEW IMMIGRANT ARRIVALS.

The returns received by the Immigration Bureau in Washington for several months show a marked falling off in the number of immigrant arrivals in this country. The arrivals in the nine months ending March 31, 1897, was 142,941, as compared with 209,630 for the same period in the preceding year. Commissioner General Stump estimates that the decrease for the fiscal year ending on June 30 will be not less than 93,000.

A CATCHING BUSINESS.

The following taken from a Florida paper may also be applied to Elizabeth with strict regard for truth and propriety:

In the north they chase the anise tag and call it sport. Here we chase the mosquito and call it business.

Arcanum Anniversary.

An entertainment under the auspices of Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, commemorating the twentieth anniversary of the Royal Arcanum and the fifteenth anniversary of the council, will be held in the Y. M. C. A. hall Thursday evening at 8 o'clock.

INVASION OF A BURGLAR ADJUSTING TAX MATTERS

ENTERED THE SLEEPING APARTMENTS OF WESTFIELD PEOPLE.

Caught in the Act of Stealing and Chased Out of the House by Edward C. McMann—He Was Chased by an Officer.

The people of Westfield are exercised over a rather bold burglary which occurred in the town, Monday morning.

Edward C. McMann is employed in the grocery store of J. T. Mattiago, and lives with his family on Walnut street. At 2:30 o'clock, in the morning, Mrs. McMann was awakened by a noise and saw a man standing in the room, with his back toward her, leisurely examining the contents of the bureau drawers. Mrs. McMann awakened her husband who, upon catching sight of the intruder, jumped out out of bed, caught up a water pitcher for a weapon, and chased the intruder downstairs. The fellow crawled through the open parlor window upon the front porch. Here he received a stinging blow from the water pitcher in the hands of Mr. McMann. The latter says that when struck the burglar gave a groan of pain, but he escaped and with a confederate, who was on watch outside, ran down Elm street toward Broad.

McMann called out Constable J. M. C. Marsh and the two started upon a still hunt for the burglars. On Broad street they caught sight of the men a block away and gave chase. They ran up Mountain avenue and taking the road for Springfield soon struck into the woods and succeeded in throwing their pursuers off the trail.

The burglars were evidently professionals, from the thorough manner in which their work was planned and carried out. They were provided with padded stockings which were worn over their boots. Their cleverness is shown by the fact that a pair of trousers were removed from under the pillow of Mr. McMann, while the latter was asleep, and $7.44 was taken from the pockets and the trousers hung upon a chair. A gold brooch was taken from the bureau. A small box containing deeds and insurance papers was also taken. In their flight the thieves dropped the box and papers upon Mountain avenue where they were picked up this morning by William Stitt. None of the papers were missing.

Mrs. McMann, who caught a good look at the burglar who was in the house, describes him as a heavily built man with dark hair and moustache and wearing a black suit and black derby hat.

A description of the man has been sent out and a sharp lookout will be kept for them in this vicinity.

LOYAL TEMPREANCE LEGION.

Special Exercises of an Interesting Nature Held Yesterday.

The Loyal Temperance Legion, (the children's temperence society under the charge of the W. C. T. U.) held a special meeting Monday afternoon. The exercises were conducted by the associate superintendent, Wickham Williams Beekman, and opened with prayer, the repetition of the pledge and the singing of a spirited song, "Temperance Girls and Boys," by the Legion. A recitation, "The Bird's Song," was then given by Dora Wilson, followed by a song "Some Glad Day," very prettily sung by five little girls, Anna Morrison, Dora Wilson, May Weigman and Clara and Ethel Gullberg. Another recitation, "A Child's Desire," was delivered with much expression by Anna Morrison, after which Mr. Beekman introduced Rev. A. B. Main, who was to speak to the children for a few moments. He told the story of the prodigal son in a very realistic manner, applying its lessons to the present day, and especially to his young hearers. The short, practical address was listened to with much interest. Mr. Main's questions being quickly answered by the children. At the close, a very tiny member of the Legion, Alga Weigman gave a little recitation, "A Child's Walk," after which all sang, "We are Marching Onward." Mr. Main offered the closing prayer, and the meeting was closed with the Mizpah benediction.

HISTORICAL HOUSE BURNED.

A Structure in Metuchen That Was Built in Revolutionary Times.

Monday morning fire destroyed the historical old house in Metuchen, near Manning Freemen's lumber yard, that has been used as a wheelmen's rest for some time past. The house was built in 1775, and during the Revolutionary war it was used as post station on the stage route between New York and Philadelphia. It was formerly a part of the Noble estate, but became the property of an insurance company, through the foreclosure of a mortgage a year ago. It is believed that the origin of the fire was incendiary.

Partnership Dissolved.

The firm of Hedemark & Company, the Somerset street carpenters, has dissolved and Mr. Hedemark will continue the business at the old stand. The partnership was dissolved by mutual consent. The papers were drawn by Justice Nash, yesterday.

DELINQUENTS PUT IN FOUR CLASSES UNDER THE MARTIN ACT.

Common Sense, as Suggested by Individual Cases, Will Direct the Action of the Officials in Collecting the Back Taxes.

At the adjourned meeting of the City Council held last Monday every member was present and there was plenty of business to occupy the attention of all. A batch of petitions were first considered. John Tier and others asked for an electric light on Watchung avenue, near the recently erected temporary foot-bridge over the brook, and it was referred with power. A statement of charges for the laying of sidewalks where the city performed the work was presented and was referred to the Finance Committee. The Council confirmed the officers recently elected to the various companies in the fire department. A proposition was received from Charles H. Hand to erect a suitable city jail and the matter was referred to the proper committee. The Mayor, in a communication, stated that the Plainfield Board of Health had condemned the city jail as being in an unsanitary condition and he suggested that steps be taken to secure other quarters. This matter was referred to the Police Committee with power. Regarding the request of Charles H. Hand and J. F. McIntyre asking that they be released from the bond of former City Treasurer Titsworth, Mr. Baker said that upon inquiry he had learned that the Council has no jurisdiction in the matter, and he moved that the City Clerk be authorized to instruct the bondsmen to that effect. Mr. Frost reported unfavorably on the cross-walk asked for at the Babcock building by J. A. Hubbard and William M. Stillman, and the walk was not granted. The same councilman reported favorably on the walk asked for at the corner of East Second street and Berckman street, and this was granted. Regarding the twelve walks asked for on Plainfield avenue, between Front street and Seventh street, Mr. Frost recommended that six be granted where the property owners had complied with the city ordinance in laying sidewalks. The recommendation was adopted.

Mr. Frost stated that he had received two tax bills from the collector for the sewer farm property. He said that the assessor was not aware at the time of assessing that property that the city was going to buy the property. This matter was referred and later was adjusted in a satisfactory manner so that the city will not have to pay the amount taxed.

Mr. Westphal made a statement regarding the completion of the Industrial Home, and said that the same would be ready for occupancy about the first of next month. He then offered a set of rules to govern the Home. A digest of the rules are that that the Home shall be under the immediate control of the alms committee and subject to the control of the Council; that no tobacco shall be used in the Home; that visitors shall be allowed to call once a month for one hour only; that the inmates shall take a bath at least once a week.

There was considerable opposition to some of the rules and the members of the Council indulged in a free discussion of them. Mr. Barrows said that while he was not a smoker he thought it was rather hard to compel a man to give up his tobacco. Mr. Westphal and Mr. Frost offered what seemed to be good reasons for having this rule. They said that there was a chance of fire in the Home and that they did not think that those who do not smoke should be compelled to breathe the smoke made by others.

Regarding the one hour a month allowed to visitors there was much said. Mr. Barrows thought that the rule was a very strict one. He thought that it was like prohibition and that it was likely to have a contrary effect. The inmates may have seen better days and the council as well as others should treat them charitably.

Mr. Frost said that it was not proposed to have the place open at all times so that people could come there merely for curiosity. The discussion was finally brought to a close by a resolution which was to the effect that the Alms committee have the power to relax the rules if necessary.

On the recommendation of Mr. Tolles a light was ordered placed at the corner of Madison avenue near Stelle avenue.

At this point Mr. Serrel offered a report for the Committee on the Assessment and Collection of Taxes. In the report is a schedule which is explanatory in itself, and divides all taxpayers into classes for the collection of taxes prior to 1890. It is as follows:

"Class A embraces all those that in the judgement of the committee should be settled for the face of the tax without interest, cost or penalties, those actually petitioned for settlement and others who should make it in the opinion of the committee.

"Class B, C, D embraces those wherein peculiar and mitigating circumstances enter for the consideration of the committee with a view of influencing their judgment. These circumstances being set forth in the petitions of the respective petitioners; such for instance as where property on which taxes are claimed to be due are now in the hands of innocent purchasers, also where property has changed hands several times through foreclosure sales, and also where it appears questionable as to how much of the taxes claimed to be due may or may not have actually been paid during the periods in which they were properly due, and yet in which classes the petitioners are willing to make a payment in settlement in order that all future questions or trouble may be averted."

The following resolution was offered by Mr. Serrell in connection with the above: "Resolved, That the taxes be revised, altered, adjusted and settled according to the above schedule filed, providing the same be paid within thirty days from the date of the adoption of this resolution."

A member of the Council in speaking about the above matter said, "The names and amounts of taxes due from delinquent taxpayers are not made public, because some are well-known people who are innocent holders and the publication can do no good and might be unpleasant and discourteous, and on the other hand to some who owe the city this knowledge is unpleasant enough without the galling effect that must come from public presentment of the facts."

Mr. Serrell offered another resolution to the effect that a time for receiving petition for the adjustment of taxes be extended up to and including May 28th. The resolution was adopted.

Mr. Frost introduced the ordinance for the opening of Sycamore avenue, and on his motion it was adopted on the first and second readings and ordered engrossed and advertised. By this action the city accepts the street practically.

A resolution was offered by Mr. Frost to the effect that curbing be set in front of properties on the following streets and in the same at present: West Ninth street to Plainfield avenue, East Ninth street to Watchung avenue, Grant avenue from Front street to West Fourth street, East Seventh street from Central avenue to Park avenue, Madison avenue from West Front street to Stelle avenue, Central avenue from West Front street to West Eigh h street, First, Second, Third place, Crescent avenue, and East Ninth street.

Mr. Barrows offered an ordinance repealing the ordinance designating the city jail. It was adopted on the first and second readings and ordered engrossed and advertised.

Mr. Westphal offered a resolution to the effect that the $2,500 appropriated for the use of the Industrial Home be taken from the special fund, which is known as the building fund for the city poor buildings.

Mr. Barrows called up the amendment to the sidewalk ordinance and on on his motion it was adopted on the third reading. The Council then adjourned.

SHOULDER DISLOCATED.

Morgan Turton Thrown Out a Wagon and Hurt.

Morgan Turton, an employe of A. M. Griffen, the Front street hardware dealer, met with a painful accident Monday afternoon, about 5 o'clock, on Somerset street, near French's mill. He was driving his employer's horse toward the mountains, when the animal became frightened and at the same time the wagon struck a good-sized stone in the roadway. The two events happening together was the cause of throwing Mr. Turton off of the wagon. In the fall he struck another wagon close by and his shoulder was dislocated. Friends who were near by picked Mr. Turton up and removed him to his home on Washington street. Dr. Tomlinson was called and set the dislocated bone and the injured man is resting as comfortably as possible. He will be confined to the house for some time.

The horse Mr. Turton was driving did not run away neither was there any damage to the wagon.

Funeral of Peter T. Van Arsdale.

The funeral services of the late Peter T. Van Arsdale were held last Tuesday at 11 o'clock, from the residence No. 74 Jackson avenue. Rev. H. J. Johnston, pastor of Grace M. E. church, officiated. The attendance of relatives and friends was large, and the floral offerings beautiful. Interment was at Pluckamin, in the family plot.

The Westfield (Ind.) News prints the following in regard to an old resident of that place: "Frank McAvoy, for many years in the employ of the L., N. A. & C. Ry. here, says: "I have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for ten years or longer—am never without it in my family. I consider it the best remedy of the kind manufactured. I take pleasure in recommending it." It is a specific for all bowel disorders. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

Careful experiments made upon a healthy person show that of ordinary oatmeals 83 per cent. alone is digested. Of H-O 99.75 is digested.

The process of preparation of H-O is "peculiar to itself."

Subscriptions Free to

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly
Illustrated American (Weekly)
Truth (Weekly)
New England Magazine
Chatterbox (Monthly)
The American Kitchen Magazine
Home Magazine (Monthly)
of Binghamton, N. Y.

WITH COUPONS FROM THE

H.O.Co.'s Goods

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS

For all BILIOUS and NERVOUS Diseases. They purify the BLOOD and give HEALTHY action to the entire system.

Cure DYSPEPSIA, HEADACHE, CONSTIPATION and PIMPLES.

SALESMEN WANTED

To sell our high grade Improved Nursery Stock. Many new specialties offered this year for the first time, as well as the standard varieties of fruits and ornamentals. Liberal pay, exclusive territory necessary. Write for terms, stating age, etc. Address, Rev. A. R. Write, Nurseries, West Chester, Pa.

Dissolution of Partnership.

Notice is hereby given that the partnership heretofore existing under the name and firm of Terrill & Cole, as Undertakers and Funeral Directors in the city of Plainfield, in this day by mutual consent dissolved, and all debts owing to said firm are to be paid to George W. Cole, and all claims and demands against said firm are to be presented to Cole, who will continue the business at his place of business, No. 320 West Second street, in the city of Plainfield.

MOSES N. TERRILL,
GEO. W. COLE.

4 15 6

Property Transfers.

The following property transfers have been recorded at the County Clerk's office, from May 8th to 12th inclusive:

John H. French et ux., to Alice N. Brouard Plainfield, lot West Seventh street near Monroe avenue, Plainfield, $1; Equitable Life Assurance Society to Andrew M. McCardell, Plainfield, lot adjoining Mulford Cole's property, Scotch Plains road, $10; W. T. Kirk, sheriff, to Albert Brugler, lot Plainfield avenue, Plainfield, $210 34.

The following contract has been filed:

Ellen A. Keating et ux., with B. E. Young Plainfield, to erect new building, Plainfield, $200.

According to the newspapers, an Ohio husband became the happy father of seven children not long ago. Of the seven all lived but one. It is to be hoped he laid in a a supply of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, the only sure cure for croup, whooping-cough, colds and coughs, and so insured his children against these diseases. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

A Bicycle Party.

Miss Evelyn M. Lewis, of Central avenue, gave a bicycle party to a number of her friends, last Tuesday It was a very delightful affair. After enjoying a spin out on the county road to Westfield, the party returned to Tier's lake house where refreshments were served and a pleasant time enjoyed.

Central Railroad of New Jersey.

Anthracite Coal Used Exclusively. Insuring Cleanliness and Comfort.

Arrangement of Trains in New York for Liberty Street, commencing Monday, May 10th, 1897.

PLAINFIELD AND NEW YORK.

Leave Plainfield 2 34, 5 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 a. m., 12 00 noon, 1 00, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p. m., 12 01 night.

Leave New York, Foot Liberty st., 12 01, 1 00, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 a. m., 12 00 noon, 1 00, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p. m., 12 01 night.

PLAINFIELD AND NEWARK.

Leave Plainfield 6 44, 7 30, 8 16, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 a. m., 12 00 noon, 12 30, 1 00, 1 30, 2 00, 2 30, 3 00, 3 30, 4 00, 4 30, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00 p. m.

Leave Newark 7 07, 7 53, 8 39, 9 23, 9 53, 10 23, 10 53, 11 23 a. m., 12 23, 12 53, 1 23, 1 53, 2 23, 2 53, 3 23, 3 53, 4 23, 4 53, 5 23, 5 53, 6 23, 6 53, 7 23, 7 53, 8 23, 8 53, 9 23, 9 53, 10 23, 10 53, 11 23 p. m., 12 24 night.

Leave Somerville at 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 a. m., 12 00 noon, 1 00, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p. m., 12 01 night.

Leave Bound Brook 4 40, 5 40, 6 40, 7 40, 8 40, 9 40, 10 40, 11 40 a. m., 12 40, 1 40, 2 40, 3 40, 4 40, 5 40, 6 40, 7 40, 8 40, 9 40, 10 40, 11 40 p. m., 12 40 night.

PLAINFIELD AND SOMERVILLE.

Leave Plainfield 6 44, 7 30, 8 16, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 a. m., 12 00 noon, 12 30, 1 00, 1 30, 2 00, 2 30, 3 00, 3 30, 4 00, 4 30, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00 p. m.

A 8 00 a. m. Sunday at Tin. 9 00 a. m. 12 00 noon, 1 00, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p. m.

PLAINFIELD AND LAKE HOPATCONG.

Leave Plainfield 8 00 a. m., 12 00 noon, 4 00 p. m.

8 00 a. m.—For Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Reading, Harrisburg, Pottsville, Shamokin, Mt. Carmel, Tamaqua, Williamsport, Sunbury, Lewisburg, Watsontown, Northumberland, Milton, Danville, Lewisburg, Watsontown, Northumberland, Milton, Danville, Lewisburg, Watsontown, Northumberland, Milton, Danville

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

Celebrated for its great leavening strength and healthfulness. Assures the food against alum and all forms of adulteration common to the cheap brands. Royal Baking Powder Co., New York.

DEATH OF I. D. TITSWORTH

A WELL-KNOWN RESIDENT OF THIS SECTION PASSES AWAY.

He Was Formerly President of the First National Bank—A Prominent and Active Member of the Seventh-day Church.

The death of Isaac D. Titsworth, which occurred at his home in New Market, Saturday afternoon, removes from this locality one of the very oldest and most respected citizens. If he had lived he would have been 92 years old next June. For sometime past he has been somewhat feeble and owing to his advanced age it was only a question of a short time when he would pass away. Previous to a few months ago he was able to be about and it was his custom to come to Plainfield every week and call at the First National Bank, of which institution he was president for many years. He finally became so feeble that he was obliged to give up his short trips and remain at home. He was always very active and his mind seemed clear to the last.

Isaac D. Titsworth was born in Piscataway Township, near Metuchen in 1805, and was one of ten children, three of whom are now living, Mrs. Isaac S. Dunn, of Randolphville; Mrs. Phoebe Ross and E. B. Titsworth, of this city. His father, Isaac Titsworth, was a farmer, and his son attended school at Metuchen and New Durham part of the time and at other times he worked on the farm. When a young man he secured a position with Randolph Dunham at his tannery which was located back of where the First National Bank now stands. Mr. Titsworth worked there long enough to learn the trade and he then purchased the business which he conducted for many years.

Shortly afterward he was married to Miss Hannah Ann Shepard, of South Jersey. The two lived in this city for some time. Finally, Mr. Titsworth disposed of his business and moved to South Jersey, where he purchased a farm and a country store. He remained there for several years, when he made another change by moving back to Plainfield and took up his residence on the Simeon Randolph farm, which he purchased. He disposed of thirty acres of the property for building purposes. The rest of the land he farmed for several years. Following this he purchased some property at New Market near the Larkin place, and here he again engaged in the business of tanning. This was previous to the war, and he conducted the business till after the war. Soon after he purchased the property on Prospect street, where he died, and there he erected a large dwelling house. At times he bought other property near by and for the past thirty years he has resided at that place. From time to time he would sell off pieces of property to those seeking land. However, he still retained a large amount of property. He always took a great deal of pride in having his land in the best of condition and everyone for miles around knew what a careful man he was in this respect.

Mr. Titsworth was a man of sterling worth and character. He was held in the highest esteem by all who knew him. As a business man he was careful and diligent. Many people have sought his wise counsel and profited thereby. In the home he was a loving husband and father, and his great interest was centered there. A singular coincident was that he was one of ten children and that he also had ten children. Of the latter eight are now living as follows: Mrs. Anna Larkin, Mrs. Rebekah Rogers, Mrs. Reilly Potter, Adoniram Judson Titsworth, Thomas Titsworth, Louis Titsworth, Alfred A. Titsworth, and Frank Titsworth. Alfred Titsworth is a professor in the Grammar department at Rutgers College. Adoniram Judson Titsworth lives in Milwaukee, where he is pastor of a church, while Frank Titsworth lives in Illinois. The rest of the children live in and about this vicinity. Abel Titsworth and Wardner Carpenter Titsworth are the two children who died. Mr. Titsworth's wife died about this time of the year two years ago.

Mr. Titsworth was a staunch and faithful member of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, of New Market, and was one of the fifty-seven constituent members of the Plainfield Seventh Day Baptist church at its organization, February 9th, 1838. He served the church at New Market as deacon for many years, and he was also a member of the denominational Tract Society and Missionary Board. He was a firm supporter of the church in every way possible and his liberality was a source of strength and help. He was ever ready to lend a helping hand to those in need and his kind and loving disposition was felt in the lives of many with whom he came in contact. He will be greatly missed in the home where he was cared for by loving hands. His last days were passed in the full enjoyment of a Christian life well spent, and he was ready and willing to go and be with his Heavenly Father. His death was not unexpected by those in close touch with him, for it could be seen that he was failing and the end was looked for at any time.

The funeral services will be held from the house Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 and from the Seventh-Day Baptist church at 3 o'clock.

Mr. Titsworth was for a number of years a member of the Board of Directors of the First National Bank, and previous to 1890 he was elected vice-president. In 1890 he was elected president and served in that capacity until 1893. He still retained his membership in the Board until two years ago, when he was obliged to resign owing to his health.

THE Y. M. C. A. ATHLETES.

THE GYMNASIUM CLASSES END THEIR WORK FOR THE SEASON.

The Exhibition Under the Direction of Physical Director Heywood. Under Whom the Work Has Been Accomplished

The Y. M. C. A. gymnasium class held its closing exercises Saturday evening, and the work for the season was concluded. The exhibition and entertainment was a most creditable one in every respect and the very large and appreciative audience present seemed to be highly gratified with the affair. Physical Director Heywood was in charge of the exhibition and S. B. Joseph announced the numbers on the programme which were as follows: Boy's dumb-bell drill, led by F. C. Bonney; business men's wand drill, led by Mr Heywood; tug-of-war, business men's class against evening class won by latter; pulley machine, right arm against left arm, by the class; gymnastic contest, Edward Duffy, E. Moraller, Walter Long, won by latter; travelling rings, by the class.

At this time President W. D. Murray, of the Association, presented the medals to the winners in the different contests. In the boys department Hazelwood Keller was awarded the prize for the best all-around work. For the best bowling, Clarence Sutphen secured the highest honors. His best score in ten games was 141 9-10. The gold medal for the best record and work in a contest of twenty events, was presented to Walter Long. George Proctor Smith was awarded the silver medal as second prize, while the third prize, a bronze medal, was given to E. Duffy. The last prize for the best all-around work in the gymnasium, which carries with it the championship of the Association, was presented to Walter Long. The prize was a silver medal.

As each winner was presented with his prize there was a hearty outburst of applause on the part of those present.

A feature of the programme was the appearance of Fred Zick and James Barckley, of the Twenty-third Street Branch of the New York Y. M. C. A. They gave an exhibition of tumbling and all-around gymnastic work. They were cordially received and their work was certainly fine.

Mr. Heywood deserves great credit for the excellent work produced through his class, and when Mr. Murray announced that Mr. Heywood would remain another year, the members of his class gave him a great ovation. The work gave evidences of marked improvement and everyone present congratulated Mr. Heywood and the members for it.

The Best Remedy for Rheumatism,

(From the Fairhaven, N. Y., Register.)

Mr. James Rowland of this village, states that for twenty five years his wife has been a sufferer from rheumatism. A few nights ago she was in such pain that she was nearly crazy. She sent Mr. Rowland for the doctor, but he had read of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and instead of going for the physician he went to the store and secured a bottle of it. His wife did not approve of Mr. Rowland's purchase at first, but nevertheless applied the Balm thoroughly and in an hour's time was able to go to sleep. She now applies it whenever she feels an ache or a pain and finds that it always gives relief. He says that no medicine which she had used ever did her so much good. The 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

—A strawberry and ice cream sociable under the auspices of Martha Washington Council, No. 23, Daughters of America, Jr. O. U. A. M., in Amphion Hall, West Second street, on Thursday evening, June 3d. There will be dancing during the evening.

THE HIGH SCHOOL GAMES

GEORGE P. SMITH CARRIED OFF THE HONORS OF THE DAY.

The Plainfielder Won All Five of the Field Events—Track was in Poor Condition, Though—The Results in Detail.

Good sport, pleasant weather and a large crowd aided to make the semi-annual field games of the Plainfield High School Athletic Association, held at the Crescent Oval, Saturday afternoon, a great success. Considering the number of good competitors entered from other cities, the showing made by the local athletes was very encouraging. George Proctor Smith, of Plainfield, carried off the honors of the day by winning all five of the field events.

The games were held on the track, which was in poor condition. The recent rains had cut it up badly and although the Crescent Wheelmen did their best to put it in order for the scholastic athletes the time was too limited. That prevented any fast time being made in either the bicycle or running events.

As far as the general interest of the audience was concerned, the bicycle events were the principal attractions of the meet. All the competitors, except one, lined up as entered. There was a surprise to the local contingent in the poor showing that Lindley M. Hillman, the crack rider of the High School, made, and also in the wonderful work done by Harry Cuming, of the same school, a newcomer on the track team. Hillman rode unplaced in every event while Cuming secured three seconds and made a strong fight for first.

A. B. Allan, of Montclair High School, won the quarter mile bicycle race by a length. His team partner, Anderson, made things lively for Cuming, but could not catch him on the spurt. Hillman finished a close fourth. There was some loafing in the mile, but W. M. McCully, of Pingry's School, Elizabeth, finally finished ahead of the rest. Allan and Hillman ran together on the turn, but neither fell. They finished fourth and fifth respectively. Hillman's poor showing was due to insufficient training and illness. The two-mile was the prettiest of them all. McCully pluckily took the pace, rather than have another loafing match, and set it for the two miles. He had the requisite spurt ready, however, and won fairly from Cuming by a length. His conduct was loudly praised. Allan and Hillman had a hard fight for third, but the Montclair man crossed the line an inch ahead, just to be passed by Hillman after the tape was crossed.

The Pingry cracks, H. E. Manvel and C. A. Sultzer, had everything their own way in the runs, the former winning the 220-yard dash and the quarter-mile run and Sultzer the 100-yard dash. It was expected that Manvel would try for a record in the quarter, but he took it very easy winning from his schoolmate, Howe, by a foot. Hervey Doane, of the Plainfield High School, started and kept with the bunch to the end, finishing fourth.

Smith's easy victory in the field events was a surprise to many. He had little to compete against except in the pole vault and broad jump, for his most prominent competitor in the weights, Carroll L. Runyon, was not in shape. Runyon has been throwing the hammer and discus far beyond Smith in practice, but when the time for the games came he fell far below his usual records in those events and Smith had no trouble in defeating him in both. Runyon will have a chance to turn the tables at the games of the New Jersey Interscholastic Association, next Saturday.

The events were run off smoothly and without the delays that usually are so tiresome. Great credit is due William A. DeLong, Jr., chairman of the committee, for his success in managing the meet. While the meet was a success from an athletic point of view, it proved to be financially successful also, over $19 being cleared.

The summaries were as follows:

TRACK EVENTS.

100 yard dash—Won by C. A. Sultzer, Plainfield; A. F. Myers, P. S., second; A. Lindley, Montclair H. S., third. Time—10 3-5 sec.

220 yard dash—Won by H. E. Manvel, P. S.; C. A. Sultzer, P. S., second; A. F. Myers, P. S., third. Time—23 2-5 sec.

440 yard run—Won by H. E. Manvel, P. S.; W. P. Howe, P. S., second; Charles Huston, S. H., third. Time—61 4-5 sec.

Quarter mile bicycle race—Won by A. B. Allan, M. H. S.; Harry Cuming, P. H. S., second; C. Anderson, M. H. S., third. Time—35 1-5 sec.

One mile bicycle race—Won by W. M. McCully, P. S.; Harry Cuming, P. H. S., second; C. Anderson, M. H. S., third. Time—3:00 2-5 sec.

Two mile bicycle race—Won by W. M. McCully, P. S.; Harry Cuming, P. H. S., second; A. B. Allan, M. H. S., third. Time—5:34 2-5 sec.

FIELD EVENTS.

Pole vault—Won by G. P. Smith, P. H. S.; F. Moore, P. S., second; Distance—9 feet, 6 inches.

Putting the shot—Won by G. P. Smith, P. H. S.; C. L. Runyon, P. H. S., second; Walter Long, P. H. S., third. Distance—29 feet, 3 inches.

Running broad jump—Won by G. P. Smith, P. H. S.; F. Moore, P. S., second; W. H. Sebring, Jr., P. H. S., third. Distance—17 feet, 5 inches.

Throwing the hammer—Won by G. P. Smith, P. H. S.; C. L. Runyon, P. H. S., second; Howard Higbie, P. S., third. Distance—99 feet, 1 inches.

Throwing the discus—Won by G. P. Smith, P. H. S.; C. L. Runyon, P. H. S., second; Walter Long, P. H. S., third. Distance—77 feet, 5 inches.

Now

Is the time when you should take a Spring Medicine to purify your blood, give you good appetite, sound sleep, steady nerves and perfect digestion. That scrofulous taint, that skin trouble, that liver difficulty, that billous tendency, that tired feeling, are all cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Give this medicine a fair trial and you will realize its positive merit. It is not what we say, but what the people who are cured say, which proves that

Take Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is the Best Spring Medicine. C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Hood's Pills cure Liver Ills; easy to take, easy to operate. 25c.

Sweet Peas.

Do not delay planting them, our own mixture contains only the choicest and latest varieties.

LAWN & GARDEN SEEDS and FERTILIZERS.

HARDWARE and HOUSEFURNISHINGS.

A. M. GRIFFEN,

119 East Front st.

Telephone Call, 6.

SEEDS ...FOR THE... Garden and Farm

Vegetable and Flower Seeds. All the old reliable and best varieties—quality guaranteed. Illustrated Catalogue FREE.

ELLER & BON, Seed Merchants 84 Chambers St., New York City.

1 26 3m

What a Lot of Eggs the hens lay when fed on Green Cut Bone. With a dozen hens

Mann's Green Bone Cutter

will pay for itself in a short time in the increase of eggs. $5 BUYS ONE. Sent on trial. 180 highest awards received. Catalogue free if you name this paper. F.W. MANN CO., Milford, Mass.

2 3 4 9 10 11 13—1 mos.

SAVED

After years of suffering. It has at last been proven beyond a doubt that

NASALENE

Is a positive remedy for local diseases which are the result of cold and climatic changes. Cold in the Head. Hay Fever.

CATARRH,

Deafness, (caused by catarrh), are instantly relieved.

It is pleasant to use, convenient to carry. Prepaid, 50c., at all druggists.

O. V. SAGE, Warden of Sing Sing, says: "Nasalene is very beneficial."

HUNTER MEDICAL CO.,

64 E. 21st Street, N. Y.

DIED.

LASSING—In this city, Friday, May 14, 1897, Mary Lassing, M. D.

TITSWORTH—At Dunellen, N. J., May 15, Mr. Isaac D. Titsworth, aged 91 years, 5 months and 2 days.

VAN ARSDALE—In New York city, May 14th 1897, Peter T. VanArsdale, aged 61 years, 2 months and 21 days.

STEARS—Near Oak Tree, May 16th, 1897, Eliza, wife of Joel Stears.

LUDLUM—Entered into rest Monday, morning, May 17th, 1897, at her residence 712 East Front street, John Lefforts Ludlum late of New York, in the 86th year of his age.

PAINT Deal direct with the manufacturer — use only the

"FERINITE"

COTTAGE COLORS.

Save money and get the best. Send for card of beautiful shades to

THE TAYLOR PAINT & OIL CO.,

36 BURLING SLIP, N. Y. IT WILL PAY YOU.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

—The Paul T. Norton Company, flour and commission merchants, who have opened a store on East Front street, placed a handsome new wagon into service yesterday.

JAS. M. DUNN,

Dealer in

GROCERIES, PROVISIONS, VEGETABLES, FRUITS &c

GARDEN SEEDS

fresh and carefully selected.

224 PARK AVENUE,

OPPOSITE NORTH AVENUE.

Everything usually found in a first-class grocery.

Goods delivered free of charge.

PATENTS

CAVEATS, TRADE MARKS, COPYRIGHTS.

